ORDERS FOR DEPORTATION OF JAPANESE VALID

$2,000 Reward for Capture of Slayer

Toronto Taxi Driver Found Shot Through Head

Boy Sees Pale-Faced Man Leave Scene of Crime

Toronto, Dec. 2 —(CP)— With $2,000 in reward money awaiting anyone who can provide them with a clue, Toronto police today pressed a city-wide search for a pasty-faced killer who shot Alfred Reddish, 53-year-old veteran taxi driver in his cab in West Toronto.

Shortly after noon, law officers said bluntly that so far they had no clues, nor had they found any motive for the slaying of the cabbie twice awarded civic citations for courageous citizenship.

Soon after Chief Constable John Chisholm posted a $1,000 reward for information leading to the capture of the gaunt, pale-faced slayer, the Independent Taxi Owners' Association added another $500. Later the Taxi Drivers' Union boosted the reward money to $2,000 altogether.

Residents Fearful.

Meanwhile, residents who saw the gunman return to the death car, either to make certain his victim was dead or to remove finger prints he might have left, expressed fear they, too, might be shot.

"How do we know he was not one of a gang who might shoot us some dark night if he feared we might identify him?" asked Charles Gay whose car was stolen by the gunman for the getaway.

A 13-year-old schoolboy returning home after seeing a murder movie at a nearby theatre watched the killer return to the scene, leap into a stolen car and disappear into the night. The boy did not know at the time that Reddish was dead.

Reddish was found late Saturday, slumped over the wheel of his cab in front of the home of William Carr, retired policeman, on Emerson Avenue in northwest Toronto. He had been shot through the head with a .38 calibre bullet. Another bullet was found in the car's upholstery. The window on the driver's side was shattered.

Police believe the murder took place about 11 p.m. Saturday.

Gay told police that the slayer had forced him and Sidney Bandy a passenger, out of the car at gunpoint.

"I saw a taxi which had been going west on Wallace Ave., turn south on Emerson and stop," he related. "Then another car with two men (Gay and Bandy) in it which had been parked on the other side of the road, turned around and started south. I heard a sharp crash and a bang. A man jumped out of the taxi and jumped on the running board of the other car. Then I saw two men forced out and run. The car turned around and started back with the lights out. There was only one man in it. He stopped, got out, opened the door of the taxi and then returned to the lightless car."

No motive has been advanced. The sum of $30 was found in Reddish's pockets but the murder weapon was missing.

Reddish has held a taxi licence for twenty years.

Twice commended by the Board of Police Commissioners, Reddish is survived by his widow and daughter, Mrs. Lillian Pickering.

Shortly after the slaying, Mrs Reddish showed reporters a silver tray presented to her husband on May 25, 1945, by the Police Commissioners.

It was inscribed "for his courageous action in refusing to surrender his automobile to an armed holdup man on April 20, 1945, and his alertness and ingenuity which resulted in the arrest and conviction of the gunman."

On that day Reddish picked up a man who asked to be driven near the waterfront. Nearing the destination, the man stuck a gun in the driver's face and ordered him out of the car. He refused and the gunman fled. Police later picked up the man who was convicted of attempted robbery and carrying a concealed weapon.

On October 15, 1930, Reddish witnessed a crash in Toronto's north end when one car turned over and the other fled. The cab driver chased the hit-and-run car for five miles, captured the driver and turned him over to the police. He was later highly praised by Police Commissioners for "outstanding citizenship".

3 Sleep 60 Hours, Two Others Dead After Meal

Montreal, Dec. 2 —(CP)— A contaminated meal of soup, tomato juice and macaroni sent a five-member family of suburban northend Ville St. Michel into a 600-hour sleep Thursday, resulting in death for two, another two are in serious condition in hospital and a girl was released Sunday.

Dead are Mrs. Amedee Cholette 73, found on the floor near her bed, and her grandson Real Parisien, 23, found lying on his bed.

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amedee Parisien, were lying motionless on their beds when discovered by their daughter Rita Parisien, 19, who awoke Sunday thinking it was Friday.

Rita retired three hours later and when she woke up Sunday morning, she prepared breakfast and was about to leave for work when she saw her grandmother, brother and parents.

The girl ran to the home of a neighbor, Mrs. A. Ricard, who came to the Parisien home and called the Ville St. Michel police.

A doctor pronounced Mrs. Cholette and Real dead and summoned an ambulance for the three others.

In hospital they were given special treatment for food poisoning. Mr. and Mrs. Parisien were kept for observation and Rita allowed to return home.

An autopsy will be performed on the bodies of Mrs. Cholette and Real Parisien.

COURT REJECTS LIBEL SUIT OF PROFESSOR LASKI

Labor Leader Claims He Was Not Reported Correctly by Newark Advertiser

London, Dec. 2 (CP)—A high court jury today rejected the libel suit brought by Prof. Harold Laski, professor of political science at London University and last year's chairman of the Labor Party, against the Newark (Nottinghamshire) Advertising Company and the editor of the Weekly Newark Advertiser.

Prof. Laski complained that he had been wrongly reported in a speech he made in Newark before the British general elections of June, 1945.

He said the Newark Advertiser had reported he had advocated revolution with violence. He denied he had made any such statement.

The court awarded costs of the action to the Newark Advertising Company and Cyril Parlby, editor of the Advertiser.

Chief Justice Lord Goddard had charged the seven-man jury to decide whether the Advertiser was fair and accurate in quoting Prof. Laski as advocating violent revolution.

Lord Goddard also left it for the jury to decide whether it was a matter of public concern that heckling at a political meeting should be reported.

Personally, he said, he thought it should, explaining: "It is what people go to hear. It is part of the fun."

Several witnesses had testified to a lively exchange between Prof. Laski and a Conservative party publicist whose published account of the exchange contained the statement on which the lawsuit was based.

"The occasion of the speech was election time, when speeches were not always calm and temperate," Lord Goddard said. "Tempers ran high. Questions were asked which speakers resented, and no one ought to be too thin-skinned.

"But because a man ought not to be too-thin-skinned, he must not have things fastened on him that he did not say."

GIRL LOCATED IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Dec. 2 —(AP)— Peggy Land, whose wealthy Memphis, Tenn., parents have been seeking her since she left home last Thursday, was located in a Los Angeles hotel last night, and expressed regret that her disappearance occasioned worry. The 17-year-old co-ed said she left a note for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Land, when she left Memphis, but added: "Perhaps I wasn't explicit enough." She declined to say what prompted her to leave.

Master Violinist Gets First Lesson From Old Master of Hoedown School

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 2 — (AP) — Yehudi Menuhin, concert violinist, got his first lesson in fiddlin' Saturday from an old master of the hoedown school and he was bug-eyed for three reasons:

1. B. F. McGlothlin, the old master, is the first fiddler Yehudi ever saw in action.
2. Yehudi had never seen a violin in the hands of a left-hander before.
3. McGlothlin plays the fiddle backwards because he never took a lesson and learned it that way.

Asked if he would give a fiddle lesson to a violinist named Menuhin, the 57-year-old farmer member of the Dallas police riot squad said:

"I'd be proud to. Where'll I find him?"

"Now here's the way you play it," he said.

He grabbed the prow of a fiddle with his right hand, picked up the bow with his left hand and sawed away on the "Arkansas Traveller."

Yehudi, here for an appearance with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, looked dazed, then grinned with delight.

"Amazing," he cried. "I never saw anything so amazing before. You play left-handed, you have not reversed your strings and you are doing everything backwards."

"That's the way I play," said the old master confidently. "Got aholt of my old man's fiddle when I was six and been messing with it ever since. Never had a lesson, never learned a note and never want to."

He sawed once more and, when he had finished, the spellbound Yehudi grabbed the worn fiddle. He tried playing left-handed and backwards but couldn't make the grade. Then he switched hands and tried a couple of bars of "Natchez Under the Hill."

"Why you picked that up right quick," McGlothlin said admiringly. " . . . Let me hear you on that fiddle of yours."

State Aims to Show Coal Strike Interferes With Function of Govt.

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

Washington, Dec. 2 — (AP) — Federal lawyers today poured evidence into John L. Lewis' contempt trial in an effort to show that the soft coal strike interferes with a "sovereign function" of the United States government.

The evidence, government counsel told Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, is aimed at smashing the United Mine Workers' contention that private operators actually run the mines under Federal seizure and that the U.M.W. walkout is, therefore, not an interference with the government.

The sheaf of Federal exhibits—mostly orders and documents of the Federal Coal Mines Administration — were read by the first government witness, Capt. N. H. Collisson, coal mines administrator, as the third day of the proceedings got under way.

Mr. Lewis is charged with contempt for failure to call off a contract-termination notice that precipitated the soft-coal walkout.

John F. Sonnett, chief government counsel, announced at the outset of the session that 10 additional witnesses, including interior secretary Krug, will be called to bolster the government's case against the U.M.W. chief.

Although it had been expected that several cabinet officers would be called by the government, Mr. Krug was the only one of the president's official family named among the witnesses. He signed the mine contract which Mr. Lewis terminated, touching off the walkout of the 400,000 soft coal miners 12 days ago.

Mr. Lewis' disregard of a court order to keep the contract in effect brought on the contempt trial before Judge T. Alan Goldsborough.

Capt. Collisson, who has testified that Mr. Lewis never disclosed his direct demands in the mine dispute before cancelling the contract was cross-examined closely by Welly K. Hopkins, Mr. Lewis' chief counsel.

Mr. Hopkins pursued the same line of questioning as he did before the court recessed Friday. This was intended to show that the government had not called on the Wage Stabilization Board for approval of disputes over the coal contract prior to Nov. 1.

SIX BATTLE HEAVY SEAS IN SMALL BOAT, REACH LAND

Small Coastal Freighter Springs Leak and Sinks Off Cape Breton

Sydney, N.S., Dec. 2. (CP)— First news of the sinking Wednesday off the northern tip of Cape Breton of the small coastal freighter Rotundus was disclosed today when the the six crew members of the tiny craft arrived here after battling heavy seas in their small lifeboat.

Tired and worn after their fight for survival, the crew members said they had spent three hours in the lifeboat before reaching a small island and making their way, after much difficulty, to Sydney.

J. C. Munro, the ship's engineer who had served on the craft for 28 years, told of the vessel's end. He blamed lack of communication equipment for being unable to send distress signals after the crew had given up their efforts to check the flow of water into the ship.

Munro said they had put into Ingonish to unload part of their cargo and had put to sea again on the morning of Nov. 27. Shortly after clearing from the harbor, Munro said, they encountered heavy seas and high winds. Water began seeping into the hold and although the crew was put to work with the ship's pumps the flow of water could not be controlled.

When the engine room flooded and put out the fires, leaving the ship powerless, the crew decided to abandon ship. After clearing from the sinking craft in their lifeboat the small freighter sank, Munro said.

Rowing for three hours in heavy seas, they reached a small island off Great Bras D'Or. Unable to scale the high cliffs of the island the men were forced to wait until the raging seas abated and then row to the mainland, which took them another three hours.

From there they obtained a car and proceeded to Sydney with the first news of the foundering.

Members of the crew, all Nova Scotians, were J. C. Munro, Windsor; Captain Harley Smith, Fireman Calvin Newell, Cook Jack Swin, all of Cape Sable Island; and Deckhands James Fraser, New Waterford, and J. Young of Grand Manan.

MORE POWERFUL A-BOMB

London, Dec. 2 (AP)—Reynolds News said yesterday that Senator Brien McMahon (of the United States, had told a "hush-huch all-party meeting" of parliament members recently that the United States was making atomic bombs "600 times as powerful as those dropped on Japan."

OLD MAN WINTER CLUTCHES ONT. WITH ICY FINGERS

Temperatures Tumble to Far Below Zero in Northern Ontario

(By The Canadian Press)

Old Man Winter clutched Ontario with icy fingers today as temperatures tumbled to far below zero in Northern Ontario and to the near-zero mark in the south. White River, traditionally the north's coldest hamlet, posted a shivering 27 below zero overnight.

The sudden wintry blast caught most Ontarians by surprise. Rolling down from northwest, an icy blast from the sub-Arctic brought swirling snow and marine storm signals to Southern Ontario, along with the precipitate drop in temperature.

Toronto area readings plummeted 20 degrees in a few hours to a low of six above zero overnight. A light snow whipped across the city but today the weather was clear and cold.

However, the weatherman gave some hope for better conditions tomorrow, recording that temperatures are expected to moderate on Tuesday over the entire province.

"Milder, with increasing cloudiness" was the forecast that covered most of Southern Ontario. The north also could look for slightly better weather with somewhat higher temperatures.

Coldest of Year

Southern centres generally reported the coldest weather of the year, mostly a few degrees above the zero mark and with light snow. Frost-coated windows greeted residents as they awoke this morning after a Sunday when gusty north winds reached blizzard proportions in some areas.

A fire at Crowland near Welland was caused, firemen said, by an attempt to thaw out frozen water pipes. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sutch were awakened early today by the crying of their five-year-old son Peter and found the room in which he slept filled with smoke from a fire in a partition just below his room.

Firemen found the hydrant in front of the house frozen and laid 1,000 feet of hose. Damage was kept down to a few hundred dollars.

The cold wave was blamed for a light morning turnout at London's municipal elections. However, officials said a heavy advance poll indicated the vote would easily pass last year's figure of 33 per cent of the electorate.

Peterborough, Dec. 2 —(CP)— Raymond Lee of Peterborough escaped injury last night when his car was struck by a C.N.R. train.

TWO ARE KILLED IN HEAD-ON CRASH AT NIAGARA FALLS

Six Others Critically Injured and Taken To Degraff Hospital At North Tonawanda

St. Catharines, Dec. 2 —(CP)— Emanuel Erstling, 18, 43 Manning Street, was fatally injured and four other St. Catharines and Merriton persons were critically injured early today in a head-on auto collision on the Niagara Falls - Buffalo boulevard, five miles east of Niagara Falls.

William Harnick, 30, Buffalo, was instantly killed in the crash, and two companions, also from Buffalo, were seriously injured.

The six injured persons are confined to Degraff Memorial Hospital, North Tonawanda, N.Y., and attendants said all are suffering from lacerations, concussion, and shock.

Earl Jenke, St. Catharines.

Dorothy Meredith, 29, Merritton.

Two German Generals Sentenced to Death

Rome, Dec. 2. (AP)—Death before a firing squad was ordered Saturday by a British military tribunal for two German generals found guilty of the reprisal massacre of 335 Italians in Rome's Ardeatine caves a little more than two months before triumphant Allied troops liberated the Eternal City June 4, 1944.

Col.-Gen. Eberhard von Mackensen, wily commander of the German 14th Army which fought at Anzio beachhead, and Lt.-Gen. Kurt Maeltzer, head of the Rome garrison, received the verdict calmly.

The court decreed the firing squad after counsel for von Mackenson asked that he be granted "the clean death of a soldier—death through shooting." Such a plea was spurned for the top Nazis, tried before the international military tribunal at Nurnberg.

The courtroom audience, which had been cautioned against any demonstration, received the news of the sentence in silence except for an aged woman who merely murmured "Grazie," (thanks).

But when the defendants were let out cries of "Bravo!" and thunderous applause broke from the spectators, who during the trial had hurled shouts of "Assassin!" and "To death!" at the two generals.

Some in the room were relatives of the Roman hostages who were shot to death with their hands tied behind their backs March 24, 1944, in reprisal for the ambush of 32 German police troops.

C. L. Sterling, judge advocate of the tribunal, announced that both the verdict and sentence were subject to confirmation by "higher military authority", in this case Lt.-Gen. John Harding, commander of British forces in the Mediterranean theatre.

Canadian Motorists to Benefit By Engine-Warmer for Cold Winter

By DAVIS J. WILKIE

Detroit, Dec. 2 (AP).—Among the things to look for in the 1948 model automobiles will be engines that will start as readily in sub-zero temperatures as in midsummer weather—a boon to Canadian motorists.

If current indications are borne out this will be achieved through the installation—as an integral part of the power plant—of a toy-sized oil burner designed to automatically keep the coolant in the engine water-jacket at a constant temperature whether the engine is operating or standing idle.

With the tiny burner, using a virtually negligible amount of fuel, the engine will be kept warm, even if the car is parked out of doors all day or all night in the coldest weather. The warm engine means immediate vaporization of the gasoline; instant flowing of crankcase oil; greatly lowered oil dilution; longer life for bearings and pistons, and, of course, virtually no battery drain.

Aside from quick cold-weather starting, availability of unchanging engine heat at all times means also an entirely new approach to heating and ventilating of cars, trucks and buses. With unvarying temperature in the interior of the vehicle, fogging and frosting of windows also should be eliminated.

The device, well beyond the experimental stage, already has been installed in some buses and is reported to be performing up to all expectations. It is described as adaptable with equal efficiency to either diesel or gasoline powered vehicles.

Privy Council Dismisses Appeal Against Orders

Deportation Can Properly Be Applied to Non-Canadians

London, Dec. 2 (CP Cable) — The Privy Council in a judgment handed down today declared that the Canadian government's orders for the deportation of Japanese from the Dominion were valid.

The council's judgment dismissed the appeal against deportation made by the Co-operative Committee on Japanese Canadians.

The appeal was against the deportation orders imposed on Japanese Canadians resident in Canada and British-born Japanese who requested repatriation and was supported by the Attorney General of Saskatchewan.

The Privy Council said that deportation could properly be applied to non-Canadians under Canadian law.

The appellants argued that at the date of passing the National Emergency Transitional Powers Act, there was no emergency to justify continuation of the powers in question.

"This contention found no favor in the Supreme Court of Canada and their Lordships do not accept it," the Privy Council said.

"One remaining matter relied upon my the appellants should be mentioned:

"First it was said that the words 'of the Japanese race' were so vague as to be incapable of application to ascertained persons. It is sufficient to say that in their Lordships' opinion they are not.

Validity of Orders Not Affected.

"All that can be said is that questions may arise as to the true construction of the phrase and as to its applicability to any particular person. But difficulties of construction do not affect the validity of the orders."

The privy council's judgment was handed down by Lord Wright in a brief sitting. The case which opened here last July 16, was argued for four days at that time before Lord Simonds and four other law lords.

F. A. Bevin, a Toronto lawyer, argued the appeal against the Supreme Court of Canada ruling and said Canadian legislation did not delegate the Governor-General-in-Council the power to deport British subjects whatever their racial origin.

Dominion government representatives argued that the 10,000 of the 24,000 Japanese in Canada who had signified their desire to go to Japan before the war ended, should not be allowed to remain in Canada in peace.

They said also that the deportation of about 500 Japanese nationals would be in the national interest.

Orders permitting the Canadian labor minister to order the Japanese to be deported by the Transitional Act assented to Dec. 18, 1945.

On the orders generally the privy council said that in an emergency, "the interests of the Dominion are to be protected and it rests with the parliament of the Dominion to protect them. What those interests are the parliament of the Dominion must be left with considerable freedom to judge."

"Again, if it be clear that an emergency has not arisen or no longer exists there can be no justification for the exercise or continued exercise of the exceptional powers.

"But very clear evidence that an emergency has not arisen, or that the emergency no longer exists is required to justify the judiciary even though the question is one of ultra vires in overruling a decision of the Parliament of the Dominion that exceptional measures were required for were still required."

Matter for Parliament.

The judgment added: "It is not pertinent to the judiciary to consider the wisdom or propriety of the particular policy embodied in the emergency legislation. Determination of the policy to be followed is exclusively a matter for the Parliament of the Dominion and those to whom it has delegated its powers."

When the case was argued before the privy council, Mr. Brewin contended that the only grounds for deporting a naturalized citizen arose when his loyalty was in question.

Gordon Wismer of Vancouver, Attorney-General of British Columbia, argued that the orders-in-council authorizing deportation should be put into effect "even if certain sections (of the orders) were considered beyond the power of Canada."

Mr. Wismer closed the case for the Attorney-General of Canada. Associated with him were Frank Gahan, London barrister who formerly lived in Hamilton, Ont. and H. E. O'Donnell, K.C., of ondon.

Mr. Wismer told the Privy Council:

"My submission is that these orders can be dealt with severally even if Your Lordships find that one class of persons should not be deported."

The Privy Council's judgment today said the judiciary was not concerned with whether the executive would be able to carry emergency measures into effective operation.

It added that it was not therefore necessary for the Privy Council to recount the circumstances leading up to the orders or the arrangements for their execution.

The validity of the War Measures Act was not questioned although the validity of the orders-in-council providing for deportation was challenged "on many grounds".

The Privy Council said it was unable to accept the contention that the Imperial Colonial Laws Validity Act of 1865 barred deportation action. The Privy Council also did not accept the argument that the War Measures Act did not authorize the making or orders with extra-territorial operation.

Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell announced in the Canadian House of Commons last August that his records showed that 6,892 Japanese adults had voluntarily signed requests for repatriation covering a total of 10,632 persons. Later, 4,527 cancelled their requests which also covered their 1,786 dependents.

Mr Mitchell said at that time that no deportations would take place until the Privy Council's judgment was handed down.

THEFTS OF MONEY FROM MILK BOTTLES MORE FREQUENT

It might be that persons responsible are using this means of picking up some extra cash for their Christmas shopping, but a vastly increased number of complaints of theft of money from milk bottles have been received at the local police station during the past few weeks.

Saturday morning a Great St. James Street resident reported that $1.50 had been taken from a milk bottle some time between 8.30 and 9 o'clock in the morning. Previously milk tickets had been taken from bottles at the same residence and as result the bottles were not placed out until morning. Saturday the cash was missing despite the precautions.

Adam Palmer, riverside blacksmith, with a shop to the rear of the Walker Store, reported finding a 20-foot ladder in the river. No explanation as to the origin of the ladder was available to the police.

CUSTOMS RETURNS HIGHER BY $76,447

Returns at the Belleville Customs and Excise office for the month of November amounted to $610,523.81, it was announced today by Lt. Col. E. A. Geen, local collector. This is an increase of $76,447.85 over the corresponding period in 1945.

MONTH OF NOVEMBER COMPARATIVELY MILD

With a mean temperature of 40.5 degrees, the month of November will be remembered by local citizens as one which was among other things easy on the coal bin.

High temperature for the month was 56 degrees as compared with a low of 21 degrees. A rainfall of 1.76 inches and a snowfall of 10.8 inches occurred making a total precipitation of 2.84 inches.

During November, 1945, the high temperature was 63 degrees with a low of 15 degrees, making a mean temperature of 37. There were 2.20 inches of rain and 8.3 inches of snow for a total precipitation of 3.03 inches.

TWENTY LIVE FOWL STOLEN FROM COOP

Possibly there is an expected shortage of Christmas fowl for the forthcoming Yuletide, but at any rate some sneak thief is taking no chances of being without the traditional fare for his Christmas dinner.

For over the weekend Mrs. Irvine McGrimmon, Wilkins street, reported to police that some party had entered her chicken coop on Saturday night and had disappeared with 20 Light Sussex hybrid fowl.

An instance of shoplifting was also reported to police from one of the local chain stores.

TWO TRENTON MEN CHARGED WITH THEFT

Charged with the theft of foodstuffs and other goods from a warehouse at the Trenton Air Station, Leslie Ray and Fred Vardy of Trenton have been taken into custody by provincial police and will appear in police court in Belleville.

According to the police report Vardy had been permitted to drive his car into the station grounds and had loaded it with foodstuffs and paints from a station warehouse. The foodstuffs, valued at about $150 were discovered in the home of Vardy and the paints at the Ray home in Trenton.

Investigation in the matter is being turned back to R.C.A.F. authorities, it was stated by police.

WOMAN PASSENGER BRUISED IN CRASH

Mrs. J. W. Flatt, 262 East Bridge Street, suffered a bruised side Sunday morning as result of a motor collision between the car which her husband was driving and a second vehicle driven by a Picton motorist. After examination at Belleville General Hospital Mrs. Flatt was permitted to return to her home.

The Flatt vehicle was being driven east on Bridge Street when at the MacDonald Street intersection it was in collision with a southbound car driven by Cecil Goodman, Picton. The Flatt vehicle was struck on the right side with damage to both vehicles amounting to approximately $150.

Four Families Are Homeless As Result of Fire

An already acute housing shortage in the city was made just a little more acute as result of the fire which Friday afternoon swept through a double frame residence on Moira Street, East, and badly gutted the structure before firemen could bring the blaze under control.

As result of the blaze four different families were rendered temporarily homeless, while a considerable amount of household furniture was damaged by fire and water. Owner of the house is Mr. J. Frost who resided in part of the dwelling. Others living in the house were Mrs. E. Turner, a crippled lady, and her daughter; a family named Bradshaw, and two girl roomers.

An air force couple, and their small daughter, who had taken rooms in the dwelling, arrived in the city on the evening train only to find that their intended home was in flames.

According to Fire Chief William Lynch the blaze was one of the most stubborn residence fires in the city for the past ten years, as the fire had gained a full half-hour's start before the alarm was turned in. Four lines of hose were required to bring the blaze under control.

Starting in the basement, presumably from the furnace, the blaze ate its way into partitions and gaining a considerable start, made it difficult for firemen to get at. The fire soon went up through the partitions to tha attic and before it was brought under control, had gone out through the roof.

Occupants of the dwelling found temporary shelter with neighbors for the night but are now forced to seek other quarters.

CREEPING ROOF

Brighton, England (CP) —The 200-year-old lead roofing of Chichester Cathedral is "creeping like a caterpillar" and leaving gaps at the top, Lord Leconfield, Lord Lieutenant of Sussex, said in launching a £30,000 ($120,000) fund for repairs.

Mercury Takes Sudden Dip, Old Man Winter Hits District

Coal-burning householders went into sudden shovel action last night while those blessed with oil, dashed pyjama-clad to rheostats and gave them a decided flip to the right as the first touch of cold weather descended on the city and district.

The coldest hour was seven in the morning with the mercury holding firm at the five-above point. From that time on and with the rising of the sun the temperature rose slightly but office and factory workers shivered as they went to work between eight and nine o'clock. At ten o'clock it was ten degrees above zero.

A strong northwest wind prevented the bay from coating with ice but protected coves both east and west of the bay bridge were covered.

Swirling snow driven by a strong wind indicated a blizzard late Sunday afternoon, but the weatherman apparently had a change of heart and called off the snow legions in favor of colder weather. The temperature dropped sharply after midnight with skies clearing.

According to officials of the Belleville purification plant today, the bay froze over last year on November 26. A year ago yesterday there was skating west of the bay bridge.

Horace Palmer, Foxboro, Wins Grand Championship, Empire Dairy Show With 98.6 Cheese

First Time in History of Show Central Ontario Maker Has Won Honor

Horce Palmer, maker for the Foxboro Cheese Factory at Foxboro won the grand championship of the British Empire Dairy Show being held here this week with a June cheese which scored 98.6 points and won the championship prize offered by the T. Eaton Company Ltd., for having the highest scoring cheese of the exhibition. The show will be open at the Riggs Motor Sales Room, today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

It was the first time in the history of the Empire Dairy show which the grand championship has gone to a Central Ontario maker, as in previous years the top scoring cheese had been shown by western Ontario makers. In winning the championship Mr. Palmer's cheese scored the same number of points as one shown by Albert Bennington of Burgessville, Ont., but the Foxboro maker's cheese was given the nod because of a slightly better flavor.

Both makers scored full points for color and finish, while Mr. Bennington also scored full points for texture and closeness but the Foxboro maker's cheese scoring 43.8 points on flavor was two points ahead of his rival.

Cash Prize Winners

In the cash prize list open to the Dominion the following were winners: June—Horace Palmer, Foxboro, 98.6; Albert Bennington, Burgessville, 98.6; Leslie Adair, Britton, 98.5; Thos. Indicating a healthy interest in exhibition cheese by the younger makers, there was a fairly large entry in the beginners' classes for September and October cheese.

September — Thos Aichens, of Norwich won first place with a cheese scoring only one point below that which took the grand championship. His score was 98.6, other winners in this class were: T. N. Postiff, Palmerston, 97.8; Wilfred Pigram, Burgessville, 97.7; J. A. Reid, Campbellford, 96.0; Edward Reid, Stella, 95.8 and Grant Hughes, Enterprise, 92.1.

October — Thos. Aichens, 97.7; T. N. Postiff, 97.3; Fred Pigram, 97.0; Edward Reid, 96.7; Bruce McCall, Embro, R. R. 3, Ont., 96.7 and J. A. Reid, 96.6.

Wins Memorial Trophy

The grand championship winner Horace Palmer also won the John H. Echlin Memorial Cup for the maker from Central or Eastern Ontario/exhibiting the highest scoring cheese, while the Silver Challenge Trophy for the highest scoring October cheese from the province of Quebec was won by Gabriel Lamourex of St. Hyacinthe with a score of 97.0. Lamourex also won the J. D. LeClair trophy for the highest scoring cheese from Quebec, he having a 97.6 score.

Mr. Palmer also won the F. A. Morgan trophy for the Central Ontario maker having the highest aggregate score, his total being 489.8 in five classes.

George Pollard, Stirling, won the J. P. Griffin Challenge Shield awarded to the dairy instructor of Central Ontario whose group won the greatest amount of prize money in the regular classes. The Canadian Bank of Commerce silver tray' for having the highest cheese scoring 94 points or over for the period May 1st to October 31st was won by Alphonse Lajoie of Stoco with an average of 94.047. This was based on government grading reports.

The amateur class cash prize by the Card Brush Company to the maker not having won money or prizes at a previous exhibition was won by Thos. Aichens of Norwich.

Mrs. Horace Palmer, wife of the grand championship winner, also came in for a silver bake dish prize awarded by Stroud's Gift Shop. Mrs. Palmer took the prize as result of her husband winning the highest cash awards in all classes, open to Central Ontario makers.

A total of 207 cheese are on exhibition at the show. These were judged on Friday and Saturday by Thomas J. Hicks, Senior Dairy Produce Grader, of Montreal; E. Quensel, also of Montreal; Garnet Bain, London, and W. E. Brennan of Kemptville.

"Y" Basketball

Close scores again featured the Junior "Y" Basketball House League games on Friday night, the Goons taking the first game from the Mugs 23-17, and the Bums eking out a win over the Saps in the second game by a 13-12 margin.

In the opener, the Mugs took a half time lead of 5 points, and looked good for a win, as they were checking the Goon heavy scorers too closely for them to get anywhere, Galbraith being the only member of his team to tally in the half. However, after the change of ends, the Goons took a new lease on life and managed to shake Roy Jeffrey free for a few baskets, as well as keeping Galbraith on the scoring list, while tightening their checking. The result was a 7 point third quarter and 10 more in the fourth, to tally as many points in the second half as the Mugs collected in the entire game. Galbraith was high for the winners with 14 points, while Scott led the losers with 9.

The second game also saw the team that trailed at the half stage a drive to win the game. The Saps took a 10-6 lead at half time, with much better passing and play throughout, however, the Bums began to click with Buchanan getting away from his check in the second half to outscore their rivals 7-2 in the second, making a final score 13-12. This game was marked by close checking throughout, and numerous personal fouls resulted, Ketcheson being lost to the Saps before the game was out, probably accounting for the loss. Spiegel for the losers and Buchanan for the winners each got 7 points to lead their teams.

The teams:

Mugs: McBurney, 4, Scott, 9, Creeggan, Button, 2, Dolan, 2, Batchelor Total 17.

Referee—Ed Shortt.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In fond and loving memory of our dear Dad, William Smith, who passed away December 2nd., 1943.

We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its own.
Like ivy on the withered oak
When all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green
And never fade away.

—Always remembered by his sons, Bill and Tom.

SMITH — In loving memory of our dear Dad, and Grandfather, William Smith, who passed away December 2nd., 1943.

Gone, dear father, gone to rest,
Away from sorrow, care and pain,
May you rest in peace, dear father,
Until we meet again.

—So dearly loved never to be forgotten by Harold and Ivy, June and Ronald.

POMEROY — In loving memory of Henry Pomeroy, who passed away December 2nd., 1941.

A token of love and remembrance,
Of a son I shall never forget.
His memory to me is a treasure,
His loss a lifetime's regret.
One of the best! God bless you.

—Ever remembered by Mother, Father, Wife and Family.

PICTON

Picton, Dec. 2—When Santa Claus came to town on Saturday, with him came more than 20,000 people, to set a record for this town. Two streets, each nearly a mile long, were thronged with children and adults, not only from every part of Prince Edward County but from Belleville, Trenton, Napanee, Kingston, Deseronto and other points. Special busses were run from Kingston, Belleville and Trenton and additional trips were required to handle waiting crowds. At one time, there was a mile-long lineup at Glenora Ferry, and the Belleville highway was a mass of solid cars for hours.

The parade itself was one of the best of any parade ever held here. It was a mile and a half long, and between the different floats, those in costume performed to create great amusement. Donald Duck, Pop-Eye, Micky and Minnie Mouse, Felix the Cat, Pinnochio, Dagwood and Blondie were but a few of the 25 characters represented in this group. There were three clowns whose necks were four feet long, while another appeared on roller skates. There were 30 girls in costumes representing different countries and elves. Several poines ridden by children, were also decorated.

Ten Floats in Parade

The Recreation Centre float depicted the various activities carried on there. The Boy Scouts had two floats, both depicting camp scenes. One float followed by three pigs (costumes) carried evergreen trees and hog feed. The Kinsmen float showed a scene from Dog Patch. There were ten floats in all.

Heading the parade, and evoking much applause was the Trumpet Band of the P.W.O.R., Kingston, under CSM. G. Guy. They gave a rousing touch to the parade, and at its conclusion performed their outstanding precision drill. They remained over for the evening when they again delighted a large crowd.

Santa Claus appeared at the end of the parade. He arrived at the air station by plane, then transferred to a jeep where he proceeded to the parade starting point. There, he mounted his throne in a fancy wagon drawn by four magnificent horses owned by the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Co. of Kaladar. These were driven by George Atkinson of Bloomfield, and despite the noise and confusion were always under perfect control.

All available men at the Royal Canadian School of Artillery (AA) were mobilized as special police to handle the crowd in the section of Main Street in front of the armouries which was cleared of cars. Inside the building, Santa greeted the children. One thousand balloons had been blown up in preparation but these were gone before a small part had been handled. Two thousand more were secured but even these proved insufficient. However, all children received oranges, with more than 5,000 of them given away.

Gaily Decorated

The town, gaily decorated for the holiday season, made a perfect setting for the parade. Scores of illuminated trees have been erected on store fronts and along the sidewalks, and overhead are strings of colored lights. There are huge decorated trees on the armouries and recreation centre lawns.

Chairman of the parade was Philip Dodds with Don Thomas as secretary. Herbert Hyatt was in charge of costumes.

The parade was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. The president of this body, Ed. J. Williams, was stricken with appendicitis at noon but refused to go to hospital until he had seen the parade. Then he entered hospital and was operated on at five o'clock.

Seldom have so many oh's and ah's been heard in town as the different entries in the parade evoked favorable comment. For the children, it was a day to be remembered for another year.

Kingston Hotel Sold

Kingston, Dec. 2.—Ald. Nelles Megaffin, proprietor of the British American Hotel and business associates have purchased the Lasalle Hotel from the Randolph Hotel Ltd. Sale price is said to be about $600,000. The sale finally completed after weeks of negotiations and has gone into effect. Ald. Megaffin announced that he would take over as president and managing director of the hotel company while Gordon Fielding will be retained in his present capacity as resident manager.

Lasalle Hotel has a long history of serving the travelling public. The land on which the hotel is built dates back to 1823, at which time the land owned by the Crown was granted to William Parkiss. In 1835 Thomas Askew became holder of the property, later transferring it to Mary and Helen Fowler. They erected the City Hotel on the property in 1840. Robert Stenson took over the hotel in 1857. In 1900 the ownership of the property became vested in Johnson S. Randolph. Twenty-eight years ago the hotel became known as Lasalla Hotel after renovations and alterations were carried out.

153rd Anniversary Of United Church Is Celebrated

Picton, Dec. 2 — Large congregations were in attendance at the 153rd anniversary services of Picton United Church yesterday. Guest speaker was Dr. Walter T. Brown, M.A., Ph. D., LL.D., president and vice chancellor of Victoria University, Toronto. His subjects were "Our Heritage From the Past," and "The Church's One Foundation."

F. E. Walden was at the organ. The choir gave anthems at each service. Miss Florence Barber was soloist and the Misses Pickering sang a duet.

The history of this church traces back to 1793 when Rev. Darious Dunham, pioneer travelling preacher in this district, organized a class at Hallowell Bridge, now Picton. The first church here was erected in 1820. This frame edifice was replaced by a stone structure in 1854 and in 1898 the present handsome limestone church was built.

This year, a program of renovation was begun with adherents contributing $20,000 for the purpose. Redecoration, new lighting, an enlarged hall and other improvements are now under way. Rev. A. E. McCutcheon is the minister.

Belleville Girls Defeat Picton

Picton, Dec. 2.—In a double-header basketball game Saturday night at Picton armouries, the Tri-color Orfuns of Kingston defeated Picton boys 36-17, while the Belleville "Y" girls defeated Picton girls 20-4. There were 250 fans in attendance. Between the games, the P.W.O.R. Buglers of Kingston gave a fine precision drill.

For Kingston, Jake Edwards netted 14 points, Bob Surgenor 6, Bob Higgs and Don Soutter 4 each, Doug Plunkett 2, Gordie Hewitson one point, and Bill Mason 5 points.

For Picton, Glen Clarke accounted for 5 points, Bob Hayes 2, Frank Trebell 2, Joe Pair 2, Walter Evans and Jay Hepburn one each, Ted Rankin 4.

In the girls' game Shirley Bunnett and Clara Kikes led Belleville scorers with six points each, June Matthews, Dorothy Bishop, Joan Wright, Donna Davidson had two points each. For Picton Jessie Hawkins was credited with two points while Betty Corke sank two free throws. Referee, Glen Clarke, Picton.

Both games were fast and clean and opened the local basketball season. A town league for girls' teams has been formed while the boys will be entered in the intermediate O.B.A. league, playing games with district teams.

Mother and Six Children Perish

West Groton, N.Y., Dec. 2 (AP).—Fire originating in the kitchen of their new home Sunday took the lives of Mrs. John Dew, 45, and six of her 10 children, despite rescue efforts of a 9-year-old girl.

Theresa Dew, 9, who escaped, said she awoke at about 1.30 a.m. and thought a sister had called her to get ready for school. She started to run from the house, but turned back as the cries of her 2-year-old brother, Lowell, reached her. When smoke forced her to abandon her efforts, she summoned neighbors, who called firemen.

The two-story frame house was levelled. The tile roof caved in, burying in glowing embers the bodies of the mother and her children, Jean, 11, Patsy, 10, Beverly, 7, Jacqueline, 4, Lowell, 2, and Donna May, 5 months. Tompkins County Coroner Ralph J. Lowe said hot embers might prevent recovery of the bodies until perhaps Tuesday.

Bridegroom's Purse Recovered by Youth

Amid frequent reports of break-ins, thefts and passing of rubber cheques, police blotters occasionally contain instances of honesty. And such was the case at the local police station today.

Over the weekend it seems that a Queen's University graduate joined the benedicts and leaving Belleville by motor en route to the United States on his honeymoon got as far as Gananoque before he realized his wallet was missing. The facts were that driving east on Dundas street the groom had occasion to step out of his car to examine a tire and in the process dropped his wallet at the curbside.

Fortunately for the groom 16-year-old Robert West, 16 Franklin street, picked up the wallet and doing a bit of inquiring located other members of the wedding party. The wallet was turned over to the groomsman who rewarded the lad for his honesty.

Obituary

MRS. FRANCES E. CRAWFORD (Consecon)

Mrs. Frances E. Crawford, widow of Charles Crawford, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. E. Pearson, near Consecon, Prince Edward County, late Saturday evening, Nov. 30th., after an illness of six months' duration. The late Mrs. Crawford had reached the advanced age of 93 years; her parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson. For some time she lived in Trenton and for the past ten years she made her home with her daughter near Consecon. She was a member of the Free Methodist Church at Frankford.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Pearson, near Consecon; two sons by a previous marriage, James Cockburn and Robert Cockburn, both of Orillia.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until early Monday evening, then at the home of her daughter, near Consecon; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

LATE MRS. AARON CLARK (Wooler)

Wooler, Dec. 2 —(Special)—The funeral of Mrs. Aaron Clark was held on Wednesday afternoon from the home of Mrs. Clinton R. Terrill. The service was conducted by Rev. W. Delve of the Wooler United Church and there was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The many beautiful floral tributes showed the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

The bearers were Messrs. Wesley Downs, Harold Rowe, George Darling, Douglas Steinburg, Neil Nelson and Herman Anderson.

Interment took place at Picton.

MRS. HANNAH M. GUNTER (Frankford)

Frankford, Dec. 2 —(Special)—The funeral of Mrs. Hannah M. Gunter was held on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 28th., from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Moran, near Frankford. The service there and at Stockdale Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. H. H. Lackey, pastor of the Frankford United Church.

The late Mrs. Gunter who died on Tuesday, Nov. 26th., after a lengthy illness, was the widow of Thaddeous Gunter. She was in her 89th. year and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sam Fisher. All her life was spent in the Frankford district. She was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her are three sons, Clarence of Edmonton, Alberta; Earl of Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Harold of Ottawa; one daughter, Mrs. Harry Moran, near Frankford.

Empire Dairy Show Opened to Public As Cheese Judged

With the best cheese in the province on exhibition, the British Empire Dairy show was opened to the public today following completion of judging and placing of trophies and awards over the weekend.

The show is being held in conjunction with the 19th annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, members of which will gather in the banquet room of the Hotel Quinte on Tuesday and Wednesday for their business sessions. Ranking dairy officials of the Dominion and dairy experts are scheduled to speak while there will also be election of officers. The convention will close Wednesday evening with a banquet at Tabernacle United Church.

Although a regular winner in the county and district classes, this is the first time that this year's grand championship winner, Mr. Horace Palmer, of Foxboro, has figured prominently in the open classes. His prize winning cheese scoring 98.6 points, had a one point higher score than last year's winning cheese exhibited by Donald Howe of Atwood, Ontario.

Former cheese maker at East Hastings factory, Mr. Palmer took over the Foxboro factory upon the retirement of John Hall, former maker at the Foxboro plant.

DEBATING SOCIETY TO HEAR CANDIDATES WEDNESDAY EVENING

While nothing of a definite nature has been announced as yet for a public meeting for aldermanic and mayoralty candidates, the annual Wharf Street Debating Society conclave will be held in the club rooms on Wednesday night. A meeting for school trustee aspirants also attended by present members of the Board of Education is slated for the Collegiate Institute on the same evening.

In view of the large number of candidates this year, the Debating Society expects one of the best meetings in years. The usual hot dogs and soft drinks will be served.

15 More Polish Veterans Arrive For District Farms

Fifteen stalwart Polish soldiers, decorated heroes of the Second Great War, and wearing ribbon-covered British uniforms, detrained here on Saturday afternoon and later were sent to their new homes on the farms of Hastings County.

The men were young, and of a sturdy type. Only one or two of them spoke a smattering of English, and the others appeared shy on their first visit to their new home. Many of them wore the insignia of the famous British 8th Army, as a result of fighting with that corps under Field Marshal Montgomery in Italy and France.

They were met at the station by H. H. Reed, of the Unemployment Bureau here, and a fleet of taxicabs. Later in Mr. Reed's office they were interviewed through an interpreter, met their future employers and then left for their new farm homes.

The entire quota of fifteen went to farms in Hastings County. A few days ago a smaller quota was relayed to farmers in Prince Edward County.

Elderly Man Rescued From Burning Home

Seventy-seven-year-old Henry Kaiser of Centre Street, Hillcrest, on the northeastern outskirts of the city, probably owes his life to the quick action of George Belch, a neighbor, who dashed into Kaiser's burning home shortly after five o'clock this morning and rescued the elderly gentleman from his blazing bed-room.

Mr. Kaiser, who lives alone in a small frame house, suffered burns about the head, face and neck. His hair was burned off his head. He is recovering at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Borden Lucas, who resides next door.

Belch awakened at five o'clock. There was a strong odor of burning rags in his house, and arising he saw the Kaiser home across the street in flames.

Racing to the house he went to the bedroom of Kaiser and found him in bed with flames licking around the room. With difficulty he succeeded in extricating the elderly man from the room and bringing him to safety. The small frame house in which Kaiser lived, and its contents, were completely destroyed by the fire.

The city fire department answered the alarm but the little house was a mass of flames on arrival. Firemen concentrated their efforts on protecting nearby buildings from fire.

O.M.H.A. PRAISED BY O.H.A. PRES.

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—Praise for the work of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association among Ontario youth was voiced by George Panter, President of the Ontario Hockey Association, in his address Saturday to the 13th annual meeting of the O.M.H.A.

"We of the O.H.A. not only welcome the activity of the O.M.H.A. but encourage its working among lads of this province and will continue to lend every support," he said.

More than 200 delegates attended the meeting with voting delegates representing 87 clubs. It was reported that 44 juvenile, 33 midget and 25 bantam clubs had been entered for the 1946-47 season.

Clubs voted down an amendment which would have restricted their use of players in all series, providing the players concerned were eligible according to age limits. Request for lineups before game time, or between periods by rival managers was approved.

PETERBOROUGH DEFEATED

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—Power-packed Runnymede Collegiate, showing flashes of the brilliance which led them to the Toronto District title, added the Ontario Provincial Interscholastic Championship to their laurels on a muddy gridiron Saturday when they whitewashed Peterborough College 20-0.

Outweighed both on the line and in the backfield, the Peterborough squad held Runnymede to a single point in the first half. It was in the second half that the Runnymede Redmen led by Bruce Coulter, Bill Gough and Murray Monaghan swamped the game eastern Ontario club to finish the season undefeated.

Canadian Woman Is First Woman 'Wheat King'

Chicago, Dec. 2 (CP).—Three Canadians—two men and a woman—whose exhibits emerged supreme in the hay and grain division of Chicago's famed 47-year-old International Livestock Exposition today held the wheat, rye and oats championships of North America.

They are Mrs. Amy Kelsey of Erickson, B.C.—first woman to win the title of "Wheat King" since the show's inception,—W. S. Simpson of Dawson Creek, in the British Columbia end of the Peace River district, who won the rye crown, and Gordon McArthur of Stayner, winner of the oats award.

As far as was known immediately, it was the first North America crown for each although all have exhibited successfully in other fairs and exhibitions, including the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto.

66.5 Pounds To Bushel

Mrs. Kelsey won with a hard red spring variety weighing 66.5 pounds to the bushel. Her victory in the show's first post-war resumption—it last was held in 1941—retained for Canada the title it has held since 1929.

The 1941 winner was William Miller of Edmonton who also took the crown with a hard red spring variety. This year's reserve champion, L. E. Peterson of Victor, Mont., exhibited the same type of wheat but it weighed only 66.2 pounds.

Other Canadian Winners

Second and 12th places went to Alberta farmers, Fred Paverley of Wembley and Victor Watson of Airdrie. William Gobsin of Ladner, B.C., won fifth.

Other Canadian prize-winners included:

Sheep judging, seventh — Ontario Agricultural College.

Battle of Controls Probably Major Fight of Session

Ottawa, Dec. 2 — (CP) — The battle of controls shaped up today as the major fight of the new session of parliament, scheduled to open late next month.

Following Prime Minister Mackenzie King's announcement in Quebec last Friday night that wage and salary controls have been lifted, political observers saw a tough fight ahead for the government in its effort to enforce its stated policy of removing other controls in a gradual, orderly manner.

The emergency legislation under which the controls are enforced is scheduled to end next March 31, or 60 days after the opening of parliament, whichever is the shorter, and it is in this period that the heaviest clashes are expected to take place.

Controls on matters seriously affecting the cost of living—such as rentals, food, fuel anl clothing — are the chief restrictions the government is anxious to retain. But prices board chairman, Donald Gordon, in his recent series of addresses on price control, emphasized that no control would remain "five minutes longer than is necessary."

In Orderly Manner

The government's policy, restated in Mr. King's Saturday announcement, is to remove controls on each service or commodity as soon as the danger of inflation in that particular field has disappeared. The prime minister, announcing abolition of wage and salary controls stated: ". . . The removal of controls shall take place in a gradual and orderly manner so as to protect the standard of living and value of the war savings of the people."

Controls still in effect, which the government aims to remove by the end of 1947, cover a wide range of foods, the great majority of all clothing products, as well as basic household textiles, coal, wood, and petroleum products, and rentals.

Prices Board sources have declined to indicate the probable order of removal of controls on specific goods. But they have stated repeatedly that the items most important to the cost of living will be the last freed. These will be rentals, foods, clothing and fuel — possibly in that order.

Frank Gardiner Zone Commander Canadian Legion

Frank Gardiner was elected Zone Commander of 16B of the Canadian Legion on Sunday afternoon when delegates from the Zone assembled in the local club rooms on Front Street under the chairmanship of Douglas C. Thompson Ottawa, District Commander of the Legion. The new Zone comprises branches of Napanee, Deseronto, Wellington, Picton, Belleville, Denbigh and Northbrook. The election of a new zone commander was made necessary through the resignation of Tommy Mason, recently elected, and who has moved to British Columbia to reside.

In accepting the position Mr. Gardiner asked for co-operation and a more determined approach to the questions now facing the veterans. Mr. Thompson in an address to the delegates spoke on the crying need of Housing, praising the Federal Government for their actions toward the veterans but claiming they had been woefully weak with respect to the greatest question facing the veteran, that of proper housing. He stated that he did not believe that Wartime Housing was the answer to the question believing that such a scheme would segregate the veterans into a group as if they were ostracized from the community. He believed the question of Housing was a matter for the Dominion Government and not any municipality but that the municipality should assist in every way possible to open up new districts for the building of homes.

The delegates also favored a more generous pension for veterans, claiming that with the high cost of living, those veterans depending entirely on a pension could not possibly have the needed things of life due to the high costs. The resolution that was passed will be forwarded by the District Commander to the proper authorities.

Ontario Red Cross

In less than a third of a century the Canadian Red Cross has been called upon to play a supreme role in two World Wars separated by two decades of peacetime endeavor. World War I had left experiences and lessons, errors noted and experiments proven which constituted a rich legacy handed down to those who served in World War II. Four hundred and sixty-odd branches in Canada performed their magnificent part.

"History of Ontario Red Cross 1914-1946" by Field Secretary Major E. H. A. Watson who has held office since 1939 has just been issued and tells the story of the society. The book is an inspiring document indicating the growth of the organization and the result of its labors in an age which could not have done without its service.

The Canadian Society goes back to 1896 when it was founded in affiliation with the British Red Cross, founded twenty-six years earlier. In 1909 independent status was given the Canadian branch as a member of the League of Red Cross Societies. For five years only after that was it permitted to carry on its endeavors entirely in a peaceful world, for in 1914 World War I called the Canadian organization to work. Beginning three days after the outbreak of war which took place on August 4, the Society set to work. On the seventh of that month the call went out to the Canadian branches. The work grew steadily as the conflict went on to the close. In the words of the Chief Commissioner in France, Col. Blaylock, "throughout the long hard test, our Red Cross Society met every emergency."

The Society was called upon for peace time work in the years between the wars.

In the words of the former Premier, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, "it would have been calamity in a humanitarian sense, if the Canadian Red Cross had disbanded after the war . . . . It has gone into the remotest parts and lent assistance not only in the prevention of disease, but also in the mitigation of suffering and the improvement of health conditions."

In September 1919 the system was adopted of Provincial Divisions as the basic principle of organization. Ontario organized and the other Provinces followed so that there were nine divisions, pledged to the peacetime work of the society. The after-war task was a task of rehabilitation.

The Ontario Division developed and expanded with the needs of the times in peace years.

The division served in the emergency of the depression years and lent its aid in alleviation of suffering in numerous disasters. In the post-war years there came the developments of Soldiers' Relief, Junior Red Cross, Public Health and Outpost Nursing Service and Home Nursing Sisters.

World War II brought the supreme task to the Society. The Red Cross swung into action the day after the war broke out in September, 1939 and there was immediately a wholehearted response to the society's call for service. The Ontario branch raised for the work over two and a half million dollars in the first call or 66 per cent above the objective. The organizations of the Society expanded. Home Nursing Classes grew five-fold to a total of 905. In the year 1940 the Women's War Work Committee undertook their great task since the demand for aid was so great. In 1940 the second appeal brought nearly $6,000,000 in to the Dominion organization of which Ontario branch had raised nearly three millions by the end of the year. Day by day the work of the society grew.

One of the most important activities of the Society was the blood donor department supported by every part of the Dominion. There was also the Outpost Hospital Service on the home front in various parts of Ontario with a magnificent record of service.

Major Watson sees a great meaning for International Red Cross today with "homeless exiles in search of a lost fatherland and a whole generation of people that know not the meaning of home." At home he sees work worthy of the Society—to serve "veterans and their families, the abolition of our hinterland throughout outpost hospital, medical and dental service—the relief of suffering wherever in our land it may be found."

The volume of work achieved in such a period was so vast that in so many ways served the cause of the United Nations that it is difficult to record in detail all that it has done. It is necessary to read this volume of ninety-odd pages to gain the full impression of the tremendous work the Red Cross carried out in the years of war. The report is interestingly written and should be widely read.

Thanksgiving And Christmas

Canada's Thanksgiving is far enough away from Christmas not to be confused or fused with the great mid-winter festival. In the United States with Thanksgiving about four weeks ahead of Christmas, there is said to be the difficulty of checking a tendency to merge it with Christmas. A New York Times writer says that "father, in a meditative mood, as he prepared to count his blessings sleepily in an arm chair, was promptly surrounded by the urgent younger generation, who insisted of thinking of Santa Claus instead of the Pilgrim pioneers."

New Branch of Royal Navy

An unprecedented increase in electrical equipment in United Kingdom naval ships has necessitated the formation of a new branch of the Royal Navy. It will be known as "L" Branch, and will be responsible for all electrical and radio engineering matters in the Fleet. Officers will have special training, including a three years' advanced technical course at Cambridge, followed by a further two years' instruction in naval matters and commercial electrical engineering.

New Development in Movies

A Portland, Oregon, man has developed a movie projector using invisible ultraviolet light. By means of a screen treated with chemicals which glow under this "black light," the invisible light is reflected to the audience as visible light. This arrangement not only makes new color effects possible, but also makes the theatre much darker and does away with the distracting cone of light from the projector, it is reported in the Rotary Magazine.

King Gustav V And Tennis

Something almost worse than death has descended upon that grand old monarch of Sweden King Gustav V. He has been instructed by his physicians that he must play no more tennis.

For many a man much younger than the King, who is now in his 89th year, this would not be much of a blow. But King Gustav has loved this game so much over the years, and has been so closely identified with it, that he is reportedly most loath to lay down his racket.

Certainly his ability at the game for a man of his years has been remarkable over the last two decades. He was very active and tremendously keen whenever he played, even though he had to shorten the length of his games in recent years.

But his spirit has not failed, and at the risk of antagonizing all the world's golfers in one sentence, he has scorned the suggestion that he might take up his latter sport by stating that he could never in-in such an "old man's game."

Golfers will certainly not agree with this, dulge in such an "old man's game." miration for one who has been able to play active tennis up to such an advanced age.

Miss Lu, Chinese author and journalist, who measures only four feet, has been described as the smallest person, with the shortest name, at the Paris conference. In the latter respect however, she is not without rivals elsewhere. A few years before the war a little Miss Ma was christened in St. Paul's Cathedral, while the United States has a family of some distinction named Ek, and Melbourne has a tradesman named Ny. Nor are such two-letter names the limit of brevity. First place in a recent New York telephone directory was held by Mr. A and there used to be a popular restaurant keeper in Paris whose name was O, says Manchester Guardian.

DAY'S DRAMA

At dawn the light of day comes on,
To start life's play anew.
There is a role for everyone;
A bit for all to do.

For some, the wedding bells ring out;
For some, a dirge is tolled.
In hospitals men wait about,
First babies to behold.

'Twixt birth and death the scenes are laid,
With time for jest and song.
Some wolk in robes of pride arrayed;
Some stumble into wrong.

Some speak love's lines with tenderness.
Some sigh that loves is gone.
Some, after struggle, reach success,
And so life's play goes on.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What tree has three distinct types of leaves?

The sassafras tree, a common North American member of the laurel family, contains leaves of three decidedly different patterns.

This fact is referred to in the scientific name of the species, "Sassafras varifolium," the second element of which means "of different leaves."

One type of leaf is ovate with both ends tapering; another is mitten-shaped with a thumb-like lobe on one side, and still another is three-lobed with thumbs on both sides.

All three of these different types of leaf may be found on the same tree, and even on the same twig at the same time.

The writer has several times met persons who had the odd notion that sassafras trees do not propagate from seeds or shoots, but from grub worms, a belief that no doubt arose from the fact that the wormlike larvae of certain beetles are partial to the soil around the roots of trees of this species.

The flowers of this species are green and the male and female flowers are borne by separate trees.

In the North sassafras trees seldom grow higher than fifty feet, but in the South they often attain a height of a hundred feet and a circumference of six or seven feet at the base.

These trees are notable for the great variety of their brilliant autumn colors.

The entire trees has a characteristic pungent flavor. Oil of sassafras, made from the aromatic bark of sassafras roots, is used in perfumery and in flavoring beverages and confectionery, and sassafras tea, popularly known as "sass-tea" was once widely used as a tonic to "clear the blood." A musciliaginous substance from sassafras leaves and twigs was formerly much used in the South to give consistency and flavor to gumbo soups.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

EVERY BREATH HAS AN ODOR AND SOMETIMES IT IS BAD

A mother who, I suspect, pampers her jewels too much, reported the other day that when she took the boys to the family doctor for their fetor oris, which seemed to be all that ailed the boys, the doctor laughed. Right here, I suspect, the lady—the lady bent the truth a bit, for she said the doctor laughed at her. I hope not. I'd rather believe the doctor laughed with the boys. Anyway the doctor informed the mother, who probably takes the magazine and radio hokum too seriously, that "everybody has bad breath" —and once more I suspect the doctor really said that every breath has an odor. Only occasionally the breath odor is bad.

Whether the odor of the breath is bad or not depends on various circumstances.

One of the commonest causes of foul breath is a neglected or perhaps undiscovered cavity or cavities in the teeth—such as cavities that occur between the teeth and hence are difficult to find except by X-ray films. Where such a source of unpleasant odor is present you can use antiseptics, deodorants and the like till you are plumb busted and derive not the slightest benefit. I know it is humiliating to realize that a clean tooth does decay, after all. But don't take it too hard — of course your education was neglected.

Frequent use of mouthwashes or gargles may clear up or lessen bad odor from neglected cavities, diseased gums, accumulations in the crypts of the tonsils, for an hour more or less. The best mouthwash or gargle for this purpose is a solution of sodium hypochlorite. There is in the U.S. Pharmacopoeia, a Diluted Solution of Sodium Hypochlorite' which is suitable for this purpose —a teaspoonful of this in six to eight spoonfuls of water makes the right strength for mouthwash. Even the breath odor of onions, garlic and other foods that cause noticeable breath odor, may be removed for a while by this mouthwash.

The best way to combat the odor of ozena (dry catarrh) is by spraying the nasal passages three times daily with an agreeably warm solution of a teaspoonful of cane sugar in two fluid ounces of water (four tablespoonfuls).

No mouthwash, antiseptic or local deodorant can correct the fetor oris peculiar to gastrectasis (dilated stomach), empyema (purulent pleurisy(, bronchiectasis (chronic bronchitis with dilation or ballooning of bronchial tubes) or lung abscess.

Finally, there is no better antiseptic, disinfectant and de-odorant for regular use in the mouth than just plain soap—soapy water—the kind you use as toilet soap.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

I Think They Are Sweet

Please tell us what you think of sacharin tablets. Several friends of ours use them in place of sugar. (Mrs. H. G. L.)

Answer—I think any one may use up to five grains of sacharin daily with impunity. A quarter or half grain tablet gives the sweetening equivalent of a teaspoonful of sugar, for coffee, tea, etc., and of course sacharin yields no calories whereas a teaspoonful of sugar yields 30 calories.

Breath Odor

When I took my teen age son to the doctor about bad breath the doctor laughed at me and said everybody has bad breaths.

(D. R. W.)

Answer— Well, every breath has an odor, but the odor is bad only in certain instances. Various common causes and remedies are given in a chapter on the subject in the booklet "How to Breathe", for copy of which send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope

Running Ear

The remedy you suggested for running ear has cured me. I used it about four weeks and there has been no discharge now for over a month. (G. W. M.)

Answer—The remedy is (1) do not keep the ear plugged with cotton, (2) night and morning drop in ear two or three drops of solution of ten grains of boric acid in one fluid ounce of grain alcohol (there is nothing I can do if your druggist cannot sell you this soltion).

CHURCH BURNED

Flames shoot through the roof of St. Martin's Roman Catholic Church at Malartic, Que., when the building was destroyed early this week. The fire was discovered by a passer-by who rushed into the building and saved the Blessed Sacrament from the altar as the flames licked around it.

Medieval Doings In Chief's Kraal

Louis Trichardt, South Africa—(CP)—One of the major Bantu chiefs of the northern Transvaal —Sibasa—who ruled over 200,000 Bavendas 50 miles from this little town—has been deposed by the South African government.

This action was the sequel to reports of strange happenings in the chief's graal, including the running of a "night club."

In deposing Sibasa, Major D. G. Hartman, chief native commissioner for the northern area, declared:

"The government does not act hastily and is slow to move, but it will not tolerate the oppression of the people by a chief and it has now decided that you must give way to someone who will rule his people by law and not by violence."

Strange happenings had been reported from Sibasa's kraal. After reports of "a sort of tropical continental night club," and of "medieval rites," the government stepped in.

The Native Affairs Department took the drastic action of deposing Sibasa only after careful examination of the reports that those who did not comply with Sibasa's wishes had been "severely dealt with" by the chief.

Apparently a disturbing state of affairs existed throughout the tribe, particularly in the royal kraal, for to the northern Bantu their chiefs are kings.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 2 (CP) — Recommendations which the Federal Government will make to the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference opening here Monday remain a closely-guarded secret but there is a feeling that considerable stress will be placed on the possibilities of halting the progressive decline in Canada's dairy production.

Milk output has been falling steadily all this year and this led to lower production of butter, cheese and most of the other dairy products which are made from milk.

The decline in milk production already has had serious effects. It has kept the individual butter ration at the present low allotment of about six ounces weekly and has made it impossible for Canada to meet her commitment to supply Britain with 125,000,000 pounds of cheese in the year ending March 31, 1947. The likelihood is that the Dominion will fall about 25,000,000 pounds short of meeting this contract.

Closely linked with the dairy production is the problem of overcoming the current shortage of grains with which to feed cattle and other livestock and the conference is expected to recommend that acreages for feed grains be boosted next year.

The recommendation for the 1947 wheat acreage—at present at approximately 23,414,100 acres — likely will be unchanged in view of forecasts of drought years ahead and a need for increased summerfallow to stock up moisture against a possible dry period.

Employment: One development expected to materialize from the Federal Government's current move toward slashing the Civil Service roster is the consolidation of National Employment Service offices throughout the country. At present these offices can be set up in large centres with a population of 4,000. Probability is that a large number of these smaller offices will be closed up and their work taken over by branches in larger communities, with perhaps 10,000 being set as the minimum population.

Another expected move in connection with the employment service is its divorce from unemployment insurance. The expectation is the Unemployment Insurance Commission will be moved out from the jurisdiction of the Labor Department to function as a separate agency with its own regional offices.

Fishing —Now that the Canadian fishery is settling down into the post-war basis, the Fisheries Department is going ahead with plans for reinforcing its field staff from coast to coast. In the next few months, 100 new inspectors are to be appointed. About 65 will be on the eastern seaboard and the remainder on the Pacific coast.

COLLEGIATE NEWS

ASSEMBLY
Roger White

There seems to be quite a lot of things taking place in the school at the present time, what with the play, guest speakers, an art exhibit, a tea dance on December 5, meetings of the various clubs and organizations, Christmas card selling, packing food boxes for France, Elevator contests and those ever lovin' examinations approaching. Regardless of how busy they are, the students always find time for study. Night and day (to quote Cole Porter) they can be seen cramming their craniums with knowledge. Mr. Currie suggested that it would be nice to take home a perfect report card as a Christmas present, but who wants to give their parents heart failure... especially at Christmas?

Dick Stackhouse and Boyd Upper, wearing the latest in mad millinery, made announcements on the stage—or were they presenting a fashion show?

The sudden fall of snow has stirred our Christmas spirit, for today we sang (sang, that is) carols. The school's rendition of "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear" would have warmed even Scrooge's heart.

GIRLS' SPORTS
By Ruth Meades

On Monday, November 25th, a number of our grade IX, X, and XI girls bustled off to Napanee to play more volleyball.

By Jean Scott—Grade IX:

The games, scheduled for 4.05 started right on time. The grade niners got off to a good start with V. Fleming winning 5 points for her team each time she served. At the end of the first half the score was 19-17 for Belleville (natch!). B. Ruttan, J. Hutchenson, and B. Greatrix upheld their team in spiking and assists. The final score was 52-29 for us. The game was refereed by Betty Zebedee.

By Betty Rees—Grade X:

B. C. I. team started off with B. Boyce gaining 4 points for her team. Assists were made by D. Goodier and B. Rees. Due to unusual circumstances no one seemed tall enough for spiking (has anyone any comments on the net?). The final score for this game was 45-24 for B.C.I. The game was refereed by Shirley Mott.

By Barbara Young—Grade XI:

This game started with much excitement. J. Geneja, it seems was the only one tall enough for spiking and so did a wonderful job of it. S. Mott and M. Marion-off upheld their team very well. Our team was up against a tied score throughout the second half, and Napanee finally won with a score of 35-32. Sheila McEwan refereed this game.

After the game, both teams were treated to a luncheon of cokes, sandwiches and cookies. On behalf of B.C.I. Shirley Mott gave a "Thank You" address to Napanee.

BOYS' SPORTS
By George Ward

The unbeaten XB rugby team carried off all honors over IXG when they captured the lower school championship. Jack Fenn handled the majority of forwards which played a large part in the game.

Whalen got the first touchdown from a running play which was followed by a Soaft to McBride convert. Doug Soaft caught a nicely thrown forward for the next touchdown and Jack Rawson received the convert to make the score 12 to 0. Terry McCormick ran the next touchdown off a criss-cross play, but no convert followed. Jerry Whalen got one more touchdown which was followed by a Soaft to Cornell combination for the convert. This finished the scoring, the final score was XB 23 IXG 0. The XB line-up was, centre, Cornell; R end, Dawson; L end, Reeser; quarter, Fenn; R half, Soaft; alternates were, McCormick, McBride and Rire.

The XIG gladiators stole a march on XIIG when they played their final game for upper school championship. This game was the deciding game as each team had one to its credit. The champs were Bush, Bradshaw, Green, Sullivan, Currie, Nickel, Fargey and Hayward.

House League:

Watkin's team is in first place, followed by Spafford's which is one game ahead of Niller's. The play offs start next week.

THE BATTLE!
By Ruth Meades

On Tuesday after 4, the girls and boys of XIIB held a wonderful exhibition game of basketball in the girls' gym; the game being refereed (?) by Mr. Countryman. First half the girls followed (?) the boys' rules, and second half the boys followed (?) the girls' rules. After running up and down the floor on the double and being flipped around like mice by one sweep of the mighty arms of the er—ahem—, men, the girls were tres fatiguees. Nevertheless, we would be willing to accept a challenge for another game if there is one. The final score seems to have gotten itself lost somewhere in the dark dungeons of B.C.I., but Kilroy was there and told me that it was 27-9 for the males.

JUNIOR RED CROSS CLUB
By Winifred Kellar

On Monday, November 25, 1946, the Red Cross members gathered at room 218 to pack boxes for Holland and the hospital at Bancroft.

Many people do not realize the hard work which is done by this organization under Miss Dyer's guidance.

Many of the things being done now in the Red Cross will earn points for your Big "B", so if any one has old clothing please bring them to room 218 for boxes for people in war torn countries of Europe. (Have a heart)

The Red Cross is also open for willing recruits. Anybody able to knit and push a needle with a thimble is welcome. This does not mean that we're old grannies, but that we're all one big happy family working for the comforts of others.

CUFF NOTES

A Rebuttal, to Scuttle, a Verse that Appeared,
A week ago, in This Column, once so Revered.

I hasten with trepidity, to write in all lucidity,
A poem with a tone of right decor,
In an attitude of pity, for a simple little ditty,
That appeared here, just the week before.

The author of the ditty, while most surpassing witty
Was harsh upon the users of large words.
In his consternation, with a feeling of elation
He relegated poetry to surds.

And since he raised this ruction about poetical construction
I feel his accusations should be fought,
And barring; his conclusions, as fanciful illusions
Consider how the language has been wrought.

The cave man—such a thug—spoke one word only—ug
And we consider him quite retarded.
While the language now in use, in large words is profuse
And is generally very well regarded.

Take the phraseology of legal terminology,
And notice how it soars to lyric heights,
And the poetry of Tennyson, is truly, writers venison,
As it graphically portrays the author's might.

Shakespeare's works of verse, are readable and terse,
And the metre is never really tiring,
When we hasten to extract, a moral from his tract
We find the language most inspiring.

The object of this work, is not to put a quirk
In the poetical ambitions of a few.
But to chastise any writer, whose vocabulary's lighter
And to give good poetry its due.
S.B.J.P.

THE SNOW
By Boyd Upper

After the gales blow,
Then comes the snow,
That mounts in drifts so deep,
And on every hand
Throughout the land
The flowers go to sleep.

The flakes so soft, float from aloft.
In their coats so shiny white,
And falling down, on earth so brown,
In the silence of the night
They garb the ground, without a sound
In a mantle of silvery light.

And no one remembers the dreary Novembers
That hold the soul in chains
With foggy lights, and misty nights
And the drizzle of icy rains.
For one and all, at once recall,
With the coming of the snow.
A star most bright, that on a night
Like this, so long ago,
Shone down on earth, upon the birth
Of the Lord of all we know.

Aussies Use Plane In Crime Detection

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 2 (CP)—The New South Wales Police Department is using an airplane to speed up its work in the 300,000 square miles of state territory over which it has jurisdiction. Within a few years the department hopes to have a squadron of planes.

The new police plane is used to fly detectives and dogs to the scene of crimes in country areas, to take aerial photographs of districts where crimes have occurred and to spot outbreaks of fires.

It has a crew of three, all former members of the Royal Australian Air Force, who work in shifts, and carries four detectives. The plane has a compartment for police dogs and a portable selection of crime detection equipment.

The plane is equipped with two way radio which keeps it in touch with headquarters in Sydney and permits it to tune in to the police frequencies of the neighboring states of Queensland and Victoria.

The speedy transport which the plane permits enables police to reach the country area within hours of a call compared with days of car and train travel.

Animals Played Big Part in War

London, Dec. 2 (CP) — The Second Great War was a mechanized conflict but 120,000 mules, 40,000 horses, 16,000 camels and 15,700 pigeons were called in to help the British Army.

War Office figures show that transport services also required 6,000 bullocks, and 5,000 dogs were used for a variety of purposes in far-flung battlefields.

John Freeman, financial secretary to the War Office, said in the Commons that figures did not take into account millions of cattle, sheep and other animals handled by the army before use as food.

Casualties among the transport animals were "a very small proportion" of the total. He asked for notice of a question whether a suitable memorial for animals killed in the war would be erected.

Sale of Christmas Seals Encouraging Says Chairman

"Most encouraging," was the way Mr. D. L. Storey, chairman of the local Christmas Seal Committee, characterized returns during the first four days of the current campaign.

"It looks as if we are off to a good start," Mr. Storey said, "but, naturally, it will be some time yet before me have any real indication of how fully the people of Hastings County and district are co-operating to make this drive a success."

Mr. Storey said that many people buy substantially more than the two dollars' worth of seals sent them in the mail. He said results so far suggest that the public is placing its full support, financial or otherwise, behind the current fight to eradicate tuberculosis from this area and to prevent its recurrence in the future.

"Such a goal can be achieved," Mr. Storey emphasized. "There is absolutely no reason why there should be TB among our townsfolk, certainly there is less reason why some of our people should die of the disease. Medical science provides the means of fighting tuberculosis, provided infection is found early and no time is lost in taking advantage of treatment. Christmas Seal money will enable us to continue our case finding work and to provide other preventive services. The more money made available, of course, means the more extended work. Tuberculosis, which is not hereditary, can strike anyone, young or old, rich or poor, just or unjust. Every person why buys Christmas Seals is taking out additional life insurance," he said.

The local success of the Christmas Seal Campaign will make it possible to finance important efforts here during 1947, the chairman pointed out. Among projects planned are mass X-ray clinics in Trenton, Belleville and Deseronto.

Christmas Seal headquarters are at 51 Highland Ave., telephone 1985, and are open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. A staff of voluntary workers is in charge.

SOCIAL EDITOR DIES

Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP).—Mary Beatrice Freer Sullivan, associated for 30 years with the Toronto Mail and Empire and later social editor of the Globe and Mail, died here Thursday night after a prolonged illness.

The daughter of the late Rt. Rev. Edward Sullivan, Bishop of Algoma, Miss Sullivan was born in Chicago and lived for some years in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., before coming to Toronto. Alan Sullivan, prominent Canadian author, now in London, is a brother.

CHIEFS MEET CABINET

Ottawa, Nov. 30 (CP).—Chiefs of the three armed services have met with the cabinet several times recently to discuss long-term defence policies for the Dominion, it was learned yesterday. They are reported to have outlined the professional service man's views on the chances for lasting peace and to have discussed joint Canadian-American defence of the Arctic, proposed standardization of many British and American weapons and the newly-established close liaison between British army leaders and representatives of the Dominions.

BIG HIGHWAY PROGRAM

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 2 — (CP) — J. D. Miller, Deputy Minister of Highways said Saturday the provincial government has appropriated $47,000,000 for a maintenance and construction program to restore its highway systems to their pre-war standard.

Ordered To Join Union of Choice

By WILLIAM BOSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 2 — (CP Cable) —Ordered by a Willesden Borough council resolution passed last Monday night to join a union or be fired, corporation employees who have not yet done so already have begun to receive one month's notice of discharge.

All but eight of the Willesden municipal hospital's staff of 44, including the matron and deputy matron, received notices of termination of employment. Unless the notices are withdrawn it is probable that the 56-bed municipal hospital will be forced to close down since the whole administration staff is involved.

It was learned Friday night that Dr. F. Anderson Murray, president and medical officer at the hospital was given a one-month dismissal notice. Dr. Murray said that as a member of the British Medical Association he had refused to join any other organization.

At Willesden maternity hospital the nursing staff of 12 also has been given notice.

Meanwhile, refusal by W. Clark, a non-unionist transport worker, to join a union, threatened to disrupt London's electrified transport system. Workers at the Lots-Road power station at Fulham threatened to strike unless Mr. Clark joined a union or quit. A strike at the power station would cripple London transport's electrification system.

Editorial Writer Weds In Toronto

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP) — J. B. McGeachy of The Globe and Mail editorial staff, and formerly a well-known figure in Western Canadian newspaper circles, was married Saturday to Miss Cynthia Foley, formerly a prominent dancer and a member of a Winnipeg family whose dancing ability led them at one time into top-flight vaudeville.

During the war Miss Foley was a censor with the British Ministry of Information in London where Mr. McGeachy also was stationed as a commentator for the overseas service of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The marriage took place in St. Stephen's Anglican Church and was performed by Rev. J. E. Ward, rector.

BLAST PUZZLES OFFICIALS

London, Dec. 2 — (CP Cable) — A flash of light which lit up a large part of the forest of Dean and an explosion which rocked the nearby town of Coleford, Gloucestershire, has puzzled Air Ministry weather experts.

The explosion Friday night plunged the town into darkness, wrecked telephones, knocked a boy off his bicycle, split a pine tree, blew a torch from a woman's hand and set bottles dancing in taverns.

Some believed it was caused by a meteorite but no official explanation has been forthcoming.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Kizer, Consecon, Ont., wish to announce the engagement of their elder daughter, Doris Corrine, to Cecil Locket, only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Johnston, Saint John, N.B., the marriage to take place in the United Church, Consecon, on December 26th, 1946.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson, of Corbyville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Bernice Winnifred, to John Marcus Parrott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Parrott, Belleville, the wedding to take place quietly the middle of December at the bride's home.

Mr. Robert and Miss Marie Jean Allore, of Toronto University, spent the weekend with their parents at Hotel Belvedere.

The friends of Shirley Kleinsteuber, Trent Road, will be sorry to hear that she is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Budden, William Street, are spending the week-end in Peterborough as guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Ingram, who entertained at a dinner party Saturday evening in honor of the Provincial Minister of Lands and Forests, the Hon. H. R. Scott and Mrs. Scott.

Recently Married Couple Honored By Community

On Friday evening, about one hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ray, Harold, Ont., to do honor to their daughter, Jean, and her husband, Mr. Keith Vanhorne, and to congratulate them on their recent marriage.

Reeve W. J. Morrison was Master of Ceremonies, and chairman for the following program—community singing, a duet by Misses Dorothy and Vivian Cooney, a reading by Miss Edna Tanner piano solo by Colleen Colden, a duet by Misses Irene and Gwen Ray and a few short speeches made by some of the gentlemen present. Finally an address was read by Mrs. Lindsay Tanner on behalf of the community, and a presentation of miscellaneous gifts was made, including a set of dishes from "the charivari gang".

Mr. and Mrs. Vanhorne graciously replied, thanking their friends for the kindness which prompted this gesture, and inviting all to visit them in their new home in Belleville.

Refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour spent.

Miss Adair, V.O.N. Speaks to Teachers

The Thurlow - Tyendinaga Teachers met at S.S. No. 17, Wednesday evening, with the President, Mr. Gordon Locklin, in the chair.

Miss Verna Fox conducted a rousing sing-song, after which business items were discussed. The speaker for the evening was Miss V. Adair, V.O.N. of Belleville, who spoke about the "Problems of Mental Health in Public Schools". She said in part, "We have gone a long way in improvements for physical health and now we must do the same for mental health. The teacher needs to know when a child is in good mental health, and she should help him to control his emotions, stopping him from forming unhealthy habits."

This enlightening address was followed by a worth while discussion.

Mr. Harry Harrison presented Mrs. S. Hayton, of Foxboro School with the Warden's Medal, won by Miss Joan Churchill, who won second place in the Belleville District Public Speaking Contest.

Misses Geraldine Shannon, Mary Drummie and Marjorie Thompson served refreshments and the meeting adjourned.

BRIDGE STREET W.A.

The Woman's Association of Bridge Street United Church met in the church parlors, Friday afternoon, with Mrs. H. Rollins, the president, in charge.

Mrs. Rollins opened the meeting with a poem, "As We Grow Older", a hymn and prayer. Secretarial and treasurer's reports were received and adopted, it being decided to send cards to several shut-ins. A special collection was taken for the Girls' Work Board, and billets secured for students attending the Winter School in January.

The group in charge of the program was under the direction of Mrs. Gilroy and Mrs. Wade. The devotional was conducted by Mrs. Sargeant, using John 14, verses 19 to 24 as the Scripture Lesson, followed by prayer. Mrs. Gilroy introduced Miss V. Adair, V.O.N., who gave an interesting and instructive address on the origin of the work of the order.

Mesdames Rollins, Brown and MacDonald contributed a much appreciated vocal trio, and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction, after which dainty refreshments were served by the group in charge.

SCOTT'S W.M.S.-W.A. MEETS

The November joint-meeting of Scott's W.A. and W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Alton Sine on Wednesday, with a good attendance for the dinner. In the afternoon the W.M.S. meeting was held with the President, Mrs. R. Dafoe, in charge.

The worship service, as printed in the Missionary Monthly, was used, followed by The Lord's Prayer and Psalm 23.

During the business period the treasurer reported $43 raised to date, with the mite boxes still to come in. Reports of the 21st, annual Sectional Rally of the W.M.S. held at Cannifton were given by the delegates, who brought wonderful messages and presented to the meeting a challenge for all Christian workers to be awake to the responsibilities of the day. It was decided to send a box to Korea as Dr. Murray at Cannifton Rally told of the urgent need there. It was decided that the proceeds of the December dinner meeting to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs Morley Sine, should be added to the W.M.S. funds, and that the first chapter of the new study book be read by every member before that meeting, the committee in charge to review the main points of the chapter during the December program.

President, Mrs. J. Craft.
1st Vice President, Mrs. K. Faul.
2nd Vice President, Mrs. C. Copeland.
Treasurer, Mrs. C. Frost.
Recording Secretary, Mrs. R. Dafoe.
Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Morley Sine.
Temperance Secretary, Mrs. J. A. Lott.
Supply Secretary, Mrs. Morley Sine.
Pianist, Mrs. Alton Sine.
Assistant Pianist, Mrs. C. Frost.
Press Secretary, Mrs. Morley Sine.
Mission Band Supt., Mrs. A. Sine.
Secretary of Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Vera Sine.

MELROSE W.I.

Mrs. Lorne Kingston was hostess for the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute. The usual opening order was followed.

Business items were presented and discussed. Preparations for the annual bazaar highlighted the discussions. It is to be held on the evening of December 6 at the community hall with a supper to be served to members and families in connection with the bazaar.

Mrs. McLaren displayed posters from Zion Hill and Melrose announcing the 50th anniversary of Woman's Institute. These posters are to be judged at Guelph.

Mrs. John English, convener for the day, took charge of the program. Topic "Ways of Life in Scotland", was very well given by Mr. C. Sexsmith. He spoke of life as he saw it while serving with the overseas army. Mrs. Sexsmith, a Scotch war bride, displayed articles brought from Scotland and souvenirs from Italy and South Africa. One item of extreme interest was a music box over 100 years old in perfect condition.

Mrs. Akey, district president, was present and she gave a little story on "How Santa Claus was Introduced into America".

Mrs. English gave two of Harry Lauder's selections on a record player. This concluded the program and the ladies served refreshments, a social half hour being enjoyed. Attendance was 24, visitors three.

Red Cross to Hold Tea for War Brides And Their Children

War brides and their children of the city and district will be entertained at the monthly tea sponsored by the Belleville branch of the Red Cross at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday afternoon of this week, it was announced today.

Red Cross officials request that as many war brides as possible be present so that the names of their children can be recorded for the big Christmas tree and party being held for them here on December 19.

A real Yuletide party is being planned for the new Canadians and the Red Cross is anxious that none be omitted. War brides are requested to bring the names of their own children and those of other war brides who will not find it possible to be present at the Thursday tea. This function will be held between 2 and 6 p.m.

Shower is Held For Bride-Elect

On Friday evening a nicely arranged miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mrs. Stanley Kerr, Benjamin Street, in honor of Miss Doris Arthurs, bride-elect, with Mrs. Harold Arthurs and Mrs. Cecil Arthurs as co-hostesses.

Bingo games provided the evening's entertainment following which a basket, beautifully decorated in a color-scheme of pink and white, was presented to Miss Arthurs. It was well filled with numerous interesting parcels containing useful and beautiful gifts, for which she graciously thanked her friends.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses and an enjoyable social hour spent.

Fashion Flashes

FOR FLATTERY there's nothing to equal black lace. A charming evening frock is of fine black Chantilly-type lace, its strapless decolletage outlined by wavy bands of pink chiffon heavily encrusted with pearl beads and silver thread embroidery.

A LONG LIFE seems to be the happy lot of the off-the-face head-hitting hat, a sort of cloche with tiny turn-back cuff brim trimmed at the side with feather "dusters" or clipped ostrich pompoms. It is most popular in winter-white beaver fur, or in black or pastel satin for evening.

SPRING will see the return of several old fashion favorites. One of these is the tailored suit done in printed silk. An advance model in aqua pure silk, with thick and thin wavy black and blue bands, has a long, fitted jacket with high rolled collar and long, narrow sleeves. Slim skirt.

IT'S A BIG SEASON for dressy belts and gloves. Black suede, with floral motifs in aqua blue and pink beads; and brown mochas, with crocheted bandings and finger inserts, are among the novelties on display. Beaded bags are big again, and there is much black satin with sequins and beads.

A HIGH FASHION, and one that it is difficult to get away with unless the wearer is perfectly groomed and attired, is the one-shoulder, short-skirted, after-five frock. Fashioned usually in black crepe, we have noticed one or two such frocks on smart-spot dance floors. It is a fashion said to be slated for next Spring.

A LATE STARTER, but coming up fast, is the high fez. A smart model is of white hatter's plush covered with black mesh veiling and trimmed at the side with pompoms of iridescent coq feathers.

DESIGNERS FEEL that the fitted coat is to be next year's big fur feature, judging from the way in which this sort of coat has been received this winter. The return of caracul and sleek, pliable broadtail has much to do with this trend.

London — (CP) — The first post-war brewers' exhibition will be held next October but the usual 50-guineas cup for beer will not be offered because the quality standard will not be good enough.

Why VICKS VAPORUB Is So Good
For Relieving Miseries of Childrens Colds
More than two generations ago—in grandmother's day—mothers first discovered Vicks VapoRub. Today it is the most widely used home-remedy for relieving miseries of children's colds. And here is the reason . . .
The moment you rub VapoRub on the throat, chest and back at bedtime it starts to work two ways at once—and keeps on working for hours—to ease coughing spasms, help clear congestion in cold-clogged upper breathing passages, relieve muscular soreness or tightness. It promotes restful sleep. Often most of the misery of the cold is gone by morning! That's why VapoRub is so good to use when colds strike. Try it!

There Comes a Time
When you need this help.
You have a busy day at the office, in the factory or in the home and you are tired out.
After a night's rest you feel fine and ready to begin all over again with zeal and zest.
But there comes a time when you do not make a quick come back. You are tired all the time and cannot get rested.
You may have headaches, appetite is fickle and digestion slows down. The nerves are tense and irritable.
Your digestive system is failing to supply the minerals and vitamin B1 which your nervous system requires and this is why you need the help which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food so well supplies.

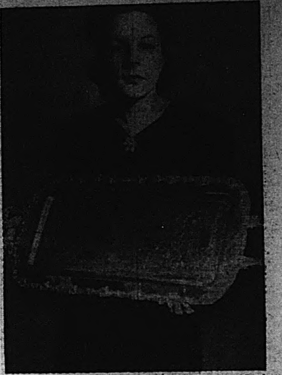
CHRISTIAN'S ELECTRIC & HARDWARE
BELLEVILLE OSHAWA

Scene of Saturday night's callous murder of Alfred Reddish, 53-year-old taxi driver who has been commended on two occasions for his courage. The car on the left (No. 2) is in the position of Reddish's cab when he was found slumped over the wheel. No. 1 car stands opposite 111 Emerson Ave. from where Charles Gaye and Sidney Bandy started. They had gone only a short distance when the gunman forced them from their car and made his getaway in it.

The blood-stained taxi cab in which Reddish met his death. Police investigators believed that he died because he refused to yield to his pale-faced slayer's order to hand over his money and his cab.



The murdered man's daughter, Mrs. Lillian Pickering of London, Ont., holds the silver tray which the Board of Police Commissioners presented to Mr. Reddish in 1945 for "his courageous action of refusing to surrender his automobile to an armed holdup man." In 1930 the murder victim was commended for his capture of a hit-run driver.

KILLED NEAR LEAMINGTON

Leamington, Dec. 2 (CP) — Struck by an automobile on highway 3 near here, a man identified as John Ajehre, believed to be in his 70's and a one-time resident of Hamilton, was killed early today. Wilfred Hickmott of Leamington, driver of the car, told police the man stepped directly in front of the car and he could not avoid hitting him.

New Soapless VEL Is New Modern Cleaner

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Soapless VEL has changed my ideas of washing clothes and doing dishes. This modern discovery has shown me for all time that heavy suds, such as soap products produce, are not necessary for cleaning.

The light fluffy suds you get with VEL are somewhat like a frothy drink or an ice-cream soda—the goodness is beneath the froth and bubble—and lasts long after the suds subside. You don't need lasting suds with VEL. I've found that the clear solution left after VEL suds dissolve, has all of VEL's original cleaning power. And it acts just as soft as rain water. That's why VEL is so easy on the hands and so beneficial in the bath-tub.

VEL FOR DISHWASHING

A teaspoonful or two of soapless VEL in dishpan or sink (nothing else, please!) is all that is required to speed up dishwashing. No need to add soap or any other cleaner to your VEL solution. Soapless VEL alone cuts grease quickly and leaves no smears on glass or china, nor scarcely any scum around the sink. For hard-to-clean pots and pans and for egg-stained spoons and plates, VEL's cleansing action is really amazing.

VEL FOR DELICATE FABRICS

I have found that soapless VEL dissolves instantly and completely in lukewarm water. This makes it particularly good for washing lingerie, woolens and nylons. Unlike soap, VEL is a neutral product, free from soapy alkalis. It contains nothing to harm colours or delicate fabrics. Use a little less VEL than soap (no need to add more when the suds subside). You'll find one rinsing is sufficient and it eliminates soapy film and scum.

VEL FOR HOUSEHOLD CLEANING

A tablespoonful of soapless VEL in a pail of warm water quickly removes grease and dirt from painted surfaces, walls, windows, mirrors and tiles. No rubbing, rinsing or drying is necessary. Just wring out the cloth and wipe off the dirt. 15-V-50

Control Removals Welcomed By Labor Congress

Ottawa, Dec. 2 — (CP) — Removal of wartime wage control was welcomed Saturday by A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor. Percy R. Bengough, Trades and Labor Congress president, in a brief statement said his organization was "ready to accept" the government's move.

"We have previously urged the easing of wage controls and now that they are being lifted entirely we are ready to accept it," Mr. Bengough said.

Mr. Mosher recalled that abolition of the control had been urged by the C. C. L. in a submission to the government in April.

"At that time, while the Congress urged that price control be maintained for obvious reasons, it took the position that the opposition of employers to wage increases provided an adequate means of wage control," he said.

65 YEARS OF SERVICE

Washington, Nov. 30 (AP). — Judge George W. Koonce, 88, said to be probably the oldest United States Government employee in point of service, retired yesterday after 65 years with the War Department. Mr. Koonce was legal consultant to the Office of the Chief of Engineers.

More Fine Paper Now Available, Demand Greater

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP) — More fine paper is available in Canada now than ever before in history but the demand is proportionately greater than in the past, G. W. Earnshaw, chairman of the Book and Writing Paper section of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, said Sat., in a statement.

"The total domestic supply of fine papers of all grades has increased greatly as compared with the year 1939, but the demand from virtually every user of paper has also increased and many new uses for paper have been added to this demand. . .

"In an effort to meet the domestic situation, and despite the almost unlimited export demand, the Canadian producers of white paper have deliberately foregone the higher prices obtainable abroad. They have curtailed their exports and now are shipping only to their traditional foreign markets, a trade which accounts for only a small percentage of their total production."

St. Laurent Averted Cabinet Resignation Says Prime Minister

Quebec, Dec. 2 (CP) — Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Minister of Justice and External Affairs, Friday night was named by Prime Minister Mackenzie King as a key figure in preventing resignation of the government in the November, 1944, conscription crisis.

"I do not know that it has ever been realized how near we came in November, 1944, to having no government at all in Canada, and no party that could form a government with any hope of being able to carry on in parliament while our armed forces were facing the last terrible ordeal of battle at the front," Mr. King said in an address prepared for delivery at a dinner tendered Mr. St. Laurent.

"I would not for a moment have it believed that all members of the government were not equally conscientious, equally anxious to reach a right decision, but knowing the situation as I do, knowing the exceedingly difficult position in which many members from this province, as well as many members from other parts of Canada found themselves, I am perfectly certain that had Mr. St. Laurent withdrawn his support of myself, or indeed wavered in that support, I should have had no alternative but to tender my resignation, and with it the resignation of my ministry."

Mr. King said results of the 1945 election were "a sufficient answer" as to whether the government had taken the right course on the conscription issue.

International Fair Opens In Chicago

Chicago, Dec. 2 — (AP) — Blacked out during the war, the International Livestock Exposition—warmland's world's fair—opened Sat., for its first post-war showing of the agricultural achievements of Canada and the United States.

Entries totalling 10,490 cattle, horses, sheep and swine, presented a gigantic task for the livestock judges who will give the nod to the show's champions. Grain judges likewise, were confronted with 3,000 samples of choice farm crops from which to select the wheat, corn, oat and barley kings.

Canadians have traditionally won the grain show laurels.

Local Resident Victim of Gold Brick Swindle

A modern version of the old "gold brick swindle" by which a local resident was left holding the bag for something like two thousand dollars was brought to light during last week as the result of a complaint lodged with the Belleville Police Department.

And to substantiate his story the victimized local resident left with the police about twenty sizeable nuggets which it was stated had been taken as "security" for the two thousand dollars. The nuggets, or ingots, turned out to be nothing but brass, but to the uninitiated appeared much like the real thing.

But police are in a quandry as to what to do about the whole thing. They grant that the unfortunate local resident was apparently victimized. owever, according to the story, the nuggets were left as "security" for the cash and police state that this in itself constituted no crime.

The other party of the business deal is reportedly from a Northern Ontario mining town.

Says Women Must Be Freed of Shackles

Boston, Dec. 2 — (AP) — Dorothy Canfield Fisher, prominent authoress, Friday night said "the American woman must be freed from social pressure which shackles her to the home and prevents her from developing into a mature citizen."

Speaking at the American National Conference for Social Studies, the Vermont authoress declared that "to exhort the women to stay in the home today is to order them to stay in a vacuum away from the work they have always done."

She said the idea that the husband must be or appear to be superior to his wife is a "hypodermic of master-racism."

Rawdon

Rawdon —Springbrook Mission Band met Tuesday afternoon and presented Dickie and David Holden with Bible story books before their departure to Coldwater, where it is hoped they will find many new friends.

HERSHEY BEARS IN COMMANDING LEAD IN RACE

Cleveland Barons Pulling Away in Other Half of Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

While Hershey Bears enjoy a commanding lead in the Eastern Division of the American Hockey League, Cleveland Barons are pulling slowly away from the field in the Western Division race.

The Bears stretched their winning streak to seven straight and boosted their first place margin to eight points over the New Haven Ramblers by trimming St. Louis Flyers 5-1 and Indianapolis Capitals, 3-2 during the weekend while the Ramblers bowed, 5-4 to Philadelphia and 7-4 to Buffalo.

Meanwhile, Cleveland extended its winning streak to five in a row by beating the Caps, 7-3 and the Flyers, 5-2 to boost their lead to five points over Pittsburgh Hornets who battled Buffalo to a 4-4 tie Saturday night.

In their encounter with the Caps last night, the Bears spotted Indianapolis a second period goal by Steve Wochy and then rammed in three counters before Wochy notched his second and the Caps final goal of the game. Armand Gaudreault netted twice for Hershey, and Bill Thomson once.

Cleveland also came from behind to down the Flyers yesterday. The Barons broke a 1-1 deadlock on counts by Henry Goldup and Johnny Holota in the middle frame and added two more in the third by Pete Leswick. Bobby Carse counted an earlier Baron count. Morey Rimstad and Jim Fraser pushed the Flyers tallies into the net.

Buffalo Wins

The Ramblers entered the third period tied at 3-3 with Buffalo but the Bisons hammered in four goals to the Ramblers' to ice the decision. Murdo McKay scored twice for the Bisons and Norm Burns did likewise for New Haven.

Brown, Macey, Pargeter, Armstrong and Hunt brought in the other five Bison counts with Bend and Colville each tallying once for the Ramblers.

In the only other game yesterday, Philadelphia, which gained its second win of the year when it downed New Haven, fought the Providence Reds to a 4-4 tie on counts by Augie Berchenratter, Phil Hergesheimer, Sid Lovelace and Harvey Jacklin. For the Reds it was Johnny Chad, Ronnie Wileson, Bill Whittet and Ray LaPlante doing the scoring.

Providence in its Saturday game defeated Sprinfield Indians 2-1 on counts by Bill McComb and Maurice Arcand with Peewee Summerhill doing the scoring for the Indians.

Trounced Flyers

Hershey trounced the Flyers 5-1 Saturday on two tallies by Pete Babando and singles by Herb Cain, Armand Gauderault and Lloyd Gronsdahl while Paul Galdu tallied the only St. Louis score.

Philadelphia's Rockets celebrated their first home Saturday by downing New Haven Ramblers 5-4 as Warwick and Clayton Layell tallied twice each and Ab Collings once. Scotty Cameron brought home two of the Ramblers scores and Allan Kuntz and Norman Tustin chalked up the other.

In the Pittsburgh-Buffalo 4-4 deadlock Saturday, Jackie Hamilton led the Pittsburgh scoring two goals as Bill Benson and Dutch Miller accounted for the other Flyers' tallies. Doug Lewis, Murray Armstrong, Fred Hunt and Johnny Mahaffey counted for Buffalo.

The Barons trounced the Caps 7-3 Saturday night on two goals apiece by Goldup and Lavois and three others by Bobby Carse, Jim Drummond, and Fred Thurler while Les Douglas, Jim Conachier, and Ed Nicholson brought in the Caps tallies.

PRIMO CARNERA ITALIAN "ALP" HERE SAT. NIGHT

Primo Carnera, the Italian Giant, the Ambling Alp (and plenty of other names) famous all over the world wherever boxers or wrestlers congregate, will wrestle in Belleville next Saturday night.

Manager Walt Gerow has made a "ten-strike" in being able to arrange the Belleville appearance of the former world's heavyweight boxing champion. Although he had to shift the regular wrestling to Saturday to get Carnera here and go "out on a limb" with the biggest guarantee ever in the history of wrestling in this city, Gerow is confident that he can break even.

Primo Carnera is of course the only wrestler to ever win the world heavyweight boxing crown and now with the war over, the enormous Italian "Walking Mountain" has set his heart on winning the wrestling title. But first Carnera will have to meet, and beat, Vic Christie right here next Saturday night.

Vic Christie won the right to meet the famous Italian athlete by reason of Valiant Victor's sensational two-straight-falls win over Karl Davis here last week. Christie is rated one of the very best everywhere in wrestling circles and several years back had a disputed claim on the world title. The young California Comet is rightly named for he flies into his opponent as if he was jet-propelled. Veteran wrestling fans in Toronto and Belleville have rated Vic's elbow-smashes as the best in the business. He'll be trying out the cream of them on 'Satchel-Foot" Carnera on Saturday and the fans are due to see a match that will be of interest throughout the continent.

PRO. FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

New York, Dec. 2 (AP)—New York Giants yesterday clinched at least a tie for the National Football's League's Eastern Division championship despite losing to Los Angeles Rams 31-21.

While they lost, their nearest pursuers, Washigton Redskins, were upset by Greenbay Packers 20-7.

In the only other game in the league Chicago Cardnials downed Chicago Bears, western champions 35-28. Boston and Detroit were idle.

Chips Off The Sports Block

Peerless Joe "King" Krol, Argonauts' football star blazed a dynamic last mile to the 1946 football championship on Saturday when, aided and abetted by the machine-like precision of his mates, he paced the powerful Toronto squad to its successive Dominion title, downing a fighting but outclassed Winnipeg Blue Bomber team, 28-6, before a cheering crowd of 19,000 in Varsity Stadium.

• • •

After a hard-fought first quarter when it appeared as if the Winnipeg strategy of "Stop Krol" was having expected success, the Argonauts and Krol unleashed a savage aerial attack and playing spectacular typical championship football scored three spectacular touchdowns They added another major score in the third quarter and topped it off with yet another in the fourth.

• • •

Krol's great flinging arm was again one of the main factors in the Argo win. The big guy heaved passes to Royal Copeland, Ron Smylie and Boris Tipoff in that sensational second quarter, took Copeland's pass for another and kicked outside to Copeland to bring the ball to the one-yard line in the fourth quarter prior to Karry's plunge for the touchdown. Krol also booted successfully for three converts.

• • •

Krol demonstrated with telling effect on Saturday and in previous games as well that he is Canada's outstanding contribution to football this year. Yet some Montrealers, in a sourgrapish attitude claim that he has no right to the Jeff Russell Trophy. Joe Ryan, Montreal Alouettes business manager has not done his fine team or himself any good by coming out flatfooted with such a statement.

• • •

Andy O'Brien, Montreal Standard comes to Krol's defence and rightly so. Andy says that the Winnipeggers knew as they started that if they stopped Krol they'd be doing what Alouettes, Rough Riders and Hamilton Tigers had failed to do. What the mighty Balmy Beaches failed to do in the Eastern Final and what teams for the past 15 years all the way up from high school had failed to do. Krol has been an outstanding star all season, Z the key of a great Argos machine.

• • •

"I've seen," writes Andy, "athletic naturals in every field of sport stage superman displays, but for sheer guts and courage my hat's off to the "King." His 60-minute triple-threat feats under the most savage — and often illegal — tackling, rank with anything in Canadian sport annals. And the fact that the swivel-hipped, 205-lb. graduate of Windsor's Kennedy Collegiate and London's Western University, never once resorted to unsportsmanlike tactics in retaliation is a tribute to the greatest manhood - building game we have. Which might be a tough pill for hockey enthusiasts to swallow but one or two bodychecks plus 30 minutes of hard skating per game can't compare with the pounding Krol took without affecting his uncanny offensive skill and field leadership. Certainly he's Canada's outstanding athlete of 1946.

• • •

Cobourg's Galloping Ghosts won the Dominion Intermediate football title up in the Lakeside town on Saturday defeating the Montreal Eastewards 16-5 in a hard-fought tussle although the Ghosts were in command of the situation practically all through the game. The white-shirted Hamlets with the scarlet nylon panties proved themselves worthy champions and Cobourg should be well proud of its 1946 titlists.

• • •

Danny Webb, Canadian lightweight champion, has "run out" on his bout with Gus Mell, Montreal's slashing leather-pusher in their bout scheduled for next Thursday night, according to Montreal reports. Montreal promoters claim that a medical examination failed to show anything wrong with the throat or any other part of the Negro's anatomy, but Webb stuck to his claim that "I'm not ready for Mell yet."

• • •

Neither heated efforts of his manager nor the $2,000 forfeit clause in the contract, nor the fact that fans had already bought over $7,000 worth of pasteboards altered the Negro's determination to meet Mell—for the time being, at least. Now Mr. Webb won't be able to fight in Montreal until the smoke has cleared and he has satisfied those folks that he was not ducking out of the fight.

• • •

Toronto Maple Leafs sharpshooting forwards drew steady beads on luckless Paul Bibeault of the Chicago Black Hawks on Saturday night, and flashed the red light eleven times before the final gong put a quietus on one of the biggest scoring debacles ever seen in the Fleet Street Palace. The Smythemen collected themselves 27 scoring points with Wild Bill Ezinicki who fears no one getting himself a trio of markers, with Turk Broda in the Blue and White cage notching himself his third shutout.

• • •

But the flying Habs of Montreal also held their end of the stick up, defeating the Redwings 4-1 to hold intact their half of the rung at the top-slot of the N. H. L. ladder. The score was not a record, as the Red Wings defeated New York Rangers 15-0 way back in January 1944.

"One day during the reign of the Four Horsemen, the greatest backfield combination in the history of football, Knute Rockne got the idea that the group had become a bit conceited and had forgotten that much of their vaunted power depended on the hard work of the line. In the middle of the game, Rockne yanked out the whole line of regulars and sent in substitutes. When the opposition started to smear the Notre Dame attack, the Four Horsemen signalled frantically for help. Finally Rockne sent in a substitute with instructions, an eager young man with a habit of stuttering. The Four Horsemen surrounded him and demanded eagerly:

"What did Rock say for us to do?"

"R-Rockne s-s-said," stuttered the youngster, "w-why d-d-don't you b-b-boys show them your p-p-press clippings? It m-m-might s-s-scare them."

CLAIMS POWERS TAKEN AWAY

Woodstock, Dec. 2 — (CP) — The Ontario government, if it continues to encroach on the powers of municipal government, may leave the people with no vote in the municipal elections, Mayor Charles Burston contended at public meeting here Friday night.

He maintained that powers of local councils were gradually being taken away by the Ontario government. He blamed the public for this condition because they did not get out and vote at election time.

A London announcement on Saturday stated the newly-formed association Internationale de Boxe amateur voted to hold the European Boxing Championships in Dublin in May, 1947, and agreed to permit winners to visit the United States.

Eric Unger, 30-year-old St. Catharines' hockey star, has been signed by Philadelphia Rockets of the American Hockey League, it was announced yesterday in Philadelphia.

Big Ed Sadowski, brought to Toronto at a reported $10,000-a-year salary to put over professional basketball, turned in his uniform Friday night after the Toronto Huskies were defeated in a Basketball Associaton of America game, remarked, "I'm through." and disappeared, club officials said yesterday.

Vic Henneberry, speedy Northern Ontario hockeyist, will rejoin the Glace Bay hockey team in the Cape Breton loop, it was announced yesterday. He was a member of the Glace Bay Maritime Senior champions in 1942.

Montreal, Dec. 2 (CP) — The poor old New York Rangers always seem to get it in the neck sooner or later.

When Robert Murphy decided to use the Blueshirts as his opening line of attack in the battle to bring unionism to the National Hockey League, he thought he was doing them a favor. But so far it has only served to put the Rangers on the receiving end of some rather cruel and cutting remarks.

Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara, in fact, comes up with a suggestion that someone should unionize the Ranger fans. They have a grievance, says he, after watching the boys who have been "masquerading" as an N.H.L. club the last four years.

There indeed is the glimmering of an idea, but it might be carried to unpredictable extremes, especially if both players and fans upheld their union prerogative of staging walkouts at the same time.

The consensus seems to be that Murphy won't get any further in his N.H.L. efforts than he did in baseball, which isn't a bad guess.

The N.H.L. got the jump on him when it erased some of the more galling contractural rules at its last annual meeting, and it takes quite a stretch of the imagination to consider any player as enmeshed in the toils of serfdom.

He always has the final court of appeal, the N.H.L. president, if he thinks he is getting a raw deal, but very few players ever have to exercise that option.

Organizer Murphy is going to have a fling at it anyway, and win or lose it won't make much difference to the fans. There's still quite a difference between a good player and a poor one, no matter what their union card says. It's what is inside the union suit that counts.

Have no doubt about a jump response. A jump response merely shows tricks enough to help make a game. If immediate and a jump of only one, it also promises two sure tricks.

You know, of course, that a game needs 11 tricks in a minor suit (clubs or diamonds); ten tricks in a major (hearts or spades). A one opener shows, among other things, five tricks.

If the jump is an assist of partner's suit, the trump suit is thus announced. If the jump is a takeout to a new suit, the trump suit has not yet been decided by your pair.

Therefore, as partner of the one opener, your one-jump states a precise minimum of tricks. Always you have an immediate one-jump if you have two sure tricks among six tricks.

You know how to count tricks, of course. Simply count one for each high card (ace or king or queen) and one for each short card. A sure trick is an ace or K Q. An A K makes two sure tricks.

When partner opens with a one bid, count your hand. If you have two sure tricks among them, you should one-jump at once.

Suppose partner opens with one heart when you have this hand:

♠K J 6 3
♥Q 9 5
♦A K 9 7
♣Q 7

You have an ace, two kings, two queens, a short card in clubs. Among these six tricks are two sure tricks; A K of diamonds. With partner's five, you see 11 tricks; enough for game, a one-jump.

Bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. So, even with support for a heart assist, first choice is a takeout to two spades.

You may end in a major game for which five tricks in your hand would be enough. On the other hand, partner may next bid diamonds. And your six tricks may lead to bigger things. Like slam.

ST. MIKES AWAY AHEAD OF FIELD IN JUNIOR LOOP

Other Five Teams Only Separated by Single Point for Second

(By The Canadian Press)

If the St. Michael's College Hockey Club were to resign in a body and take up some body-building sport such as draughts or parchesi, the O.H.A. Junior "A" loop would be a very close race indeed. Arrayed nine points or so behind the unbeaten Irish are five earnest young teams separated by a single point in their battle for second place.

As the Collegians play up to Saturday's form—they whipped Hamilton Szabos 12-2 at Maple Leaf Gardens without noticeable strain—opposing coaches would be best employed praying for soft ice or a breakdown of train connections the next time Joe Primeau's boys hit their town. But meanwhile there's a brisk battle in progress for the number two spot.

In sole possession at the moment are Barrie Flyers, by virtue of an 8-3 victory over the Falcons in St. Catharines. Tied for third place a point behind them are Stratford Kroehlers, Oshawa Generals, Toronto Marlboros and Galt Red Wings.

The winless Falcons, who tried the Flyers in Barrie Friday night, proved just as troublesome Saturday before they folded before a five-goal onslaught in overtime. The Flyers had to pull their goaltender to tie the score with six seconds of regulation time remaining.

Fife Paces Attack

Murray Fife, who got the all-important tying marker, paced the winners' attack with three goals. Favero added two for Barrie and St. Pierre, Aikens and Barrett got the others. Mann, Twaddle and Wood blinked the light for the Falcons.

Ed Harrison and Warren Winslow were three-goal men for the Irish as they coasted to victory over Hamilton, Fleming Mackell and Rudy Migay got two apiece and Les Costello and Benny Walt added the others. Pierre Cadeux and Bill Wysynski counted for the Szabos.

In the other half of the twin bill at Toronto, Galt Red Wings got their piece of third place the easy way with a four-point victory over Toronto Young Rangers by a 6-2 score. The Rangers, spotting Galt three goals as the final period opened, rallied strongly with scores by Gord Cruikshank and Wally Samanski, but the Red Wings promptly sank three more to sew it up.

An overtime goal by Johnny Milliard broke up the weekend's closest tussle at Oshawa, giving the Generals a 5-4 win over Stratford Kroehlers. The goal, Milliard's second, finished off a neat passing play with Don Bauer and Ike Hildebrand.

Bauer, Eric Pogue and Phil Samis were the other Oshawa goal-getters in a game that saw the Generals pile up a 4-1 lead early in the second period only to have the Kroehlers tie it up on goals by George Robertson, Wayne Service and Nick Mickoski. Len Wharton got the other Stratford goal in the opening period.

In Windsor the winless Spitfires bowed to Marlboros 8-3 in another four-point game. A two-goal performance by Gord Haidy, the markers coming within 20 seconds of each other, was about all Windsor fans had to enthuse about, though Earl Keyes gave Spitfires a 1-0 lead briefly in the first period before the Dukes began to roll.

LAURENCE OLIVIER'S TECHNICOLOR PRODUCTION "HENRY V" COMING TO BELLEVILLE

Commencing next Monday afternoon December 9th for three days the McCarthy Theatre will present the "greatest artistic triumph" in the history of the cinema when Laurence Olivier's technicolor production of "Henry V" will be presented in Belleville under the sponsorship of the New York Theatre Guild.

"Henry V" has smashed theatre receipts in every city in Canada and the States where it has, or at present is playing. In all its Canadian engagements it has run for many weeks and has been a constant delight to many thousands of people. During its long 10 week engagement in Montreal and fourteen weeks in Toronto the different theatre managements report that many patrons have come back to the theatre as many as four times to see "Henry V."

Produced in beautiful technicolor at a cost of more than $2,000,000, "Henry V" is an experience that one will always remember. From the opening scene on the stage of the Globe Theatre during Shakespeare's time to the smashing, kaleidoscopic thrill of the "battell fought at Agin Court in France" this beautiful production leaves the spectator with a feeling that at long last the motion picture screen has reached the ultimate in beauty, drama and color.

AT THE CAPITOL — Linda Stirling and Gerald Mohr, featured players in "The Invisible Informer," Republic's thrilling new murder mystery, opening tonight at the Capitol. On the same program Alan Ladd, Veronica Lake and William Bendix in "The Blue Dahlia."

TORONTO ARGOS RETAIN GREY CUP IN EXCITING GAME

Krol and Copeland Combine for Touches to Run Up 28-6 Victory Over Bombers

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 2 — (CP) — For better or for worse, Tedder Morris stood at the threshhold of a new football season and made a resolution. He vowed there would be no United States imports on his Toronto Argonauts "because my Canadian boys came through for me last time and they'll get the chance to do it again."

There were times this season when the champions, up against hand-picked American stars, found their Dominion crown tottering but they righted it firmly Saturday with a 28-6 victory over Winnipeg Blue Bombers that vindicated the judgment of the little farmer from Malton.

"They're trying as hard as they can to Yankify this game," said Tedder afterwards, his quick grin encompassing "his boys" and his head cocked to the chatter of a dressing room glowing with a second-straight Grey Cup triumph. "But as long as it's a Canadian game the Canadian boys can play it best."

From a cheering crowd of 19,000, who packed Varsity Stadium for this annual east-west classic, no argument would come about two of the Canadian boys "playing it best."

Blond Royal Copeland and Joe (King) Krol, the payoff pair of Argos through the star-studded Interprovincial Union and the Eastern final, never turned in a more flawless performance than in this Dominion final. They collaborated for two touchdowns and one or the other was the kingpin for the remaining three.

Dobler Quite Good

Neither of this duo cast shadows on slight Wally Dobler of Bombers. In the opening quarter, when Winnipeg pushed around the champions, Dobler looked good and again in the closing minutes, when he cracked over for the lone Bomber touchdown, there were flashes of brilliance.

To Krol, the 200-pound halfback from Windsor, went individual scoring honors with a touchdown and three converts. That touchdown came when a change in routine saw Copeland send Bullet Joe in the clear with a perfect forward pass.

Just previously, Krol hit his blond running mate with a touchdown forward and Joe made it 16-0 at halftime with another pass, this time to end Ron Smylie.

One of the greatest displays of team-work came in the third quarter, when Krol placed a perfect onside kick and Cope made a leaping catch on first bounce just short of the Winnipeg goal, from where Byron Karrys plunged the ball over. It became routine when Krol found Boris Tipoff as receiver for a fifth touchdown in the final quarter.

"He'll be back next season," he said confidently.

AT THE BELLE — Olivia DeHavilland and John Lund make a very romantic twosome in Paramount's romantic drama "To Each His Own". The film marks Lund's initial appearance in films, and according to reports the Broadway stage star is a movie "natural."

Credit for Win Given to Team By Coach Morris

By WILF GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 2. (CP)—Tedder Morris clutched the "game ball" to his navy gabardine and looked positively embarrassed as well-wishers pressed around him. He shooed them off, this little farmer from Malton, and said, "Awright, it was the boys that done it."

For Morris and his Toronto Argonauts it was the second Canadian Football Championship in a row but Morris, the man who gets a team working and then leaves it up to "my boys", wanted no part of the credit.

"You did it again," said Kenny Grivel, Argo supporter as he jostled his way through the dressing room crowd." You mean the boys did it again," said Morris.

There was no denying Morris was happy but he insisted his team wasn't what it should be. "We are weak on quarter-backing," he said. "We're two touchdowns worse than last year.'

Around the dressing room the "three cheers for Teddy Morris" from full-throated Argos rang out. The Tedder in his working clothes of an old grey shirt and crumpled pants looked as embarrassed as a new bride.

Then he ducked out to go over to Winnipeg Blue Bombers dressing room and wish well the team his Argos humbled 35-0 last year and 28-6 Saturday for the Grey Cup and title.

This was Saturday night—the night for the Argos to howl.

Calmest of all perhaps was Joe Krol who shared the limelight with his forward pass receiver, Royal Copeland.

If there was any comfort in it for the Winnipegs, Coach Morris said the "old boys" of the bombers, the lads who came down two years hand running to take a beating from the Argos, "they played better than the score indicates—they should have had two more touchdowns. But they let our receivers get in behind them."

The receiver they meant was Royal Copeland, the other half of the Argos' big pay-off duo. To this Winnipeg's Coach Jack West assented.

Quietly he said "I guess our lads were too 'Copeland-conscious' if you want to call it that."

He noted too the month-long lay-off his bombers had before they tackled Argos.

COBOURG WINS TITLE

Cobourg, Dec. 2 (CP)—Cobourg Galloping Ghosts defeated Montreal 16-5 here Saturday for the Dominion Intermediate Rugby Championship to maintain an unbeaten record for the season.

The score in the first quarter was 1-0 for Cobourg. In the second quarter the Ghosts ran that lead up to 16-0 and held it there until the last quarter when Montreal scored their lone touchdown.

BURNED FINGERS

CHAPTER 11.

"Men do," Carol conceded. "They're always talking about how they got seven dollars when they first began to work. I don't know how they begin to get more. Girls never do."

"Well, I don't mean rich," Jennifer amended it; "but I mean a nice house—maybe out at Ingleside or St. Francis Road—and a cook and a car. Lots of people have that much, haven't they? Well, how do they get it?"

"I don't know. Lots more haven't," Carol summarized it briefly.

"All these people who get rich say that you have to save," Jennifer persisted, "but what good does that do? Suppose I saved ten dollars a month; at the end of the year I'd only have one hundred and twenty dollars. What good would that do?"

"None," Carol said firmly. "You'd probably have to have your teeth fixed and hand it all over to a dentist."

"I wish I knew.." Jennifer's voice trailed disconsolately into silence.

That afternoon she took home from the library a book on famous women, hoping that she might get some light there. But Cleopatra, Hester Stanhope, Frances Willard, and Florence Nightingale did little to enlighten her.

Her thoughts came back to one point. She would be rich and beautiful and admired someday; she would be splendidly dressed, surrounded by friends. It was thus Sid Borrows would find her when he came humbly to renew their friendship. And then she would punish him as he had punished her.

She knew perfectly well that there was nothing deliberately cruel in his behavior. It was simply that other things had absorbed him, that it had never been quite the easy or natural thing to arrange engagements with her. He was merely taking the line of least resistance; if they met he would be his friendly, self-confident self. Fervently she prayed with every wish of her heart that they might meet.

Eugene Evans came to see her about every other week. She had introduced him to Betty, had sat in great discomfort in the untidy little dining room making talk with him while the children clamored for attention, complaining about the necessity of going to bed, the loss of toothbrushes, the meanness of teachers.

Jennifer dreaded and disliked these visits thoroughly; she could not imagine that Eugene enjoyed them. After each one she concluded in some humiliation and some relief that he would never by any chance come again. But come he did, usually on a Wednesday night

After his third call Jennifer put the little-used parlor in order and settled Elna in Betty's bed, to be moved to the parlor couch when Eugene left. The parlor was a dark, stiff little apartment; there were no gracious vistas in Betty's flat as there were in the Evans home, no grand piano, wide-open doorways, shine of polished surfaces and green of palms. But the parlor was just a little better than the dining room, and Betty could go on with her radio program undisturbed.

Sometimes Jennifer and Eugene walked around the block; it was a dull walk with little in it to provoke interest or help conversation. Jennifer let him do most of the talking. He paid so deferential an attention to whatever she chanced to say that she grew somewhat diffident about expressing an opinion. He would consider it, analyze it, perhaps challenge it and refer to it later with such respect that she was reduced to her one infallible defence, which was laughter.

"What are you laughing at?" he would demand seriously.

"Why, just because—you look so grave—and I didn't mean — I really don't know anything about it! I just said that to say something," Jennifer would stammer.

"But you said—"

"I know I did! But I don't really care one way or another."

"But then why express yourself?"

"Oh, Gene, I don't know! And I wish to goodness you'd stop coming to see me if you're going to take everything as if it was said in court of law!" Jennifer might answer, still in a gale of mirth.

Laughter was her only escape from the strain of his rigid morality, his stern examination of his own motives and those of everyone else. His spirit was tortured by anxieties; mankind was too deeply rooted in evil to make tenable even the slightest hope for the world. Childhood reached the age of responsibility all too soon, and at seven sin could take possession of the soul. Afterward all was darknes, weakness confusion, wrongdoing.

Jennifer laughed. But she laughed to save herself from the infection of his certainties. If Eugene was right, then the sudden moment of emotional weakness that could assail a girl of eighteen, the yielding to nature and to love, was fearfully and frighteningly wrong. She had been trying to put the whole experience behind her, to ignore it, depreciate it, forget it. Eugene made this impossible as far as she could discern, he nevertheless was constantly beating his breast and bemoaning his sins.

"We're all so bad, Jennifer," he said one night. "Not you—God knows I don't mean you! But the lazy people and the pigs who incessantly overeat and overdrink, and the selfish and the cruel people! Can't you see how they've held back the kingdom!"

"Does it hold back the kingdom to eat too much, Gene?" she asked somewhat timidly.

"It's wrong. Little or big, every wrong holds it back. We've got—he was always serious; now his gravity became even deeper—"we've got to be perfect, you and I, Jennifer. Keep the law," he said urgently. "Welcome beggars to our table, have only one coat, forgive everyone—forgive everything!"

"I have only one coat," Jennifer said, relieved to be clear of reproach on this score at least. "I also have a raincoat the Seely gave me," she added conscientiously. "Should I—shall I give that away, Gene?"

"Good Lord, no, you angel!" he said with the unwilling laugh that his adoration of her simplicity sometimes wrung from him. "Mollie has five coats—six or seven maybe, I don't know, and that's right—for Mollie. No Jennifer," he added, "don't worry about yourself. You are perfect—pure and sweet and innocent with a child's heart. I know the human soul and I know what yours is."

"Gene," she said, not for the first time, "are you sure you don't want to be a priest?"

"No. I've been through all that. That's not for me. I must have a home, a wife, children. I've always known that. I can wait. I can wait until you are ready, Jennifer."

It was never like love making yet on almost every occasion when they were together there was some remark of this sort, some reference to his hopes of someday making her his wife. He was definite; he forced himself to be quiet patient, unemotional about it. Unemotional in words and in the iron constraint which denied him so much as a touch of her fingers, much less the kiss and embrace for which he hungered. But she understood the accents of his voice, she saw the trembling of his hands and heard the corresponding tremble in his tones. He was in love with her, amazed at his own feeling, unwilling to recognize it for the young passion it was, eager to rationalize this whole experience as something right and reasonable on moral lines, far separate from the everyday passionate love affairs that were going on all about them.

"I look forward," he said more than once, "to a home that shall be pure in every sense of the word, to mutual devotion, self-control, and respect. If someday there should be children in that home they will be regarded as a sacred trust. To hold a son of mine in my arms, to realize that I have been given this supreme responsibility of rearing a young soul—ah, my dear, in that humble little place, wherever it may be, there will be a tiny nucleous of the kingdom that must come before this old world can be saved. I see a garden with my wife trimming the roses, her little children about her—"

"Gene, I'm not good enough for all that!" she protested one night. "I'd fail you in every way. I get mad and I don't know anything and I've never studied latin—and everything!"

The wry twisting of his face that meant a smile answered her.

"You'll have to let me hold to my own opinion on that, Jennifer."

They had walked around the block in the crisp autumn darkness, had passed the bright lights of the delicatessen store, the inevitable group of giggling and jostling girls and boys on the corner, had entered the big dim church and knelt for a few minutes. Once or twice Jennifer had been with Gene to benediction there. The services meant nothing to her, but she had loved the reverent crowds, the blazing altar lights, the music, and the smell of incense that had slowly penetrated the entire great vault of the nave.

Now they were home again, and Jennifer had more than once glanced surreptitiously at the clock to estimate how soon he might go. He always left before ten o'clock; it was after half past nine now. If he just would stop coming, she thought restlesly. She liked Gene, but his very presence burdened her; after he left her she would have a time of depression, feeling herself anything but what he thought her, wondering how she could terminate their friendship without an actually violent break with him. Hints were completely thrown away upon his stubborn possessed righteousness. If Jennifer did not want to marry him it was because she did not see things in their rightful light; someday she would and all would be well.

"Your opinion of me is too high, Gene," she said now in a troubled tone. Any further talk was interrupted by a ring at the doorbell. Eugene, who had walked to the window with the usual effect of putting a strong constraint upon himself, gave her a surprised glance came back and sat down.

Betty immediately put her head in the parlor door. She concealed the rest of her person because she was in her nightgown and wrapper.

"Who on earth would that be at this hour, Jen? It's ten to ten."

"Why, I don't know. Telegram maybe."

"They'd phone a telegram," Betty said, vanishing as Eugene and Jennifer came out into the hall and Jennifer jerked the clutch that opened the lower door.

Immediately they heard it open and a man came bounding up the two dark flights, whistling under his breath as he came. Jennifer felt herself almost suffocate, and her spine stiffened and grew cold. It was Sid Borrows.

He grasped her hands as if he would have drawn her to him and kissed her, but Jennifer drew back, her color gone, her eyes unsmiling. There was a moment's awkward silence then Jennifer introduced him somehow to Eugene and they all went back to seat themselves in the parlor.

"How are you?" Sid asked, self-possessed and easy as always, "I've just come back—well, I've been back about a month. My kid brother," he explained to Eugene, "got a bug and they sent him down to the desert for a while. I went along with him and took an engineering course that I've wanted for some time. Missed me?"

"Very much," Jennifer said swallowing before she could speak.

"How—how is your brother now?"

"Oh, sound as a nut! I got thinking of you tonight; I was all alone at the club and I thought I'd drop round and see you," Sid explained. "Your windows were lighted, so up I came How's everything been? You're as thin as a rail, darling, but I don't see that the pulchritude has been affected to any great degree."

It was just his way of talking the way of his world. He called everyone "darling" and for that matter so did the girls at the Evans house, so did everyone nowadays. But not Eugene. He sat regarding these familiarities with a darkening forehead; his thin fair face was pale with anger and dismay, his jaw set.

"I think I must be going," he said, rising, the words choking him.

"And I think I'll stay five minutes more," Sid said, "for Jennifer and I have about one million six hundred and twenty-two things to talk over."

"No you go too," her lips said to him vehemently without sound. Her face, turned away from Eugene, was colorless.

"I'll only stay a minute." Sidney's tone was startled and hurt. Eugene, muttering an incoherent good-bye, was gone and she and Sid were alone. "What's the matter, Jennifer?" he asked then in an injured tone.

"Nothing," she said breathlessly, gulping, forcefully pushing away the arm he tried to put about her. "But I want you to go."

"Did I break up something?"

"No. Of course not."

"The poor fish seems cracked about you! I'm afraid I drove him out. He looked as if he was going to bust," Sid said, mildly amused, from his own magnificent height, at Eugene's puny rage.

"He's a very fine person," Jennifer protested, reddening.

"Well, don't get excited. You're not engaged to him?"

"No. Not if he was the last man in the world. But I like him. I don't want you to laugh at him."

"I should think not, even if he was the last man in the world Sid repeated with satisfaction. "Then what's he doing here and why does he grit his teeth when I come in?" he demanded.

"I don't know and I don't care," Jennifer said in a light nervous voice, "and I want you to go away right now and I don't ever want to see you again! Now, right now. I don't want to talk to you and I don't want you to come again. So good-bye," she finished feverishly, both her hands against his arm as she tried to move him toward the door.

"Why, look here, look here, what's the matter with you!" Sid exclaimed astonished. "I've not seen you for six months—that's not my fault, as I explained to you—and now, when I come up to find out how things are with you, you try to brush me off!"

"I don't want to talk about it and I don't want to explain," Jennifer said, still breathless. "I just ask you to go. Will you please go?"

"Certainly I'll go," the man answered warming to anger, "but I'd like to know what you are to little Sonnyboy with the gold eyelashes and what he is to you, before I go."

"Nothing. Nothing at all. Except that I love his sister and he's been kind to me. And he's good," Jennifer said.

"Jennifer, are you off me because I didn't write? I'm a bad letter writer. I only wrote my mother about three times, except for telegrams about Bruce. Listen, be nice to me! I've always been crazy about you. I got to thinking of you a few nights back, and of how sweet you were—"

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—The Toronto htock market was heavy all along the line today, the industrials losing 1.06 in the index by noon and the golds were off .64. Other groups had minor index losses. The volume was about normal at 527,000 shares for the first three hours

The food stocks held steady to strong and other groups recorded moderate weakness; International Paper lost 1 1-2, Consumers Gas 2, Agnew-Surpass 1 1-2 and Loblaw A 1 3-4.

Dome, Lake Shore, Quemont, Donalda, Kirkland Lake, Buffadison, Wenvills and Negus were weaker gold issues. North Inca was fairly active on a gain of 6 cents. Akaitcho added 5, Elder 4 and Frobisher 9. Golden Manitou and Labrador were slightly stronger base metals.

A gain of 4 cents for Roxana to 50 was the only adjustment in the west oil list.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York, Dec. 2—(AP)—The stock market slipped into lower territory today without being given much of a push.

Buying enthusiasm was said to have been cooled appreciably by continuance of the coal dispute and its possible repercussions on virtually all lines of business.

Dealings slowed after a fairly active start.

Canadian stocks were off fractionally at mid-day. Distillers Seagram slipped ¾, Hiram Walker ¼, Canadian Pacific ½ and Dome Mines ⅜. McIntyre was unchanged.

PRODUCE MARKET

Eggs: Steady, trading slow at unchanged prices, wholesale to retail, A large 47-48, A medium 43-44, A pullet 39-40, B 40, C 34, country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free, A large 43, A medium 38, A pullet 34, B 35-37, C 30-31.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 2 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were up 10 cents at Peterborough $19.90 plus transportation, in the only market reporting settled quotations early today.

Barrie reported an increase of 10 cents at $20.60 delivered.

19 Fatalities In East Canada During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

The murder of a taxicab driver in Toronto and the death of a woman at Sarnia after what police said was a fight with her husband were among 19 weekend fatalities recorded by The Canadian Press in Eastern Canada.

Eight persons died as a result of street and highway accidents. Three were killed by falls and food poisoning was fatal to two others. A variety of mishaps accounted for the other four deaths.

The murdered man was Alfred Reddish, 52-year-old cab driver who was shot by a bandit in an apparent robbery attempt in Toronto Saturday night.

Traffic accidents in Ontario cost the lives of John Zajehro, believed in his 70's, near Leamington early Saturday; George Felix, 79, in Toronto; Mrs. Harriet Sedman, 65, struck by a truck while shopping in London, Ont., and Lawrence Rodericke, a bush worker who died after a car collided with the taxi which was taking him to hospital with injuries suffered in a lumber-camp accident.

Train Strikes Car

Richard Brown, 65-year-old farmer and cattlebuyer, died in hospital at Beaverton, Saturday of injuries suffered Friday when a train struck his car.

At Simcoe Mrs. August Van Langen, Buffalo, died in the hospital Saturday night as the result of an automobile accident near Trenton, Nov. 9.

Other traffic accidents cost the lives of Mrs. Annie Grimock, 58, killed when a car rolled over an embankment at New Glasgow, N.S., and Rose Lajoie, 68, struck by a truck at Adamsville, Que.

Constable William T. Noble, 52, fell to his death from a steel catwalk in the Ottawa building where he was employed as night watchman.

See Buildup For Molotov To Succeed Stalin

By ED CREAGH

London, Dec. 2—(AP) — An unexpected new publicity buildup for Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia in the government - controlled Russian press set tongues wagging throughout Europe today in the popular game of trying to pick Prime Minister Stalin's successor.

Many diplomats and others who had not regarded M. Molotov as the most likely candidate were inclined to guess again after Moscow newspapers, reporting the 56-year-old Russian diplomat's election as an honorary member of the Soviet Academy of Science, lauded him lengthily as Premier Stalin's closest assistant.

This almost unprecendented singling out of a Stalin deputy for public praise came less than a month after M. Stalin, 67 years old and by some accounts in poor health, failed for the second consecutive year to take part in the recent countrywide celebration of the Russian Revolution anniversary.

To some students of Soviet affairs it looked as though M. Stalin might be stepping down, or perhaps be gradually relinquishing his powers, and as though M. Molotov was perhaps being groomed for advancement.

M. Molotov, undoubtedly the Russian leader best known to the western world by virtue of his prominence in big power deliberations at London, Paris and New York, has been a lifelong worker for the Communist party and is one of eight vice-chairmen of Russia's Council of Ministers, of which the premier is chairman.

Should M. Molotov succeed Premier Stalin it would surprise those who have been "backing" other leading officials.

BRIDGE GROUP DIRECTOR BARS NEGRO PLAYER

Toronto, Dec. 2 (CP)—A rule of the American Contract Bridge League was invoked by A. M. Sobel of New York, tournament director, to bar a soft-spoken Trinidad negro, 43-year-old Leon Beard of Port of Spain from playing in the Toronto Whist Club's annual Ontario bridge tournament here Saturday. Percy Sheardown, president of the Toronto Whist Club, said afterwards: "We were on a spot. We were all opposed to the ruling but Al Sobel was our tournament director and we would not have been able to replace him."

ALLOWS APPEAL

Toronto, Dec. 2 — (CP) — In allowing the appeal of George Montague from an illegal parking conviction, Judge James Parker said Friday, "A man has a perfect right to park in front of his own door." Montague was fined $3 Sept. 5, but the Judge contended since it was his place of business, he had a right to ignore the no-parking sign.

Canadian Teams Retain Split N.H.L. Lead, Hawks Collapse; Leafs Win Over Chicago 11-0

Canadiens Defeat Detroit, Rangers Beat Hawks and Red Wings Tie Boston

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

What looked like a collapse of the Chicago Black Hawks featured the weekend National Hockey League games. While the joint pace-setters, Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens, were lengthening their lead, the Hawks sank deeper in the cellar after two thumping defeats.

The Hawks looked like a minor-league outfit at Toronto Saturday night, where they were victims of an 11-0 defeat in which the Leafs rang up 27 scoring points. Canadiens kept even with Leafs by walloping Detroit 4-1 at Montreal.

And on Sunday the Hawks lost on their own ice to the New York Rangers, but it wasn't nearly so bad. It couldn't be. Rangers won a 2-1 decision on De Marco's goal in the last five minutes. In the other Sunday game the Bruins came from behind to gain a 3-3 tie with Detroit Red Wings at Boston.

Have 3-Point Margin

Result is that Toronto and Montreal today, with 21 points each, have a three point margin over Boston, but Detroit is another point back in fourth place. Detroit is three points ahead of Rangers, and Rangers are three points ahead of Chicago, who are not ahead of anybody.

The little girl in the blue seats thought it was a swell game at Toronto Saturday night as the red goal lights flashed on and off like a Christmas tree. She was probably the only one who thought so. The Leafs scored twice in the first period, five times in the second and four times in the third frame.

Ezinicki Leads Parade

It was the most one-sided NHL score in two years.

Saturday Bibeault halted things in the last frame by skating to the bench for a chat with the team master-minds. He returned to the cage however, and stuck it out to the dismal end.

Ezinicki led the scoring parade through the inept Hawk defence with three goals, and Kennedy and Meeker each had two. Poile, Watson, Metz and captain Syl Apps got the others.

At Montreal Saturday the Canadiens rang up two goals — both from Elmer Lach — within two minutes midway through the first period, and they were leading 4-0 on Bouchard and O'Connor's counters before the second frame was half finished. Conacher got the Wings' only counter on an assist from Abel before the second period ended. The third was scoreless.

Sunday night in Chicago Bibeault was still out of luck. Leswick opened the scoring for New York in the first period and Gee tied it up in the second. The 3rd frame was more than 16 minutes gone when Leswick and Hal Laycoe combined to get the puck to De Marco for a shot on which he made no mistake.

It was the sixth tie in 16 starts for Boston in the game against Detroit. Don Gallinger scored twice for the Bruins and Schmidt got the other. Conacher got two of the Wings' counters, Doran the other.

Underrated Navy Nearly Scores Upset Over Army

Defeated 21-18 by Missing Three Points After Making Touchdowns

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR

New York, Dec. 2 — (AP)—Officially, they closed the book Saturday on the 1946 college football season, but an unprecedented assortment of successful teams looked forward to another month of practice in preparation for the long list of New Year's Day Bowl games.

An even dozen invitational struggles are carded, for New Year's Day, with at least half that many scheduled to take place between now and then. Saturday's finale completed the filling of the four larger bowls as well as many of the others.

Underrated Navy matched undefeated Army touchdown for touchdown and came within four yards and a few seconds of engineering the biggest upset since the Normandie.

The Cadets won the annual service classic, 21-18, on the ability of Jack Ray to kick extra points, but the surprising Middies frightened the daylights out of them with a last period drive.

It was the swan song of Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard, who sparkled as brightly as ever in the first half to give the Cadets a 21-6 advantage at the intermission.

Notre Dame, meanwhile, rolled over Southern California, 26-6, to finish its season with nothing worse than the Army tie on its record.

Mighty Georgia Wins

Mighty Georgia crushed Georgia Tech, 35-7, to finish the season with a perfect record of 10 triumphs, tie Tennessee for the Southeastern Conference championship and land in the Sugar Bowl against North Carolina.

North Carolina, the Southern Conference champion, routed Virginia, 49-14. Tennessee barely squeaked past Vanderbilt, 7-6, to match Georgia's record of five Southeastern Conference victories and no defeats.

In the Orange Bowl game it will be Tennessee against Rice, which tied Arkansas for the Southwest Conference title by taking Baylor, 38-6.

LEWIS, UNION FOUND GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

SELF-SUFFICIENCY AIM IN ECONOMIC FUSION

Zones Politically Independent, Bevin Explains

Expresses Readiness to See Other Two Zones Join Plan

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 3 (CP)—Foreign Secretary Bevin, announcing an agreement for the economic fusion of the British and United States zones of Germany designed to make the two occupation zones self-sustaining within three years, told a press conference today the merger was born of "sheer economic necessity".

State Secretary Byrnes of the United States, who signed the agreement with Mr. Bevin last night, meanwhile declared he will ask the Big Four Foreign Ministers to discuss peace plans for Austria as well as Germany before the New York sessions end.

Mr. Bevin told correspondents at a hastily-assembled conference that the agreement, aimed at producing economic self-sufficiency within the area not later than the end of 1950 at a cost of $1,000,000,000, was not directed in "any spirit of antagonism" against any other governments.

He said Britain and the United States are ready "to bring in the scheme" the other two occupation zones "so that together we can lay the foundations for a healthy Germany."

The Foreign Minister, giving what he described as a "short background" to the signing of the agreement, stressed the difficulties that had been encountered in effecting a working administration in Germany.

Without the agreement, he said, "it would have cost British taxpayers more than £100,000,000."

A statement on the agreement issued by Mr. Bevin at the press conference said both Mr. Bevin and Mr. Byrnes considered the fusion agreement "a first step in the economic unification of Germany as a whole, which they hope will lead to discussions with the other occupying powers for the extension of these or similar agreements to the other zones of occupation."

The British and American zones will remain politically independent.

The statement said the agreement takes effect Jan. 1, 1947, with the "indigenous resources of the area and all imports, including food, pooled to produce a common standard of living."

Lt.-Gen. Brian Robertson, deputy British military governor of Germany, witnessed the signing last night with Lt.-Gen. Lucius Clay, his American counterpart. Gen. Robertson told the press conference today it is hoped that the German ration in the British zone can be raised to 1,800 calories as a result of the agreement. The ration now is less than 1,500 calories.

In stressing the difficulties confronting the separate administration of the two zones, Mr. Bevin referred to the competition for food among famine areas which he said had placed a strain on Canada and the United States. It was hoped the agreement would help to relieve this strain to some extent.

Mr. Byrnes, discussing at a separate press conference the radical new agreement which diplomats consider the most important development in Allied policy in Germany since the occupation started, made these other announcements:

To Wind up Five Peace Treaties

1. The Foreign Ministers may wind up this week the peace treaties for Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary and Finland, proceeding at once to a discussion of the German question.

TWO DRUG STORE BANDITS AGAIN ON THE LOOSE

Nattily Dressed Youths Hold Up Store and Secure $90

Toronto, Dec. 3. (CP) — Two soft-voiced, wavy-haired, nattily dressed youths who police say give the appearance of "respectable family background", had another drugstore hold-up chalked against them today as the police search was intensified.

The politely spoken words "This is it," plus descriptions led police to believe that the pair who escaped with $90 from a West End drugstore last nigt are the same youths who recently wounded a policemen and two drug clerks in a Yonge Street store.

"The coolest pair I ever saw," was the opinion given by Harry Hashmall shortly after being robbed and held at gunpoint in his Dundas Srteet drugstore.

He told police the pair walked in during a lull in business while he and two assistants were in the dispensary.

The taller of the two approached as if to present a prescription. "Putting his hand in his pocket," said Mr. Hashmall, "the chap pulled out a long, black automatic, covered us and said 'This is it. One move and you've had it'."

The second bandit swiftly moved to the register and rifled it.

"Why, the chap who rifled the register even dropped a coin to the floor and stooped to pick it up, not in the least bit ruffled," the proprietor added. "Those two had a finesse that would shame any Chicago bandit in the olden days."

Police were convinced last night's pair are the same bandits who recently held up and robbed three other city drugstores including the one on Yonge Street. One is said to be about 27, the other 19. Both are neat dressers and go hatless.

"They always seem polite, never use abusive language and always start off with the words 'This is it'," police headquarters said. "They both appear as though they come of good, respectable family background."

No one yet has attempted to claim a $500 reward posted recently for the pair's capture and police believe that both are from out of town.

TWELVE KILLED WHEN FRENCH PLANE CRASHES

Craft Hits Peak In Vosges Mountains During Snow Storm; One Person Missing

Belfort, France, Dec. 3 —(AP)—Twelve persons were killed and a 13th was missing today in the crash last Monday of a French army transport plane during a snow storm in the Vosges Mountains.

A woman and two children were among the victims. Four bodies were identified, but names were withheld pending notification of relatives.

The plane was en route from Liden, Germany to Paris. It caught fire after falling, burning many bodies beyond recognition.

Rescue parties trudged through a heavy snowfall to the scene, but were held off by fierce fires that burned in the wreckage for 12 hours after the accident. The plane fell on the eastern slope of Ballon D'Alsace Peak.

Three bodies were blown clear of the wreckage by the explosion of gasoline tanks. Nine others and the body of a dog were taken from the remains of the plane. No trace was found of the 13th person who the French air ministry said was aboard.

Benjamin Spiegel, Struck by Car, Dies in Hospital

Becoming confused as he was crossing the street in front of the Bowl-O-Drome Monday evening, Benjamin Spiegel, 54, of Station Street, sustained fatal injuries when struck by a north-bound car. He died in Belleville General Hospital shortly after midnight.

According to the police report Mr. Spiegel with his wife was crossing the street from the east to the west and apparently becoming confused left his wife and turned back to the east curb. The left front fender and bumper of the car driven by Jack Phillips, 48 Gordon Street, struck Mr. Spiegel and dragged him 44 feet before the car was brought to a stop. The injured man died shortly after admittance to hospital, where he was attended by Dr. E. M. MacDonald.

A preliminary inquest looking into Mr. Spiegel's death was ordered for this afternoon by Coroner Dr. Russell Scott.

Claims Rain-Making Machine Effective Over 100-Mile Radius

By NORMAN ALTSTEDTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, Dec. 3 (CP) — Some drought-weary farmers in the southwest corner of Saskatchewan believe that the "rain-making" machine operated by 33-year-old Donald Johnston of Regina was responsible for the record-breaking rains which nurtured the bumper 1942 crop.

Just across the border, east of Medicine Hat, Alta., in a similar, traditionally-dry wheatland section, 10 farmers last July paid the Lancashire-born handyman's expenses to bring the foot-square machine there. But Johnston claims "it was too late in the season to do any good and results were not much."

Today, the slight, unmarried army veteran and former art student is overhauling the machine he first put together in 1937 and has been perfecting since, getting it ready for next spring.

He says that if given facilities to operate it in various parts of the Prairies, he can banish drought, bringing rain with the "instrument's greatly multiplied power of gravitational-attraction to the moon's influence."

Soft-spoken Johnston says haltingly that the electrical power drawn from the moon by the machine's electro-magnetic field, causes electrical changes in the atmosphere and when clouds are overhead, affects condensation and thus rain. The machine has an effect over at least a 100-mile radius, he says.

Johnston claims that the machine also uses the power of an electric storm in place of the moon when the former is occurring in the vicinity of the machine, causing rain where no rain would have fallen had the machine not been in operation.

The machine—which he calls a "Universcope"—has a solid steel frame and incorporates two horseshoe shaped magnets. One of the magnets is fixed and the other moves in a semi-circle about it, swinging like a pendulum. He says the moving magnet sets up an electro-magnetic field besides being influenced in the speed of its swing by the moon.

Johnston has spent 500 on the machine which is not patented. But he wants only his expenses in return for an opportunity to smash drought completely throughout the three Prairie Provinces."

He operated the machie at Regina and made trips to Swift Current, Sask., between 1938 and 1941 but he received no wide notice until 1942. On Sept. 1 that year, the Swift Current "Sun" a weekly, said editorially: "....a man in Swift Current is operating a mechanical instrument which is supposed to induce rain and strangely enough we have had more rains than in decades past."

The previous July rodeo fans at Swift Current had asked him to "shut 'er off" because heavy rains were interfering with the show.

Thousands More Idle As Coal Supplies Drop

Pittsburgh, Dec. 3 — (AP)—Fires were banked in more United States steelmaking furnaces today as the 13-day strike of 400,000 A.F.L.-United Mine Workers forced idleness on nearly 150,000 other workers.

In Pittsburgh, heart of the steel and soft coal industry, the Pennsylvania Employment Service reported an estimated 23,000 workers idle as a result of the coal walkout will become eligible for jobless pay this week.

Most of them are steelworkers who will be asked unemployment compensation for the fourth time in a year: First, last January during the steel strike; then during the coal strike of last spring; the power strike of October and the present crisis.

Coal-using railroads felt the pinch of dwindling fuel supplies, laying off an additional 6,400 workers. Ernest E. Norris, President of Southern Railroad, said the number will increase rapidly if the strike is not ended soon.

Steel mills, deprived of vital coke supplies, announced new furnace shutdowns. In Youngstown, Ohio, only 35 of 83 open hearths and 9 out of 28 blast furnaces were operating today.

Natonal Tube Company at Lorain, Ohio, shut down two of five blast furnaces while Republic Steel at Cleveland laid off another 350 workers for a total of 900.

Alabama counted among those made idle by the coal strike, 8,000 steelworkers, 14,000 workers in cast iron pipe shops and 1,000 railroad and other employees.

In Schenectady, N.Y., General Electric Corporation laid off 700 more workers today, bringing its total to 1,200.

In Colorado where trees were being cut for fuel in the Denver shelter belts, the Colorado Fuel and Iron Corporation laid off 115 of its 5,000 workers. Company officials said "drastic layoffs" will begin by the end of the week.

Hundreds of schools throughout the U.S. were closed because there was not heat. W. T. Middlebrook, business Vice-President of the University of Minnesota, said the school would also become a coal strike casualty after the Christmas holidays if the strike is still on. In Utah, Brigham Young University which was among the first schools to close during the crisis, installed oil burners and planned to resume classes Wednesday.

Traditional Yuletide Delicacies Will Be Available in Greater Supply

Ottawa, Dev. 3 (CP)—Christmas dinner-tables won't groan as heavily this year as they did before the war, but it will be a merrier Christmas from an eating standpoint than any Canadians have enjoyed for nearly five years, the Prices Board reported today.

Casting an eye over the list of traditional yuletide delicacies in store for Canadians this year, the Board promises such wartime rarities as mincemeat, peel, figs, apricots, dates, nuts, candies and some raisins.

Christmas turkeys—supply not abundant but much better than last year. The provident shopper should be able to obtain a turkey without too much trouble. The domestic turkey supply will be augmented by sizeable imports from the United States.

Chickens—Supply best in many years of all varieties.

Mincemeat—A better supply and better quality.

Raisins—Not too plentiful, supply about the same as last Christmas. The last shipment of Australian raisins will have to carry over this season as new shipments are not expected until the new year.

Currants—Supply will be short this year.

Prunes—Canada has the largest supply ever brought into the country.

Apricots — Supplies received this year for civilian consumption for the first time since the war.

Figs—Limited supply but larger shipment expected to arrive before Christmas.

Olives—Good supplies.

Spices—All spices will be in short supply for Christmas.

Citrus fruits—Largest crop on record; prices will probably run fairly low.

Bananas—Adquate supply for Christmas use.

Grapes—Frost in California has reduced the supply of the red emperor variety. There will be some however.

Maraschino cherries—Fair supply. Shipment has arrived from France.

Juices—Very good supplies of tinned apple, grapefruit and tomato juice. There will also be some pineapple juice.

Nuts—There will be good supplies of filberts, almonds and pecans.

Candies, confectionery, chocolate bars and cocoa beans— The supply of good chocolates and chocolate bars is slightly better this season but still not good.

Predicts Grim Results if World War Re-occurs

Bradford Wilts., England, Dec. 3 (AP)— Dr. Cyril Foster Garbett, the Archbishop of York, said last night that if leading powers failed to reach a good understanding they faced the possibility of another world war which might sweep belligerents and non-belligerents off the face of the earth."

"This is no fantastic nightmare," he said in an address to the Bradford Textile Society. "It is . . . . a catastrophe which may come upon the human race within the next 20 or 30 years.

"There can be little or no doubt that another world war in which the belligerents had atomic bombs would lead to the death or mutilation of tens of millions of human beings and the ruin of cities and towns, the devastation of huge tracts of country so that it would be impossible to grow any food on them, and it is even possible that forces might be set in motion which would sweep belligerents and non-belligerents off the face of the earth."

Enter Agreement Or Lose Revenue Says Blackwell

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Ontario municipalities will have to enter into a law enforcement agreement with the province to get revenue from fines imposed for infractions of the Liquor Act and to get a percentage of the licensing fees, as they have up till now.

In announcing this today Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell said this will also apply to convictions registered in connection with the proposed cocktail bars at Toronto, Hamilton, Windsor, London and Ottawa.

"If the municipalities don't want to enter into these enforcement agreements, then some other agency will have to do it," said Mr. Blackwell.

He said that formerly municipalities automatically obtained a percentage of licensing fees but under the new Liquor Act they will have to carry out their agreement to receive the fees. The Act is designed for the municipalities to do their own policing.

NEW ATTEMPTS MADE TO REFLOAT MINESWEEPER

Ran Ashore on Rocky Point Near Halifax; Second Ship Being Towed to Safety

Halifax, Dec. 3 —(CP)— A lashing Atlantic storm was slowly subsiding today as new attempts were being made to refloat the minesweeper Middlesex, aground about 15 miles from here, and the Boston dragger Ohio was slowly being towed to safety at Canso, N.S., after drifting helplessly near the treacherous sands of Sable Island.

The Middlesex ran aground yesterday near the rocky shore line at Half Island Point and attempts by the tug Riverton to pull her off were fruitless. Other attempts to free her from her rocky grip will be made today by the Riverton and two other tugs which are standing by.

Ironically, the minesweeper ran aground while rushing to the aid of the distressed dragger which had reported she was drifting without power after losing her propellor.

Late last night the R.C.M.P. cutter French radioed that she had the Ohio in tow and was proceeding through heavy seas to Canso. Lashed by smashing whitecaps and the driving wind the French was reported making headway of only two knots.

The R.C.M.P. marine radio division here reported the French still had 60 miles to go in the face of northerly gales and was not expected to reach Canso until tomorrow.

Travelling at about five knots and last reported about 200 miles from here yesterday, the Foundation Franklin was expected to bring the Ohio into Halifax harbor sometime tonight.

Also under tow was the Spanish freighter Santi which called for aid after breaking her main shaft Thursday. The Halifax tug Foundation Franklin took the ship in tow about 480 miles southeast of here.

There had been conflicting reports of the Middlesex's position yesterday but this was cleared up last night with the arrival back in port of the rescue ship Lloyd George. The Lloyd George had originally planned to bring some of the sweeper's crew back to port but high seas made disembarkation impossible.

Commander of the Lloyd George, Boatswain James R. Addison of Halifax, said the warship appeared to be in no immediate danger and was not damaged.

DUM-DUM BULLETS CAUSED 70 P. C. DUTCH CASUALTIES

Batavia, Java, Dec. 3 — (Reuters) — Dum-dum bullets used by Indonesian Extremists caused 70 per cent of the Dutch casualties in fighting in Northern Sumatra, The Netherlands Army Information Service said in a statement yesterday.

$60,000 Awaits Man Who Can Do Indian Rope Trick Legitimately

By RONALD BEDFORD

London, Dec. 3 — (Reuters) — Can you do the Indian rope trick? If you can do it well enough to convince the National Association of Magical Societies, there's £15,000 ($60,000) waiting for you.

This was disclosed today in an exclusive interview with Maj. Jasper Maskelyne, head of the world-famous family of magicians, who said he was prepared to donate £10,000 of that reward.

Maj. Maskelyne, who said the reward would not be given unless the trick is done "properly," gave this account of what "properly" meant:

"The rope must stand up, the boy must be sent aloft, the man must follow him up the rope, chop the boy to pieces, return to the ground with the bloodstained knife after throwing down the boy's dismembered body, and he must produce the boy alive, well and smiling before I hand over my share of the reward."

"The Indian rope trick is a fable," he said. "Both my father and my grandfather sent men to India, and provided them with plenty of money, to find out how the trick was done. The men spent two years in all in India but no one came forward to demonstrate the trick.

"I can make a rope stand up in the open air," he went on. "That is easy. I can also make a boy climb up the rope. The difficulty is to get him to disappear."

The National Association of Magicians' Societies stipulates that the rope must be thrown 12 feet into the air and remain motionless before the boy is sent aloft. Quite a few people have tried in the past to perform the Indian rope trick and claim rewards. Canadians, Americans, South Africans and Indians—all came forward in 1945 to claim a reward offered then by the magical society.

Dr. Alexander Cannon, well-known psychologist, claims the trick is mass hypnotism, certain conditions of light and temperature being necessary to render the person right for hypnotising.

Lewis Denounces Govt. for Bringing Injunction Action

Sentence Will be Given Tomorrow Says Judge

Washington, Dec. 3. (AP)—Judge T. Alan Goldsborough today deferred sentence of John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers after finding them guilty of contempt of court. The court said sentence would be pronounced on Wednesday.

The penalties in fines or jail sentences are within the discretion of the court. The law sets no maxima or minima in contempt cases.

The verdict was announced after Mr. Lewis, making his first public utterance since before the 13-day-old strike, had spoken out against "this ugly recrudescence of government by injunction."

In announcing his verdict, Judge Goldsborough emphasized that Mr. Lewis is guilty both individually and as president of U.M.W., and that U.M.W. is separately guilty.

Then he said that having found Mr. Lewis guilty of contempt, he considered the question of sentence "of course very important."

Ask Counsel for Views

"While it may be somewhat unusual, but certainly not improper," he said, "the court would like to have the views of counsel for the defendants and counsel for the government as to what these sentences should be."

Neither the government nor defence lawyers would discuss with reporters the question of penalties.

When Mr. Lewis was asked for comment, he merely shook his head slightly and turned away.

After the judge announced his verdict, Mr. Lewis asked for and was granted permission to make a statement.

"The history of labor injunctions prior to 1932 is a sordid one," Mr. Lewis began in sombre tones.

It was Mr. Lewis' first public statement since before the soft coal strike began on Nov. 20.

He stood facing the judge, his broad back to the crowded courtroom.

After reviewing a history of government statutes forbidding courts to restrain strikes, he turned quickly to coal-strike issues and inveighed against "the deadly brutal 54-hour work week in American coal mines".

Mr. Lewis asserted the U.M.W. had been impelled to announce termination of its contract with the government Nov. 15. This step led to the coal strike and the contempt proceeding against Mr. Lewis and the U.M.W.

Says Gov't Violated Act

After his announcement that the contract was ended, Mr. Lewis said, the government "in violation of the Morris-La Guardia (anti-injunction) Act asked for a restraining order and it was granted "without notice and without hearing."

Sonorously he went on, denouncing "this coercive and all-embracing restraining order," which he was accused of ignoring.

Speaking "officially" as president of the U.M.W. and vice president of the American Federation of Labor "with 8,000,000 members," Mr. Lewis said he could not subscribe to "this ugly recrudescence of government by injunction."

He said:

"Your injunction, sir, I respectfully submit, deprives the miners of these constitutional rights, freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of assembly, and freedom from involuntary servitude.

"The miners and I stand upon these constitutional rights as American citizens."

"The miners are law-abiding, God-fearing citizens," who had only "asserted their rights as citizens".

As Mr. Lewis finished and stalked to a seat behind his lawyers, Judge Goldsborough shuffled papers quietly for a minute while the courtroom buzzed.

Mr. Lewis' counsel ended their defence abruptly after the court had admitted documentary evidence that the mine union leader declared last May 29 that his contract with the government, signed that day, settled all issues "for the period of government operation" of the coal mines.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP)—Synopsis:

Skies are generally overcast throughout Ontario this morning. Intermittent light snow is falling over Northern sections of the Province. During this afternoon and evening the light snow occasionally mixed with rain is expected to spread into southwestern Ontario. Temperatures have moderated considerably throughout the province, however temperatures remain well below normal over Quebec and the Maritimes. Another cold wave is entering the prairies this morning and will continue into Northern Ontario tonight and Wednesday.

Four Young Men Fined For Disorderly Conduct

That it does not pay to be disorderly in a public place, to wit, a beverage room, was learned in police court today by four young local men who following pleas of guilty concerning a fracas two weeks ago were each fined $10 plus costs of $11.85 by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Two of the accused appeared in magistrate's court last week and pleaded guilty, while on the non-appearance of the two others involved, orders were given for them to be brought to court. Costs in the case included a doctor's fee of $35 for attending injuries suffered by one of the hotel employees.

The four local youths who last week were arrested on charges of breaking and entering and theft, were scheduled to have their cases heard during the morning session, but in the absence of the Crown, who was engaged at the General Sessions, the cases were enlarged.

Junior Farmers Hear Talk on Dairying

The monthly meeting of the Thurlow township Junior Farmers was held at the town hall at Cannifton last week when they were addressed by dairy instructor George Pollard on the fine points of milk and cheese production. Assistant Agricultural representative Harry Burns introduced the speakers and also assisted in the program by outlining short courses held at Read.

Approximately 60 members attended the meeting with the membership committee announcing that the total enrolment of the club was now 88 members. Roscoe Robson, M.L.A., for East Hastings, was made an honorary member of the club and was presented with his pin.

Entertainment during the meeting included a guitar and mouth organ number by Harry McPherson with a guitar number by Fred Wannamaker. It was decided to hold a progressive euchre at the next club meeting. Appreciation to the guest speaker was expressed by Clayton Ritz, while Dwaine Martin outlined his trip to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

Obituary

LATE FRANK M. BIRD

The funeral of Frank M. Bird was held Monday afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. D. C. Amos, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

The bearers were Richard D. Arnott, K.C., Raymond Arnott, Archie E. Boyd, Bud. Haines, Harry Rollins and Leo. Quinn.

TOBACCO CROP

Simcoe, Dec. 3 —(CP)—Less than 5,000,000 pounds of this year's 110,000,000-pound crop of flue-cured tobacco remain in the hands of the growers, a week-end survey reveals. Of this amount, 75 per cent was grown by non-members of the Ontario flue-cured marketing association. Highest price reported for any single crop was 45 cents per pound.

Eight Applications For Naturalization Passed by Court

Eight applications for naturalization were received by Judge F. S. Lane of Picton at the General Sessions which opened in the Hastings County Court room on Monday afternoon. The applications were presented by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan. The following applied for naturalization:

Emil Grulich; Jan (John) Trcka, Josef Neubauer, Miloslav Zakicick, Paul Pulanek and Frantisek Hetik, Czechoslovakians from Batawa; Joseph Louis Filber of Millbridge, Swiss, and Frederick Wm. Kuno of New Carlow, German.

Kuno, who has lived the greater part of his seventy-odd years in North Hastings, created a bit of humor in the court when questioned by Judge Lane as to why he had not applied for naturalization before.

"I did apply," replied the aged German, "and I thought I had received my naturalization. It was not until a few years ago that I found I had not received it."

Another applicant, a Czech from Batawa, showed his interest in Canadian political matters when he replied with only slight hesitation that Douglas C Abbott, was the minister of defence for Canada.

"I'll pass you without further questioning" commented Judge Lane.

Extensive Renovations Planned by New Owner Of Shannonville Hotel

The Wayside Inn, Shannonville, has been acquired by new interests and will be operated under the new management starting Wednesday, it was learned today.

The new owner is Mr. John Ryan, son of Mrs. Zita Ryan, former proprietor of the New Queen's Hotel here. Mr. Ryan will have his now hostelry undergo extensive renovations and he hopes to open a modern dining room with catering facilities to a large clientele in the spring.

Christmas Comes, Goes For Very Ill Child

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 3—(AP)—Christmas has come and gone for four-year-old Frankie Kajinski — probably the last he'll observe.

Informed by the family physician that the little victim of acute lymphatic leukemia hasn't a chance to live until Christmas, his parents held his Yuletide party yesterday.

There was a gaily decorated tree with a lot of gifts beneath it and a birthday cake with four candles nearby.

"Of course," said his courageous mother, "we let him have all he wanted for this Christmas celebration — even a tricycle. We know that he'll never have a chance to ride it."

FINAL ELECTION COUNT DELAYED TO 2 A.M.

London, Ont., Dec. 3 — (CP)—A single polling subdivision in Ward one delayed the final result of Monday's municipal election more than an hour last night when out of 208 polling places in the city it alone failed to report. The final count was not available until after 2 a.m.

After midnight officials of the subdivision, wrestling apparently with the count for hours, called city hall for assistance. Deputy clerk Nora Tull took more than one and a half hours to clear the snag.

Lifting of Controls Would Aid Dairy Industry Cheese Makers Told

President Rowe Welcomes Delegates at Convention Meeting Here

Nineteenth annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association got underway at the Quinte Hotel this morning as cheese makers from the surrounding district, and dairy officials from both federal and provincial departments convened.

Although admitting that the past season had its "ups and downs," the season as a whole had been a successful one. There was still a question in many cheese makers' minds as to the stability of the cheese industry, he said. However, with the support vouchsafed by political and agricultural organizations, the speaker thought that milk producers should look forward to the future with optimism.

Wants Open Markets

Lifting of price controls would do much in bringing about the increases in price that the industry is asking. Undoubtedly this would be a temporary advance in price but it would be the means of stimulating milk production that the demand for dairy products could be filled. "Let the law of supply and demand prevail—this, at least would be the means of establishing proper values," he said.

Salaries of cheesemakers came in for brief mention by the president who claimed they were not commensurate with the greatly increased costs of supplies, such as boxes and labor. This had not been anticipated at the time contracts had been signed and many makers were left in a sorry plight.

Lower Dairy Output

H. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings, pointed out that weather and pasture conditions had been principally responsible for the decided decrease in cheese and butter production in the county during the past season. This had resulted in decreased revenue for the farmer, and also for the cheese makers.

Speaking on a matter related to milk production Mr. Fair told of the efforts of his department to popularize calfhood vaccination in the herds of county dairy farmers. This, he said, was the latest and approved method of combatting contagious abortion. The history of calfhood vaccination in the United States was told by the speaker who stated that better prices were paid for cattle whose records showed they were free from contagious abortion.

Dairy Shows Compared

W. E. Brennan, one of the judges who assisted in judging the dairy show compared the local exhibit with that staged in Ottawa last week. The Ottawa show had been a good one but the show at Belleville had been better. The speaker was pleased with the keen competition shown this being indicated by the fact that the championship had come to Central Ontario this year for the first time in the history of the show.

Lorne Schenck, dairy instructor in Western Ontario, pointed out the importance of flavor in exhibition cheese. To illustrate he cited the cheese shown by a certain Western Ontario maker which scored full points in all classes but flavor. Despite this the championship had been won by a Central Ontario maker whose cheese scored higher points in flavor.

London, Dec. 3 —(Reuters)—James Brady, 26-year-old native of Eire, denied before a court martial here yesterday that he had "voluntarily" served with the German Waffen S. S.

He pleaded guilty to deserting from the Royal Irish Fusiliers in the field.

The prosecution charges that Brady, in a confession, admitted serving with the Germans and was wounded on the Russian front.

Careless Driving Charge is Laid

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP)—Albert Grosvenor, 27, of Toronto was charged with careless driving after an automobile in which he and a Toronto girl were riding crashed into a store on the western outskirts of the city and caused an estimated $1,000 damage to the store.

"It sure is a tough ending to the beginning of my engagement," Grosvenor said later. "The young lady and I had just become engaged and I was feeling pretty good about it. I don't know how I came to have such an accident."

E.M. Carefoot Goes to Trial On Fraud Charge

Ernest M. Carefoot was placed upon his trial today in the Court of General Sessions before Judge F. S. Lane of Picton after the Grand Jury had returned a "true bill" on the charge "that he did obtain from John A. McAninch the sum of $135 by fraud and deceit." A. G. Davis of Brampton acted as the chief prosecutor with Malcolm Robb of this city acting for the accused. The jurors selected were Walter Hagerman, Albert Holway, J. W. Dougherty, Harry Green, W. J. Kimmett, John Homan, John Cooney, Kenneth McMullen, Burleigh Emmons, Lorne Donaldson and Frank Goyer.

The jury was withdrawn from the room on several occasions during the morning session when the counsel sought advice on rulings from the Judge. On one occasion Mr. Robb stated he was trying to prove that the medical evidence to be adduced was biased and that other charges had been laid against his client and that his home was searched but that the charges had never been brought before the court. Judge Lane ruled that this was not relevant to the case at the present time and also that the court was not interested as to where the fines collected by the charges under the Medical Act were paid. Mr. Davis also asked a ruling on the question of introduction of cases of a similar nature and this argument was proceeding when the court recessed for noon.

Dr. R. T. Noble, registrar of the Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario stated that Ernest M. Carefoot was not a registered physician of Ontario but "I understand at one time he had a licence to practise in Saskatchewan." He stated that the College regulated those who were allowed to practise but there were no compulsory examinations except those set by the universities.

He was asked if he received a phone call from the Attorney General's office in October of this year with respect to a Mrs. Denyes of Colborne who was said to be dying of cancer. "I cannot see how this question has any bearing on the case in point," said Judge Lane.

"Were you asked to assent to Mr. Carefoot attending Mrs. Denyes?" asked Mr. Robb.

"No," said the witness.

George Williams X-ray technician at the Belleville General Hospital since May, 1929, was asked if he had taken films of Mr. McAninch and he replied in the affirmative stating that films were taken of the gall bladder and these showed symptoms of gall stones.

Startling Examples Of Soil Erosion

Anyone who has taken the trouble to watch a heavy rain brush or roll the surface soil down a slope may have been reminded of a giant planing mill shaving the rough surface off plank. Slowly and surely the surface is removed.

In soil erosion measurements by the Field Husbandry Division at the Central Experimental Farm in Ottawa, says Dr. P. O. Ripley, Dominion Field Husbandman it was somewhat startling to learn in 1945 that in the four months, June to October, 15 inches of rainfall shaved 31.0 tons of soil per acre from the surface of a field of corn planted and cultivated up and down a 10 per cent slope. On June 17, 1946 45 tons of soil per acre were washed off the same plot by 3 inches of rain in exactly one hour. On an adjoining plot which was summerfallowed, the runoff at the same time was 72.5 tons of soil.

During the 1945 growing season with 15.03 inches of rainfall and 1946 with 19.78 inches of rainfall the total soil runoff on a summerfallowed plot cultivated up and down the slope, unmanured, has amounted to 132 tons per acre. On corn cultivated up and down the slope 128 tons were lost. Manuring the soil made it more absorbent and porous and the runoff on a manured summerfallow plot was only 114 tons during the same period while a manured corn plot lost only 100 tons of soil.

Planting the corn on the contour reduced the runoff still more to only 34 tons of soil per acre. With a cover crop of alfalfa only one quarter of a ton of soil was lost.

These rather startling figures tell a very simple story, says Dr. Ripley. Tremendous losses of soil can occur if improper methods of soil and crop management are used in sloping ground. The loss can be reduced to an almost negligible amount if proper crops and methods are used. Don't let the rain shave off the surface soil, he advises. It is valuable.

PICTON

Officers' Mess Entered And $100 Taken

Picton, Dec. 3 —Local police report that the armouries was broken into during the weekend and about $100. stolen from the officers' mess. A case of soft drinks was also taken. Entrance was gained by forcing a window in the basement of the armoury.

With snow flurries that left the ground covered on Sunday, and temperatures which dropped as low as zero yesterday morning citizens were reminded that they had enjoyed a long season of fine weather.

Service Station To Cost $9,000 Heads the List

A gasoline service station proposed to be erected on Bridge Street, West, by the Goodrich Refining Company, headed the list in building permits issued at the city hall during the month of November. The permit called for an expenditure of $9,000.

Eight permits were issued during the month with a total construction value of $17,750. Permits issued were as follows:

A. C. Campbell, garage, 16 Charlotte Street, $50; Dulmage Motors Ltd., new boiler room, 112 Station, $550; G. A. Rogers, rebuild kitchen, Howard Street, $100; Goodrich Refining Co., new service station, $9,000; Mrs. F. McAvoy, garage, 128 South John Street, $50; J. P. Millard, dwelling, 41 Murney, $4,000; Harry Cannon, dwelling, Herchimer St., $4,000.

Scientist Says Germany Never Was Near A-Bomb Production During War

Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 3 — (AP) — Prof. Otto Hahn, Nobel Prize winner in chemistry for 1944, told reporters today that Germany never was likely to have produced an atomic bomb during the Second Great War.

The German scientist said German research had reached the stage of a parting of the ways between the atomic bomb and atomic energy. He said German scientists chose atomic energy and were trying to find a new form of energy for military purposes. This explained Germany's need for "heavy water" from Norway, he said.

Hahn, 67, will receive the Nobel Prize in Stockholm Dec. 10. He now is president of a group of German scientists who plan to encourage a revival of fundamental research, particularly in the British occupation zone.

A British officer who accompanied Hahn said "activities of the German scientists would be strictly within the framework of a control commission law, which prohibits research into nuclear fission.

Commuter Service Shut off by General Strike

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 3 (AP)—An A. F. L.-called general strike went into effect at 5 A. M. (8 A. M., E.S.T.) today threatening a tieup of transportation and industry for 1,000,000 East Bay persons and shutting off commuter service for 120,000 across the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge.

The A. F. L. move was directed at streetcars, buses, factories stores, bars, restaurants and possibly shipyards and newspapers. The C. I. O. pledged support by respect of picket lines.

Oakland's 85 police were put on 12 hour shifts and days off were cancelled.

The mass walkout stemmed from strikes at two department stores where the retail clerks union (A. F. L.) is seeking contracts. Police convoyed 12 truckloads of merchandise through picket lines to the two downtown stores Sunday.

Last night the Central Labor Council (A. F. L.) and building trades Council (A. F. L.) set in motion orders to crafts to "take a holiday" today.

The Alameda County C. I. O. announced that C. I. O. members would not pass through the picket lines.

The walkout threatened to stop deliveries of such essentials as food, milk and gasoline. Union members arranged a permit system for deliveries to hospitals institutions and emergency cases.

Lack of Interest In Elections Is Condemned

Brantford, Dec. 3—(CP)—J. B. Corley, Ottawa pres. of the Association of Canadian Clubs, addressed the Canadian Club of Brantford, last night and condemned the lack of interest shown by thousands of persons in election campaigns, and the individual's right to vote.

The democratic form of government had been fought for and maintained at a cost of many lives. For this reason, it demanded the support of every citizen, Mr. Corley said.

Naturalization legislation had been a major step toward building a greater Canada, he said. This had been shortly advocated by Canadian clubs across the Dominion.

Session Viewed Uneasily in Some Liberal Quarters

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL . . .
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP). — The forthcoming session of parliament is being awaited with some uneasiness by Quebec Liberal members of the Commons, it was learned here today. Parliament is expected to open at the end of January.

Some of the members look at the government's slim majority of four in the Commons and see an end to the lengthy week-ends they have been accustomed to enjoy during sessions of parliament.

A number of the members said they have heard indirectly that the Progressive Conservative party plans to attempt to defeat the government on every opportunity during the session. Such a policy would mean an end to the pairing arrangements in force at previous sessions.

Under the arrangements a member could leave the House knowing that if a vote was called his pair would not participate in the division. Thus it was possible for Quebec and Ontario members to return home practically every week-end.

One Liberal member went as far as to say he believed the Progressive Conservatives were putting out feelers to learn if any Quebec Liberal member would join a coalition government.

The Liberal said the Progressive Conservatives indicated they felt their party had not regained sufficient ground in Quebec as yet to assure election of an over-all majority group. He said that while the Progressive Conservatives in an election at this time might have the largest group of members elected the party likely would need the support of the Social Credit and some Quebec members in order to form a government.

He said he was given to understand that the government has much of its legislation ready and will give notice of it in the early days of the session.

He believed it unlikely that the contentious flag issue will be revived at this session, because of the continued opposition of Quebec members to the red ensign.

The redistribution of Commons seats to take care of the authorized increase of from 245 to 255 members likely would not take as long as originally expected. Most of the additional eight seats for Quebec would be allotted to the Montreal area.

CHARGES DISCRIMINATION

Toronto, Dec. 2 — (CP)—Discrimination against veterans by industry and government agencies was charged Sunday at a meeting here of ex-servicemen members of the United Auto Workers (CIO—CCL). "Thousands of veterans have not been given vacation pay due to them under the law and this includes those who haven't received the full amounts to which they are entitled," Paul Siren, international representative in charge of veterans' affairs, told the meeting.

County Holstein Breeders Hold Annual Banquet

Wooler, (Special.)—The annual banquet of the Northumberland County Holstein Breeders' Club was held in the Sunday School hall of the Wooler United Church on Thursday evening. About 150 members and friends partook of the supper provided by the Woman's Association.

The President, Mr. Thomas Convey, was chairman for the evening's program.

An address of welcome was given by Rev. W. Delve, minister of the Wooler United Church. A vocal solo contributed by Mr. Douglas Steinburg and a violin solo by Mr. Bruce Elmhurst were much appreciated.

Brief addresses were given by Hon. W. A. Goodfellow, Mr. A. J. Tamblyn, Mr. Jas. Brown and Mr. H. L. Fair.

Mr. R. C. Banbury, Agricultural representative, presented the Calf Club Awards, while Mr. R. Ormiston, fieldman for the Quinte District, presented the Premier Breeders' Banner.

The guest speaker was Mr. Harry Hays, of Calgary, a well-known Holstein salesman. He gave an illustrated lecture on his recent trip to South America when he visited most of the countries of that continent. This was most interesting and instructive.

Farewell Party

Wooler (Special) — Wooler Town Hall was filled with friends and neighbors on Friday evening when a farewell party was held in honor of Mr. David Teal, who is leaving soon for Calgary where he will spend the winter with his daughter, Mrs. Harold Lowery.

Mr. Herman Morrow acted as chairman for the evening. A fine program was given. Those contributing to the entertainment were:—vocal solos by Douglas Steinburg, Guy Austin and Eleanor Fox, a vocal duet by Geraldine and Jeanette Lattimer, piano solo by Mattie Bull a reading by Mrs. Robt. Read, a violin solo by Mr. M. Monaghan and step-dancing by Mr. Arthur Ruttan. Several short addresses were given by friends, after which Mr. Teal was invited to the platform where an address was read by Mr. Herman Morrow while Mr. Harold Steinburg presented him with a purse from the community. Mr. Teal in a few well chosen words expressed his thanks and also his regrets on leaving this communtiy.

A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation of a ring to Mr. Richard Monaghan who has just returned from overseas.

The Industrial Commission, in co-operation with the City Council and Chamber of Commerce welcomes these new industries to Belleville. They mean much to the growth and prosperity of our city. All are either presently in operation or have plants under construction. They represent a combined anticipated employment of more than 500 new people.

In addition a large manufacturing concern has optioned property adjoining the city. Besides this entirely new growth two of our present industries have large additions under construction, and four more have plans for substantial additions. The completion of plans presently in contemplation would result in an estimated additional 500 employees for Belleville plants.

Empire Dairy Show And Cheese Makers

This is an age when much attention is focused upon the dairy industry, one of the great pillars of Canada's economic and national life. Food was and is one of the necessaries into which go work and thought, which is the experience of experts and experienced practical men. Rightly the dairy industry and its products deserve the prominence which has come to them through the years and rightly the Bay of Quinte area has won a high place in the dairy world.

At the present time there is being held the British Empire Dairy Show along with the nineteenth annual gathering, the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Convention, both of which have in the years they have been organized done much to bring reputation to this district as a dairy centre of no mean importance and one which has made a name for itself in the markets of the world. Men of the highest rank in the industry have been and are in the city this week attending these events, big men in the dairy world, experts and ranking officials, and producers and others associated with the industry. These are taking part in the convention now in progress.

This district has a notable record and to all those who have been associated with the progress of dairying it owes a debt of appreciation. This industry is one of the biggest of industries, with supreme importance because of the place which dairy foods occupy in the life of nations. And not only this district but all Canada has felt the benefit accruing from a progressive agricultural and dairy class and from such organizations as the Dairy Show and the Cheese Makers' Conventions.

Belleville is proud to be the centre chosen for the British Empire Dairy Show and for the annual meeting of the cheese makers and is proud of the steady progress which this branch of farming has shown. The city as the county town welcomes these leaders and their organizations and wishes them continued progress and prosperity. These dairy shows and conventions are of inestimable advantage to those engaged in the production and other aspects of the industry. They are giving Canada their best in thought and labor.

Precautions At This Season

As the holiday season comes there will be many gatherings at which there will be joyousness and happiness in a superlative degree for at these Christmastide functions there will be countless children, and their parents and friends, all bent on giving pleasure and enjoyment to the children. With this thought in mind and with the knowledge that under certain conditions there is risk of fire, one of the enemies of man, the warning as usual is given cautioning those in charge and everyone else to see that there be no such risks taken. This applies to public affairs, and to the smaller gatherings even in the homes. Safety and protection are the watchword.

Evergreen decorations can be made fireproof by the application of ammonium sulphide. There is a flame-proof cotton and ordinary cotton can be made flameproof if the appearance of snow is desired. Mixtures that will make fabrics resist fire can be used. Electrical connections can be looked over. Any effort to make impossible any chance of fire is worth all the time and expense necessary to make sure that everything is safe.

With every precaution taken in many ways the pleasure and enjoyment of the throngs at these Christmas gatherings will be greatly enhanced by the knowledge that everything has been done to guard life and property.

Blow, Thou Winter Wind

Winter which has been coy and moderate as far as the weekend, has come with a stinging blast which marked the descent of the mercury down to somewhere near the zero mark, the point where everyone is accustomed to mark the weather as severe. It was the first cold spell of the season. Its icy hand was laid on the ground, on the spray above streams which formed frazil that came floating down like ice and snow. The wind whipped about the little snow which was in the air and found its way into crannies and through seemingly impervious shelters and forced heating plants to do their best and busiest work of the winter so far.

At such a time of cold and wind it is the part of wisdom to exercise more than ordinary care in heating so as not to overheat pipes or do anything that might cause fire.

The King's Paintings

For the first time most of the finest paintings in the Royal Collection have been gathered together in a single exhibition, which has been opened to the public at Burlington House, London. The collection, begun by Henry VIII and continued by successive British sovereigns, is normally dispersed among the royal palaces. Now over 500 of the best works, including a Giorgione, a Vermeer, six Holbeins, nine Rembrandts, thirty-eight Canalettos, and excellent paintings by Gainsborough, Reynolds, and Lawrence are being shown to the public. In its artistic interest the exhibition rivals the world's national galleries. Its historical and national interests are equally great, since it reflects more than four centuries of successive schools of painting in Europe, and the tastes of British monarchs through that time.

It may be surprising to discover that Henry VIII, founder of the collection, was a connoisseur of delicate artistic perception. His patronage of Holbein helped to initiate the collection, although only one of the paintings Holbein did for the King survives in this exhibition. The other Holbeins at Burlington House were acquired by later rulers.

Charles I and his older brother Henry were the next enthusiastic buyers, and exchanges with other collectors constituted an important part of their activities. After Charles' death, Parliament ordered that the collection be sold, but part of it, at least, remained intact, and Charles II managed to recover many more of the paintings remaining in Britain. Since that time continued attempts have been made to retrieve other paintings which had belonged to Charles I. As late as 1932, for example, Queen Mary acquired Elsheimer's "St. Christopher."

George III bought one of the collection's finest pictures, Vermeer's "A Lady at the Virginals and a Gentleman Listening," which authorities at the time did not correctly assess because the painter's signature looked like that of Mieris, a name of less renown. In Queen Victoria's time the Prince Consort contributed notably to the collection by adding such Italian primitives as Duccio and Fabriano, painters in whom other collectors of the time showed little interest, but whose works have been coveted by subsequent buyers.

Dates, Names, Places

It is now a good many years years since the writers of history for popular audiences or school audiences turned their backs sharply on dates and names and places and went all out for broad anonymous trends and forces. Now there is very little to be said in favor of making school children memorize long lists of kings and presidents and battles with their dates. But, on the other hand, when we are dealing with historic forces and causations and consequences, a certain number of names and dates are important. Otherwise we may make men responsible for events that occurred before they were born. We may cite causes that came after results. It has been a common experience in recent years to see the story of the American people told as if conditions in the unhappy years after 1929 summed up the whole American past. It is here that a few dates and names would have been welcome. When? Where? Who? The narrative can be too sweeping.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Are German shepherd dogs descended from wolves?

There is no evidence to support the theory that so-called German shepherd or police dogs have been developed within recent times by crosses with wolves.

They sprang from a union of several kinds of sheep-dogs in Germany, five or six root stocks being originally combined to produce the breed.

That they may contain wolf or dingo blood inherited from the dim past is not improbable, but if we go back far enough all dogs are civilized wolves, for the wolf is the ancestral form of all domestic dogs. Charles Darwin supposed dogs to be descended from several species of wolves and wild dogs domesticated at different times and in different parts of the world.

There is no reason to suppose that the German shepherd has a greater percentage of wild blood in its veins than most other breeds. The impression that it has no doubt arose from the fact that these dogs, owing to careful breeding, more closely approximate the ancestral type. That they revert more readily to wolfish practices has not been established.

They differ materially from wolves in having finer heads, smaller teeth, and shorter, more uniform hair. As a rule they are alert, intelligent, and loyal to their masters, although they are highly-spirited and sometimes difficult to control. Their color ranges from black to pure white, but most of them are reddish brown or black and tan. At least three distinct varieties are recognized—smooth coated, long coated and rough coated.

In 1896 a number of German shepherd dogs were employed as police dogs at Hildesheim, Germany, and from this date their individuality as a breed began to develop. Within the next ten years so many of them were used on police patrols that the breed came to be generally known as German, French or Belgian "police dogs," depending on the country where they were bred. During the First World War they came into prominence because of their notable work with Red Cross units, and as patrols, messengers and ration carriers on the battlefields, especially on "no man's land." About 1916, because of antipathy for Germany, these dogs were identified with Alsace in Allied countries, and they are now known in some parts of the world as Alsatians or Alsatian wolf dogs. In 1918 the American Kennel Club arbitrarily dropped "German" from the official name and decided to call the breed simply "Shepherd dog." "German police dog" is not the name of a breed, but merely a popular name for a German shepherd dog trained for police duties. The German kennel club officially styles the breed "Deutscher Schaferhund", German shepherd dog.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

SILLY, STUPID OR FOOLISH—WHY SUFFER FROM PILES?

I do not remember the exact wording, but I think it is "It is Silly to Suffer from Piles," writes a reader.

Name of the pamphlet is "It is Stupid to Suffer from Piles" — on written request (no clipping, please) any reader may have a copy if he incloses a stamped envelope bearing his address.

One reader purporting to be a doctor's wife went all out to tell me off for my insufferable insolence in calling people with piles "stupid"—but I suspect she was a near-doctor's wife, for I doubt that a real doctor's wife would use such language even under great provocation, and moreover I don't believe a person of normal intelligence will take offence at the term when he or she has read the pamphlet.

Anyway if you have piles and elect to continue to have them, this is still a tolerably free country.

There are two kinds of piles—external and internal. The external kind of pile is pretty darn painful, they tell me. Aside from various soothing applications and such measures as rest, heat and the like (all described in the pamphlet) the most satisfactory remedy is, in my judgment, surgery. This is usually an office operation, injection of local anesthetic and then a small incision of the swelling to let out the clot. This brings immediate relief, and there is comparativey little discomfort during the few days required for healing, if the clot is not thus evacuated the patient is bound to suffer for several days.

Internal piles cause frequent bleeding or unnoticed internal bleeding which is a common cause of anemia, and in the second stage (after months or years) the piles become large masses which protrude with defecation and either retracts afterward or must be replaced by manipulation and the aid of gravity. There may be little or no bleeding in this second stage, but if the condition is neglected much longer serious hemorrhages may follow, fissures develop and cause severe pain.

In some cases of piles pruritus (itching) is the chief complaint, but in most instances of pruritus no piles are present—so it is pretty childish to employ remedies for "itching piles" when there are no piles, don't you think? For that matter—oh, well, I'll settle for this: The sensible course for any one who even suspects he has piles is to consult a real doctor and find out precisely what the trouble is, before using any remedy or taking any treatment. A real doctor is one who examines the patient—in this instance with the aid of speculum and headlight — before he gives an opinion or makes a diagnosis — and a real doctor never accepts the patient's statement that some other doctor has already diagnosed the trouble.

A phony doctor, on the other hand, readily prescribes this or that nostrum for what the gullible patient calls "piles" — why should the quack care as long as the victim likes to gamble that way?

The treatment of internal piles —even if they are "external" or protruding part or all of the time —is surgical. There are two methods in current use. The older, and cruder, method is so-called clamp and cautery treatment—hospitalization, general anesthesia, dilation of outlet, application of clamp to pile tumor, cutting off the tumor, and cauterization of the raw stump with heated iron. It sounds crude and it is crude. However, in certain far advanced cases it is the method of choice.

The newer and simpler method is ambulant (injection) treatment. Ambulant means the patient continues walking about or working or playing as usual while under treatment. Through the speculum, with the aid of local anesthetic in some instances, the surgeon skilled in this modern technique injects a few drops of a suitable sclerosing (astringent, coagulating) solution directly into the base of the pile, and that's all. There is practically no pain. Subsequently the pile tumor or mass shrinks or shrivels away. Sometimes only two or three such office treatments, at intervals of a week or so, are necessary to give permanent relief. In some cases a treatment may be required from time to time in later years.

This injection treatment is now the method of choice in at least nine cases of piles out of ten.

Mayor McAlister, London, Defeated By George Wenige

(By The Canadian Press)

An intensive campaign by the Junior Chamber of Commerce was credited for the fact that nearly 50 per cent of eligible voters turned out in muncipal elections yesterday in London, Ont., where George A. Wenige, 72-year-old six-time mayor of the city, defeated Mayor F. G. McAlister and W. J. Heaman in the mayoralty race.

The final count gave Wenige 8,463 votes to 7,680 for Mayor McAlister and 6,460 for Heaman in a vote that was fairly close all night. Heaman had been mayor for five years during wartime; Wenige last occupied the Chief Magistrate's post in 1935.

London voters also endorsed Daylight Saving Time by 13,799 voters against 8,217, and approved money grants to the Victoria Hospital and the Western Fair.

Voters also balloted in Sarnia, Chatham and Niagara Falls in municipal elections a week ahead of the general Ontario municipal voting. Sarnia elected a new council and public utilities commission, Chatham elected a council and board of education, and Niagara Falls elected W. L. Houck mayor over former Mayor George Inglis.

Like London, Chatham voted for Daylight Saving Time, by 1,648 against 1,180, but Daylight Saving was rejected in Sarnia by a narrow margin, with 1,688 in favor and 1,772 opposed.

Gold Miners Seek Probe of Industry

Johannesburg, Dec. 3—(Reuters)—The South African gold miners' union joint committees has decided to ask the government to appoint a commissioner with "the widest possible terms of reference" to investigate the capacity of the mining industry to meet the high cost of production and legitimate demands of the workers.

The committee suggested that the commission should probe:—

1. Possibility of expansion of the industry with or without state aid.
2. Possible government subsidies for low grade mines to enable them to provide employment on reasonable conditions.
3. Advisability of nationalization of the mines.

It was decided to defer other demands, such as an increase in the price of gold, subject to a commission being appointed to report by June 30, 1947.

The miners will press immediately, however, for an adequate pension scheme on the same lines as that for mine officials.

Letters of Thanks Are Received For Clothing Sent

Heartfelt gratitude is embodied in two letters received from residents of war-stricken Greece by residents of the city recently. The letters came as an aftermath of the suggestion that local donors of clothing to the National Drive this year, enclose their names and addresses.

The letters received by Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Donovan, 319 Charles Street and Mrs. Mildred Ford, 106½ Station Street speak for themselves. They follow:

Athens, Greece, 3rd. Oct. 1946.

"My very dear friends:—

Thanks a lot for your kindness to send us this wonderful coat. Actually my grandfather got it. He asked me to write to you because he can't speak English at all.

I am his little daughter, 23 years old and I live with my grandfather and mother. My father died long ago. My English isn't good enough, but still you will be able to understand me. Words will never express how grateful we are to the nice people of the U.S., Canada etc. You will never realize what your help to the poor small occupied countries did.

You have been always good to us although we are so far away in this world. However, you know through reading the papers what we suffer during the Nazi occupation. During all these black years of the cruel war I was praying hard that God will always held the United Nations. We all fought against the Nazisms and we won—God was with us and always will be.

We all hope to have the peace soon and be able to recover ourselves, I shall be very happy if you will write to me when you have some spare time, please do, send me also a snap of yourself, and I shall always carry it with me and pray for you that God will always bless you.

Thank you my dear unknown friends for your kindness to help my poor old Pa.

I remain,
Yours very sincerely,
(signed) Frosso."

"Please send your letter by air mail. It takes such a long time to reach here."

Piraeus, 15th. November, 1946.

"Honourable:—

It is with great emotion and joy that I have received some time ago the pair of shoes that you were so kind to send to Greece, and it was I that I were so lucky to get them.

It is evident, dear, that Lord granted to my prayers that every day I was doing to enable me to maintain my numerous family.

You, of course, do not know me nor my family, so please allow me to be self-introduced and inform you the following:—I am the mother of six children out of which five boys from 6 to 18 years old and a girl 16 years old. My husband being almost infirm is working as waiter to a coffee-house with a very small remuneration.

As, naturally, you have been aware here in our country, we have suffered terribly during the enemies' occupation from famine and nakedness, as well from executions to death and good God knows what I really have suffered to maintain my children with such a famine, and nearly I would lose my mind, but good God gave me courage; I begun to the surrounding mountains to collect woods under the risk of my life by German soldiers. With my children I was struggling every day to secure a little bread which nowhere could be found except in the black market, which was very expensive; with the daily bulletin we were having only a small piece and this not every day.

It is useless to describe all my tragic conditions and those of my country fellows, as you have been informed, I suggest, from your newspapers and Greeks that have come over there; but it is impossible for me to forget those terrible days. By the grace of God we have been liberated by you, the Great Allies, who did not leave us in our destiny, but have hastened in our assistance.

Several people, here in Greece, they are haveing relatives over there, who are helping them by sending to them foods and clothes and shoes; unfortunately I have none over there to assist me, but as I am poor and necessitous and I am enlisted as same, I have received the pair of shoes and inside of them I have found your note.

You don't know how glad we are when we were informed that we could send you a few words, and thus I take the liberty to address you my present and beg to ask you, should it be possible to you, to further assist my poor and numerous family and Lord grant you and your family good health and prosperity."

"I am

WORTH OF GRASSHOPPERS*
AND SUCH...

THIS YEAR we started to spend $100,000,000 for more telephone service. For this, we shall need hundreds of thousands of "bits and pieces" like "grasshopper" fuses, as well as big things like cables, switchboards and buildings.

Nevertheless we shall push the work through as fast as we can. Our aim is to continue to give the best telephone service at the lowest cost.

* A "grasshopper" is a tiny fuse, 1¼ inches long. An essential part of the wiring of telephone exchanges, these fuses act as "trouble spotters". When a fuse "blows", a spring causes a glass bead to jump out, thus spotting the location of the trouble instantly. Thousands of these fuses are in constant use.

White's District

New England Dinner

White's District—On Wednesday evening both young and old gathered for the New England Dinner at White's Church. All partook of a bountiful repast followed by a varied program with the Rev. A. C. McCallum as chairman. All joined in singing "O Canada." Little Gale Lohness favoured with a solo and an encore. Mr. Branscombe and son gave a cornet duet followed by a humorous reading by Mrs. B. Bonisteel. Miss Thrasher of Belleville sang most charmingly. Misses Shirley and Jean Brooks favoured with a duet accompanied by one of the young ladies on a guitar. Mr. Fred Wilson, M.P.P. spoke humorously and gave the ladies of the White's Woman's Association a pat on the back." He felt the ladies needed to be congratulated on their work, especially since this church, 105 years old, had just been decorated and the proceeds of the dinner which were most gratifying went to help pay for this expenditure. Little Miss Gale Lohness again delighted all with her singing. The Misses Shirley and Jean Brooks gave another duet to their own accompaniment. Mr. Branscombe and son again favored with a cornet duet and Miss Thrasher brought the evening's entertainment to a close with a solo followed by the National Anthem.

Mission Band Meets

The Bayside Mission Band held their November meeting at Bayside school on Friday afternoon with the leader Mrs. C. Wilson in charge of the meeting. A varied program was given by both junior and senior pupils. Mrs. Wilson gave a chapter of the Study Book, "Myanga's Two Villages" and also told a missionary story of how a boy started out with one potato and after four years produced seventy bushels of potatoes the proceeds of which went for missionary work. She also mentioned the "White Gifts" which should be brought by the children for the December meeting. These are sent by the Bayside Woman's Missionary Society as Christmas gifts to needy children in Western Canada.

Runs Shoe String Into Bonanza

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—A business literally started on a shoe string has boomed into a bonanza for Mrs. Annabelle Murdoch O'Connor, Toronto war bride now living in Sydney, Australia.

Writing her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Murdoch, she told how on arriving "down under" with her husband, Flt.-Sgt. Bill O'Connor, she discovered that a knack for crocheting shoe uppers could be profitable.

"I use twine of gold, red, powder blue, royal blue and red," she said. "The twine doesn't pinch like leather." She finds that her staff of 100 girls, hired since her business expanded, hardly is sufficient to meet the demand of Australian mademoiselles.

POINT TRAVERSE

Fishermen Close Operations For This Season

Point Traverse (Special) — Commercial fishing operations at Point Traverse have terminated for the season and all fishing craft have been taken from harbor waters and made ready for the winter. Catches of whitefish and herring this fall have been only fair, according to fishermen. Much net was lost as a result of the four-day gale which lashed the lake during the whitefish season.

Lighthouse To Close

Lighthouse keepers on Prince Edward County shores and on Main and False Duck Islands are awaiting word as to the closing down of their beacons. It is believed this will be done on or about Dec. 17. Navigation on the lakes has now closed and the last freighter, the CSL "City of Windsor" loaded at Picton last Thursday. The steamer Grenvill will visit Main and False Duck islands to remove the keepers, and also to remove navigation aids in district waters.

Calgary Stampeders May Represent Canada at Olympics

Calgary, Dec. 3. (CP)— The Calgary Albertan, in a sports page story today, said it had learned unofficially that Calgary Stampeders, 1946 Allan Cup Hockey Champions, would receive an invitation during the next few days to represent Canada in the 1947 World Hockey Series at Prague.

Stampeders, the Albertans indicated, will accept the invitation when it arrives.

Discussion on Canadian representation at the Prague World Series was to have taken place at Montreal, Monday, but no mention was made of the subject in a report on the meeting between C.A.H.A. and N.H.L. officials.

The Calgary Club, now in top place in the Western Canada Senior Hockey League, would be away from home only about three weeks, it was learned.

While forced to miss several games in its regular league schedule, it would return in time for playoffs and would automatically be admitted to 1947 Allan Cup playdowns.

"LIFE'S BIGGER MOMENTS"

J. H. WYATT Jr. M.D.

Hanging out "the shingle"

It happens every day, thank goodness . . . some young man starts out in a business of his own. Hanging out the first "Open for Business" sign is a Big Moment . . . a time when a man needs and deserves the help of all his friends.

It's a time for sound thinking and years-ahead planning . . . a time when your North American Life representative can be a big help. The way he likes doing business is to help an ambitious young man line up a practical savings-and-protection programme . . . and watch both the young man and the programme grow and grow as the years roll successfully by.

Wheat Queen Not at Home To Reporters

Creston, B. C., Dec. 3—(CP)— Being theoretically crowned "queen" of the world's wheat growers at the Chicago International Grain Show made little difference to Mrs. Amy Kelsey's daily routine — she wasn't even home to reporters who fought over snow-drifted roads to her farm home yesterday in the hope of getting interviews and pictures.

The reporters didn't even know if Mrs. Kelsey had yet been informed of her crowning achievement in grain showing because the Kelseys have no telephone. Their 10-acre farm home at the settlement of Erickson near this East Kootenay town has been somewhat isolated by recent snows that choked roads.

Neighbors didn't know where Mrs. Kelsey was so the reporters will have to make another trip. Meanwhile all they had to write about was the previous grain-showing record of the first "wheat queen" in the history of the Chicago International Grain Show.

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP) — A $1,000 reward has been offered for information leading to the conviction of the persons or persons responsible for the death of four-year-old Joan Smith at Minaki in northwestern Ontario last May 4, it was announced at Ontario Provincial Police headquarters.

The child's torn body was found on a rocky ledge 100 yards from her home and her parents said she had apparently been carried off from her crib during the night. To date, no trace has been found of the slayer.

Early in the investigation, the theory was advanced that a giant bear killed the child but police discounted it after residents said no killer bears had been seen in the vicinity.

MARRIAGE NOTICE

BELNAP—GALBRAITH — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Galbraith announce the marriage of their eldest daughter, Anne Nadine, to Thomas W. Belnap, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Claud Belnap, on Saturday, Nov. 30th., 1946, in Christ Church, with Rev. J. Grant Sparling officiating.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Mary Shirley Bothwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Bothwell, Springville, Ont., to Robert Reginald Hinchey, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hinchey, of Belleville, the marriage to take place early in December.

Allan Kelleher attended the Argos-Winnipeg Rugby game in Toronto, on Saturday.

Mr. Frank High, Sr, Yeomans Street, is confined to his home with a serious illness.

Miss June Price, of Kingston, was the weekend guest of her mother, Mrs. Dorman Price, of this city.

Mrs. J. Hickey, of this city, was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hickey, Marmora.

Miss Joan Morgan, of Toronto, who spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Morgan, Bridge Street East, was the guest soloist at the West-Quinn wedding on Saturday.

Dr. Grant Fraser, Madoc, member of Rameses Shrine Divan, Toronto, is attending Detroit Shrine Ceremonial. Five thousand Nobles were seated in the auditorium of the largest Shrine Temple in America when 459 candidates were initiated into the mystic rites of the Order. The music for the ceremonial was supplied by the Detroit Million Dollar Shrine Band.

Members of the Flagler family, their wives and families, paid tribute to Mrs. P. Flagler, Bleecker Ave., on Saturday evening when they gathered at the family residence to honor their mother on the occasion of her 80th birthday. Mrs. Flagler's only sister, Mrs. John Fitzgerald and a few intimate friends, also attended the party at which dinner for 28 persons was served. Mrs. Flagler was the recipient of many birthday greetings and wishes for many more years of continued good health.

WEDDINGS

BELNAP—GALBRAITH

On the evening of November 30, at seven o'clock, a quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized in Christ Church, when Anne Nadine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Galbraith, was united with Thomas W. Belnap, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Claud Belnap, Belleville, with Rev. J. Grant Sparling officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked very charming in a street length dress of rose wool jersey with navy accessories, and wearing a corsage of cream roses and bouvardia.

Mrs. Willis Galbraith, an aunt of the bride, was her matron-of-honor, wearing a street-length dress of exotic blue silk crepe with black accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Mr. Ross Rowe performed the duties of groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 247 Charles Street, where the living room was made more than ordinarily attractive with baskets of yellow and burgundy colored baby 'mums. Mrs. Galbraith received the guests in a navy ensemble with a corsage of cream roses. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a gown of lemon yellow silk crepe, black hat and accessories, and a corsage of red roses.

In the dining-room a buffet supper was served to about thirty-five guests, with Mrs. Jack Foley, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Ross Rowe presiding over the silver services. The table was covered with a beautiful lace cloth, centred with the three-tier wedding cake, on either side of which stood tall white tapers in silver holders. While the bride cut the wedding cake, Miss Genevieve Tracey sang "Because", with Mrs. Willis Galbraith as accompanist.

For a motor trip to Peterborough, the bride chose a two-tone grey suit with a winter-white top coat, sequin trimmed black hat and a corsage of cream roses. After their return Mr. and Mrs. Belnap will reside in Belleville, where the groom has a business on Front Street.

Bagthrope, Norfolk, England—(CP) — Two children, aged six and seven, will go 2½ miles to school in a taxi every day. The local education committee will pay for it.

Actor John Gielgud To Illustrate by Word, Pantomime

Toronto, Dec. 3. (CP)—John Gielgud, noted British stage star, will deliver lectures on acting—and illustrate his points by histrionic demonstrations—to selected audiences at London, Ont., Montreal and Toronto during a forthcoming Canadian tour, Brian Doherty, general manager of Canadian Theatre Enterprises, announced today.

While in the three cities he will address amateur acting groups and be ready to answer their questions either verbally or in pantomime. "Anything in techniques from a line-by-line analysis of how to read 'Hamlet's' soliloquy to how to hand a grand duchess her fan," said Mr. Doherty.

The lectures are scheduled for the Grand Theatre, London, Jan. 24; Moyse Hall, McGill University, Montreal, Jan. 28; and Hart House Theatre, University of Toronto Feb. 4. In each case attendance will be limited to about 500 members of local stage groups.

Mr. Gielgud heads a London Company—visit of which is sponsored by C.T.E.— which will perform Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" for three weeks in Canada before a New York limited engagement.

WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

HOLY NAME SOCIETY

Marmora. (Special.)—The regular monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society was held in Sacred Heart School on Friday evening, with a good attendance and the President, William Shannon, in the chair. Opening prayers were said by Rev. H. J. Farrell. The roll call was then taken and the minutes of the previous meeting adopted. The president addressed the meeting as a result of which it was decided to form a Junior Holy Name Society, which will be inaugurated at the next regular monthly meeting. Mr. C. T. Nicholson gave some short anecdotes and gems of literature culled from current books and magazines. A splendid talk was given by Rev. H. J. Farrell, who thanked all for their assistance in making the bazaar the success it was. He also stressed the need for continued Catholic action to fight the pagan ideas of our times. C. Shannon at the piano gave a rendition of popular music after which refreshments were served and the meeting adjourned.

Student Vocation Night Meets Warm Approval of Students, Parents

Home and School Association, Guidance Department, Sponsors New Sphere of Educational Activity

Vocation's Night, a new Belleville Collegiate Institute educational innovation, sponsored by the Home and School Association and the Guidance Department of the school, was given a warm stamp of approval by a large number of the student body and association members at its Belleville debut last night.

Designed to give interested students an opportunity of hearing about occupations from leaders in the various fields, the function laid the foundation of a new sphere of information based more on practicality than of the theoretic side of the many vocations and professions represented.

There was a brief introductory session prior to the students and speakers retiring to the many rooms set aside for the vocational talks. During this period Mrs. G. G. Wright, president of the Home and School Association, briefly outlined the aims of the function while Mr. W. Musgrove, Guidance teacher of the school explained to students and speakers the routine of the evening's program.

Present Cheque

A feature of this part of the session was the presentation of a cheque for $200 to the Home and School Association through Mrs. Wright, by Dick Stackhouse, representing the Dramatic Society and Glee Club of the school. It was given in appreciation, he said, of the fine efforts of the association with regard to the school and the student body.

Twenty-one vocations, occupations and professions were represented in the series of talks that was divided into two sections. Approximately one-half of the addresses took place between 7 45 and 8.45 with the remainder given between 8.50 and 9.50. Several class-rooms as well as the library were utilized by the sessions.

Included in the vocations and professions represented were architecture, with the talk given by A. Thomson; teaching, J. Bowden; civil engineering, Wm. Gerrie; nursing, Miss Adair; dental nursing, Miss Pringle; photography, Miss Diamond; agriculture, J. Fred Wilson, M.L.A.; dietetics, Miss Dorothy Gray; pharmacy, Harold Seldon; radio, J. Devine; telephony, Grant Proctor; medicine, Dr. Reg. Anderson; building trade, L. Watson; office work, Mrs. Brownbridge; beauty parlor Mrs. Sargent; armed services, Captain McMillan, Kingston; journalism, Geo. H. Carver; electrical engineering, Mr. McCullough; dressmaking, Miss Comber, Miss Carnegie, Mrs. Emery; public school teaching, Miss O. Elson; entomological and laboratory assistant, G. Wishart.

Students Interested

That a definite interest in the new phase of educational activity was apparent, was evidenced in the marked interest taken in the various subjects. Upwards of twenty students augmented by interested members of the association were present in each room where the talks were held. The greater majority especially members of the student body heard both sessions of the program.

Mr. Musgrove and officials of the association expressed their satisfaction with the success of the affair at the conclusion of the function, and it was stated that it will definitely be an annual affair, with further improvements added next year.

Good Companions Club Entertained At the Parsonage

On the evening of November 29th., Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Houston entertained about thirty members of the Good Companions' Club of Tabernacle United Church at the parsonage. Mr. Albert Mulvey, president, conducted the business part of the meeting. Several new members were welcomed to the club.

A discussion was conducted by Rev. J. W. Houston, assisted by Miss Tickell and Mr. George Wright.

Miss Tickell prepared a paper, "The Church and the Social Gospel", which was read by Miss Jane Smyth. "The Gospel is a system of religious truth derived from a study of the history of Jesus Christ". Miss Tickell reviewed the history of Jesus Christ showing how Jesus lived a normal life. The gospels show how He worked among crowds of people. Jesus gave us principles by which to live with our fellows, such as Faith, Hope and Love, but the greatest of these is Love. Best of all within us is a spark of His Divine Nature called Conscience, which, if we but give it an opportunity, leads us very clearly to put into practice in our associations with one another; those qualities which we see in the Life of Jesus Christ, Himself".

"Does the Gospel Apply to Politics?" was the paper prepared by Mr. Geo. Wright. "The primary function of politics is to have an organization constituted for the sole purpose of transacting such business as preserves the safety, peace and prosperity of the state. Politics is the moral behaviour of those who make, control, and manipulate the government. If the motives of those engaged in politics are fine and honorable and their wishes are to create the best possible government for the country, then the gospel or "the way of life taught by Jesus should be the rule."

"Social Gospel, What About Communism?" was the subject of Mr. Houston's paper. "Communism denies the right of private ownership in all save a few intimately personal belongings. In Jesus' day the idea of Communism was not known. One hardly thinks that the record of early sharing of enjoyment on the part of first Christian Church provides any ground for approving of compulsory communism".

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Mifflin, a recent bride and groom, were presented with a gift from the Club by Mr. George Wright.

After a social hour, the meeting was closed by the Mizpah benediction.

Christmas Legends And Stories Theme Of Address

On Monday, the Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church met in the Parish Hall, with Mrs. E. Hickey and Miss Luella Morton as co-hostesses.

The meeting opened with Miss Eliza Bell presiding and leading in the Litany and prayers. Miss Frances Reid read the Scripture Lesson.

During the business period reports were received and adopted as follows—Secretarial, Miss Reid; Treasurer, Mrs. H. Ingram; Flower Sec., Mrs. E. Smith and for the Little Helpers, Mrs. J. Cooke. Plans were completed for a supper meeting to be held next Monday, which will be the last meeting for 1946.

The guest speaker, Miss Hazel Thompson of Tabernacle Church, was introduced by Mrs. E. Hickey. Miss Thompson spoke on "Christmas Legends" including those about the mistletoe, yule log, St. Nicholas, and the Christmas rose. She also told a story about the origin and the author of the well known hymn "Silent Night", and of the poem "The Night Before Christmas".

On behalf of the listeners, the President, Miss Bell, expressed appreciation for this very interesting address.

Miss Grace Gillard gave a synopsis of the third chapter of the book, "India at the Threshold", dealing with Labor and Industry, which was very enlightening in view of the present day crisis.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, and the meeting adjourned.

Presentation Made To Young Couple

A number from the Pentecostal Tabernacle gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Kleinsteuber Johnson Street, on Monday evening to honor Mr. and Mrs. Harold Elmy, (nee Ruth Smith, of Northport), a recent bride and groom.

The evening was spent in visiting, singing of choruses and Evangelist, Mrs. Parks rendered several numbers on her accordion and also conducted a Bible quiz.

Mrs. J. L. Abbott read an address and on behalf of the assembly presented Mr. and Mrs. Elmy, with a beautiful chenille bedspread. Appropriate replies were made by the young couple.

Refreshments were served before the guests departed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Is 12 Years of a "Spite Marriage" Enough?

What would you do if you were in Mr. A's shoes?

He's been married 12 years to a woman who has told him she doesn't love him, but married him to spite another man with whom she had quarreled. Now he has met his "dream girl," and is eager to marry her.

But while the "dream girl" returns his love, she already has a husband and children, and though her husband mistreats her, she does not want to break up her home until the children are a little older.

Mr. A. has told his wife he intends to marry this girl as soon as she is ready, and has left his wife and his two children. She, however, wants him to come back and live with her, telling him she will give him a divorce when the time comes. So now he's undecided on how to spend his waiting period—with the family he already has, or apart from them.

"I know that the girl would quit her husband if I asked her to," he writes, "but I won't. That is her part to work out for herself. I won't be guilty of breaking up her family, even though he does beat her sometimes, and I can hardly stand that."

Whether or not this man should go back to his wife and children, while waiting what he says will be "a few years" for his "dream girl," would depend, it seems to me, on what sort of conditions they would live under. That is, would he try to be a real husband to his wife during his waiting period, and a real father to his children, and do his part to avoid quarrels and make the home as harmonious as possible under the circumstances? Or would he merely be under the same roof as his family, but spending as much time as he could with the other woman, thus making his home a place of continuous bitter quarrels and hysterical scenes and creating an atmosphere disastrous to their children's health, if not to that of himself and his wife?

Unless he is a sufficiently strong character to make up his mind to adopt and carry through the first course, I think it would be a serious mistake for this man to try to live with his wife again.

But, on the other hand, there is something else for him to take into consideration before making his decision. That is the possibility—which may seem inconceivable at this moment—that during the "few years" he plans to wait for his "dream girl", she, on her side, may change her mind. If she did, and he had cut himself off from his own wife and children, he would be out on a limb.

Looking at the situation from a detached viewpoint, it does not seem impossible that this girl might, in the end, choose to stay with the husband she already has. If she were truly eager to leave him, I doubt if the children would be a deterring factor. For if she were leaving a bad husband for a good one, the children would certainly gain, not lose, by the change, so why should she hesitate? And if she were truly in love with Mr. A., I doubt if she'd be willing to wait that "few years" to marry him.

My feeling is that this girl has not yet made up her mind, and that Mr. A. had better not burn any bridges behind him until she tells him definitely that the time has arrived, and she is not going to keep him waiting any longer.

After all, things can't have been too bad between Mr. A and his wife if they have stayed together for 12 years. Perhaps they'll be even better from now on, if she realizes she may lose him if she doesn't look out.

What's a young husband to do when the girl he thought was going to be a loving wife and happy companion turns out to be a spoiled child?

It's only a waste of time, of course, to suggest that he should have discovered this before he married her. Here he is, stuck with her, so the problem is to find her, so the problem is to He describes his situation as follows:

"I'm a young man 22 years old, and married six months. My wife is of different religion, but we married her way. We agreed not to have any children for a few years. We have a small home with all new furnishings.

"My wife and I don't agree on many things. She never wants to spend an evening at home. She says she's home all day and that she wants to go out at night. We've only spent two evenings at home since we were married. If I don't go out with her, she'll go alone.

"She won't visit any relatives on my side, and doesn't like it when I do. She dislikes all my friends and won't join any company with them, but I have to like hers. I like to go swimming, bowling and to many other places for sport, but she doesn't like anything but dancing. I can only dance a few steps, but my wife claims she never has time to teach me. She is a good dancer, and I've often asked her to teach me.

"She doesn't trust me to go to a movie alone. I once took a drink to be sociable and she almost left me. I don't drink or smoke. When I have to work late she says I'm running around.

"I want to go to school again, which we can easily afford because I have a fairly good job, but she won't hear of it. Everything I owned I signed over to her, but she owns a car and I'm not allowed to use it without her permission.

"I've tried everything to interest her in things we can do together, but so far I've failed. I would appreciate a few suggestions. "B. B."

Apparently this girl has never heard that marriage should be a fifty-fifty proposition. She evidently wants it to be a hundred per cent in her favor.

It certainly sounds to me as though this young woman were brought up to be a very selfish creature indeed. She must have had parents who yielded to her every whim, and now her husband must bear the brunt of their foolhardy indulgence. He's not the first unlucky male to inherit such a headache, and to be faced with the necessity of doing a job that ought to have been done long before he never set eyes on the girl he made his wife. For what he'll have to do, if he is ever to have any sort of life with her, is practically to make her over into another kind of character altogether, and it will be tough going. Maybe it will even be a quite impossible task. For she may be so set in her self-centred, childish attitudes, so bent on having her own way, that she will simply refuse to consider any other sort of behavior.

Somehow, "B. B." you are going to have to make this spoiled child want you even more than she wants her own way. If you can't do that—if she can't be brought to the point where she wants to give you an even break, to consider your likes and dislikes as well as her own, to care about whether or not you are happy — then I can't take a very optimistic view of your future together.

How can you get her to such a point? Well, could you possibly talk the whole thing over with her, point out the places where she's not giving you a square deal, tell her you're ready to go fifty-fifty with her on making concessions, but that she's got to do her share? You'd have to use a lot of patience and tact, for if you simply ended up with a violent quarrel over things, you'd be worse than nowhere.

But you'd have to be firm, too, in taking a stand on your rights and in letting her know what it's only fair for you to expect. And you'd have to be careful afterward to hold on to your program and not just slip back into being the one to always give in.

As far as I can see, a plan like this is your only hope. You'd have to make up your mind that it would be a long-range one; that you couldn't change this girl over night.

But don't make yourself cheap by always yielding. She'll only value you according to the value you put on yourself.

Choose a Flattering Hairdo

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAIR stylists are kind to the universal sisterhood. You can have your coiffure short, snappy and simple. You can permit your glorious tresses to hang over your shoulders in wide waves and with under-turned ends. You can let your wool grow, pile it on top of your head. If it pleases you, you can cover your pate with what was once known as the Recamier crown. There are hairdos for all types of faces. Some girls even get ideas and roll their own, flaunting an original design.

A neat arrangement for a girl in her late teens shows a center parting, locks waved sleekly away from the ears, and fluffed out in the back in an unwound chignon. Gives one a nice sleek, freshly bathed look. Not much trouble either, requiring occasional curling, only a few minutes of grooming.

Dress Up Your Hair

Comes the merry evening and one can add some quaint posies. It's wonderful what can be done with fresh flowers. We're a bit tired of artificial ones since they've been worn with slacks when the housewife goes to market. Fresh flowers have never before been so fashionable for ornamentation of dress and hair fix.

Are you old enough to remember the hound dog hairdo, locks drawn far down over the ears? That's being dragged back again in a modified form. A wide undulation with curled-under ends to form ear muffs. A godsend to the poor lady whose ears have expanded beyond pleasing proportions.

There is the flat top mode. You take a wide forelock, straight as a string, brush it back from the forehead. Side locks are undulated, brushed slightly upward as is the back hair. A few rolls blend waved and straight tresses. A help to the woman with the long narrow face.

We also see bangs coming almost to the eyebrows. Chic and youthful, these forehead valances. More astonishing, the peruke is being worn by some of the girls who hasten to get ahead of the fashion parade.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Lady Does Not Take Off Her Glove to Shake Hands

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been taught that a lady should not shake hands with her glove on. However, many of my friends when calling on me extend their gloved hand when entering or leaving my home. Also, last week at a funeral parlor, when I offered my sympathy to a member of the family of the deceased, she extended a gloved hand. Is it proper to shake hands with your gloves on under the circumstances mentioned above? Or under any circumstances?

M. P. A.

Not only in the circumstances you mention, but in all other circumstances, a lady does not take off her glove to shake hands. Nor does she apologize for not taking off her glove when shaking hands. (The only exception is that naturally when she is wearing gloves such as gardening gloves or golf or riding gloves that might soil the glove of the woman she is greeting, she either pulls off her glove or says, "I'm sorry I can't shake hands..my gloves are soiled from gardening.")

Since She Cannot Be Married In Her Church

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance is divorced, considerably older than I am, and of ample means. After our marriage we will live in his large estate in the country. Living there now, temporarily, because of the housing shortage, are his son (ex-serviceman) and his wife, and his daughter and her recently discharged husband. The son and his wife and the daughter and her husband, my future "stepchildren" are all of my own age, and I find them very congenial.

My fiance and I have not yet discussed the details of our wedding, but the fact that he is divorced will prohibit our being married in the church in which I was brought up. So now I am faced with the problem of where to have the ceremony performed and where to have the "breakfast" following the ceremony. It might be possible that we would be married in Chicago (not far from where I live), but the ceremony cannot take place in church and I dread the coldness of a civil ceremony or unknown rectory, followed by a hotel-suite reception. Circumstances at home make it impossible to have the wedding there.

Do you think it would be all suitable for me to suggest that I would like to be married in my fiance's house, which will be my future home, of course employing a caterer so that no one there will have the burden of the reception? Or must it be by the invitation of the two young women who are presently the mistresses of the house? I will vastly appreciate any suggestions you will give me.

E. B. R.

Since your relationship with your fiance's children, who now live in his house is so congenial, my most earnest advice to you is to do everything possible to keep it in this pleasant and healthy condition. In your adaptation to this new life into which you are stepping, you will need super-excellent qualities of character and personality, for these relationships that are to be your practically always call for special and ever-alert understanding. Therefore I think you would be most unwise to do anything before your marriage that might call down on your head any possible criticism from them or from other relatives or friends of your fiance, or from your relatives and friends. Not only should you not suggest that the wedding be held in your fiance's house, but I think that if it is suggested to you by them, you graciously explain that you have made other plans. And although I understand your non-enthusiasm for a civil ceremony or a ceremony and reception in an impersonal background, I think you should accept this circumstance rather than make plans for something not only traditionally incorrect but also of possible unattractive criticism, now or in the future. Why not have the quiet ceremony and small reception you have half-planned, and quite soon after your marriage have a large reception inviting relatives and friends on both sides?

HANDSHAKING

By Mrs. Beeckman

A sensible general rule to follow: Never shake hands when it is awkward to do so.

Wife Preservers

When you are serving potato chips pour them from the bag into a pan and place in the oven for about five minutes. The chips will then be extra crisp and delicious. The same applies to ready-to-eat cereals.

Fashion Flashes

OUT ON THE TOWN are the prettiest of lightweight, sheer woollens done up into party frocks and wraps. Black tissue wool makes a street-length after dark dress. The deep chiffon yoke is traced with the same delicate jet leaves that embroider the rest of the frock.

ALL READY for points South are all sorts of lovely clothes — including furs. White Indian broadtail is used for a handsome wrap, a tunic that can be worn fitted and belted or free and flared. The gold midriff belt is shirred by elastic backing and is zippered in front. Full sleeves are worked into tight wristlets. Raglan shoulder.

Old Philosopher Addresses Joint Service Clubs

Members of the Rotary, Kinsmen, Y's Men and Optimist clubs were guests of the Kiwanis Club at the annual Inter-Club banquet held at the Hotel Quinte on Monday evening. A most interesting, humorous and instructive address was delivered by G. Alex Fair, of the R. C. Advertising Agency and known as the "Old Philosopher" to many radio fans, when he spoke on the subject "Nothing Succeeds Like Mistakes."

President Mark Vannet presided with Cleo Colling and Dick Kuntze as Sergeant-at-Arms and Vic White as song leader with Leo B. Riggs presiding at the piano. A competition was held by the different clubs in singing their club song brought down the house and the Y's Men with their three members won the prize donated by the host club with the Optimist Club with one member present won the second prize. The speaker was introduced by David Price, who extolled the work done by the several clubs in the city and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Lawrence Kells.

Everyone Makes Mistakes

The speaker claimed that everyone made mistakes and many things that are wrong and have been taught us for many years are mistakes and the first illustration was the word mess. "Sometimes a man will come home and say to his wife after looking at the dinner table: "that is an awful mess" said the speaker. "The wife will get awfully angry but the husband is quite correct for in the olden times that war the correct word to use. The mess or meal was put in one large bowl and everyone took what he wanted from the bowl and then went off by himself to eat it. The serviette that is used at the present time was one time used to collect the spare crumbs and pieces of food after the meal so they could be taken home and given to the poorer people.

Did Not Put Pearl in Wine

The speaker showed that Cleopatra did not put a pearl in the wine to be dissolved because a pearl will not dissolve. Nero did not fiddle while Rome burned because he was in Antium at the time and did not know of the fire until the next day and fiddles were not invented at that time. Mr. Fair also showed that Columbus did not set foot on the American continent but landed at San-Salvador and thought he was on the west coast of India and probably that is why the Indians are so named. He told how the Lachine Rapids in the St. Lawrence River were named, La Salle being in search of a west route to China. He claimed that animals also made mistakes and that Sir John Moore was not buried at dead of night but in broad daylight.

The speaker showed why people touch wood because he said it was the code of the Christians when they were being persecuted. He also stated that peanuts were beans, panama hats came from Ecuador, pineapple was a berry, a lead pencil was made of graphite and ostrichs do not stick their head in the sand. In conclusion the speaker stated that people make mistakes because they do not think things through.

Proud parents of the new Oat King of North America are Mr. and Mrs. Arcue McArthur. They are shown here with 31-year-old Gordon examining a certificate he won when he was a boy at a rural school fair. Since he was seven years old Gordon has been winning firsts for grain and livestock.

Delegates Study Means to Increase Dairy Production

Ottawa, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Delegates to the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference today turned to the study of means of increasing Canada's annual production of hogs, other livestock and dairy products such as butter, cheese and milk.

The discussions, based on recommendations by Federal Agriculture Department experts for 1947 production objectives, took place in camera as delegates from the various Provincial Departments of Agriculture and leading farm organizations placed their views before the conference.

Yesterday, in similar off-the-record talks, the delegates discussed the question of Canada's 1947 wheat acreage and it was reported the conference likely would recommend a slight reduction from this year's total of 25,900,000 acres, with increases for coarse grains.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner, in welcoming representatives at the opening meeting, placed stress on the feed grain shortage and said greater production was needed if the output of livestock and dairy products was to be increased.

Must Increase Feed Grain.

"It would appear to me to be useless," he said, "to spend our time discussing means of inducing farmers to increase livestock and dairy production unless we have first planned effectively to increase feed grain production."

Mr. Gardiner reported it was generally thought that lower prices for Canadian agricultural products would come in 1943 but said that for 1947 there would be a market for all farm produce that was available "at any price which is permitted in Canada and at a higher price than we now are obtaining outside Canada."

Discussing future prices, he said:—

"The unknown factor at the moment is the return to be received for the greater part of our production which is marketed in Canada. I think it can be assured that so long as costs to farmers cannot be reduced, returns to farmers will not be permitted to drop."

Moscow Radio Says Manufacturers Real U.S. Masters

London, Dec. 3 (AP)—Moscow radio reported today that "Travel Notes" in the Russian journal, New Times, says the "real masters" of the United States were "several dozen financial and industrial magnates who have formed a powerful organization, the National Association of Manufacturers."

"Big finance and industrial capital, which (Franklin D.) Roosevelt prevented from exercising direct control over the government, has regained its position of finance," the article was quoted as saying.

The radio quoted the New Times as saying also that Britain's Labor Government "to all intents and purposes is following the program of an Anglo-American Bloc which was advocated by (Winston) Churchill at Fulton" (Missouri).

A third New Times article relayed on the radio charged that Britain and the United States in demanding internationalization of the Danube had in mind "bringing the Danube countries under their sway and establishing their influence in the Balkans" and said that "Democratic co-operation" of the Danube countries themselves could "insure a reasonable approach to the question of navigation and other Danube problems."

NAVY UNIT VISITS MEXICO CITY

Mexico City, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Men of the Royal Canadian Navy marched into the hearts of Mexicans Sunday striding along in perfect step, arms swinging and wearing their best blue uniforms. The contingent — 100 strong — from the Dominion's Pacific fleet now anchored in Acapulso Harbor were given a tremendous ovation by tens of thousands who watched the huge parade held at the inauguration ceremonies of Mexico's new president, Miguel Aleman.

Democracy In Canada in Danger Says Premier Drew

Toronto, Dec. 3—(CP) — The thought that democracy might be in danger today even in Canada was before the Ontario people today in the shape of warnings from Premier Drew.

In the first of a series of Ontario government political talks prepared for delivery over an Ontario network of the Canada Broadcasting Corporation last night, Premier Drew said that democracy is everybody's business.

"Today, there is a fundamental issue dividing political thought here and all over the world," he said.

"On the one hand are those who believe that all our affairs should be directed by government officials. People hold this belief in varying degrees, ranging from the moderate bureaucrats to those who believe in absolute dictatorship on the Russian pattern.

"On the other side are those who believe that free men can work together efficiently and that with honest and vigorous co-operation democracy — real democracy — is the best system for the advancement and welfare of our people."

Either a totalitarian government or a democratic government could work for full employment, expand production, build houses, develop transportation systems, introduce social security measures, build hospitals and do all the things which are the responsibility of government.

"The difference is not in the things that can be done — it is the way that they are to be done," he said.

"The idea of state authority has taken firm root in this country and its advocates are not limited to the Socialists or Communists who accept the doctrines of Karl Marx.

"There are even some so-called Liberals who have shown just as great confidence in bureaucratic control. The Conservative party has shown itself progressive and liberal in its administrative action . . .

"We believe that the people of Ontario are capable of governing themselves and we also believe that the closer government is to the people the better it is bound to be. We are opposed to all arbitrary laws which deny personal freedom."

FIRE INTO SUPPOSED BIVOUAC AREA

Manila, Dec. 3 (AP)—Philippine military police units today fired 100 to 150 rounds of heavy mortar fire and a stream of light machine-gun bullets into a supposed bivouac area of the insurgent Hukbalahaps a dozen miles from Manila.

There were no indications, however, that the armed peasants who had been reported migrating from the central plains of Luzon to former Japanese and guerilla mountain hideouts east of the capital were willing to make a stand.

Reports from impartial sources said no casualties apparently had been suffered by either side in two days of shooting.

GUELPH POPULATION 24,357

Guelph, Dec. 3 — (CP) — The city's assessment department tabled an annual report Monday showing an increase in population from 1945 of 1,112, making the total 24,357. The city's assessment is now $18,089,184.

Notre Dame Football Team Of the Year as Army Toppled From First Spot by Experts

Close Call of Army Over Navy Changes Picture Completely

By SID FEDDER

New York, Dec. 3 —(AP)— In a final voting spree, United States sports writers today knocked Army's Cadets off their throne as kings of the gridiron for the first time in three seasons, and named Notre Dame as the "football team of the year" for 1946.

Reversing their field as a result of Army's close call against Navy's fire-eating Middies last Saturday, while the Irish were wrecking Southern California, the sports writers deposed the careening Cadets by the slim margin of 1 points in the largest vote ever cast in The Associated Press' weekly poll.

Actually, however, it wasn't that close. Of the 184 writers balloting for their selections for the top 10 teams, as of the end of the season last Saturday, 100 voted for Notre Dame to head the parade, as against 48 for Army. Nine others, unable to decide, split their tickets and called it a tie between the two outfits which battled to a scoreless draw three weeks ago — the only blot on Army's otherwise all-conquering three-year run.

Of the other first place nominations, 23 went to unbeaten untied Georgia, in third place in the final voting for the year; two went to the all-winning Bruins of the University of California at Los Angeles, who held fourth place, and one each to up-and-down Texas and daughty Delaware. Delaware like Army, has been unbeaten in three years. Texas nor Delaware made the first 100 in the final ratings.

Only once before in their tremendous three-year romp have the Black Knights of West Point been out of first place. That came the first week of this season, when Texas temporarily ousted them for a brief one-week period. In the final voting of the last two years they were far out in front.

This time, however, the Irish got back on a peacetime basis to bowl over all their opponents except the Cadets and roll up the best offensive and defensive records of any major team in the country — the first time in history any one outfit has been at the head of the class in both departments.

WIN ATTENDANCE TROPHY

Minneapolis, Dec. 3. (AP) — For the second straight year, Tulsa won the United States Hockey League Attendance trophy with the largest opening day attendance of any club in the circuit, Paul W. Loudon, president, said today.

Using the latest official census figures, League officials determined that Tulsa had an attendance of three per cent. Omaha was second with 2.7 per cent, St. Paul had 2.2 per cent and Houston 1.2 per cent.

HOCKEY RULES by BILL GRAY

"OFF-SIDES"
At Attacking Blue Line
Rule 69, Sec. (a)

The position of the player's skates and NOT THAT OF HIS STICK shall be the determining factor in all instances in deciding an "off-side." A player is "off-side" when BOTH SKATES ARE COMPLETELY OVER THE OUTER EDGE OF THE LINE.

Rule 7, Sec. (a).

Players of an attacking team must not precede the puck into the Attacking Zone.

Rule 72, Sec. (c).

If, however, not withstanding the fact that a member of the attacking team shall have preceded the puck into the Attacking Zone, the puck be cleanly intercepted by a member of the defending team at or near the blue line, the "off-side" shall be ignored and play permitted to continue.

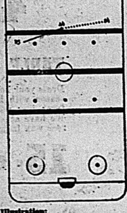

Illustration:

Player B3 passes puck to player B4 who has crossed the line ahead of the puck, but the pass is cleanly intercepted by player A4 near the line, say approximately five feet, the pass must be cleanly intercepted or taken possession of or cleanly passed, it must not be tipped by the stick or kicked.

Note:

Referees must be careful not to blow whistle too soon, wait for the play to develop in order to give the defending player the advantage resulting from cleanly intercepting the pass and gaining possession.

MINORS TO BLOCK POSSIBLE MAJOR LEAGUE INVASION

Coast Organization Will Spearhead Action in This Respect

By BOB MYERS

Los Angeles, Dec. 3 —(AP)— President Clarence Rowland of the Pacific Coast League said today he believes all minor baseball leagues will support a move to block major league invasion of minor territory.

The cost organization, he said will spearhead action in the form of an amendment to the present major-minor agreement which would balk any ideas the majors might have of taking over a franchise in any league, notably any city in the Pacific coast, International or American association.

With the first formal overall minor league meeting slated tonight, and the two major organizations officially convening separately Thursday—barring a change—several issues remained uppermost on the week's agenda.

In the minor league category was (1) The probable retirement of William G. Bramham as president of the National Association of professional baseball leagues, and the election of his successor, (2) Adoption of the amendment to forestall possible major league encroachment; (3) The demand to be presented by the Pacific coast loop for recognition as a third major league, and (4) Approval on a number of provisions to the major-minor agreement, many of them technical.

Most observers predicted that Bramham will retire—not resign—but identity of his successor was debated. George Trautman, executive vice-president of the Detroit Tigers, remained in the spotlight position, but one source close to him made it plain Trautman was not campaigning for the job. Steve O'Neill, the Tiger manager, in fact, said he had never heard Trautman mention the matter.

Lord Milford Pays $35,700 for Mare Five Years Old

(By The Canadian Press)

At the opening of the annual December race horse sales at New Market, England, yesterday Lord Milford, paid the top price of 8,500 guineas ($35,700) for a five-year-old mare, Fragrant View.

Clark Griffiths, President of the Washington Senators, announced yesterday at Washington that Mike Guerra, Cuban catcher, has been released to Philadelphia Athletics at the waiver price of $7,500.

At Los Angeles yesterday, President Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians announced Rogers Hornsby, one of baseball's all-time hitting greats, has been engaged to coach the tribal batters during the spring training season.

A storm has broken in the English newspapers over what is said to have been a violation of the ground rules during a cricket match at Brisbane, Australia, between a touring British team and the Aussies. It was contended the pitch should have been mowed before the game, a matter that the Aussies apparently overlooked. The question was put deftly by one English sport writer, "was that thicket around the wicket quite cricket."

RACING'S F.B.I. HAS BIG YEAR

New York, Dec. 3. (AP)—The Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau— "racing's F.B.I.—reported today that in its first year of operation it had had 39 "undesirables" ruled off the turf or suspended and had obtained court convictions of 16 individuals.

A review of the Bureau's activities since it was engaged by the Thoroughbred Racing Associationes of the United States last Jan. 15, was presented by Director Spencer J. Drayton, as executive representing 85 tracks throughout the country convened here for the Associations' first post-war general membership meeting.

Drayton said that investigation reports regarding 70 cases have been presented to various State Racing Associations for action. At Nov. 1, he said, 175 other cases were under investigation.

Persons involved included owners, trainers, grooms, jockeys, sellers of admission tickets and one well-known veterinarian. Chief offences have been doping horses, running "ringers" bribing jockeys and pocketing admission tickets for resale.

To meet these problems, Drayton said, the Bureau has inaugurated extensive scientific research with the hope that identification of horses will become positive and that some method for a fair pre-race stimulation test can be discovered. Finger-printing of track personnel has been made compulsory at some tracks.

The report makes clear that the subversive element is very much in the minority.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

There is already considerable interest aroused over the forthcoming visit of Primo Carnera, 270 pound six-foot six Italian who was former heavyweight champion of the world and is now well on way to becoming one of the world's wrestling champs.

* * *

The giant Carnera, whose size eighteen shoes are like violin cases and whose hands are as big as hams, told newspapermen the other night all about his war experiences. With him was his roommate and side-kick Aldo Spaldi small muscular signer who was a lightweight fighter ten years ago. Spaldi kept an open ear to the conversation and helped Carnera out when he stumbled over a word. The big Italian spoke in a deep guttural voice and it was sometimes difficult to understand him.

* * *

Carnera said that he had gone back to Italy in 1936 intending to led a "family life, nice and quiet and easy." Even though his managers and handlers had fleeced hin. of much of his earnings in this country, he still had had enough saved to live very comfortably in his home town of Sequals, about 40 miles northwest of Gorizia in northern Italy.

* * *

Proudly he showed a picture of his 17-room villa and adjoining gymnasium which had been built in 1932. "My first earnings I had, I put it there," he said. "My first pennies. It is my own museum. Everything is me; everything I did I put there. On the walls of my gymnasium are pictures of me all over the world."

* * *

Carnera was married in 1939. He had met his wife on a visit to Gorizia, he said, where she had worked in the post office, and he had married her three months later. They now have two children, Umberto, seven, and Joanna Maria.

* * *

Carnera said the war had been a disaster for him. His class was not called up for active army duty, but when the Germans took over the country they put him to work digging fortifications for them in the mountains. He worked at this forced labor 10 hours a day, six days a week, for two-and-a-half years until the end of the war. He lost 45 pounds.

* * *

"When I was free, on Sundays, I rode all over the countryside on my bicycle, looking for food for my family. I go find them food no matter where it was. I come home with a full load of food all the time."

* * *

How did he get the food, we asked.

"I was lucky," Primo replied. "I had 200 suits of clothes when I went back to Italy and I trade them in, clothes for food. They need suit—I need food."

* * *

He said he had had other unhappy experiences during the war. One night bandits trailed him home from the bank after he had withdrawn $40,000 to buy a neighboring property. They lined him, his wife, and his children against the kitchen wall and threatened to kill them all if he resisted.

"It was the worst moment of my life," Carnera said. "They said, 'One move and we'll let you have it. You better come across in a nice quiet way.'"

Primo came across.

* * *

A few weeks later other bandits stole his two automobiles. He suspected they would come after his furniture next, so he dug an enormous hole on his property and buried all his household belongings in it. Later on bandits did come to steal his furniture, but he pointed to the bare house and told them that other gangsters had beaten them to it.

* * *

German officers then moved into his home which was in the centre of an area dominated by Partisans. The Partisans were up in the mountains behind his villa, and the Germans were in and around it.

"I was between the nail and the hammer," Carnera said. "A friend of mine, a Partisan, he advised me to stay nice and neutral because if I went in with them, I'd be on the spot. The Germans would then do everything to get me, because I am a national figure in Italy. But, he warned, don't go in with the Germans, because then the Partisans would be out to get me. They made sure I toed a straight line.

* * *

"The Germans were cold-blooded people — they don't even care about God. One day a German car came to my house with three or four officers. Hup-hup-hup," Carnera imitated the strut of the approaching officers. "They told me Max Schmeling is in Venice and desires to see me. I said I'd go on one condition: don't talk to me about politics because I don't know anything about it. They said OK. When I saw Schmeling I said, 'Maxie, I'm very glad to see you but you are what you are, and I am what I am, so please don't talk about politics. I want to see you in a pleasant, friendly way.'"

German newsreelmen took pictures of the meeting.

* * *

When the liberation came, Carnera said, it was a happy occasion for him. American reconnaissance planes sought out his house and dropped a big package containing K-rations, cigarets, sugar, and coffee. The package had been sent to him by friends in the U. S. Army. He was overjoyed because at that time he and his family were near starvation.

* * *

To show his gratitude, Carnera went on a tour of U. S. Army camps all over Italy and France.

In the meantime, all of his savings had been wiped out by the inflation which had swept Italy, but promoters in North Africa, South America, and the U. S. A. were making him lucrative offers to take up wrestling. Carnera decided he liked the offer from the USA best and came over here in August to prepare for his wrestling tour.

* * *

"I feel wonderful," he said. "I really feel good. Everywhere I wrestle before packed houses. Everybody greets me wonderful. 'We are glad to see you back here, Primo,' they say After all, I always comport myself in a nice manner. I am always a gentleman in this country. I never did anything wrong.

* * *

"Up to now," he went on, "I have 100 bouts wrestling. Up to now, I've won all of them. For the first time in the history of the sport game, a boxing champion may become a wrestling champion, too. It will make me feel wonderful. I will be the first one. Right, Aldo?"

"You tell 'em Primo," Spaldi said.

* * *

"Oh, boy," Primo continued joyfully. "It will be my dream. It's going to be the first time in history! It never happened before! And I have the possibilities to do it, right, Aldo?"

"You tell 'em Primo," Spaldi said again.

The keglers of the Major Bowling League which cavorts every Thursday eventide at the Bowl-O-Drome are knocking over the maple-os with more or less abandon these coolish evenings. The boys just finished a tour of thirty bowling operations, and even some of the lads themselves were surprised when they saw the results. "Toots" Holway of the Kinsmen got the best thirty-game average with a neat 243; while the high three string went to Les Lennox with an 846. An outstanding feat was that turned in by Jimmy Barriage who came through with the high single of 411, just a few short of a perfect score.

* * *

Other top-scorers were Joe Legault with a thirty-game average of 235; Anderson and Les Lennox tied for third with 232; Berry with 227 and Ridley with 222. Eight teams, C.N.R.; Belleville Golf; Optical; Lawn Bowlers; Belleville Sargent; Kinsmen; York Trading and Central Cigar form the loop which is being led at the moment by Lawn Bowlers and Belleville Golf tied with 24 points. Central Cigar and Belleville Sargent all even for second place with 21 points.

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 3 —(CP)— The planned ballyho to establish Marcel Cerdan, the Casablanca clouter, as a stalking middleweight terror, already has taken effect..the oddmakers have established the Frenchman an 8-5 favorite to ship Georgie Abrams in their 10-round match at the Garden Friday night.. so one sided has the Pro-Cerdan publicity been that the experts seem to have passed up the creditable past performances of Abrams, who before his four-year hitch in the United States Navy was one of the leading contenders for the middleweight crown.

Cerdan claims that he never has been knocked off his feet in his 10-year ring career and boasts a record of 94 victories in 96 bouts..on the surface that's impressive, but most of the victims are unknowns..only a few such as Cleto Locatelli and Serserio Tauriello, Italian boxers who were near the end of the trail when Cerdan beat them and Holman Williams whom the 30-year-old Algerian whipped in Paris, never fought in North America..his record is full of names like Amar Kouidri, Aissa Ataff, Ali Omar, Assane Diouff and other Arabs, most of whom folded their tents and stole silently into the desert night.

Bell-Bottom Battlers

Both middleweights have one thing in common .. bell-bottom trousers..Cerdan served a spell in the French Navy, where he won an assortment of inter-allied 160-pound championships.. but Georgie has him beaten in one respect. the Washington, D. C. puncher born on Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1918, had a crack at the middleweight title in 1942 but dropped a 15-round decision to champion Tony Zale.

Since he turned professional in 1937 Abrams whose middle name is Freedom, has fought some of the best in the division including Billy Soose whom he whipped three times .the swarthy Washingtonian also has never been knocked out and has reserved three of the four defeats encountered in [illegible] ring career..Georgie has been somewhat of a pain in the neck to the oddmakers last August in the Garden, he stepped into the ring a 4-1 underdog and promptly proceeded to give rangy Steve Belloise, a good puncher, a 10 round going over.

Odds And Ends

The variety of post-season bowl games that so far this year has boasted such names as the "Pear" and "Burley" Bowl has a new one added to the growing list..the Toledo glass industry is plugging the "Glass" bowl which will include a glass press box, glass dugout, glass scoreboard and players' uniforms of fibre glass..what, no neon-lighted footballs? Hamilton College at Clinton, N. Y., which has one of the United States' few indoor hockey rinks, is ready for its first post war hockey seasons..Victoria College, Toronto, is scheduled to open the home season at Hamilton Dec.20.

New York, Dec. 3 —(CP)—Old John Hillerich is dead but the sprawling dingy red-brick factory in Louisville, Ky., where he developed the famed "Louisville Slugger" baseball bat in 1884 still produces the ash that has been the standby for countless thousands of major, minor and sandlot ball players.

Probably every player in big league baseball, and thousands of others, got to know Hillerich through the factory's long-standing policy of selling the bats directly to the men who swing them . . . The first thing Ted Williams, Boston Red Sox star, did at the close of the 1946 World Series, was to go to Louisville to look over the bat situation for next year . . . The American League's most valuable player wanted a World Series bat for next year with no holes in it . . .

Joe DiMaggio visits the factory regularly as do Big John Mize and Hank Greenberg . . . The old timers went there, too — Ty Cobb, Nap LaJoie, Dan Brouthers, Willie Keeler, Pop Anson and Shoeless Joe Jackson.

It started in 1884.

In the early days of baseball hitters used a great variety of clubs — anything that struck their fancy. Not until about 1876 did bats, almost by accident, begin to take the form of the present-day 40-inch seasoned ash . . .

It all started on a day in 1884 when a player named Pete Browning, a member of the Louisville club of the old National League and a great hitter of his day, went into a tiny woodworking shop in Louisville looking for a new bat . . .

He met Hillerich, a lad of 18, who had gone to work in his father's shop as an apprentice three years earlier . . . Although the little loft turned out wooden churns, John, fond of baseball, stole away in a corner and sat up with Browning late into the night . . . Together they developed the first "Louisville Slugger."

Four-for-Four Fame.

Young Hillerich deftly turned it out on a lathe, and Browning must have gone four-for-four the next day. For soon Hillerich was making bats for every player on the team, and as word of the wonders of the "Louisville Slugger" spread, every player in the league had to have one.

As big league baseball tightened up and batters became more exacting, many players wanted a bat made to their specifications . . . Then Hillerich decided to make a model for every player, and put his name on it . . . Thus thousands of young sandlot players received a chance to pound the ball out of the lot with a "Babe Ruth Special" or some other pro ball player's favorite wood. . .

The Hillerich bats became famous in Canada and the United States and were used in every league, by all hitters . . . Though only about 40,000 bats a year are used by the big leagues, the Hillerich firm turns out 2,000,000 a year and has made more than 100,000,000 since it started.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The Horse Sense method of bridge is the stem in system; puts the par in partnership; emphasizes the fun in fundamentals; exposes the con in contract.

Know what you are doing in bridge. Not only how. But why. It will make your bridge suddenly look easy. Then is when your bidding worries seem to fade away.

When you count suit tricks, simply total your high cards (aces, kings, queens) and short cards at one apiece. The reason is: Highest cards are most likely to take straight tricks; short suits can be trumped.

When you open with a one bid, among other things have at least five tricks. The reason is: Partner is assumed to have two tricks to make the total of seven you need for a one bid.

When you jump in response to a one bid, have tricks enough to help make a game with the five tricks shown by partner. The reason is: A jump shows enough tricks to help make a game.

When your jump is immediate, have two sure tricks among your others. The reason is: Since your jump shows a flock of tricks, your partner may get slambitious. He will need quick takers.

Game in a major suit requires a total of ten tricks. Game in a minor takes 11 tricks. So, your jump shows five tricks if trumps will be in a major; six if trumps will be in a minor.

Suppose partner opens with one diamond and you have this hand:

♠ A
♣ K 8 4 3

Your hand contains six tricks; two aces, a king, a queen, two short cards in spades. Two aces are two sure tricks. All this is enough for an immediate one-jump bid of some kind.

You have no takeout biddable suit. With adequate support for diamonds, assist that suit. Also show partner your six tricks with two sure. One-jump to three diamonds. That's telling him.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Persistent rumors around New York movie circles credit Canada with preparations to launch a tremendous campaign to develop a great motion picture production business — the same rumors have been floating around Toronto and Montreal for nearly a year now and the fire is beginning to show through the smoke.

Montreal's Paul Dupuis, who starred as the handsome Breton hero in "Johnny Frenchman", now is starring in the French version of "Whispering City" (The Stronghold) which is in production at St. Hyacinthe, Que.

Some of the yeast causing the movie ferment in Canada is J. Arthur Rank's financial backing under a rank policy for developing film production in commonwealth countries. The policy has already produced the fine Australian film, "The Overlanders" starring Chips Rafferty, who is generally described as "the Australian Gary Cooper." Right now he is visiting Canada.

Apropos Canadian films and stars, we'd like to see a little more genuine pride in the home product north of the border, instead of the cringing attitude of "Well, the Americans seem to like it, so it must be good." That is, always providing the product is good.

What prompted this two-cents contribution to the crying in the wilderness of other Canadian movie reviewers is an advertisement carried recently in the Toronto papers for a movie gala, attended by Paul Dupuis, among others. Mr. Dupuis was described as "star of New York's hit movie, "Johnny Frenchman."

What gets us is that the film was described as "New York's hit." Ot was a hit in the big city all right but it was more of a hit in Montreal and other Canadian cities, where it was shown, so why not say so?

Ann Harding is emerging from her semi-retirement to play the title-role in the radio dramatization of "Anna Zenger," the new book by Kent Cooper, general manager of The Associated Press, on the Cavalcade of America radio show tonight.

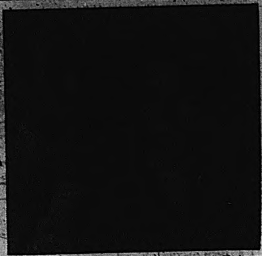
FUEL CONSERVATION

London (CP) — A scheme of training in the economics and efficient use of fuel for stokers and boiler house attendants has been announced by the ministry of education as a step in meeting the present shortage of fuel in Britain.



AT THE CAPITOL — Howard da Silva and Alan Ladd size each other up in Paramount's new mystery thriller, "The Blue Dahlia," now at the Capitol Theatre. Both men are suspected of the murder of Ladd's wife. Film co-stars Ladd with Veronica Lake and William Bendix, and features, in addition to da Silva, two other players from "The Lost Weekend," Doris Dowling, the "natch" girl and Frank Faylen. On the same program the new action mystery thriller "The Invisible Informer," starring Linda Stirling and William Henry.

Minneapolis is Best Fielding Team In American Association

Chicago, Dec. 3. (AP)—Minneapolis, paced defensively by first baseman Johnny McCarthy, today was officially named the best fielding team during the American Association 1946 Baseball season.

In 3,942 put outs and 1,672 assists, Minneapolis made 176 errors for a fielding percentage of .970. Louisville and Toledo were next with .969, followed by Milwaukee with .968, Kansas City .967; Indianapolis .966; St. Paul .963 and Columbus .956.

Among players who were in action in two-thirds of their Club's games, McCarthy led the first baseman in fielding with a mark of .995. Bob Aren of Toledo was first among the second sackers with .975; Gene Nance of Milwaukee topped the third baseman with .960 and Dick Kimble of Toledo took shortstop honors with .951.

Twenty-five pitchers tabbed a perfect record of 1.000 in 10 or more games, with John Hutchings of Indianapolis on top with 41 chances accepted. John Riddle, also of the Indians, appeared in 75 games behind the bat to top the catchers with a mark of .987.

BILLY TAYLOR STILL LEADING SCORING RACE

Teeter Kennedy, Maple Leaf Star, Moves Into Third Spot With 19 Points

Montreal, Dec. 3. (CP)—Goal-hungry National Hockey League forwards are finding the goalies hard to beat this year with such stalwarts as Bill Durnan, Frankie Brimsek and Turk Broda staging a neck and neck race for the Vezina trophy and the $1,000 prize money that goes with the cup for the loop's least scored on goaltender.

According to league statistics released today, Pudgy Bill Durnan, of Montreal Canadiens, has allowed 39 goals in 17 games while rivals Frankie Brimsek of Boston Bruins and Turk Broda of Toronto Maple Leafs have participated in 16 contests and allowed the same number of shots to slip past them.

Broda leads the shutout artists with three while Brimsek has turned in two goose eggs and Durnan one.

Shifty Billy Taylor of the scrappy Detroit Red Wings continues to pace the League's pointmakers with seven tallies and 16 assists for 23 points. Maurice (Rocket) Richard of Canadiens and another Detroit player, Roy Conacher, are in the second spot with 20 points apiece. Richard has sunk 12 goals and garnered eight assists and Conacher has pumped home 11 goals and accumulated nine assists.

Ted (Teeter) Kennedy of the youthful Maple Leafs is third with 19 points made up of 11 goals and eight assists for 19 points. Veteran Syd Abel is in the fourth slot with 18 points as a result of his 11 goals and seven assists.

Toronto's Wild Bill Ezinicki is way out in front for the league's bad man honors with 42 minutes spent in the penalty box. Kenny Reardon, hustling Canadiens rearguard, is next with 31 minutes in the cooler.

Toronto and Montreal are deadlocked for the league leadership with 21 points each. Toronto has won nine games, tied three and lost four while Canadiens, who have played one game more than the Leafs, have won nine games, tied three and lost five.

SMILEY MERONEK LEADING SCORERS

Montreal, Dec. 3. (CP) — Smiley Meronek, smooth-skating Lachine forward, is leading the Provincial Hockey League scoring parade with 16 goals and 12 assists for 28 points, league statistics released today, revealed.

Two points behind Meronek is Paul Hebert, St. Hyacinthe speed-ball, who has sniped 14 goals and garnered a dozen assists for a total of 26 points. Hard-shooting Tony Demers of Sherbrooke Randies holds down third place with 12 goals and the same number of assists for 24 points while fleet-footed Fred Gardner of the Cornwall Cougars and Marcel Bouchard, St. Hyacinthe sharpshooter, are tied for fourth place with 23 points apiece.

Meronek with 16 goals is the loop's leading goal-getter while Bouchard and Jack Brunning of Cornwall have each accumulated 15 assists to pace the circuit's play-makers.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

YOUNG RANGERS DEFEATED 7-4 BY HAMILTON TEAM

Johnny Conick, Right-Winger of Tigers, Takes Over the Coaching Duties

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Szabos moved up a notch as a result of the only O.H.A. Junior 'A" game last night when they downed Toronto Young Rangers 7-4 at Hamilton in a four-point tussle that enabled them to pass the Rangers and take over seventy place in the 10-team group.

Playing for the first time under the coaching of Johnny Conick, starry right-winger for Hamilton's senior Tigers, the Szabos checked the visitors dizzy through a scoreless first period, took a 4-1 lead in the second frame and held off their closing rally in the closing minutes to earn their third victory of the season.

Pierre Cadieux picked up four scoring points—two goals and two assists—to pace the Hamilton attack. Val Delory and Bill Wyszynski were other double scorers, with Defillipe adding the final counter. Gord Chulkshank, Harry Pidherny, Jack Anderson and Leachman were the Ranger goal-getters.

Galt Red Wings have a chance to grab second place for themselves when they tackle the winless Falcons in St. Catharines tonight. Beaten only twice in nine starts—both times by the pace-setting St. Michael's College Majors—the Wings are currently in a four-way tie for third place, a point back of Barrie Flyers.

In the five-team Senior "A" circuit, the unbeaten Hamilton Tigers have a date with the last-place Mohawks in Owen Sound tonight. Victors by an 8-0 score in their only previous meeting, the Tigers have a chance to extend their group leadership to eight points.

Pete Zaduk Wins Decision Over Jackie Dugan

Toronto, Dec. 3. (CP)— Pete Zaduck of Guelph, won a surprise decision over Jackie Dugan of Peterborough, in the five-round headliner on last night's amateur boxing card that attracted 2,000 fans to Massey Hall. Dugan, at 160 pounds against Zaduk's 147, looked to have the best of it until Zaduck's last-minute attack caught the judge's favor. The crowd booed the verdict.

Results included::

CHAPTER 12

"I just ask you to go, Sid. I don't want to talk to you!"

His bigness, his rumpled, rich dark hair, the faint odor of shaving soap and tweed that had once so intoxicated her, were very near to her now. There had been bitter, lonely weeks, there had been months when Jennifer's one thought and prayer was that they might someday be close to her again, that she might once more hear that half-serious, wholly confident deep voice. She had thought a thousand times of what she would say if that chance were given her, of how wise, how forgiving, how charming she would be. Now she was conscious of feeling only desperately weary, angrily sure of herself, needing only to be left alone.

"Look, can I come take you to lunch tomorrow?"

"No!"

"Not going to forgive me, eh?"

"It's not a question of forgiveness. I think," Jennifer said, "I'll leave you to let yourself out."

Her heart beating fast between fright, confusion, and anger, her head high, she walked from the parlor, went straight to Betty's room. Betty was in bed reading a magazine.

"Was that Sid Borrows who came in?"

"Yes."

"You haven't seen him for months, have you?"

"No. He was down in New Mexico or somewhere with his brother."

"Sat so? Well, you had two beaus tonight; you're coming on," Betty said affectionately. "Both gone?"

"Yes." But Jennifer was not sure of it. She dared not cross the hall to her own room for fear that Sid was still waiting. She made excuses, brushing her hair with Betty's brush that was clotted with the girls' dark hair, sitting on Betty's bed pretending to gossip.

"You don't like Eugene Evans, do you?"

"I like him, yes. But not . . never . . not the longest day in the world . ." Jennifer paused. She heard the street door close with a slam far below, and breathed easier.

"Never to marry him," Betty finished.

"He's too good. He's too smart," Jennifer explained. "He takes everything apart. I never could live up to him."

"I wouldn't want to," Betty said approvingly. "There's such a thing as being too good. I've only talked to him about twice, but it was all the purity of people's motives and the—what d'you call it?—integrity—isn't that one of his big words?—of their intentions, and the mass wickedness of the world. Excuse me! I like people human. It's not his business whether people are good or not. I think he's a prig."

"He tries very hard to perfect himself, he really does," Jennifer said in his defense. "Listen, Betty. He may come around tomorrow night because he went off kind of mad when Sid came in, and if he does will you tell him I've gone to a movie? I don't want to see him. I'll go into the kitchen and shut the door."

"The kids will give you away," Betty said in calm prediction.

"Don't let him get as far as the dining room. When he's coming up the stairs you hang over the banister and tell him you're sorry but I've gone to a show."

"Then maybe I'll be stuck with him," Betty suggested reluctantly, "and he'll fill me up with regeneration and the accumulated heritage og human sin. That's one of the things he said. I had my puzzle book in my hands and I wrote it down on a margin. Look. There it is. So you're back on Sid, Jen? I always thought you liked him, and I was afraid he'd let you down."

"He did let me down," Jennifer said in a low tone as if to herself. She added nothing to it, went to her own room, putting out hall and parlor lights as she went. Sid was gone from her life now; Eugene was gone too; she felt curiously light and free. For long months she had thought that she must see Sid, must explain and ask an explanation. Sometimes in this visionary talk she had shed tears, sometimes she had been only loving and pleading. But the dream had been with her incessantly, like a hunger that could not be appeased.

Now it was satisfied. She felt a deep pride; she was breathing a new air. Sid had come and she had sent him away with no sense of effort, of struggle, of sacrifice. She had not forced herself to do this; it had come in a spontaneous rush; it was over. If he came again it would only be to meet the same reception. Jennifer felt tremendous forces within her; there would never be any compromise there—there would never, indeed, be any temptation.

This was not wash out the past. But it tremendously lightened the sense of shame and helplessness from which she had suffered so long. She was not powerless; she was not ignorant, frightened, meek little Jennifer Richie, obliged to take whatever hurts life dealt her. She was a woman with a right to scorn, with a right to choice, and she had used that scorn, she had made her choice.

Undressing in the dark little oblong of her bedroom, lighted tonight only by the angles of cold silver that slanted in from the street, for the first time in her life Jennifer gave a triumphant laugh at her own thoughts.

Sid did not come again, but Eugene called three nights later, when Jennifer's plan for avoiding him had been forgotten, and they talked together for a few brief minutes in the parlor. Always pale and insignificant in appearance, he now looked weary and sick as well. He told her quickly, not sitting down, not removing his coat, that he had slept badly since he had seen her last, that he had been possessed of but one thought—that he must know.

"That man—Borrows, you said his name was?—what was he ever to you? He came in as if he were at home. His manner. . . .I could have killed him for his manner. . ."

"Eugene, won't you sit down?" Jennifer's face was as pale as his own; the grip of his two hands on hers hurt her.

"No, I can't sit down. They're holding dinner for me at home; I said I'd be there before eight. Jennifer, you never loved him? You never gave him the right to call you 'darling'? Tell me. You liked him, you were friends, but he was never your promised husband? Not a man like that — a worldling. You'll not see him again? If you would promise me that! The man's very presence is a pollution. Can't you—won't you promise yourself to me, give me hope, let me protect you from the contagion of a man like that? I'll wait. I'll serve you seven years, but I cannot leave you to the danger—"

"Eugene." She interrupted the wild flow of words gently, almost pityingly. "Sit down," Jennifer said again, sitting down herself on the dilapidated old davenport. Eugene seated himself beside her and once again gripped both her hands in his own cold thin fingers.

"I know," he said, "I know that you've been admired. That's natural. That doesn't surprise me. anything else would surprise me! And I know the manners of those people—the arrogance. Completely sure of themselves! You never liked him?"

"I did love him, Eugene," Jennifer said quietly. "He made me very unhappy. But I've told him now that I never will see him again."

"You loved him. But people don't love and then stop loving. You thought you loved him," Eugene said feverishly. "You say he made you unhappy. How did he make you unhappy?"

"I thought we were going to be married," Jennifer said, looking squarely at him while the color slowly drained from her face. "I trusted him. I don't have to tell you this, Eugene, but I want to. Nobody else knows. Not Betty. Not anyone."

There was an unmistakable significance in her tone. The man sat looking at her steadily, blood darkening his temples.

"You don't have to tell me anything," he said.

"I wanted you to know that."

"I don't know what to say," Eugene presently murmured in a vague, puzzled tone. "I don't think you know what you're saying."

"I never wanted to see him again. I tried to forget," Jennifer began. She fell silent. "You can't forget things that have really happened," she said.

"He asked you to marry him? Why didn't you?"

"He never did." It was all so strangely simple and easy—the cold, unvarnished truth. Jennifer was glad to get it said; she already felt the relief of it. Weariness and shamefacedness— but infinite relief.

She felt a curious impersonal sympathy for Eugene. He was shocked to the innermost fibers of his being; he could make no secret of it. The contemplation of sin was sickening to him, whether it was the casual blasphemy of a small boy on a street corner or the haggard face of a condemned man in death row. Mollie had told her that he had more than once gone to San Quentin to bring what comfort he could to a murderer whose hour was approaching, and that he kept vigils of suffering and terror, pacing the floor of his room for hours when he knew some fellow creature was awaiting the lethal chamber in the dawn.

Jennifer could be sorry for him. But at the same time she felt no need of explanation, justification, apology. Her tragedy was her own; and she was very tired.

"I'm not going to keep you," she said to him, for the moment the older of the two. "We'll see each other again. I'm terribly tired tonight; I'd just told Betty that I was going to bed as soon as the dishes were done, and now I've left her to do them alone. Good-bye, Eugene, and come whenever you want to. .whenever you can. ."

She was hardly conscious of what she was saying, and Eugene spoke not at all. He held her two hands for a moment in the hall and then went swiftly down the long stairs. She heard the door close behind him.

Back in the hot, disorderly dining room, she swept the table clear with a few experienced movements, established the little girls and their lesson books there, attacked the heaped dishpan with vigor. Now the worst had happened and it was over; she was alive still, with tomorrow's breakfast to think about.

"You can live through things you'd think would kill you," she told Betty.

"You oughtn't to let him hang around if you don't like him," said Betty.

Jennifer held a glass to the light, polished it again. "I don't think we'll see him again very soon," she said slowly.

Yet for a few evenings she uneasily expected him; even took the little girls for an after-dinner walk once or twice to be sure to miss him if he came. Faddy and Elna delighted in the night lights, the long bright river that was Market Street, the ten cents' worth of caramels at the drugstore.

A week went by and there was no sign from Eugene. Jennifer's nerves had somewhat quieted and she felt herself once more restored to normal living and thinking. Now and then her thoughts went to Sid, but the old ache, the shame and the longing were gone; it was only with a sort of weary satisfaction in her own changed feeling that she remembered him now.

Then one night when she got home, tired and grimy and cold, Betty had news.

"See in the paper about Eugene Evans?"

"Knocked down in the street. Not going to live, his father said."

"His father! Did you telephone his father?"

"Nope, his father telephoned here. Says he wants to see you."

"Mr. Evans wants to see me?" Jennifer asked, her mouth dry.

"No. Eugene does."

"Oh, then he's conscious? Then he wasn't killed!"

"His father said 'dying.'"

"The paper said he was knocked down by a truck. They held the driver. But he says—the driver says—that Eugene started to cross on the red light, stopped in the middle of the street, and turned back. Says he stepped right in front of the truck; there was no way of missing him."

Jennifer began to tremble. She went into her own room and changed into the dark plaid dress that Mollie had somewhat shyly offered on her last office day. It had been much too large, but was cut down to Jennifer's measurements now, and she loved it. Rain was falling; she completed her costume with her mashed old rain hat, her worn raincoat and her rubbers, and was ready to run downstairs half an hour later when the Evans car was at the door.

An Evans cousin, a heavy, big man of perhaps thirty, was driving, two more Evans cousins, the Reilly girls, were weeping quietly in the back seat. Jennifer got into the front seat; she could not find anything to say, and it was in complete silence that they drove to the hospital.

She was frightened and trembling again as they went through the white halls. There was a bare, brightly lighted waiting room where Mollie and Mollie's husband and Eugene's parents and other members of the immediate family group, all white-faced and red-eyed, were sitting. Eugene's mother embraced Jennifer on a burst of tears; his father asked her hoarsely in a low voice if she would come up immediately to the sickroom. Still without speech Jennifer put her cold hand in his and they went to the big elevator. Nurses were in it, coming and going busily; a young intern or two, a subdued visiting man with his cap in his hand. The car stopped at every floor with clanking and banging of doors; the odor of disinfectants strengthened.

They came to a row of private rooms; the wide doors had neither locks nor knobs. Jennifer and her companion silently pushed one door open and she saw a high bed and Eugene lying in it swathed in white bandages with the fingers of one bandaged hand moving on the white sheet. His eyes were shut, his face bloodless.

The priest who was with him murmured something and went away; the nurse slipped quietly from the room. Jennifer turned to glance at Eugene's father; he too, was gone. She was alone with the sick man. She went to the side of the bed and knelt down, taking his hand in both of her and laying her cheek against his fingers.

Eugene opened his eyes, frowning as if the effort hurt him, closed them again.

"It's you, Jennifer," he whispered. "They were good to send! Thank my father for that."

Silence. Jennifer could seem to think of nothing to say.

2. On Germany, Mr. Byrnes will insist on a discussion of Germany's western frontiers—chiefly whether France should get the Saar and have the Ruhr internationalized.

3. The United States will ask that the Austrian question be taken up here. The main issue, diplomatic informants said, is whether an arrangement can be made for the early withdrawal of Russian and other Allied troops from Austria.

4. Mr. Byrnes is adhering strictly to his policy — contrary of what the Russians want — that the Allied powers should not take any German reparations from the current German production. The Russians are known to want an agreement by which they might collect reparations for many years to come.

5. The probable result of the Four-Power talks on Germany here will be the appointment of a commission of deputies to do the spade work for a foreign ministers' meeting in Europe early next year. Mr. Byrnes will favor hearings on the German question for Belgium, The Netherlands, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Luxembourg, all of whom have asked to be heard, but it is uncertain whether any of them will be allowed actually to participate in the German discussions.

Barriers of Trade and Relaxation.

The statement issued by Mr. Byrnes said barriers confronting relaxation of trade with Germany should be removed as rapidly as world conditions permit.

"To the same end, the establishment of an exchange value for the mark should be undertaken as soon as this is practicable; financial reform in Germany should be effected at an early date; and the exchange of full technical and business communications between Germany and other countries should be facilitated as soon as possible.

"Potential buyers of German goods should be provided access to both zones to the full extent that facilities permit, and normal business channels should be restored as soon as possible."

Under the agreement, responsibility for foreign trade will rest "initially" with the joint export-import agency (United States-United Kingdom) or "such other agency as may be established by British and United States commanders in chief in Germany. This responsibility will be transferred to the German administrative agency for foreign trade "to the maximum extent permitted by the restrictions existing in foreign countries at any given period."

The two governments will establish a joint committee in Washington to support the requirements of the joint export-import agency in case of commodities in short supply, to determine supply sources and to designate procurement agencies in the light of financial responsibilities and exchange resources of the two governments.

Two classes of imports into the fused zones are provided under the agreement—those such as food and medicine for prevention of disease and unrest and those for the restoration of peaceful German industries.

Cost to Britain and U.S.

Imports in the food category will cost Britain and the United States about $1,000,000,000 through 1949 but it was understood they will charge the sum of Germany's future account for ultimate collection.

Regarding displaced persons, the statement said that the maintenance of such persons within both zones from the German economy "shall not exceed the maintenance of German citizens from this economy." Supplementary nations and other benefits which may be provided for displaced persons in excess of those available to German citizens are to be imported into Germany without cost to the— German economy.

The agreement is to last until amended by mutual agreement and is to be reviewed at yearly intervals.

The main method for making the zones self-sufficient is to build up their exports to the rest of the world. To restore production of exportable goods, Britain and the United States have agreed to build up a fund of about $140,000,000, none of which will require appropriations from Congress but will come rather from such sources as British and American loans, German funds in Sweden and the like.

Experts from Germany

In reply to a question, Gen. Robertson told Mr. Bevin's press conference that a "fairly wide range of goods" will be exported from Germany when the agreement comes into effect. These would include textiles, ceramics and coal.

Mr. Bevin said the agreement will not affect British nationalization plans for the Ruhr.

The Bevin-Byrnes statement said the economic program drawn up is expected "not only to decrease the costs of occupation for the area but also to make possible the gradual restoration of a healthy non-aggressive German economy which will contribute materially to the economic stability of Europe."

To Rebuild German Economy

London, Dec. 3 — (Reuters) — Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today that the new Anglo-American agreement on Germany is aimed at rebuilding the German economy on "healthy and non-aggressive lines."

Announcing the agreement for the economic unification of the British and American zones of Germany, Mr. Dalton declared that it did not prejudice Britain's announced policy of "socializing" the industries of the Ruhr area which lie in the British zone.

He added that the estimated total of Anglo-American expenditures involving in the agreement would be the equivalent of £250,000,000 ($1,000,000,000) over a period of three years.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Dec. 3. (CP)— On Toronto Stock Exchange stocks recorded another decline in the early session, the Industrials leading with a drop of a full point. The mining groups lost .30 and .31. Trading proceeded at a dull tempo.

Two junior mining issues, Delta Red Lake and McMarmac were features of the trade, both gaining 10 cents or more in quite heavy turnover.

Golden Manitou gained 7 and minor losses appeared for Waite-Amulet and Sherritt.

In the Industrial section the papers were weak and other groups had mixed gains and losses. Great Lakes paper lost a point and General Products Mfg. A was off three points. Western Oils were steady generally on light trade.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 3 —(AP)— Downward tendencies continued in today's stock market although liquidation remained notably timid.

Dealings quieted after a moderately active opening and early losses of fractions to a point or more were reduced in a number of cases near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues declined fractionally with both Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram off ⅛ and McIntyre ¼. Canadian Pacific and Hiram Walker were unchanged.

PRODUCE MARKET

Eggs: Steady, supplies plentiful, trading slow at unchanged prices, wholesale to retail, A large 47-48, A medium 43-44, A pullet 39-40, B 40, C 34; country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free, A large 43, A medium 38, A pullet 34, B 35-36, C 30-31.

Butter: Prints, first grade 42, second grade 41, third grade 40; first grade solids 40, second grade solids 39; market firm, offerings light.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 3 —(CP)— No settled quotations were reported by bacon-hog markets early today.

Barrie later reported a 10 cent increase at $20.60 delivered for Grade A, dressed.

Alleged Attempts To Attack Women Result in Arrest

Toronto, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Alleged attempts to attack five women resulted in arrest of Sidney Taylor, 24, after chase by two citizens who fought with the suspect until police arrived and took him into custody late last night.

The five women, walking individually in the north-central section of the city, were accosted and one of them was knocked to the pavement before Edward Whitten, father of one of the women, and his son Fred chased the suspect along the street. The Whittens caught up with the man on Ontario Street and grappled with him off the sidewalk while Whitten's wife and daughter, who had followed the chase, summoned police.

Taylor was charged with indecent assault.

Health League To Conduct Course For Restaurants

Ottawa, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Improved methods of food handling and sanitation in Canadian restaurants is the aim of a campaign to be launched here today by the Health League of Canada.

The League will conduct a model "short course" for Ottawa restaurant employees and hopes the experiment will be the forerunner of a continuous educational program throughout the Dominion through which restaurant personnel will learn of modern sanitation and food handling methods which will benefit both themselves and their customers.

Invitations to attend the series of lectures and films have been issued to federal and civic health officials.

Participation in the plan by restaurant employees depends first on the approval of the Medical Health Officer in the community concerned.

Restaurants displaying certificates of membership in the Health League plan must agree to adhere to sanitation standards set by the local health department, serve only pasteurized milk, promote observance of Canada's food rules and reduction of food wastage, and co-operate with the local health authorities in providing health education opportunities for their personnel.

COMB SNOW-SWEPT MOUNTAINS

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 3 —(AP) —Police and volunteer searchers combed the snow-swept mountains north of here today in quest of two school teachers who became lost while on a trip to find evergreens for school-room decorations. Police identified the teachers as Miss Marion L. Forney and Miss Beatrice Watkins.

Geo. W. Spinney, C.M.G., President and B. C. Gardner, Vice-President and General Manager who addressed shareholders at the Bank of Montreal's 129th annual meeting.

Production, Not Purchasing Power, Key To Prosperity, Says B Of M President

George Spinney Sees Danger in High Level of Peacetime Taxation

B. C. GARDNER, GENERAL MANAGER, REPORTS RISE IN PERSONAL, COMMERCIAL, FARM LOANS AS RECONVERSION PROCEEDS

Montreal, Dec. 3—One of the "immediate and urgent tasks" confronting Canadians is to put a sound foundation of production under the present high level of purchasing power, George W. Spinney, president of the Bank of Montreal, said at the 129th annual meeting of the Bank yesterday.

Mr. Spinney expressed guarded confidence in the ability of Canada to meet economic conditions of the future, but added that he noted a number of popular beliefs about such conditions which now were "an absolute hindrance to a clear-sighted appreciation of the fundamentals of progress and welfare."

At the same meeting, the bank's general manager, B. C. Gardner, reviewed the progress of the bank during the year and revealed that demand for banking services had reached unprecedented levels. Deposit accounts had increased by 100,000 during the year to reach 1,500,000 or 40 per cent more than in 1939.

Mr. Spinney gave as one example of mistaken popular beliefs "the still prevalent idea that purchasing power rather than production is the main spring of employment, income and material well-being.

"Money is, after all, a claim on the productive resources of the community," he said. "It should surely be clearly evident that under present conditions, where the supply of money in the form of circulating media and bank deposits is about two and a half times what it was at the beginning of the war, purchasing power is a problem of excess rather than scarcity."

Discussing the fact that millions of man-days of production had been lost during the past year, Mr. Spinney said that "no one sector of this complex unity called Canada can suffer without all other elements feeling the pinch. We have a vested interest in each other's well-being." He questioned whether there was full recognition that high wage rates do not necessarily mean the same thing as high purchasing power.

Taxation Inflationary

Discussing present taxes Mr. Spinney said "I suggest that the concept of high taxation—as an anti-inflationary measure in peacetime may be far from valid ....Wartime taxation was an important weapon in the fight against inflation. But have we not already more than a little evidence that high taxation in peacetime is likely to have an entirely opposite effect?"

Peacetime taxation tends to be inflationary in character whenever it penalizes incentive and leads to additional wage demands aimed at maintaining take-home pay, he said, adding that "in my opinion, the level of taxation still in existence in Canada today comes well within this category."

Of social security measures Mr. Spinney said he believed that a certain amount of social security planning had a place in the Canadian economy but that if it is to supplant the personal integrity that goes hand in hand with providing for one's future, "then I believe that we will tend to become soft" so that both incentive to enterprise and capacity for effort will be seriously undermined.

"Nor do I think it is saying too much to suggest that it will sap the vitality of the nation if new generations are nurtured in the idea that some benevolent government will remove the necessity for prudent management of individual affairs. It is good to stand on one's own feet—good for the individual and good for the national fibre."

Word of Warning

Mr. Spinney gave what he termed "a clear word of warning and restraint" in connection with business borrowing for purposes of expansion. Noting that "a truly liberal and constructive credit policy" had long been a basic part of the bank's method of operation, he added that "it is no part of this bank's policy to build up an impressive total of loans by encouraging individuals or corporations to incur an unnecessary or an unwieldy burden of indebtedness.

"Wisely planned expansion based on an optimistic—yet not unrealistic—appraisal of future possibilities, is one thing; a commitment recklessly undertaken on the assumption that prices will never decline—and that the treacherous benefits of a sellers' market will be forever present is quite another matter."

Mr. Spinney noted many parallels between conditions in Canada today and those which existed in 1919. He recalled that the boom of 1919 was followed by a depressed period in 1920 but said he believed that in many respects Canada is much better equipped today to combat such a cycle of events than it was after the First Great War.

General Manager's Address

In his general manager's report, Mr. Gardner told of deposits at a new year-end high of $1,736,000,000, an increase of $123,000,000 over the previous year. He expressed the view that this growth was "a tribute to the thrift and common sense of our people and a strong bulwark against the inflationary potential of an increased money supply."

Transition from wartime to peacetime production was reflected in the higher level of commercial loans, Mr. Gardner said, and added that "current loans and discounts in Canada at $277,000,000 compare with $202,000,000 at October 31, 1945. This represents a general and diversified increase in advances to manufacturers, merchants, builders, farmers and primary producers.

"The volume of personal loans has shown considerable expansion, reflecting the increased availability of civilian goods and the resumption of normal family living. This includes a substantial number of loans to veterans to assist in their plans for rehabilitation. It is not our policy to encourage individuals to incur unnecessary debt, but our personal loan facilities are a necessary and useful part of our services to the public."

Mr. Gardner referred to the high inventory levels of business concerns and said, "The question of whether inventories are too high or too low is not susceptible of a ready and conclusive answer, but I suggest that a conservative policy is advisable under present conditions, particularly in types of goods in which production can be greatly expanded and where change in quality or design may adversely affect inventory values."

Branch Accommodation Taxed

The capacity of a number of the bank's branches, the General Manager said, was taxed to the limit and to relieve such situations a number of building extensions were planned. The major portion of these enlargements, however, have been deferred due to shortages of labour and materials.

"Admittedly," he continued, "the situation in this respect is not satisfactory, but until the supply of housing accommodation, especially for war veterans, more nearly meets the demand, we feel that our use of scarce materials and labour should be kept at a minimum. When conditions in the building trades become easier, the program we have planned will contribute to employment in the construction and allied trades for some years to come."

Foreign Trade

Mr. Gardner reviewed the activities of the bank in the United Kingdom, the United States, Newfoundland and foreign countries abroad and stressed the interest of the B of M in foreign trade.

"It is our policy," he observed, "to develop our foreign business by expanding relations with banks already established in foreign countries, rather than by way of direct branch representation, and our surveys to date confirm that the facilities thus available meet the requirements of our customers transacting business abroad." The general manager added that officers of the Foreign Department had recently completed tours of a large section of Continental Europe, Mexico and Central America, and that similar surveys of other areas not visited since before the war would be undertaken as circumstances and conditions permitted.

Staff Remuneration

In reference to the work done by the Bank of Montreal staff during and since the war, Mr. Gardner said, "It is our constant aim and endeavour to ensure that our employees are compensated fully as well as those in comparable positions in industry and commerce. While in recent years our policies have been subject to the limitations of wartime controls, the salaries of individual members of the staff are reviewed and increased periodically in recognition of efficient service and advancing responsibilities.

"Throughout the war years," Mr. Gardner concluded, "the staff have borne a heavy burden, and we are fully conscious of their problems in this transitional period through which we are passing. As we move further away from a wartime background, the problems of personal living should become less acute, and it is my hope that we may look forward to a period of fruitful development in an atmosphere of enduring peace."

2,000 Maritime Fishermen Seek Prized Delicacy

By DAVID McINTOSH

Yarmouth, N.S., Dec. 3 (CP).—Lobsters, Ho!

Just off Cape St. Mary and Barrington Passage, Meteghan, Western Head and Petite Riviere and in scores of tiny coves around the southern coast of Nova Scotia from Prim Point to Three Fathom Harbor, hundreds of inshore fishermen today began lowering lobster-pots below the chilly surface of the Atlantic and the Bay of Fundy.

As the more than 2,000 fishermen put to sea in gasoline boats, dories and rowboats—or practically anything that would float—in search of the delicacies which now are fetching top prices, they looked for a repetition of last year's $1,000,000 season.

Maritime lobster fishermen, from Grand Manan channel to Baie de Chaleur, last year took about 17,000 tons of lobsters from coastal waters and sold them for about $9,000,000. In the first 10 months of this year, their traps have snared about the same amount, but the lobsters now sell for some eight per cent more.

Richest Lobster Beds

The southern Nova Scotian coastal area possesses the richest lobster beds in the maritimes, not because more lobsters make their home there or that they are bigger and fiercer, but because the area lies closest to the larger American markets.

Lobsters sell for between 60 and 65 cents a pound in Boston, for about 20 cents more in New York. The fishermen receive about 45 cents a pound at the maximum. It costs four cents a pound to fly live lobsters from Yarmouth to Boston a one-hour flight.

Air travel doesn't seem to bother the lobster. An airline official reported soberly to the recent convention of the Maritime Board of Trade that, to his knowledge, no lobster flying on his line had ever been airsick. If a lobster does get whoozy in flight, it's more than likely it's caused by carbon dioxide fumes from the dry ice in which he's packed.

There's no reason to sneer at the lobster but, to put it frankly, he's a rather stupid crustacean. He barges into the funnel-shaped opening of the creel and then finds he can't back out—not even with six legs. But fishermen are warry of Homarus Americans all the same—when they extract him from a pot they insert wooden pegs in his pinchers.

A successful lobster season—the current one lasts until May 31—depends a great deal upon accurate weather forecasts, for sudden storms can destroy thousands of dollars worth of pots, buoys and other gear before it can be lifted and brought to the safety of shore.

During the war, many fishermen mumbled continuously about the censorship of weather broadcasts. Though censorship probably did help in the anti-submarine campaign, it didn't advance the lobster campaign and often was responsible for damage to equipment.

The opening of the lobster season today is somewhat similar to the mad dashes for western land during the last century when pioneers roared away in Conestoga wagons at the sound of a starting gun to stake out claims. Lobster zero hours is 7 a.m., and fisheries department vessels keep a sharp watch on the shoreline to prevent any over-eager fisherman from beating the clock. After that, it's out with the traps, men, and throw back everything under 3 1-2 inches.

Bank of Montreal Head Expresses Concern Over Present Level Taxation

Montreal, Dec. 3—A tone of confidence concerning the future of Canada, tinged with a warning against overexpansion of business and concern at the present level of taxation featured the presidential address of George W. Spinney, C.M.G., at the 129th annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal yesterday.

Speaking at the same meeting B. C. Gardner, general manager, observed that more than 100,000 new savings accounts had been opened with the bank during the past year and added that deposits under all headings reached a new yearend high of $1,736,000,000, an increase of $123,000,000 over the previous year.

Reviewing the economic and social aspects of domestic and international events during the past year, Mr. Spinney looked to a future which he viewed with guarded optimism. He noted that "in an age of flux there are some economic realities and basic values that do not, and cannot, change."

"No device or formula can produce wealth and well-being without work, enterprise and the assurance of reward. No mere document replete with cleverly devised sections, sub-sections and exceptions, can ensure fruitful co-operation between individuals or between nations lacking the confidence that can grow only from fair and honourable dealings."

Commenting on the modern tendency to speak of labor as a "force," a "factor" or a "cost element" the President said he preferred to think of labor "as the same people who were so largely responsible for this Dominion's spectacular wartime production records and who made their contribution, too, in the front line. These are citizens who want a better life for themselves and for their children. They want to look to a future free from fear of unemployment. They do not want another war. In all these things they are no different from their fellow Canadians."

Although there had been "dark pages of labor exploitation in the record of history," he felt that "progressive management today is fully alive to the vital necessity of good labor relations founded on mutual recognition of rights and responsibilities."

General Manager's Address

In his address to the meeting, B. C. Gardner, general manager, noted satisfactory progress in the country's reconversion program, accompanied by a minimum of involuntary unemployment.

Mr. Gardner reported an increase in the volume of personal loans and in loans to farmers, municipalities and school districts. He sounded a note of caution in respect to inventories for commercial concerns and suggested "a conservative inventory policy is advisable under present conditions."

"Sincere appreciation of loyal and efficient services" was offered by the General Manager in commenting on the work of the B of M staff which now numbers more than 8,000, an increase of nearly 40 per cent over pre-war complement.

"During the past year," he said, "we have had the pleasure of welcoming back many members who were absent on military service," and added that "in addition to absorbing former officers of the bank, we have engaged some 110 young men from the Armed Services not previously in our employ and in setting their initial salaries, the years spent in the forces have been credited as banking service."

Wartime Food Shortages Will Be Almost Forgotten This Yuletide Season

By EDWARD W. PALMER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Wartime food shortages will be almost forgotten this Christmas in the first Canadian Yuletide season since 1939 to approach pre-war plenty.

It's true that pre-war plum puddings, candies and spices, mincemeat and nutmeg and all the special Christmas food trimmings aren't yet as plentiful in the shops as they were before the war. But a Canadian Press survey today indicates that most of them are available; a great deal more than last year, and in most categories infinitely more than Britain and most other countries can enjoy.

The survey of wholesale and retail food outlets, from coast to coast, shows that Canadian homes this Christmas will have almost an old-time selection of all the good things there are, and the few luxuries still off the shelves won't be missed.

From Halifax to Vancouver, relaxing of wartime food controls helps to make this coming Christmas holiday season a more enjoyable and more merry Yuletide than any in the past seven years.

Cranberries are Scarce.

Some of the table treats that will appear in Ontario during the festive season are new since the war. For instance, Italian lemons and dried dates. Cranberries are scarce and expensive, but pineapples are freely offered. The Toronto housewife will have a reasonably large stock of turkeys to choose from and if she is unsuccessful in getting a gobbler, a large supply of choice beef and chickens is available.

To go with the meat, there are many kinds of vegetables, table fruits, candies and nuts. The puddings and cakes that mother makes may suffer from a shortage of dry and candied fruits coupled with scarcity of shortening and sugar.

Montreal is set for a really enjoyable Noel in the old-world tradition. Only shortage of Christmas fare appears to be raisins and cranberries.

The turkey is likely to be the piece de resistance of Western Canadian Christmas dinner this year. Chickens are plentiful, but other kinds of poultry are scarce. The children may be disappointed on candy and chocolate, but a large supply of many varieties of fruit is on hand.

Plenty of Turkeys.

Saskatchewan will have all the turkeys required this Christmas, and some left for other provinces. In other kinds of Christmas cheer, too, the people of this province can look forward to full measure.

In British Columbia, the trimmings of the Christmas Day dinner, plum pudding, cake, fruit and nuts are apparently in adequate supply. Candy is still none too plentiful.

In New Brunswick, that traditional centre-piece of the Christmas dinner table, the turkey, may be missing from many homes. Grocers have no idea how many birds they can expect from the west and retailers are not taking any orders.

In Prince Edward Island, where staple foods are the only ones easily obtainable, the holiday season will see few luxury food items on the tables of average homes.

Investiture Held By Alexander

Ottawa, Dec. 3 —(CP)—Couched in the stark official language of a "citation" many a tale of valor and sacrifice was retold yesterday as more of Canada's war heroes were decorated at an investiture in government house. Accompanied by Viscountess Alexander, Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, presented the awards which also included several civilian decorations. Prime Minister MacKenzie King also was present at the ceremony.

Many a mother, father, and widow stepped forward to receive a medal for a hero who died in the course of winning it. Among these were Mrs. J. R. Osborn, St. Vital Man., who was presented with the Victoria Cross won by her son, the late Csm. J. R. Osborn of the Winnipeg Grenadiers. The George Cross was given to Mrs. R. B. Gray, Vancouver, widow of FO. R. B. Gray who sacrificed his life that his comrades might be saved when their plane was downed during operations over the North Atlantic.

Lieut. G. P. Vinant, liaison officer for the French Air Force who took part in landing operations in the South of France, was made an honorary member of the British Empire.

Members of the British and United States Armies, and also of the Canadian Merchant Navy were included in the list of those receiving awards.

HITLER RANKED STALIN WITH MUSSOLINI

Washington, Dec. 3 — (AP) — A bristling Nazi document published Sunday by the United States war crimes prosecution staff disclosed that Hitler once ranked Stalin with Mussolini and himself as the "only three great statesmen in the world." Hitler deemed Emperor Hirohito of Japan "weak, cowardly, irresolute."

RUSSIA ACCEPTS AMERICAN ARMS PROPOSAL

Conferences Delay Sentencing of Lewis

May Be 11th-Hour Attempt to End Miners' Walkout

Will be Mid-Afternoon Before Court Will Reconvene

Washington, Dec. 4 — (AP) — The sentencing of John L. Lewis for contempt in the United States coal strike was delayed until at least 3 p.m. E.S.T. today by a court recess.

A recess was ordered at noon until the afternoon hour after a two-hour round of private conferences among counsel for both the government and Mr. Lewis.

One government lawyer, who was in court but who did not participate in the conferences, suggested to reporters that an 11th-hour effort to end the mine walkout might be in progress. He said he had no knowledge, however, that this was the case.

Reporters asked Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor, if he could explain the postponement.

No Comment

"I can not tell you anything," he said. "No comment."

Mr. Lewis likewise said "no comment" as he left the courtroom and entered an elevator.

The recess announcement came immediately after Judge T. Alan Goldsborough, who yesterday held Mr. Lewis and the United Mine Workers in contempt, had entered the court after the two-hour delay.

Judge Goldsborough mounted the bench and the bailiff announced that the court would stand adjourned until 3 o'clock.

He was escorted fore and aft by deputy marshals.

Mr. Sonnett answered none of the questions shouted at him.

"No comment," he said grimly.

Mr. Lewis had alternately paced the floor of an ante-room and conferred with his lawyers during the behind-the-scenes manoeuvring.

Lewis Appears Tense

Tight lipped, the Mine Union boss arrived at 9:52 a.m., for sentencing on his refusal to obey a Federal District Court order designed to avert the soft coal strike.

On entering the courtroom Mr. Lewis took the same chair he has occupied throughout the trial, which began a week ago today.

He sat in silence for a moment, staring out into the jammed courtroom.

Then he arose and went to an ante room to confer with Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor.

The two returned after a brief consultation.

The sentencing was delayed temporarily while Judge T. Alan Goldsborough conferred with the trial lawyers in his chambers.

The judge was believed to be hearing the recommendations of both sides—government and union—as to what penalties, if any, should be imposed on Mr. Lewis and his union.

Mr. Lewis himself sat silent and grim in the courtroom as the minutes ticked away.

MURDER CHARGED AGAINST HUSBAND AFTER WIFE DIES

Mrs. Reta Taylor, Native of Brighton, Dies After Alleged Fight in Their Home

Sarnia, Ont., Dec. 4—(CP)—Joseph Taylor, 26-year-old foundry worker of nearby Point Edward, has been charged with murder in the death of his wife, 27-year-old Mrs. Reta Taylor, a native of Brighton, Ont.

The murder charge was laid last night after further investigation by Provincial police of the circumstances surrounding an alleged fight between the couple in their three-room Lakeside cabin three miles north of here late Friday.

The couple were married three years ago and came to Sarnia from Hamilton. The cabin they occupied is one of 32 summer cabins that were in use the year round because of the housting shortage.

Early last Saturday morning a neighbor was aroused by Taylor who said his wife was hurt. They found Mrs. Taylor seriously injured and blood in the kitchen and the centre room. Mrs. Taylor was brought to hospital here and police arrested Joseph Taylor on a charge of assault.

While Mrs. Taylor fought a losing battle for life in hospital, her husband appeared in court Saturday and was remanded to Dec. 7. Mrs. Taylor died late Saturday afternoon.

The charge of murder was laid last night on instruction from Crown Attorney H. M. Taylor. Inspector Frank Kelly of the Criminal Investigation branch of the Provincial Police had conducted the investigation. Inspector Kelly said that certain exhibits are being taken to Toronto for analysis by provincial experts.

The police theory is that both were drinking before the quarrel. The woman's injuries included severe head wounds. A broken, blood spattered kitchen chair was believed to be among the Crown evidence. Police would not comment on this point.

The neighbor who was summoned to the cabin Saturday told police that Taylor said he was alone in the cabin when his wife came in the back door and that she was badly hurt before he saw her.

Popowich Couple Hang Tomorrow

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP). — The State Secretary's Department announced today that Mr. and Mrs. George Popowich will hang on schedule tomorrow at the Welland County jail for the slaying last June of Louis Nato of Thorold, Ont. The announcement said the couple's plea for clemency had been turned down by the governor-in-council.

P. Thibault, remission registrar in the department, said he could not recall any previous case where a man and wife were hanged together.

Popowich and his wife were sentenced originally to hang Nov. 12, but the execution was postponed pending the outcome of an appeal to the Ontario Court of Appeal. The court rejected the appeal and set Dec. 5 for the hangings.

The murder charge was laid against them after Nato died in hospital June 21 from injuries suffered June 16.

In a death-bed statement to a doctor, Nato accused the couple of beating him in his car and robbing him of $180. Police said Nato was "taken for a ride" and beaten unconscious. When he came to on a country road about 4 a.m. his hands and ankles were bound with rope and his trousers containing $180 were missing. Nato stumbled more than a mile to a paper mill office and from there he was taken to hospital.

In the appeal to the court, defence counsel argued that Mr. and Mrs. Popowich had perjured themselves at their trial and now wanted to change their story. Counsel sought to introduce a new version that Popowich found his wife and Nato in a car along a side road and a fight developed between him and Nato.

INDUSTRY STRUCK STAGGERING BLOW BY NEW EMBARGO

Rail Freight, Express Shipments Curtailed, Passenger Mileage Cut Another 25 P.C.

By OLIVER W. DE WOLF

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—A government order holding United States railroad freight to the most vital needs struck a staggering new blow today to industries struggling to maintain operations despite the coal strike.

Widespread factory shutdowns, with consequent unemployment for thousands now working, appeared in prospect.

Officials explained that the order and a companion restriction on parcel post are designed to assure that coal-burning locomotives can be kept running on reduced schedules until mid-February.

1. Clamped an embargo on all rail freight and express shipments, with the exception of commodities and supplies necessary to the maintenance of public health and safety, effective 12:01 a.m., Friday.

2. Ordered a second 25 per cent cut in rail passenger mileage, effective 11:59 p.m. Sunday.

3. Limited the weight of parcel post to five pounds in packages measuring not more than 18 inches in length, effective 12.01 a.m. Friday.

4. Subjected all export shipments except bulk grain, livestock and exports for the armed services to shipment under special permit, effective last midnight.

Exports Reduced

Officials estimated the embargo action would reduce freight and express shipments 50 per cent. Exports to Canada may be reduced sharply.

Excepted from the freight embargo are food, livestock and poultry feed, livestock and poultry, dry and liquid fuels, medicines, drugs, surgical instruments and dressings, newspapers, magazines, newsprint, printing ink, water purification chemicals, insecticides and fungicides, ice, drinking water and some other supplies considered necessary for public health and safety.

Likewise, the following four classes of goods are not affected by the parcel post limitations: Live day-old poultry, seeds, plants and other nursery stock; eggs, butter and other perishable foods and medicines, drugs, surgical instruments and surgical dressings.

Ordinary international parcel post is prohibited.

A Ford Motor Company spokesman said in Detroit that the embargo would mean "a complete shutdown within a few days" of the company's manufacturing operations.

Chrysler spokesmen said in Detroit their operations would be "definitely affected," and a General Motors source commented:

"We can't operate if we can't ship materials and the finished product."

Roslin Ratepayers Choose A.E. Bates

At a meeting held in the school house Tuesday evening, December 3, the ratepayers of U.S.S. 19 Thurlow selected Mr. Arthur E. Bates, prominent farmer and school trustee, to represent the Roslin School Section on the Township School Area Board of Trustees.

School Inspector R. H. Macklem showed moving pictures supplied by the Foxboro District Film Council and the school children under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. Della Clare, provided musical numbers which were much enjoyed.

Mr. Everett Geen acted as chairman and Mr John M. White as secretary of the meeting which the ratepayers enjoyed so much that they decided to meet again on January 9 to hear a report on the School Area by Mr. Bates, to see some more moving pictures, to discuss the formation of a Farm Forum, to hear local authorities on soil conservation, and other activities which promote community welfare.

U.K. Represents Potential Market For Greatly Increased Quantities Of Fine Canadian Cheddar Cheese

The United Kingdom represents a potential market for greatly increased quantities of fine quality Canadian Cheddar cheese, members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers Association were told Tuesday evening by W. C. Cameron, Dairy Products Division, Marketing Services, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Presenting a paper which was prepared following a recent visit to the United Kingdom where a study of Canadian cheese and markets in the country were made, Mr. Cameron declared there was a market in Great Britain which requires nothing but select cheese of uniformly high quality, for which a premium will be paid.

"At the present time Canada has a better opportunity of securing this market than any other country which exports Cheddar cheese, because there are no Cheddar cheese produced anywhere better than the best Canadian Cheddar."

Not Select Enough

The speaker maintained, however, that there are still too many cheese exported from Canada which do not qualify for the select trade, this preventing Canadian cheese from reaping the full benefit of the premium which this trade will pay for uniformly high quality.

The great problem for the Canadian cheese industry was to make as much as possible of the Canadian cheese equal in quality to the best which is now being produced.

Mr. Cameron stated there were two major defects in Canadian cheese which the British market found objectionable, and which were found to be more prevalent than he had anticipated. These were openness of varying degrees and intensity and also acidy cheese.

Figures on dairy production in the United Kingdom were quoted by the speaker who stated that prior to the war the annual production of farm house cheese and soft cheese was slightly more than half that of Canada.

Marked Decrease.

With increasing quantities of milk being diverted to the bottle trade, however, the manufacture of farm house cheese had shown a marked decrease during the war years. Thus the market for imported cheese would be increased. Canada is the country which can and should produce the Cheddar cheese which should fill this market. And the English trade is looking to Canada for the fine flavored Cheddar which they require.

F. L. Wright, Montreal Provision Trades Association, spoke briefly stating that the Canadian cheese industry was in need of co-operation. "There is little use in talking about what is going to happen five years from now," he said. "What happens then will largely be decided by what takes place today."

The speaker pointed to an expanding home market for cheese. Formerly Canada exported 70 per cent of her cheese while today this had dropped to 50 per cent, he said.

Greetings from both the Western and Eastern Ontario associations were received at the convention.

Must Stand on Own Feet.

George Richmond, speaking for the Western association, declared that now was the time for the Canadian cheese industry to stand on its own feet. "There is no reason why we should continue to produce cheese at a loss merely to assure a future market," he said.

As result increasing numbers of Canadian cattle were being shipped to the United States, and into cheese producing areas. He felt the time was now ripe for a change in the present marketing system for milk. When a new price schedule for cheese was attained the maker deserved some further remuneration, he claimed.

Representative of the Eastern Ontario Association, Mr. Edwards also felt the cheese maker should be receiving more money. Cheese makers should be treated as spec-

$7,000 in Furs Stolen at Weekend

St. Catharines, Dec. 4. (CP)—The theft of $7,000 in furs belonging to E. Herman Company Ltd., Toronto, from the store of C. Wallace Company here was revealed today by a representative of the Herman Company. The theft took place over the weekend.

Nothing else in the store was touched except the furs.

Better Supply of Wearing Apparel for Christmas Gifts

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP) — Those shirts and nylons may still be scarce this yuletide shopping season, but on the whole the shopper seeking socks for dad and a nightie for mom will find his Christmas lists easier to fill than he has for several years.

The Prices Board, surveying this year's supply of clothing and textiles of all types, reports improvement in most lines, with a few extras—real silk neckware, for example—thrown in. The Board's cross-section of the clothing situation looks like this:

Men's suits— There should be more suits available for Christmas. Production has increased in 1946. Output for the year will about equal the pre-war peak.

Men's pyjamas—Not likely to be in as good supply as last season due to industrial disputes in primary cotton mills.

Men's socks—Good supply for Christmas.

Men's shirts—Supplies will be as good if not better than last Christmas, although curtailed by industrial disputes and procurement difficulties.

Men's underwear—Winter underwear, except for heavy woollen underwear is in short supply.

Men's ties—There will be a plentiful supply of all varieties of ties for Christmas. There will also be some real silk neckwear.

Mufflers—There will be a good supply of mufflers for the Christmas trade.

Handkerchiefs— Imports of linen and other fine handkerchiefs are showing some improvement.

Women's hosiery—A steadily increasing supply of nylons will add zest to Christmas shopping. Rayon hose production is down because of work stoppages this year in the chemical industry. However, the overall supply of women's hose will be better this season.

Women's' lingerie—While production of rayon lingerie has suffered, there will be a fair supply of slips, panties, nightgowns and other lingerie.

Rayon dresses—An ample supply.

Woollen dresses—Will be available this Christmas in a better choice than for the last several years.

Children's clothing—While underwear, hosiery, and flannelette items have been affected by the serious cotton problem, dresses, snowsuits and outerwear generally will be in adequate supply this Christmas.

Shoes—Good supplies of both men's and women's shoes and bedroom slippers are assured. There should be ample supplies for children at ages from five to 14. However, there will be some difficulty in obtaining top-quality lines because of the large demand.

Other textile products:

Bedspreads—There will be a fair number available for the Christmas trade. Best stocks will be in chenilles.

Tablecloths and luncheon sets—Imports have improved, which will mean better supplies this year. A few damasks have arrived in the stores and some linen cloths will also be obtainable.

Blankets—Abundant supplies of all types of blankets will be in the stores for Christmas.

Sheets and pillowcases — Supplies will be scarce because of import difficulties and industrial disputes in Canadian mills.

OAKLAND MAYOR GIVEN EMERGENCY POWER IN STRIKE

Huge Walkout of Labor Groups Leaves City Without Transport, Closes Industries

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 4 (AP).—In the face of a general strike that tied up the city, the Oakland City Council today declared a state of emergency and placed full police and fire power in the hands of the mayor.

There were indications that Mayor Herbert L. Beach was contemplating a "get tough" program.

He declared late yesterday, 12 hours after the American Federation of Labor walkout had paralyzed the metropolitan area of 1,000,000 persons, that "the City of Oakland is not going back to the jungle". He asked the city council to take today's emergency action because "no community can exist in anarchy."

The huge walkout, protesting a police-protected delivery of merchandise through picket lines to two strike-bound department stores, has:

Stopped all public transportation.

Halted commuter service across the eight-mile-long San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge and thus packed it with privately-owned automobiles carrying more than 70,000 persons.

Forced suspension of newspapers.

Filled the streets with parading demonstrators, at times resulting in fisticuffs and manhandlings in which at least nine persons, including three newspaper representatives, were slightly injured.

Spokesmen of the A.F.L. and the city appealed by radio and press for public support.

The strikes have been in progress for about a month, over demands by clerks for union contracts as members of the Retail Clerks Union (A.F.L.).

Earlier, in a radio appeal for public support, James F. Galliano, attorney for the A.F.L. Alameda County Labor Council, declared the A.F.L. Clerks Union had clear majorities at both stores, Kahn's and Hastings', but that the management refused to negotiate.

Mayor Beach called the walkout "an attempt to substitute the physical force of mobs for that of government".

22 Passengers On Giant Liner Injured in Gale

Southampton, England, Dec. 4 (AP).—The liner Queen Elizabeth docked 45 minutes late today from New York after running through a gale that injured 22 passengers.

Sir James Bisset, the captain, said: "We ran into a fresh westerly gale with a high following sea Monday and the gale kept up yesterday. At times the waves were 40 feet high."

Four passengers suffered broken bones when they fell on the slanting decks. The other 18 were cut and bruised. The more seriously injured were removed to Southampton hospitals.

Mrs. Jean Foley, 24, gave birth to a daughter in the ship's hospital last night. Commodore Bisset christened the child Elizabeth Dawn.

Mrs. Foley was returning with her husband, Walter Foley, and their two-year-old son Paul to settle in England after spending several years in Canada.

Commodore Bisset said the Queen Elizabeth ran into bad weather Monday and the storm continued throughout Tuesday.

Considerable damage was done to crockery, bottles and kitchen equipment. Passengers received their injuries when they were thrown from chairs in their cabins or fell on the deck when the ship was rolling.

Veto Not to Apply To Arms Controls Or Inspections

Molotov's Conciliatory Move Called Important Concession

By MAX HARRELSON

Lake Success, N.Y., Dec. 4 (AP) — Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia, in a conciliatory move, agreed today to accept United States arms-reductions proposals as a basis for discussion and declared that the big-power veto would not apply to any system of controls and inspections in connection with arms limitations.

His statement was hailed immediately by British delegate Sir Hartley Shawcross as an "important concession". Australian delegate Paul Ahsluck said the new Soviet stand opened the way for immediate United Nations action.

Senator Tom Connally, speaking for the United States, said the American delegation welcomed both the Soviet decision to accept the United States plan as a basis for discussion and Mr. Molotov's explanation that the inspection and control system would be free of the veto.

Mr. Molotov told the 54-member political committee of the U. N. Assembly that Russia was ready to withdraw her own proposals in favor of the American plan, but that Russia would press for certain amendments.

On the veto, he said:

"There is need to dispel an obvious misunderstanding which has arisen. The Soviet government is in favor of the Security Council adopting measures to prohibit weapons of mass destruction. Only the principle of unanimity in the council can guarantee the adoption of a reduction of arms. Unanimous action is necessary in adopting regulations on control commissions.

"The question of the principle of unanimity in the Security Council has no relevancy to the work of control. It is wrong to say that any state which has the veto has the power to prevent control and inspection. Any attempt to prevent the implementation of control and inspection would be a violation of the decision of the Security Council. Talk of the veto can be interpreted as an attempt to evade direct answer to the question of reduction of arms."

Mr. Molotov's position thus seemed to be that the veto should apply during the setting up of the inspection and control machinery by the Security Council but that once the machinery was ready to operate the veto would not apply. This is in conformity with the American position that the Security Council should be the agency to set up controls but that the machinery should be independent after it is created.

In announcing the new Soviet position, Mr. Molotov said:

"We are anxious for unanimity. We will not insist on our draft, but will take the American draft as a basis for discussion."

At the same time, Mr. Molotov said he would submit amendments to the United States proposals to remove the Soviet objections.

'Monty' Hopeful Of Lasting Peace

Athens, Greece, Dec. 4—(Reuters) — Viscount Montgomery, speaking yesterday at Athens University, said that conditions would be created for a long and lasting peace, and he firmly believed the United Nations would smooth out their difficulties.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 4—(CP)—Synopsis: Skies are generally overcast throughout most of Ontario this morning and occasional light snow is falling in many districts. A ridge of high pressure extends across Eastern Ontario and the eastern states and is moving eastward which will bring a southerly flow with moderating temperatures by Wednesday noon. A weak low pressure area centred in Saskatchewan will move into Western Ontario by noon today.

McAninch Tells Of Treatment Given In Carefoot Trial

"It would be murder if they put you on a slab for an operation," John McAninch told the jury that Carefoot told him in his office in the fraud action against E. M. Carefoot in the Court of General Sessions before Judge F. S. Lane of Picton at the morning session. Mr. Carefoot was deprived of his licence to practise medicine in Saskatchewan and he has not been allowed to practise in this province.

Mr. McAninch was on the stand practically all of the session and told in detail his ailment and of the methods used to correct the same, the final treatment being an operation for gall stones and bladder trouble and he said, "I have never felt better in 25 years since I have had the operation." He stated that he paid Carefoot $135 for eighteen treatments with the understanding that he could cure him. Carefoot told me that I did not have gall stones and that he would give $1,000 to any charitable institution if an independent X-ray showed that I had gall stones. McAninch stated he showed the X-ray report to Carefoot and he again examined me with a stethoscope and told me my heart was bad and "it would be murder to put me on the table for an operation."

Money Returned.

The witness stated that his money was returned to him after he had complained the treatments were not doing him any good. He told the court his son visited Carefoot but did not take treatments but that he was told he also had an ulcer. "I was being treated for an ulcer which Carefoot said "was as big as a 50-cent piece." McAninch explained the makeup of the machine on which he took treatments and identified the one in court as identical as far as he knew to the one used. He stated that Carefoot told him that the power came into the machine and then was transformed to radio waves that went direct to the spot affected and that the dial on the machine could be set for different diseases. The witness stated that Carefoot showed him where the dial could be set for diabetes, gall stones and cancer.

Dr. McQuade, radiologist of Kingston, stated he took plates of Constable Keays and they did not show any symptoms of cancer.

Malcolm Robb, who is acting for Mr. Carefoot, examined McAninch at length with respect to the machine and elicited the information that Carefoot knew the witness for a year to the time that he visited him and also that Mr. Carefoot had contributed $10 to the C.C.F. campaign in East Hastings in which McAninch was the candidate. Did you know Carefoot was debarred when you first visited him? and McAninch stated that he did because "Carefoot told me."

Before the court was adjourned Judge Lane warned the jurors not to talk to anyone during recesses about the case. "It has been brought to my attention that one of the jurors last night walked down street with a relative of the accused," said Judge Lane. "I say there might be no wrong in this act but I would say don't allow any appearance of wrong."

TWO CONSTABLES ADDED TO O.P.P. STAFF

Two new constables were added this week to the district headquarters staff of the Ontario Provincial Police, it was announced today by Inspector Harry Thompson. The new officers are Constable William S. Moore of Napanee and Constable George W. Stevens, formerly of Brockville.

Both new officers are former army men and as officers of the law are following in the footsteps of their respective fathers. Constable Moore's father is presently chief of police at Napanee, while Constable Steven's father is a veteran of more than 30 years experience with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

TO HOLD DISCUSSION OF PROPOSED BY-LAWS AT PUBLIC MEETING

At a public meeting at the city hall on Friday evening, the question of the by-laws on incinerator purchase and on purchase of land for industrial purposes will be discussed. Mr. C. A. Meadows of Messrs. Meadows, Critoph and Co., professional engineers, who prepared plans and specifications of the incinerator proposed to be built, will speak in regard to this project. Candidates for municipal office who wish will have the opportunity to discuss the by-laws and other matters of public interest.

3 VEHICLES DAMAGED IN COLLISION

Damages of approximately $225 resulted when two trucks and one auto were involved in a three-vehicle collision at the corner of Dundas and Bleecker on Tuesday. No person was injured in the accident.

George E. Foster, 134 Albert street, was driving east on Dundas street when at the Bleecker avenue intersection he stopped after making a part turn to the left. A Smith Transport truck operated by James Vesterfelt of Shannonville was following and crashed into the Foster car pushing it into the path of an oncoming truck driven by Grant Baker, Harvey street.

MEN TEACHERS HOLD ORGANIZATION MEETING

The meeting was addressed by Mr. J. Wood, of Lindsay, Provincial President of the Federation. Mr. Wood outlined the procedure for organization. He also traced the great strides made on behalf of the men teachers since automatic membership was introduced.

District four includes the counties of Prince Edward, Northumberland, Hastings, north, south, and centre. Two visitors from district three were also present.

Mr. Kenneth Bird, principal of Prince of Wales School was elected as district president, Mr. George Wallace, Belleville, district secretary, and Mr. Everett Fairman principal of King George School, Belleville, district representative to the provincial organization.

TWO-WAY FIGHT IN WOLLASTON TWP. FOR REEVESHIP

There will be a two-way fight for the reeveship of Wollaston township in the forthcoming elections, Reeve Lee Gordon of that municipality said today in announcing his retirement from municipal life.

Messrs. R. P. Gunter and C. T. Rollins of Coe Hill have qualified for the reeveship and will contest the seat. The council, consisting of Messrs. Perry Faul, Amos Batchelor, H. G. Lehigh, and Laurence Conlin, was given a collective acclamation.

FIRE FIGHTERS ENJOY CHICKEN BANQUET FOLLOWING CONTEST

It was the barnyard fowl which suffered over the week-end, but certain members of the local fire department are still suffering from varied degrees of over-indulgence following a chicken banquet enjoyed by the fire fighters on Sunday.

The banquet idea was the result of a friendly wager between the younger members of the department and those not so young, as to which were the more proficient at the art of alley bowling. The younger members of the department proved their superiority on the alleys and according to reports, also at the chicken dinner. Losers in the alley competition claimed their opponents "stole" the game, so all chipped in to provide the chicken for the dinner.

Quality in Production Of Cheese Stressed By Professor A. L. Gibson

Importance of quality in the production of cheese milk was stressed to members of the Central Ontario Cheese Producers' Association at their annual convention on Tuesday by Professor A. L. Gibson, Kemptville Agricultural School, gave an address on extraneous matter in cheese.

Milk going into the production of cheese had to be just as high in quality as milk going into any other branch of the industry, he stated. He very strongly emphasized that the most careful attention be given to milk on the farm and in the factory in order that a product could be manufactured to meet the highest pure food standards.

Speaking on the prophesied decline of the cheese branch of the dairy industry, Mr. Gibson declared the cheese factory to be the balance wheel of the dairy industry. Without the cheese factory to absorb the surplus milk other branches of the industry would face ruinous low prices. Yet cheese milk is paid for at prices below that of the nutritional value of its ingredients.

Tribute Paid Makers

Tribute to the service which cheesemakers had given was also paid by the speaker. "Makers," he said, "are discouraged by present conditions, but in sticking to their guns during the war years, had given a valiant service to their country. Unlike other skilled trades, they had not resorted to strikes.

A common footing of equality with regard to remuneration was necessary for the cheese industry, Mr. Gibson concluded. No branch of the dairy industry could prosper at the expense of the cheese producers.

Comments on the quality of cheese shown at the British Empire Dairy Show were made by T. J. Hicks, Senior Dairy Produce Grader, Montreal. He paid tribute to officials responsible for the show and for the benefit of the industry in this part of the province urged that the show be continued.

"If it was worth while during the war years, it is certainly worth while at the present time," he assured.

Attesting to the high quality of the cheese at the exhibition, Mr. Hicks in his reports stated that of the 206 cheese shown, 11.6 scored 98 points or over, while 21.8 per cent scored full points on finish and 11.1 per cent full points on closeness. Fifty three of the cheese, or 25.7 per cent scored 43 points or over for flavor.

1,432,024 Boxes Graded

In presenting his 1946 grading report for the 11-month period of December 1st, 1945, to November 1st, 1946, Mr. Hicks stated there had been 1,432,024 boxes of cheese graded by his department. Of this number 922,367 boxes had been manufactured in Ontario, and 422,983 boxes from Quebec.

Ontario led the way in the manufacture of 1st grade cheese as was shown by the fact that 95.9 per cent of cheese graded had been first grade with 3.93 per cent second grade, 0.15 per cent had been third grade and only 0.02 per cent below third grade.

In Quebec 89.94 per cent had been first grade; 9.64 second grade and 0.36 per cent third grade.

Considerable improvement in the quality of cheese manufactured had been noted since the Cheese Factory Act came into effect in 1934. In that year only 91.96 per cent cheese made was first grade while in 1945 this had increased to 93.80. Ninety six per cent of the cheese manufactured in Ontario in 1945 had been first grade.

Welcomed by Mayor

Mayor Frank S. Follwell tendered an official welcome to cheesemakers and to guests at the convention, while Warden James Nickle of Madoc township also welcomed the guests on behalf of the County of Hastings.

"I am proud indeed," stated Warden Nickle, "that a cheesemaker from the County of Hastings had the honor of winning the grand championship of the dairy show."

Continuing the Warden mentioned the decreased production of cheese this season and felt that dissatisfaction as to price received could be held as greatly responsible for the decrease. "Farmers are asking only for the cost of production," he said, in urging a higher price for cheese milk.

In a brief but inspiring address, Rev. A. M. Laverty of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, stated that the cheesemaker, like the minister, was forced to be something of a diplomat. "This was necessary," he said, "because of the necessity of keeping "everyone happy." He paid tribute to the cheesemakers in that he termed the profession of cheese making "a way of life."

Soldiers Appreciative

In reference to overseas experience as a chaplain during the war, Mr. Laverty told how soldiers appreciated Canadian cheese and how the English people were appreciative of the efforts of Canadian agriculture in providing food for shipment to the United Kingdom.

Establishment of a world peace came in for discussion by the speaker who claimed there were three considerations to keeping a permanent peace. These were, a show of force, equal or greater than that likely to be used against a nation. All peace must be established on justice which if to succeed must have vision.

TRENTON

Fifty-Five Cases In Police Court

Trenton—Fifty-five cases were heard in Trenton police court on Tuesday afternoon before Magistrate T. P. Wills.

Roy A. Knight of Owen Sound, Ont., and Carl S. Badgley, Trenton, were charged jointly with the theft of an overcoat from the C.P.R. dance hall while attending a dance. They were both found guilty and received one year suspended sentence, after signing bond and paying costs of court of $5.75.

Ivan Stewart, Trenton, appeared on a charge of assaulting a police officer. He will appear again on December 10th.

John Anderson charged under the Special Fishery Act had his case dismissed by the Magistrate on the evidence. The following persons also charged for infractions of the same act were each fined $12.50, namely, Phillip McKee, Kenneth Kaitel, S. E. Newman and Gerald Radway, all of Trenton. The charges were laid by Fred W. McDonald, Point Anne, Game Warden.

Cases Enlarged.

George Henry Webb, Water Street, and Gordon Anderson, Front Street, appeared on a charge of breaking, entering and theft. They were alleged to have taken valuable racing pigeons from a local pigeon loft. Their cases were enlarged to December 17th.

George Towns of Front Street appeared before the Magistrate on seven charges of false pretenses (worthless cheques). These included charges from Belleville and Trenton. His case was enlarged to December 17th.

Albert Clairmont of Trenton, charged with obstructing a game warden, was fined $100 and costs of $5.50.

W. H. Clarke, charged with the theft of a man's suit from DeLuxe Cleaners, had his case enlarged to December 10th., after pleading guilty to the charge.

Sam Carr of Frankford appeared on a charge of assaulting his wife. He will appear again on December 10th.

Fined for Infractions.

For infractions of the Liquor Control Act, the following persons were each fined $13, namely Stanley Ketcheson, Hilton McKinnon, Leonard E. Sanders.

Eugene Foshee of Trenton, charged with being intoxicated, was sentenced to 10 days in the county jail. Foshee was also charged with fraud and will appear on December 10th.

Fines were imposed on the following persons under the Highway Traffic Act, namely, Clinton Cooney, $12.50; Hernard Herns, $4.50, and Donald Phibbs, $4.50.

Firemen received a call on Tuesday evening from the home of Mrs. Christy, McGill Street, where ashes thrown out at the back had caught fire to the back porch. The blaze was soon extinguished but not before about $25 worth of damage was done.

Cheese Marking Device on View At Dairy Show

Members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association at their annual convention being held in the Hotel Quinte on Tuesday afternoon were given a demonstration of the new cheese marking device designed by J. F. Singleton which marks the cheese in such a way that it does not lose its identity as Canadian cheese on the British market.

The device which is in the form of a stencil marks the word "Canada" on the cheese 58 times, the stamp being so constructed that regardless of how many pieces a 90-pound cheese is cut, the name will still appear on the rind.

The marking device is in the form of a table on which the "Canada" stencil is fixed. The stencil is of a length to conform with the circumference of the cheese. The date of manufacture, the registered number and the vat number of the cheese is fixed in the middle of the stencil. All markings are thus placed simply by rolling the newly pressed cheese over the stencil table.

Saw Car Swerving Before Accident Witness Testifies

Cobourg, Ont., Dec. 4 — (CP) —Malcolm Burd of Cobourg today testified that he saw an automobile driven by Judge J. C. M. German of Cobourg swerve from side to side on a roadway several times before it struck Mrs. Jeanne Taylor on the outskirts of Cobourg last Sept. 3.

Burd gave evidence as a Crown witness at the second day of the trial of Judge German on charges of drunken driving and dangerous driving.

"I was rounding the turn at William Street when a car swooped around me with the driver looking as if he was tied to the wheel," said Burd. "It swerved from side to side, raising the dust on each side as it went.

"The lights on the level crossing were flashing and I thought he would be cut in two by a train but nothing happened. After the car went over the level crossing, it swerved about three times before it struck the woman. He had swerved nine times from the William Street corner to where he struck the woman.

"I saw the man get out of his car and when I went back he was holding her hand, trying to get her to get up but she said she couldn't move

"He said to her, 'You should not have been on the road,' and she replied, 'I wasn't on the road, you came right at me.'

" 'I guess you are right,' he replied.

"Later I found out he was Judge German."

Smelled Liquor

Cobourg, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Mrs. Jeanne Taylor gave evidence yesterday in a special court session held at Cobourg General Hospital in connection with the trial of Judge J. C. M. German, charged with drunk and dangerous driving. His automobile allegedly hit Mrs. Taylor on the highway near here Sept. 3.

Judge German did not appear in court. His counsel, Arthur Greer, told the court that the Judge, acutely ill from influenza, had left a sick-bed in order to attend court Monday but had suffered a relapse during the night and had been ordered by his doctors to remain in bed. However, the Judge was anxious not to hold up the court and wished the trial to proceed.

Mrs. Taylor was propped in bed in the hospital sun room, where she gave her evidence in the presence of Judge E. A. Wright and the jury. Crown and defence counsel were also present. A nurse stood by Mrs. Taylor's bedside.

Walking on Road

In her evidence the injured woman, who spoke in a loud clear voice, said she and her daughter were walking on the side of the road on their way to visit her husband, working at the Cobourg Transport office.

"... All of a sudden we saw a car coming up the wrong side of the road," Mrs. Taylor said. "I thought it was going into the dye works when it switched suddenly right in front and came over and the first thing I knew I was knocked down...

"A man came over and asked me if I was hurt. He took hold of my hand and started to rub it. He said he would help me to his car if I could get up, but I couldn't move.

"I told him I could smell liquor off his breath. He said 'Yes I had a few drinks.' He also said he was Judge German and I said I did not care who he was, except he was the man who hit me."

James Quigley, who was walking on the highway at the time of the accident testified that after the accident Judge German staggered about the pavement.

However, in answer to a defence question Quigley said from his observation he could not say Judge German was drunk.

The trial is continuing.

Commission Approves Turning On of Colored Lights on City Streets for Christmas Season

A lengthy interruption of power on a rural line extending up No. 2 highway to the Trenton Air Station and north to Roslin occurred on Monday night when a large transformer burned out, the manager of the Public Utilities Commission told the members of the Commission at their meeting on Tuesday afternoon. The power was turned on latter on Monday night but it was off practically all Tuesday afternoon when the burned-out transformer was replaced by three smaller ones. A number of resolutions were dealt with at the meeting and action taken on all of them.

It was approved by the Commission that the colored street lights could be turned on in answer to a query from the City Council, as there was power available and that the Commission would turn the lights on when requested. Mr. Scott stated that the lights should be turned on about seven o'clock in the evening when the peak load has passed. Asked by the reporter as to the cost to the city Mr. Scott stated that the power cost would be about $60 plus the cost of a few repairs and the turning of the lights on and off. He stated the cost should not exceed $100.

Asked to Remove Trees

Another resolution from the city council asking that the hydro poles could not go back to the It's Elbow, the Commission moved that this be done providing the city will remove the trees in that area. Mr. Scott stated that the poles could no go back to the street from the Wrightmeyer property to the bend of Highland Avenue unless the trees were removed. It was authorized for the manager to proceed with the repair of the roof over the purifier at the gas plant at a price not to exceed $330. "This work is a necessity" said the manager, "because the roof is leaking in many places.

Township Must Lay Main

Thurlow Township council petitioned the Utilities Commission for temporary water services to the Direct Winter Transport Company, who are erecting a warehouse on Cannifton Road. The council will be notified that if the township will lay the six-inch main required the Utilities will supply the water. Another request for water on Bridge Street East will be dealt with in the same manner.

At a special meeting of the Commission it was decided that no appeal against the assessment of property would be registered and that a refund of $3,415.77 will be paid to the city for street lighting. There being no further business the meeting adjourned. Chairman Morley Duff and Commissioner Russell Wotten were in attendance.

Warden Praises Hastings County Representatives Who Won Honors At British Empire Dairy Show

December Session of County Council Has Heavy Agenda Before Members

With one of the largest agendas in some time to be dealt with, the Hastings County Council opened its regular December four-day session in Shire Hall, yesterday afternoon with the Warden James A. Nickle in the chair.

Due to the fact that the Warden was a guest at a British Empire Cheese banquet along with other members of the council, the opening session was brief.

In his remarks to his council, Warden Nickle reviewed the activities of the year, insofar as the county was concerned and speaking from an agricultural point of view, for "after all I am a farmer", he regretted the fact that the season crops, had been only fair and the commodities for which Hastings County had an enviable reputation in productivity, such as cheese and other dairy products had fallen below the usual mark.

"However," he said, "I think the farmers of this county did the best they could under the circumstances, especially in view of the fact that prices were not too encouraging.

With reference to the cheese producers of the county, the warden stated that in his opinion "there is no other industry in any county that is asking only the cost of production. "He hoped," he said, "that something of a definite nature along these lines would be forthcoming so that farmers and cheese producers will know what they will get so they can ready their herds and equipment for next year's activities.

Thanked For Co-operation

The warden thanked the committee of his council for the fine co-operation afforded him during the year. "You have stayed within your appropriation limits, and are to be commended for this."

He paid special tribute to the Hastings County representatives who had brought signal honor to their county by their fine exhibits in the recent Royal Winter Fair. Warden Nickle also stressed the fact that a Hastings County cheesemaker had won the British Empire Dairy Show cheese championship, the first ever won by Eastern Ontario, perhaps in the history of the exhibition.

"We as a county council collectively, and as farmers and residents of the county individually, should be proud of the exploits of these men. They have brought honor not only to themselves but to the county they represent and to us who represent the county. We are definitely proud of their achievements and sincerely hope they will repeat again next year. I join with you in extending to them out heartiest congratulations."

In conclusion, the warden said: "I know without asking that again this session I will get the same fine co-operation from members of this council that I have received during the past year. This is the last session of the year and I would like to finish the annual business in the same fine co-operative manner that has characterized your efforts with me during 1946."

He extended an invitation to the dinner which was given at the Y.M.C.A. later in the evening.

Sprayer Advocated

W. H. Tanner, first county weed inspector appointed under new municipal regulations last year submitted his report to council in a body.

"There was so much brush and weeds by county roadsides," Mr. Tanner said, "that I earnestly recommend that this county purchase a sprayer next year to facilitate the elimination of weeds in this county."

Inspector Tanner warned council that the Department was "slapping down hard on all counties in this respect" and added that the government would subsidize the county 50% in the purchase of such equipment."

Ken Fallis, District Weed Inspector, told council that the appointment of county weed inspectors was a move in the right direction. By these men, he said, the Department was brought into closer contact with the weed problems in every county. In Hastings County, he went on, a great deal more had been accomplished in the elimination of weeds, generally, than has been done heretofore, through the offices of a county weed inspector.

It was not his department's policy, Mr. Fallis said, to put municipalities to the expense of wholesale cutting of weeds to the fences. It was recommended in some cases but, apart from the department's policy of roadside cutting, the remainder was left to how much the municipality could afford.

The sprayer, Mr. Fallis felt, was at the present time, the only effective and economical system of controlling and eliminating weeds "to the fence".

Spraying Only Answer

"Spraying will control all roadside weeds and brush," he said, "but do not limit this action to one spraying alone."

The new spray "2-4-D" will account for a large percentage of such weeds as wild carrot, chicory, and others of that ilk, but it needs continued applications to do a good job."

Hastings County, he said, was not cursed too much with these weeds but, within the next two years, it has a golden opportunity to rid itself of these obnoxious parasites.

In conclusion, Mr. Fallis told the council that in all counties where county inspectors had been appointed, a definite improvement in weed eliminations had been noted. He urged the council, that in view of the services of the county weed inspector, that he be retained in 1947 in a similar capacity.

AUTHOR BELIEVES FAULTY SECURITY DELAYED WAR END

Col. R. S. Malone in "Missing From the Record" Says Canadians Could Have Missed Months of War

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Had it not been for security going wrong somewhere, or perhaps the Italians broke faith, the Canadians would never have had those heart-breaking months of fighting in Italy, writes Col. R. S. (Dick) Malone of Winnipeg.

A former Canadian liaison officer on the staff of Field Marshal Montgomery, Col. Malone brings this out in his book "Missing From the Record" (Collins) and says the plans was to use the 1st. Canadian Division for "limited operations only" and then send all Canadians back to join the First Canadian Army in England for the frontal attack on Europe.

The Italians sued for peace several days before the assault on Italy and the plan was that the Canadians and some British troops attacking the toe of Italy would draw the Germans down there while the main assault by Americans went in later at Salerno for a thrust across Italy to seal the Germans off.

"Whether the German Intelligence was too good or whether the Italians broke faith and tipped the Germans off it is hard to say but the Germans knew that Reggio was not the main assault," writes Col. Malone.

With the element of surprise lost the Americans met much heavier opposition at Salerno than was expected, were largely rescued by the small handful of men "Monty" had under his command in Italy and then the Allies were committed to the painful months-long march up the Italian boot while the enemy fought a delaying action.

Fateful Announcement.

As to the Second Front, Col. Malone goes back to the first week of September, in 1944 when the Allied Communique carried an announcement so small it escaped any great attention, but to the author it was one of the most fateful of the war. It was word that the great "Monty" had been let out of his job as commander of all Allied land forces on the Western Front.

In "Missing From The Record," Col. Malone holds that relieving Field Marshal Montgomery of his over-all land command at that time was, in effect, a prolongation of the war which otherwise might well have been won before 1944 ended.

In the view of the author, the reason for relieving Montgomery was that victory seemed not only assured but reasonably close and in Washington were those who did not want a British general in command of all Allied armies when surrender came.

At the time the Allies were moving on Germany proper and the Arnhem airborne operation was still to come.

Col. Malone holds that at Arnhem the war could have been won but wasn't because, having been relieved of his over-all command, Montgomery did not have the use of American divisions which could have made Arnhem a success.

Pleaded with Eisenhower

Col. Malone, a newspaper executive now with the Winnipeg Free Press which he left to go to the war, says Monty pleaded with General Eisenhower for the loan of a few American divisions to complete the Arnhem job "but was turned down."

"Missing From the Record," which takes you behind the scenes for intimate glimpses of Montgomery, relates that General A. G. L. McNaughton had to step down from command of the Canadian Army solely because the British did not think he would be a good army commander under battle conditions. But they left to Defence Minister Ralston the task of telling the Canadian Army commander.

The stories of Gen. McNaughton's step-down and Montgomery being relieved of his command have previously been published in magazine excerpts from Col. Malone's book.

As to Col. Ralston's own resignation from the cabinet late in 1944, the author says "the facts of the matter are that Col. Ralston was asked to leave .. the break took place verbally in the middle of one of the cabinet meetings."

Insisted on Conscription.

Basis for it was Col. Ralston's insistence on conscription to fill gaps in the reinforcement ranks which he discovered on a trip to the battle zones.

"Ralston decided he could not in his conscience permit the issue to drag a day longer. He got up from his seat and left the room." Angus Macdonald made a move to leave with Col. Ralston but was pulled down "by the coat tails" by a colleague. Later Col. Ralston himself persuaded him to continue as navy minister.

Col. Malone helped plan the Sicily invasion and reveals that a small group of Canadian engineers entered the Mediterranean in a British submarine to try and learn the depth of water through which landing vessels would have to run over a bar to make land. They got ashore and got their information but were captured. Even then the Italians never tumbled to what they were there for because the attack came as a complete surprise.

About the depth of water? Well, Malone says, the planners finally found that out from pictures. Army experts looked at photos showing the size of the waves at this place and estimated to the very inch that the water was four feet six inches deep over the bar.

Charge Negro Pastor Carried Revolver In Church Meeting

Bath, N.Y., Dec. 4 — (AP) — A Negro pastor from Corning, N.Y., was free on $2,500 bail today on charges of carrying and use of a dangerous weapon in connection with a shot fired at a church "peace meeting."

Rev. Samuel Day, 28, pastor of the Friendship Negro Baptist Church, waived examination when arraigned before Steuben county judge George A. King yesterday.

Police said the minister said he took a .22 calibre revolver from a brief-case after fighting broke out Saturday in a congregational meeting which members said had been called to settle dissension among the church members.

Police said the gun was discharged as the pastor and a church member grappled and police attempted to quell a general melee. The bullet lodged in the ceiling.

New Zealand Fights Severe Soil Erosion

Wellington, N.Z., Dec. 2 (CP)— War on a huge scale is to be waged in New Zealand against soil erosion which already has caused drastic losses to farm lands.

The measures planned include the planting of 1,000,000 acres of trees on New Zealand farms and the consolidation of vast areas of Crown and unfarmed lands into national parks where scientific steps to check erosion will be taken.

In the highlands of the South Island nearly 3,000,000 acres of grazing land have lost 25 to 50 per cent of the topsoil through erosion and over a further 2,200,000 acres more than 50 per cent already has been lost. These figures do not include severe losses of soil on cropped downlands and plains by wind erosion.

Highly productive sheep and cattle country on the east coast of the North Island also is severely eroded. The country consists chiefly of small but steep hills which did not erode in their natural state, but when the forest growth was cleared and replaced by grass the country did not hold.

Hundreds of slips and landslides appeared and the topsoil was washed down into the rivers and out to sea. On the west coast of the North Island also large areas of high-rainfall dairy country have been virtually abandoned because of extreme erosion.

A major project in the soil conservation program will be recuperative treatment of 8,000,000 acres of high country in the South Island.

This will be achieved by tree planting, fire control, spelling, seeding, fencing and subsequent control of grazing to within reasonable limits. A similar conservation program will be undertaken over several million acres of hill country in the North Island.

Protest Turkey Price Ceiling

Schomberg, Ont., Dec. 4—(CP) —Schomberg Turkey Association today forwarded a resolution to the Dominion government protesting as "unfair" the wholesale price ceiling on turkeys.

The Association, which this year raised 40,000 turkeys, claimed the work entailed in plucking, weighing, grading and parcelling the birds is too vast for the price the rancher receives.

19-OUNCE BABY WELL

Detroit, Dec. 4 — (CP) — A 19-ounce boy, born three months prematurely was doing fine in a hospital incubator today after a 60-mile-an-hour ride in a police car through rush-hour traffic.

Police said Mrs. Elmer Baker fell in her home yesterday and was taken by her husband to a doctor's office where the baby was born. The doctor put in an emergency call to police. Six minutes later after two policemen arrived the baby was in hospital— six miles away.

Momentous Flight

There has just taken place one of the air flights that will make history. It is the flight of the plane with Lord Wavell, Viceroy of India and the Indian leaders who flew to London to hold conference there on the momentous issues which are before India and London today.

So much has the plane entered into the life of the day that it is used as the vehicle of diplomats and plenipotentiaries. It consumes space and saves time. Without it a conference in London so far away from India would have meant weeks of travel. Now it becomes but a matter of hours.

Commenting on the parleys which have opened, the New York Times remarks that on the London-bound plane were Viscount Wavell, Pandit Nehru, Mr. Jinnah, Liaquat Ali Khan, Moslem Finance Minister in the interim cabinet, and Sadar Baldev Singh, Sikh Defence Minister, and adds, "in all previous negotiations the opposing leaders have never been so long together. It is possible and devoutly to be hoped that some of their differences may have been adjusted on the flight.

That is one thing the plane has been able to achieve. Men can now meet and decide matters of the highest destiny for millions on a plane flight. In this instance possibly the long thousands of miles from Karachi to London so swiftly covered may in the very fact that distance has brought the Viceroy and the leaders together even for the brief space of the trip over a great part of the earth, be able to show the result of this intimate contact made possible by reason of all travelling in the one plane.

The Times notes that "in London they will be on a world stage, removed from the narrow limits of parochial politics and party rivalry."

How brief is the time of the conference on so great a mission, is gathered from the fact that these men now in London will return to India leaving on Thursday. The very brevity of time may aid in getting to the solution on the problems of the Empire of India. So the flight becomes a memorable one. It is freighted with untold importance.

Church Anniversaries

Credit must be given the churches for the attention they give to the passage of time. They hold anniversaries marking the foundation of these great institutions which have grown out of a sound and staunch people of years ago. The years they number are years which often date beyond a century and tracing their roots takes one back into the early pioneer settlements in many cases, to a time when there were not the conveniences of travel there are to be had today.

These anniversaries are invaluable for they point out the vitality of the religious spirit in the hearts of the people and the stout character of the founders whose inspiration has carried on decades, generations and a century or more after they have served their day and generation and passed to their reward. These occasions are times when the modern congregations are prayerfully proud of their ancestry who endured much to establish these religious institutions and shrines for themselves and their families and for the good of the community for the long years to come after them.

The vitality of these congregations is encouraging to this age. They keep step with the march of time for their message is of no one age but of all time. The loyalty of modern-day congregations to their historic religious institutions is surely a source of inspiration and each age bears its share and lends its aid to the widening of the influence of these bodies as the population grows.

Members and adherents of church congregations while carrying on the tradition of their churches and facing the impact of new generations and new times and world problems, must realize the richness of the blessing which has come to them from their ancestors who founded so many churches in the long ago. These ancestors cannot be too often remembered and praised for the foundation work they laid. No small credit for the spirit of modern Canada is due to these forbears who were the builders of churches and schools.

This country has moved from a more primitive state of society since many of the congregations were organized but the churches sound the changeless message of truth.

The late autumn season has been marked by many of these inspirational anniversaries which are occasions of thanksgiving and of spiritual stocktaking by the members which is good for everyone. Understanding their debt to their ancestors the members realize the obligation upon them to carry on the labors for the future.

False Vocabulary Of Crime

One of the influences that go to the making of criminals is the haze of glamor and romance which writers tend to throw about crime. Words are used—nouns and adjectives—which suggest that the bad man is a brave and exciting personality.

He is probably a mean and sordid thief, but he is called a bandit or a tough or a rodman or a gangster, and emphasis is laid on his courage and resourcefulness. The result is that, to the immature mind, he becomes a hero.

If the criminal were only described as what he is—a fool, an idiot, a moron, a dunce, a simpleton, a blockhead—one who never reaps anything but grief from his illicit efforts—there would be less tendency on the part of Youth to emulate him. Youth does not like to be made an object of ridicule. So opines the Vancouver Province, which quotes a good example of that contention.

Recently a so-called tough man told a New York court how tough he was. He had been crippled for life by a police bullet and he looked anything but his name, which was "Tough Tony."

"I am supposed to be Tough Tony," he told the court. "I wish every kid in Brooklyn could be brought in here to look at me. They would learn a greater lesson than they could learn from any book."

Tony had discovered that he was not really tough. He knew he was only pathetically foolish and ignorant. The unfortunate thing about it is that he discovered the truth about himself too late.

Christmas Trees

A warning from Nova Scotia about the inroads being made on the supply of evergreen trees for the Christmas tree trade is worth noting in this and other provinces in the interests of forest conservation. The business has grown to such proportions that a far-sighted American buyer fears for the future supply. The danger apparently lies in the growing practice of cutting very small trees for table decorations, with the result that a carload may now consist of between 2,500 and 5,000 of these small trees instead of the 1,500 of the larger size that earlier markets called for.

It is not an altogether easy matter to regulate, since young evergreens suitable for the Christmas trade are now a worthwhile item to owners of bushlots, and especially to settlers to whom any cash crop is of importance. Cut at a fair size and with due regard to the thinning of existing stands of small trees, a substantial export business can be maintained without harm to future full-growth cutting. Regulations now limit the butt-size of trees cut for other purposes on controlled lands, and the suggestion now made that the proportion of Christmas trees cut under five feet high be limited to five percent seems a wise one. There is a limit to the supply, even in Canada.

War's Tragedy For Mothers

The tragedy of a mother who loses a son in war almost goes beyond the power of words to express.

An English mother, visiting France with others who had gone overseas to see their sons' graves, aroused the pity of the people in a small hamlet near the Belgian border. She was in a mental daze. She could not tell where she was. Her memory had been lost.

Her condition speaks volumes about the tragedy of war. But there is a footnote to the story that tells ever more. A French war mother, seeing her, came forward to greet her, noticed her condition and turned away, murmuring, "Why can't I be like that?"

What could express more terribly the suffering that war brings to mothers? Guelph Mercury asks.

THE PRESENT PROBLEM

All the problems that we face
In a world gone mad,
Let this happier one replace:
"What to get for dad?"

Now the Soviet dismiss,
And forget Japan,
While the women ponder this:
"What to get a man?"

Christmas Day is drawing near.
In this troubled life
Comes the problem of the year:
"What to get the wife?"

Atwood Cheese Assoc. Defies Govt. Order

Atwood, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP)—"We have defied the government order by buying cheese," John Ballantyne, President of the Atwood District Cheese Association yesterday told the Association's annual meeting.

Referring to the government order requisitioning all cheddar cheese for the British market, Mr. Ballantyne said Ontario Cheese Producers Association had recently invested funds in buying cheese.

"We now are holding it in storage," he said. "We haven't tried to sell any yet. If the dairy commissioner tells us to put it into a processing plant, well it's not going that's all there is to it. We're making cheddar cheese and we might as well be selling cheddar cheese."

District cheesemakers are purchasing the cheese to place it on the domestic market for more money. The output has been under contract to the United Kingdom for 20 cents a pound which the Association claims is too low considering that Britain is buying similar produce in the United States for 32 cents a pound.

Cheese bought by the Association gains in value while aging in storage.

The Atwood Association represents 2,000 cheese producers which supply 35 cheese factories in Perth, Huron, Bruce and Grey counties.

Mr. Ballantyne was re-elected district president for the sixth consecutive term.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

A GOOD FRIEND OF THE FAMILY

A teen-age reader, asking for advice about a personal problem, makes two mistakes. First, the reader gives no name, and second the reader tells me:

"I cannot go to the family doctor about this, because our family doctor died recently and besides I could never tell him about it as he was a good friend of the family."

The first mistake is unimportant—perhaps the reader would rather not receive a letter from me anyway. But in any case it is hardly possible for me to answer in this column a querry so personal or so confidential that it can't be answered by letter. I have endeavored to do so in some instance in the past but I doubt if that is worth while. The best I can do for you as a correspondent in any circumstance is to send a reply, the best reply I can make, to your letter by mail — provided you inclose with your question or request a stamped envelope bearing your address. Incidentally I want to reassure everybody that I have never revealed the identity of a correspondent without first having obtained that correspondent's written consent.

The teen-age correspondent is grievously wrong about the family doctor. Of course the family doctor is a good friend of the family—otherwise he is not fit to be the family doctor.

But no matter whether it is the family doctor or a doctor who does not know you or your family at all, if the doctor is a reputable one, a real Doctor of Medicine, anything you may tell the doctor in the consulting room, in the sick room, or when you give the doctor the information in order to get his professional opinion or advice, is as sacredly confidential as a communication to any other person can be.

As in most such instances the problem of this teen-age correspondent is not nearly so serious or so difficult to solve as the correspondent seems to think. The sooner it is submitted to the doctor the easier it will be to solve it.

This secrecy is imposed upon the doctor not only by the law of the land but by medical ethics and the Hippocratic oath — part of the oath being as follows:

"Whatever in connection with my professional with it, I see or hear, in the life of men, which ought not to be spoken of abroad, I will not divulge, as reckoning that all such should be kept secret."

I recall having under treatment a man for something he wanted no one to know he had, which was referred to as his old malaria, and at the same time having under treatment his wife for something she didn't want her husband to know she had, which was referred to as her gallbladder trouble. Neither knew the other was under my treatment—until one day one patient, leaving the office, ran smack-bang into the other coming in. Thereafter two of my best patients never consulted me again, darn it, although they went on living more or less happily together long after they left me.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Eggs

I eat one or two eggs a day. As I am past middle age I wonder whether it is all right to do so.

(Mrs. E. M. L.)

Answer—Eggs cooked as you prefer are excellent food for anybody, young or old.

Blue Eyes

You stated all babies are born with brown eyes (R. S.)

Answer—All babies are born with "blue" eyes, and the eyes become "grey," "brown" or "black" in four to six weeks, depending on the amount of pigment deposited in the irises (color rings around central dark pupils). The actual color of all human eyes is brown—in all races that is the color of the pigment in eyes, hair, skin, if it is examined under microscope.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is hunger referred to as the wolf at the door?

The wolf has the reputation of being ravenous and voracious, and in England since Anglo-Saxon times danger, hunger, starvation and poverty have been known as "the wolf at the door." Apparently the earliest form of the phrase was "keeping the wolf from the gate" and it gradually came to mean danger of any kind. By the 17th century "keeping the wolf from the door" was already a common expression and it had acquired the present specific meaning of keeping away hunger and want or warding off starvation.

A species of large wolf was once common in the British Isles and in western Europe. It is believed to have become extinct in England and Wales in the 16th century, in Scotland in the 17th and in Ireland in the 18th.

A voracious person is said to have a wolf in his stomach, and one who eats ravenously is accused of "wolfing" his food. In German "Wolfsmagen" signifies a sharp appetite, and in French "manger comme un loup," to eat like a wolf," means to devour food voraciously.

Thop roverbial voracity of this animal is frequently referred to in the King James Version of the Bible and in Shakespeare. Genesis 49:27 says, "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf," and in Matthew 7:15 Jesus is quoted as saying, "Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves." In "The Merchant of Venice" Gratiano tells Shylock that his desires "are wolfish, bloody, starv'd and ravenous"; in "Troilus and Cressida" Ulysses refers to appetite as a "universal wolf", and in "Timon of Athens" the embittered Athenian lord tells the churlish philosopher Apemantus that if he were a wolf his "greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner."

Although the ferocity of the European wolf has been greatly exaggerated in folklore and literature, this animal apparently did occasionally, when hungry, attack children and even adults. When wolves were numerous in Britain there was real danger from a hungry wolf hanging about a home in the hope of seizing a fowl, a domestic animal or even a child. January, the time when wolves were most likely to be hungry and therefore dangerous, was called "Wolfmonth" by the Anglo-Saxons.

The reputation of the wolf was so bad that for thousands of years man was prejudiced against its descendant, the dog. With few exceptions, whenever the dog is mentioned in the Bible and in Shakespeare, it is referred to unfavorably.

Libel Suit May Cost Prof. Laski $60,000

London, Dec. 3 —(Reuters)—Costs in the unsuccessful libel action brought by Prof. Harold Laski against the Newark (Nottinghamshire) Publishing Company may run as high as £15,000 ($60,000), it was estimated today.

A High Court jury yesterday found against Prof. Laski, former chairman of the Labor party, and he was ordered to pay the costs of the action.

Prof. Laski charged that the Newark Weekly Advertiser had quoted him as saying in a political speech at Newark in 1945 that he was in favor of revolutionary methods of gaining power.

Prof. Laski has not yet decided whether to appeal the High Court's verdict.

FLAME THROWER USED

London, Dec. 4 (CP)—Workmen making emergency repairs in front of the City Hall yesterday were getting nowhere with the frost-soaked asphalt until one of them thought of the flame thrower used to kill weeds last summer. It softened the stubborn asphalt quickly and the job was finished in a few hours.

Brentwood, Essex, England — (CP) — Her wish fulfilled, Mrs. Harriett Rainbird died at 107. All through the war she said she would "live to see Hitler dead."

Have you noticed how many times recently when you drive into a service station you are addressed as "Sir" by the young attendant. Perhaps it never struck you as unusual but it started us to thinking.

In nine cases out of ten the attendant who so addressed you was a member of the armed forces who learned discipline and respect for his officers on the parade square. He is too recently out of the forces to have forgotten the hard-learned lessons. That is the reason he addressed you as "Sir."

This form of address is a respectful one carried down from the days when he replied to remarks or orders addressed to him by his superiors. It is a pleasant change from the days when harassed attendants barked at customers who came to accept their take it or leave it attitude.

It is to be hoped the practice will continue as it is a mark of courtesy which will win friends for the business for whom the veteran works.

FLOODS CAUSE THREAT OF FAMINE

Belgrade, Dec. 4 — (Reuters)—Reports from Tirana, capital of Albania, today said that Albania will be threatened with famine this winter owing to large scale floods which have destroyed more than 60 per cent of all farmland and caused more than $4,000,000 worth of damage.

Colleagues in County Council Present Warden and Mrs. Nickle With Silver Tea, Coffee Service

Warden's Banquet at "Y" Represents Cross-Section of City and County Life

Signal tribute was paid Warden James A. Nickle of Hastings County and Mrs. Nickle by members of the County Council in the Y.M.C.A. Tuesday night when at the annual Warden's Dinner they presented them with a handsome sterling silver tea and coffee set in recognition of Warden Nickle's services to his county during 1946.

The presentation as made before 125 county councillors, city officials and other guests who formed a representative cross-section of city and county life by Reeve George West of Madoc and Reeve James Moore of Elzevir. The tea and coffee set mounted on a beautiful dark blue plate glass base was accepted by a surprised Warden and his wife, while cheers rang through the dining hall.

"I present this gift to you and Mrs. Nickle, sir," said Reeve West," as a small token of your council's appreciation of your services to Hastings County, Ontario and the Dominion in the high office you have held during 1946."

Warden Nickle expressed his delight and appreciation of the handsome gift and Mrs. Nickle in a gracious manner likewise voiced her thanks to the assembled councillors and guests. The banquet was served by members of the Tabernacle United Church choir under Mrs. Morley P. Duff.

Extends Official Welcome.

In his remarks to his guests at the opening of the function, Warden Nickle after extending an official welcome voiced his pride in the achievements of county residents in both the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, and in the British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition. "I am a very proud man today," he said, "and I voice the sincere congratulations of this council to those who have brought signal honor to this county by their efforts in agriculture and the cheese industry. I am proud of Horace Palmer, of Foxboro, and also of his instructor, Mr. George Pollard."

"It has been a wonderful year for me, and I shall always cherish memories of my wardenship in this county. I have had the closest co-operation of my council and have enjoyed the work with the committees and also the warm and close co-operation between the county and the city of Belleville. Together they are doing a great work for this district," the Warden said.

Reeve Sam Nicholson, Sidney Township, responding to the toast to the Warden paid tribute to the Warden and Mrs. Nickle. "You, sir," he said, "have filled the office of the warden with honor and you are a credit to this council and the county. I am proud to have been associated with you for you have acquitted yourself nobly. On behalf of the County Council I extend to you and Mrs. Nickle our heartfelt wishes for many years of happiness to come."

Tributes to the Warden were also paid by Elmer Sandercock, superintendent of the Hastings County Home and others. Community singing at this point was led by Mr. Ed Shortt of the Y.M.C.A. with Mr. Leo Riggs at the piano.

Must Not Neglect Youth.

Reeve Charles Rush briefly proposed the toast to the Dominion of Canada reviewing its vast resources and opportunities for those who are willing to work and help develop the country. Mr. George S. White, M.P., Hastings-Peterborough, spoke of the duty of the country to its youth. "It is the Dominion's responsibility to look after its young men," he said. "All the youth of this country ever wanted was the opportunity to share what they have created and built. It was a tragedy that only war afforded them this. The state of tomorrow is the youth of today and any state that neglects its youth invites chaos."

"We need a nation of Canadians who can take advantage of the opportunities offered them and who will not lean on the state. We must carry our own weight in our communities and it is our responsibility to so equip our youth so that they will be a greater asset than our fertile acres and mines and fisheries," Mr. White said.

Toast To Province

George H. Stokes, M.P., Hastings South also responded to the toast to the Dominion reviewing the vast work being done that is placing Canada in the forefront of the nations of today.

Proposing the toast to the Province of Ontario, Reeve W. J. Davis, Wicklow, Bangor and McClure also stressed the importance of youth training in the program of today. He urged the development of young men along farmer lines and stated that they should be taught to live from the ground. He emphasized the importance of education to the youth of rural communities deploring the fact that so many young men are leaving the farm for urban pursuits.

Roscoe Robson, M.L.A., responding, said that Ontario was the finest province in the Dominion and provided half the wealth of this great country, much credit of which goes to its counties. "Each county striving for the best in its own line of production," he said, "makes for a better Ontario. We have the best men here in the Dominion and that is the main reason for Ontario's greatness."

Ex Alderman E. E. Follwell, representing the City of Belleville in the absence of Mayor Frank Follwell told the assemblage that the city was proud to be the county town of so great a county as Hastings in the banner province of the greatest country in the world. "Together," he said, "the city and county will march forward to even greater things because of the fine co-operation that exists between them."

He paid tribute to the calibre of the men who represent the county, and pointed out the great honor brought to Hastings by Mr. Horace Palmer in winning the championship of the Cheese Exhibition. "We in the city bask in the county's glory at these achievements and we are just as proud of these men as you are."

Proud of Ontario

Ontario has produced one dollar for every two produced in other provinces of the Dominion, J. Fred Wilson, M.L.A., said, reminding his listeners that municipal business was big business. "Our hydro is the cheapest in the world and we have 52,000 miles of fine highways. We should be justly proud of Ontario, and I predict she will make great strides and it is up to us to set an example to the rest of the Dominion by practising the 'Golden Rule' in everything we do."

Reeve Ken Vivian, Tyendinaga proposing the toast to the County of Hastings outlined its advantages and hoped that the existing co-operation between city and county would always remain. "We both realize that neither can go forward without the other." He paid tribute to the leadership of Warden Nickle

Reeve William West, Stirling recalled the heroic efforts of the sons and daughters of Hastings in the recent war, and also paid tribute to the fine job done here on the "home front" in production. He was proud of the dairy industry and also paid tribute to Hastings producers in recent exhibitions and shows.

Toast to Guests

The toast to the guests was proposed by Deputy Reeve Harry Harrison of Thurlow and responded to by C. L. Jewell, of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here and Colonel Roscoe Vanderwater. Ex-Mayor Harry Rollins said that he cherished the fellowship that existed between city and county officials. "These men work hard and play hard but they also work with dignity and play clean," he said.

Alderman H. J. Clarke recalled his life as a school inspector in Hastings County and paid tribute to the warden's leadership stressing the value of co-operation between communities. A. B. Collins, city solicitor also spoke briefly.

Reeve Charles Buskard, Deloro, proposed the vote of thanks to the members of the Tabernacle United Church choir for the sumptuous repast furnished at the banquet. Mrs. M. P. Duff replied stating it was a new venture for the choir and expressed her thanks for the voiced appreciation.

Mr. Joe Shortt, Y.M.C.A. secretary outlined the efforts of the Y stating that it had done a fine job during wartime and it was carrying on along similar lines for the betterment of the youth of peace.

County Clerk Erle Denyes acted as master of ceremonies and introduced the various speakers and guests.

Constable Keays Tells of Treatments Given by Carefoot

"Now I know why you came to me for treatments and now that you have got me what are you going to do with me" Provincial Constable Ernest Keays stated Carefoot told him at the trial of E. M. Carefoot charged with fraud at the afternoon session of the trial held in this city on Tuesday before Judge F. S. Lane of Picton. The constable stated he was not feeling well and through information received applied to Mr. Carefoot for treatment. He stated the accused took a blood count from his ear and put some liquid on his tongue and diagnosed his case as cancer." I took about seventeen treatments from Carefoot in the latter part of October, 1944 and after the fourth treatment began to realize that I did not have cancer but I continued the treatments," said the witness.

Introduced to Orr

He also stated to Mr. Davis the crown prosecutor, that he was introduced to Thomas Orr, a patient of Carefoot by the accused, who demonstrated to me an incision on Orr, who he said had cancer and that he would be able to cure him with the machine. The witness described the method of treatment stating that a piece of copper plate was placed on his bare stomach and this was attached to the machine.

"At times there were three attached to the same machine, one with tuberculosis, one with ulcer and one with cancer and it was apparent that all were receiving the same treatment from the machine," said Constable Keays. The witness made it plain to the court that he did not take the treatments to spy on Carefoot but that he had not felt well and thought he was qualified to attend him from the information that had been given him.

Executed Search Warrant

Constable Keays told of executing a search warrant at the home of Mr. Carefoot and taking from the home a number of machines, a radio cabinet, copper plates and wires, an Abraham machine, a Polysine generator, envelopes with small pieces of blotting paper in them, calling cards in the name of Dr. E. M. Carefoot, and a receipt from Carefoot to Mrs. John McAninch for $125.

In cross examination by Malcolm Robb, Constable Keays stated he went for treatments outside office hours and when taking the treatments he was not more than two feet from the machine. Asked how many charges were laid, he stated there were three on the same day, one for Orr, one Rickman and one for McAninch. "Did Carefoot ever ask you to come back for treatment and the witness said "Yes." Also asked if he believed he was ailing at the time you went to Carefoot, the witness said "I was not feeling well." Did you believe Dr. Carefoot when he told you that you had cancer? and Constable Keays said "yes but I changed my mind after a few treatments."

Suffering From Cancer

Dr. M. E. Branscombe stated that when Orr visited him in July of 1944 he was suffering from cancer, that he went to Toronto and had an operation and that he died on January 17th of cancer. Dr. Charles Harris, C.N.R. surgeon stated he operated on John McAninch for diseased bladder and gall stones and that the bladder was removed and many stones taken from him. The operation was performed after an X-ray report from Belleville and an X-ray taken in Toronto which corresponded. He stated that McAninch did not have an ulcer and he did not believe a duodenal ulcer would turn to cancer. "I have never seen it and I have not seen anyone that has seen it," said Dr. Harris.

Mr. George Williams X-ray technician said that Orr was suffering from advanced cancer and Dr. F. R. Ross stated that McAninch had symptoms of gall stones from the X-ray plates. Dr. W. C. Morgan recommended McAninch to have an operation for gall stones and bladder trouble but never saw him professionally again after that visit. The court was then adjourned until Wednesday.

PERFECT BRIDGE HANDS

London, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Four perfect bridge hands were dealt in a friendly game here Saturday night — but the miracle did not end there. The hands were dealt in order of value from clubs to spades, starting with the dealer. The players were so startled there was no bidding. "It was too much for us" one of them said.

ialists, he said. The speaker advised that costs of manufacturing be well considered before their brief was forwarded to the royal commission on milk.

Senior grader for Central Ontario, Mr. Harold Cunningham felt that this was no time for the cheese industry to be discouraged. Despite talk of a decline in the cheese industry there was still much fine cheese being manufactured.

A decrease of 11.15 per cent in cheese production had been noted in Central Ontario district this year according to Mr. Cunningham. Production for the district for 1946 had been 263,089 boxes while in 1945 it had been 296,003. This is a decrease of 33,014 boxes of cheese.

Harold Roberts of Lost Channel, cheese box manufacturer and successor to D'Alton Clarke, was introduced to makers at the convention.

Directors for 1947 were appointed at the meeting. These included Douglas Rowe, Bert Jones, Tom Heath, Herb Atherton, Max Remington, Earle McNeil and Horace Palmer. The new president will be selected from the above slate.

Trophies and other awards won at the British Empire Dairy Show were presented to the winning makers at the Tuesday evening session.

38 Guerillas Reported Killed In North Greece

Athens, Dec. 4 — (AP)—Press dispatches said today that 38 guerillas were killed in the last 48 hours and that extreme Rightists had raided a northern village, killing one Liberal and beating another severely.

Insurgent bands were reported to have suffered these losses:

Fifteen killed and 12 wounded in a full-scale battle two days ago near Agrapha in Central Greece; three killed in a band that attacked Kriminion village near Kozane, where two soldiers also were said to have died; ten killed in a mop-up in central Greece; and eight captured by gendarmes on Mount Pelion east of Volos; ten killed in new action on Mount Palkon, scene of bloody fighting 10 days ago.

New Soapless VEL Outcleans, Outlasts Suds

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

As a result of constant home tests, my enthusiasm for soapless VEL is mounting daily. At first, like you perhaps, I thought VEL was strangely different. But now that I understand it, I think it's wonderful.

MAKES SUDS UNNECESSARY "FROTH"

Soapless VEL is a fine white granulated powder which acts quite differently from soap flakes or soap powders. The big difference is in the suds. VEL makes plenty of frothy suds, even in cool or hard water, but these suds are quite unlike soap suds. Actually suds are unnecessary to Vel's cleaning action. With soap, heavy suds are essential for cleaning, but not so with VEL.

MAKES THE WATER WORK

When VEL'S frothy suds subside it's extraordinary cleaning power continues in the almost clear water. You'll actually see particles of dirt in your clear water which VEL has so ably removed from your clothes or dishes.

VEL IS NEW—MODERN

So let's get away from the old-fashioned idea that lasting suds are necessary. Now that soapless VEL is here, this modern cleanser quickly cuts grease and makes china and glassware sparkle because it leaves no soapy film. VEL is such a gentle cleanser that it can be used with perfect safety for delicate lingerie, woolens, baby clothes and nylons—and it is very kind to the hands.

NOT A SUBSTITUTE FOR SOAP

VEL is not a substitute for soap and should not be compared with soap. It is a so-called "detergent" which is winning widespread popularity with those who use it correctly.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wilkin, St. Agnes' Manor, Belleville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Lois Elayne, to Herbert Alan Middleton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Middleton, Toronto, the wedding to take place the latter part of this month.

Mrs. James Way, of Thomasburg, who has been a recent guest of her daughter, Mrs. R. E. Houston, has returned to her home.

WEDDINGS

SHAW—BURRIS

On Saturday November 23, the Warsaw United Church parsonage was the scene of a very pretty, though quiet marriage ceremony, when Miss Hazel Lamoine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Burris, of Madoc, became the bride of Mr. Dean M. Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Findlay Shaw, of Eldorado; the Rev. C. D. Snelgrove officiating.

The bride, looking charming in a street length dress of white wool, with black and white accessories, wore a corsage of Briarcliffe roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Aileen Burris of Tweed, who wore a street-length dress of pink wool, with black and white accessories and a corsage of roses.

Mr. Glen Boyle attended the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw left for a motor trip to Sudbury, and other points of interest in Northern Ontario.

GARDINER—BENSON

At nine o'clock on the morning of November 30, the church of St. Peter's-in-Chains, Trenton, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Marion Elaine Benson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Benson, 20 Joseph Street, was united with Mr. Robert Percy Gardiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Gardiner, Murphy Street, with Rev. Father Lamarche officiating, assisted by Ronald Chouinard.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked very attractive in a gown of white taffeta featuring a fitted bodice with sweetheart neckline, and a bouffant skirt. She wore a full length veil which fell from a coronet of orange blossoms and carried a cascade bouquet of red roses. Her only ornament was a gold cross set with pearls.

Mr. Arthur Benson, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the School Auditorium of St. Peter's-in-Chains, where Mrs. Benson received in a wine crepe ensemble wearing a corsage of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner are residing temporarily in Trenton.

SECOND SAFE-CRACKING BRINGS $200 TO THIEVES

Windsor, Dec. 4 — (CP)— In the second safe-cracking in two nights, thieves yesterday forced, open a vault at the Capitol Egg and Poultry Company on East-Central Pitt Street and stole $200 in cash.

Police said they believed the safecrackers were the same gang who early yesterday smashed a safe at a Wyandotte Street cleaning establishment and escaped with $800.

Heavy crow bars and railway tools were used in each case to "spring" the safe door and to break into the inner compartment containing money.

B. of L.E. Auxiliary Holds Bazaar, Tea

With a Christmas atmosphere out-of-doors and the glow of lighted candles within ladies of the Grand International Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers sponsored a pre-Christmas bazaar and afternoon tea in the cheerful I.O.O.F. Hall, Front Street, on the afternoon of Tuesday, from three to six o'clock.

The bazaar was convened by Mrs. R. Muirhead and Mrs. B. Sargent, while Mrs. W. Morgan, president of this division, received the guests.

Christmas colors were used to decorate the several booths, but special mention may be made of the apron booth, which had a prominent position designed to display its unusual arrangement with an arch of bright red, adorned with suspended clusters of bells in red and silver, and Santa in all his glory standing guard over all. The aprons, in charge of Mrs. R. Orne, vied in color with the beauty of the booth showing styles to suit every individul taste.

Directly opposite the home-cooking booth convened by Mrs. A. Buck, was decorated in the Christmas colors of green and red, with delectable foods arranged to best display their attractive appearance. Pies, cakes, cookies, buns and home-made bread, were among the confections ordered, with a few jars of canned vegetables, fruits and pickles adding color to the array.

Many Garments Sold

Children's wear included flannelette and knitted garments, with several home-made toys. This table trimmed in two shades of blue, was convened by Mrs. Callaghan, while next door, the fancy work in charge of Mrs. R. Sargent featured "touch and take" packages, crocheted centres and edgings on linen handkerchiefs, and some candy boxes well filled with dainties for the children.

Mrs. H. Taylor looked after the novelties and plants displayed to good advantage against a background of Christmas colors, where flowering begonias and African violets were prominent among the different varieties of cacti. Three baskets of groceries were being wishfully viewed by many ladies as they received tickets from Mrs. J. Kerr, the winner of the largest basket to be the holder of the first number drawn, the medium and smallest sized baskets to follow in second and third place respectively.

Tea Room Attractive

The tea room, in charge of Mrs. E. N. Pigden and Mrs. G. Wilson, was attractive and homey with its long table covered with a lovely lace cloth, centred with an antique silver flower holder with five individual small bouquets of white baby 'mums and pink carnations, flanked by tall silver candelabra holding jade green tapers. Pouring for the first hour were Mrs. Gymer and Mrs. Fitzgerald, and for the second hour, Mrs. J. Barlow and Mrs. H. Taylor. Mesdames Clark, Gulliver, Grey and Brown served the guests who were seated at the small tables, each of which held one tall lighted red candle.

Assisting and replenishing the plates were Mesdames F. Parsons, P. Kerr, J. Reid, C. G. Henley and W. O. Spring.

The treasurer for the afternoon was Mrs. T. H. Crozier; the results of this venture being a decided success, well repaying the ladies interested for their efforts in promoting the bazaar.

Ladies holding the winning tickets on the different draws were—For the blanket, Doris Cooney; Grocery baskets, Mrs. Webb, Mrs. Wilkinson and Mrs. Wonnacott; Knitted set for baby, Mrs. Shepherd; the three-storey cake, Mrs. Muirhead.

WAGE REQUESTS DEFERRED

Oshawa, Dec. 4 — (CP)—City council last night referred to the 1947 council requests for wage increases for all civic employees and shorter hours for members of the fire department.

The Civic Employees' Union requested an increase of $4 a week for all employees receiving $1,650 a year or less, $3 a week for those in the $1,700-$1,900 bracket and $2 for those getting $1,900 or more.

The Oshawa Firefighters Association asked for an increase of $4 a week for all members of the department and shorter hours. They said a 56-hour week would require addition of 11 men and a 48-hour week 16 additional men.

W.C.A. Holds Monthly Meeting

The Women's Christian Association held its monthly meeting in the Board room of the hospital, Tuesday afternoon, with Mrs. Imlah presiding.

Various reports were read and business arising from same discussed.

Mr. Friesen introduced his successor as administrator of the hospital, Mr. Englestad. Miss Norma Clark was appointed lady-on-duty for the Home for the Aged during the month of December.

Donations to the Home during November were as follows—Bridge Street United Church, mashed potatoes, cold meat, cooked vegetables, stew, salad, celery, and buns; Mrs. Denault, cakes and bread; Christ Church, mashed potatoes; Mrs. Wills, playing cards; Mr. Springer, magazines; Mr. Ruston, magazines.

The first Sunday in the month and the weekly services were conducted by Maj. Earle of the Salvation Army.

Holloway Y.P.U. Entertains

In an effort to promote a spirit of fellowship between members of the different church organizations and the congregation as a whole, the Young People's Union of Holloway Street United Church have recently presented two outstanding programs; the first being a church service in charge of one of the Crusade teams of the Union on Sunday evening, the theme being "Stewardship" with Miss Margaret Hillis delivering a splendid message based on the parable of the talents. Miss Noriene Frederick and Mr. Ross Green were in charge and Miss Norma Arkles was the soloist, contributing "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked".

Following this service the young people were hosts to the congregation at a Fireside Hour, when the film "Christ in the City Streets" was shown, picturing the Home Mission work done in Toronto through fifteen institutions supported by the United Church. Mr. Leo Riggs delighted the audience with three piano solos including Chopin's "Polonaise". A group of Y.P.U. girls sang two sacred numbers, after which refreshments were served, and on behalf of the congregation Mr. Arnold Campbell expressed appreciation.

At the regular weekly meeting in charge of the Christian Citizenship Committee, the congregation was again entertained with the President, Miss Maude Burke, welcoming the guests. She introduced Miss Shirley Hitchon, who led in a spirited sing-song.

Miss Jean Badgley conducted the worship service, assisted by Miss Doris Scott, Mr. Gordon Moynes and Miss Margaret Hillis, with Miss Dorothy Mitts at the piano. This service created a receptive atmosphere for the film "Where Love Is, God Is", which was greatly appreciated; and a second film on the yearly musical festival held in Winnipeg was also enjoyed.

Four groups were formed and amusing contests conducted by Max Maguire. Delicious refreshments were served, and a social hour enjoyed. Mr. Scriven voiced the appreciation of those present from other organizations of the church, and the evening concluded with the Friendship Circle, and prayerby Rev. C. A. Perkins.

Toronto Bridge Club Will Withdraw If Color Bar Insisted

Toronto, Dec. 4. (CP)— The case of the bridge-playing negro who was barred from a Toronto tournament under rules of the American Contract Bridge League appeared closed today.

The Toronto Whist Club announced after a meeting last night that it is notifying the American League that the color bar regulation must be nullified for tournaments conducted by the Canadian Club, or else the Canadian Club will sever its association with the American organization.

The incident, which started last Saturday, incidentally resulted in one of the very few instances on record in which all of Toronto's newspapers—one morning, two evening—expressed virtually unanimity.

The Globe and Mail (morning) had said: "It is intolerable that the color bar should be imported into Canada no matter what the occasion or the pretext."

The Toronto Daily Star said: "The struggle against evil racists theories requires to be waged vigorously wherever they appear."

And The Evening Telegram joined in with this: "The Ontario bridge-players are confronted in this incident by the question whether the time has not come to declare their independence. International relations are all right as long as they don't lead to the importation into this country of habits and methods that don't belong here."

Statement Issued

The Toronto Whist Club said, in a form of a statement by Secretary Miss Dorothy Laidlaw, that when Leon Beard, Trinidad Negro student at the University of Toronto, was refused permission to play in the Ontario Bridge Tourney here, the action was not dictated by any personal bias.

The ruling was made by A. M. Sobel of New York, directing the tourney for the Toronto Club in view of the large American entry, and Sobel was enforcing a rule of the American Bridge League. The rule applies to all tournaments run under the American Leagues direction, as the Toronto tourney was, and Sobel felt he had no alternative.

"The relevant clause in the American Contract Bridge League constitution was unknown to our club until the director so advised us," said Miss Laidlaw's statement. "Under no circumstances would we have accepted the rule had there been time to make other arrangements. Our blanket invitation to all players to participate was sincere, as is evidenced by our original acceptance of the entry in question."

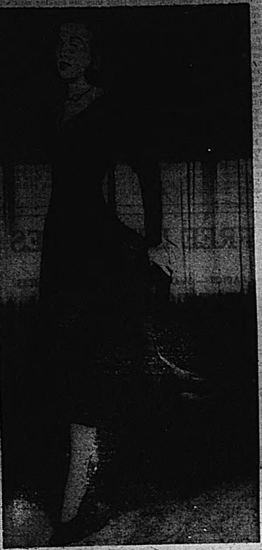
Velvet for Dinner



By PRUNELLA WOOD

THERE is never any shortage of date dresses in any store department dedicated to college girls; but this particular frock seems the cream of the crop to this writer. The model is made of black velvet, unadorned, depending on its wide V neckline, its slim body moulding, its flared skirt of unusual formal length, to put it over. With youth, it goes over, too, with a satisfactory detonation with the stagline.

We like the choker worn with it; we'd also like a single pearl strand, a locket and chain, a cameo on a velvet ribbon. The model is a picture dress, with which to make oneself into the living tableau of a bell. Any time after dark, except for a very formal ball, is the right time for the dress.

GOOD MANNERS

Sending Christmas Cards When in Mourning

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Will you please answer some questions that are bothering my husband and me about the sending of Christmas cards after a death in the family? My sister died last May. My husband and I maintain our own home. Should my husband send Christmas cards this year, and if so, how should they be signed..just in his name only? He has many business friends and acquaintances, and in the past has always sent Christmas cards to them.

2. Also, is it good form for me to send children's Christmas cards in the name of my son, age 3?

N. M.

1. It is entirely correct for your husband to send Christmas cards as has been his custom, to his business friends and acquaintances, these to be signed with his name only.

Then, if you wish, you may send Christmas greeting cards to your relatives and intimate friends, cards carefully chosen for their suitability to your circumstance this year, and signed with both your names. (You would not, this year, send cards to mere acquaintances.)

2. Yes.

"Senior," "Junior", and "Third"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I are having quite a discussion concerning the "Jr." suffix to his name. I contend: (1) that upon the death of his father my husband should drop this suffix of "Jr.; (2) that a child of ours would be "III" until the death of my husband's father, when my husband would become "Sr.", and our son "Jr."; and (3) that before our marriage his mother did not need to use "Sr." when writing her name "Mrs. John Smith." We would appreciate it if you will please settle these questions for us.

M. W.

You are right....on all three counts.

Form of Name on Card With Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have received an invitation to my niece's wedding, and am planning to send a gift. But since her fiance is a stranger to me, should I sign my card "Aunt Edith" or "Edith N. Roberts"?

Thank you

Since a wedding present is sent to the bride-to-be, you should sign your name on the card you enclose with it, "Aunt Edith."

Shower When Wedding Date Isn't Announced?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My dearest friend announced her engagement a month ago, but she has not set any date for her wedding. Would it be all right to give a surprise shower for her now, even though the date has not been set? The point is that if I do not have the shower now I will not be able to have it, for all the girls I intend to invite will not be around.

A Reader

There isn't any rule about when bridal showers shall be given....and so, since you have a special reason for giving the shower now, it's proper.

Address Labels Useful on Envelopes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've just ordered a book of those small gummed labels with my name and address printed on them. It is correct for me to use them on the backs of envelopes used for business letters and other ordinary correspondence?

R. G. D.

Yes, correct, and most practical.

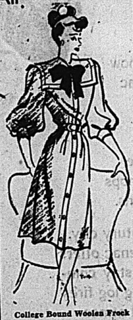
Old-Fashioned Air



College Bound Woolen Frock

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

SOME of the so-called "new silhouettes" have an old-fashioned look to them, as can be seen from this college-bound number. The dress is of gray woolen with silver buttons down the front. A perky velvet bow is perched at the plain, round neckline which is relieved by a square bertha effect achieved via fold. Full sleeves with tight cuffs reach to just below the elbow. Shaped tucks are above and below the waist.

THE NEAT NOTE is stressed in the nicest blouses. White sheer is used for a handsome blouse detailed with a collar cut like the one on a man's evening dress shirt. Black grosgrain bow tie, pearl ball buttons and cuff-link cuffs are other details.

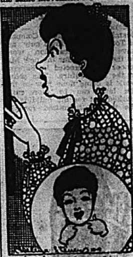
BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

When a Chin Goes Double

Twin chins can be obliterated, but one must catch them young. An experienced facial operator can mould them into one. Not with one or two treatments, we acknowledge, but in the course of time. She will make one stipulation; the seeker for a new-style chin must mind her calories. She will be requested to take tea and coffee clear, because sugar and cream are builders of adipose tissue. She will be ordered to cut down on fats, sweets and starches.

The operator, after annointing the face with a heavy cream and stroking and kneading lightly, will pick up that spare chin, roll the flesh firmly between finger and thumb. This movement dissolves the fat cells. She starts the pinching, nipping motions directly under the chin tip, working outward, running her fingers along the jaw line. Then she employs the same movement farther down on the tissues, continuing the lines until she is working on the throat.



Twin chins must be caught young

The next step consists of sweeping movements from chin tip to ears; the folded first finger and the two upper joints of the fingers ironing out the flesh. A light tapping and slapping follows.

If your chin has taken a mate, and you would restore the original, youthful outline, you can give the treatment yourself. Work on a clean skin surface. Wash your face well with a bland soap; rinse all the soap away with fairly warm water, have the skin surface perfectly dry.

For the treatment, use a heavy emollient, one of such firm consistency that the fingers will not slip and slide. Spread it over the entire facial area, starting at the collar bones and working upward with flattened fingers. Do circles around the eyes, starting at the inner corner.

Then get at the chin pinching. Roll the flesh firmly. Use both hands, working from a position directly under the chin along the jawline.

While the cream remains on, frisk an ice cube over your complexion. The purpose of this is to get the circulation galloping so that the demolition of the adipose cells will not result in depleted, saggy tissues.

In the morning, bathe the face with ice cold water. Dry gently and apply an astringent. Witch hazel serves very well for this purpose.

That's all, except that you must keep your head up. Letting the head fall forward relaxes the fibers of the lower half of the face and the muscles of the throat. Must not do.

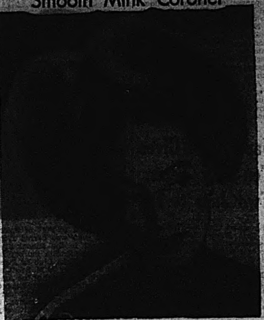
Smooth Mink Coronet



By PRUNELLA WOOD

A NEW USE for mink (and one which doesn't require a whole ranch or catch for achievement) is shown on this wid-winter hat which will look lovely above a mink coat, or with a cloth coat which has no fur whatever.

The hat is little more than a snugly fitted black felt crown; it's the way the two mink pelts are arched above in a high suspension line, which makes the chic effect. Very flattering in the new manner which shows off the brow in front, the model is also alluring from the sides and back.

Australians Study Pre-war Pearling Methods of Japan

By J. D. HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 4 — (CP)—An Australian mission has gone to Japan to investigate pre-war pearling methods of the Japanese.

The Japanese pearling fleet no longer exists but the Commission hopes to get information from documents and men who were in the business.

Japanese methods were scientific and profitable but some of their operations were regarded as illegal. Their fleet systematically worked unpatrolled grounds off Australia's empty northwest coast.

Mother ships attended the fleet, supplying fuel and food and permitting pearlers to stay at sea for long periods. Luggers filled with pearl shell sailed to rendezvous in quiet backwater areas where cargoes were transferred to the mother ships and taken to islands near the New Guinea coast on their way to Japan.

In less than 20 years, Australian pearlers took harvests worth $30,000,000 from the sea but just before the war Australian pearling fleet was down to about 60 luggers compared with 500 in the best times. The reasons were Japanese competition, antiquated methods and reduction in the value of pearl shell.

Now the industry is in a good position with Japanese competition gone, new methods coming into use and the value of pearl shell from $300 a ton to $1,500. Many pearl beds have matured during the war.

Australia's main pearling centres are Broome, in Western Australia, Darwin, in the Northern Territory, and Thursday Island, in Queensland.

Jap General Given Ten-Year Term, Two Japs to Die

Singapore, Dec. 4—(Reuters)—Lt.-Gen. Eiguma Ishida, former Japanese army chief-of-staff, today was sentenced to 10 years in prison by the Singapore War Crimes Tribunal.

Ishida in 1943 was in charge of building the Burma-Siam "death railway" which cost the lives of 15,000 British and Allied prisoners of war and 150,000 Indian, Chinese, Indonesian, Burmese and Siamese laborers.

Yesterday Ishida was found guilty of using Allied prisoners of war on the construction of the railway.

Sentences of death by hanging were passed on two of his subordinates, Col. Sheigeo Nakumara and Lt.-Col. Shoichi Ishii, although the court recommended mercy for Nakumara.

Marmora

Anniversary Service

Marmora (Special)—The 73rd. anniversary services of St. Andrew's United Church held on Sunday were marked with Good attendances. The guest preacher at morning and evening was the Rev C. L. McLellan, minister of Grace Church, Napanee, and chairman of the Belleville Presbytery. The church was decorated with assorted chrysanthemums. The special music at the morning service was comprised of the solo "O Rest in the Lord." (Mendelssohn) by Mr. Mervyn Clark of Napanee, guest soloist, and the anthem, "Praise the Lord All Ye Nations," (Carrie B. Adams) by the senior choir. The topic of the sermon was "Is the Church Through?" The preacher showed that while education had been taken over by the State; the care of the poor looked after by the State and other institutions, the influence of the church was still wielded in those directions and in worship she held a place alone.

The combined junior girls' choirs of St. Andrew's and Deloro sang at the evening service and the anthem, "Angels From the Realms of Glory". The Duet, "The Prayer Perfect" was rendered by Miss K. Takimoto and Mrs. T. Dickson. The guest soloist sang "O Loving Father."

The sermon subject was "Some Fruits of Worship."

The preacher reminded his hearers that worship should be that of spiritual exaltation and should be more than an emotional experience; we should appreciate that of which the Westminster Confession reminds us i.e. that man's chief air is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever. The attitude of worship should be worked out in our life and actions. The fruits of worship are an evidence of genuineness. The three fruits elaborated on by the preacher in the remainder of his address were 1 The production of beauty in character and in life. 2 The glorification of God by making a worthwhile contribution to the common good. 3 The establishment and cultivation of more intimate fellowship with God and our fellowman. Rev. E. M. Cadigan, minister of St. Andrew's officiated at Grace church, Napanee in the morning and returned to assist in the evening service.

A choral celebration of Holy Communion ushered in the Advent season at St. Paul's. The members of the Women's Auxiliary attended for Corporate Communion. A sermon was delivered by the rector, Rev. J. M. Brownlie on the words "Go Ye."

Bancroft — (Special) — The Beamish Construction Company of Toronto are in town now and have started excavation work on the new site for the new high school to be erected in Bancroft in the near future. The shovel work is being done now so that the land can be more easily marked out for the building. Of the tenders submitted for the contract that of Sullivans of Arnprior have been accepted by the Board and as soon as the grant comes through the contract will commence.

Saturday evening winter set in in earnest in North Hastings County at least as about six inches of wet snow blanketed the countryside. Trees, telephone wires hung heavy with the loaded wet snow and Sunday beamed forth in bright sunshine on a world of white. Temperatures have dropped and will hit the zero mark by nightfall.

Mr. J. E. Blatherwick of Waubaushene is now working at the Canadian National Station at Bancroft having replaced Mr. Maher.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, accompanied by Mr. C. O. Fuller, motored to Toronto for the weekend.

Mrs. R. E. Haryett is visiting with relatives at Havelock.

The Department of Highways at Bancroft were on the job early Sunday morning with their plowing equipment clearing highways 62 and 28 after the heavy fall of snow.

Mohawk Reserve

ANDREW MARACLE

Mohawk Reserve — The Reserve's oldest resident, Mr. Andrew Maracle, passed away, after a lengthy illness, at his home early Wednesday morning, within a few days of his ninety-first birthday anniversary. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Maracle, and had spent all his life here, excepting a few years in British Columbia and Brantford. He is survived by two brothers, Albert and Ira, of the Reserve, and two sisters, Mrs. J. Miller, Toronto, and Mrs. T. Longboat, of Caledonia. The late Mr. Maracle was keenly interested in the affairs of the Reserve, and for many years was a member of the Mohawk Council. The funeral was held at Christ Church Friday afternoon, and interment was made in Christ Church Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Leo, Stuart and Melville Hill, Arthur and Percy Maracle, and Percy Green.

Mr. Phillip Robert Barnhart left Sunday to spend the winter in Watertown, N.Y.

Mrs. Carrie Brant has returned from Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Stewart, Hamilton, was here for the funeral of her uncle, Mr. Andrew Maracle.

The many friends of Messrs. Russell Maracle and Nicholas Hill, who were seriously injured in a traffic accident Wednesday night, will be pleased to learn that they are making satisfactory progress toward recovery in the Belleville General Hospital.

The funeral of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood 'ohn Brant took place at All Saints' Church Saturday afternoon.

The marriage of Eleanor Wilma Brant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Brant, and Gordon Wesley Sager, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sager, took place at the rectory Saturday afternoon, Nov. 30th. The bride's sister, Joan, was bridesmaid, and Arnold Brant attended the bridegroom. After the ceremony, dinner was served to many guests at the bride's home.

Mr. Isaac Maracle and Mrs. Isaac Hill are patients in the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Margaret Culbertson and Mrs. Romia Hennon have returned from a visit with relatives in Midland.

French Socialists Back Communist For Premiership

By ROBERT C. WILSON

Paris, Dec. 4 — (AP)—French Socialists decided early today to back a Communist for premier of France's new fourth republic, but postponed till tonight a decision on whether to take part in a Communist-led cabinet.

The Socialist National Congress voted 3,121 to 843 to support the candidacy of Maurice Thorez, Secretary-General of the Communist party, for the interim premiership.

The Congress put off action, however, on a Communist invitation to join in a Leftist "popular front" cabinet to succeed the coalition government of Georges Bidault of the popular Republican movement (M.R.P.), who resigned the council presidency Thursday. The invitation was issued after the Communists, while outpolling other parties, failed to win a majority of National Assembly seats in the Nov. 10 election.

In view of the Socialist resistance, the endorsement of Mr. Thorez seemed only a desperate gesture to keep the Communists from later telling the working classes — to whom both Marxist parties look for support — that the Socialists are anti-Communist.

M. Thorez was the only candidate for interim premier, but he was by no means sure of election. Some Socialist deputies were so violently opposed to a Communist government it seemed likely they might cut the Thorez' vote by staying away from the legislature.

There was a big bloc against him — including the M.R.P., the Radical Socialists and Rightist parties generally. The M. R. P. was believed ready to put up its own candidate, perhaps former Finance Minister Robert Schuman, and in event of a deadlock the Radical Socialists could present former Premier Edouard Herriot as a compromise contender.

Socialists and Communists together, even in perfect agreement, still would be 35 seats short of a majority in the 618-seat assembly.

Sask. Physician Wills $500,000 To Toronto University

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—University of Toronto today announced a bequest of approximately $500,000 by the late Dr. John S. Chisholm of Prince Albert, Sask., prominent western physician, for use of the university's faculty of medicine.

In his will Dr. Chisholm left another $500,000 to his sister, Mrs. W. A. Collinson of Lindsay. Interest on this amount will be used by Mrs. Collinson during her lifetime and, by the terms of the will, this sum also will revert to the University of Toronto on her death.

University officials said the bequest "will enable us to do a lot of work not provided for in the regular funds," particularly in medical research in which Dr. Chisholm was interested.

To Investigate Working Conditions Of Wood Cutters

Windsor, Dec. 4 (CP) — Mayor Arthur J. Reaume today ordered investigation of conditions under which a group of Windsor men are working at the Spruce Falls Power Company at Kapuskasing.

He directed David M. Bridges, a city official, to arrange an interview with John Matheson of the Windsor office of the National Employment Service.

The inquiry came after the mayor received a letter from one of the men saying their situation should be changed "to meet the statements and promises made at our interviews at the Selective Service in Windsor."

The letter said the men, mostly veterans, were sent to Kapuskasing as wood cutters and were guaranteed $5 a day. They now were on a $56 a month basis. Other "promises" of piece work payments, single beds, steam baths and recreation facilities had not been fulfilled.

Dedication Services.

A very impressive service was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, on Sunday morning, December 1, when a special dedication of mortar boards and collars for the choir, was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. H. V. Walker.

The generous gift of mortar boards was made by Mrs. Bert Eggleton and family and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ward, in loving memory of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Ward and their brother, Albert. The choir collars were kindly donated by Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh. After these gifts were dedicated to the praise and glory of God, the full choir of 23 voices rendered an appropriate anthem, "We Have Thought of Thy Loving Kindness", with Mrs. Williams at the console.

Rev. Mr. Walker's message was in keeping with the service "Finding God Through Music". He pointed out that music is a spur to our faith and gives us hope and courage and that the soul of man has ever been stirred and lifted Godward by the great music of all ages.

OMAHA KNIGHTS BEATEN BY 4-2

(By The Canadian Press)

Omaha Knights, by losing 4-2 to St. Paul Saints in the United States hockey league last night, lost their chance to overtake the northern division-leading Minneapolis Millers. Victory would have given them 26 points against the Millers' 25.

Omaha led through the first period on a tally by Frank Porteous, but in the second frame, Buck Davies and Bobby Dew counted for the Saints. Omaha knotted things 2-2 in the third as Jake Forbes bounced the puck into the net. Bob Kirkpatrick and Davies then sealed the game for the Saints.

Houston, the southern division cellar team, lost 4-3 to Tulsa Oilers.

Canadiens Move into Top Spot O.N.H.L. by Defeating Hawks; All Teams in Action Tonight

Leafs Must Break Boston Jinx or Habitants Will Open Big Lead

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the revitalized Montreal Canadiens pumping along again in old championship form, Toronto's rollicking young Maple Leafs bump head on into a pesky National Hockey League jinx tonight in the shape of Boston Bruins in their effort to regain lost ground.

The Canadiens, whose pace has been torrid since a few minor adjustments, polished off Chicago's fluttering Black Hawks 4-1 in the only N.H.L. game last night. That finally moved the Stanley Cup champions into first place along ahead of the rookie-studded Maple Leafs.

The Leafs still hold a game in hand over the Canucks but, with all six teams getting into action tonight, the pressure is on to forestall a Canadiens' victory putting them a big four points ahead.

Although the Habitants will be playing their second game in two nights, they meet a fifth place club in their New York game with the Rangers. The Leafs meanwhile will clash with the third-place Bruins at Boston, and thereby hangs the jinx.

Canadiens Flying

In three meetings this season with the Bruins, the best Toronto has done was a 3-3 draw back on Oct. 23. Since then, they have absorbed 5-0 and 4-2 beatings from manager Art Ross' bruising boys who are ready to trade bumps with anyone.

The Canadiens were flying before a home crowd of 10,431 last night for their victory over the cellar-dwelling Hawks.

Leading the attack with a pair of goals was Elmer Lach, starry centre of the punch line whose return to form has been a big factor in the champions' upsurge. Two other veterans, Billy Reay and Murph Chamberlain fired the other counters.

The Hawks, on whom owner Bill Tobin has said he will spend $100,000 to rebuild if he can get the players, looked like they needed all of that.

Goalie Paul Bibeault, who let 11 goals in against Toronto last Saturday night, was the best man on the Chicago team. He had to kick out 33 pucks in all while Bill Durnan had an easy time with 14 saves at the other end. The Bentley boys bagged Chicago's only tally in the second period, Doug feeding Max for the goal.

The Hawks, who have now taken the count eight times in their last 10 starts, return home for tonight's third game. Their opponents are Detroit Red Wings, one point behind Boston in fourth place.

Transport Driver Escapes

London, Ont., Dec. 4 — (CP) — Archie Fairgrieve, Toronto transport driver, had a narrow escape from injury early today when his truck went out of control and crashed into a steel light standard at a city intersection.

Fairgrieve told police his tractor truck, loaded with 10 tons of combustion motors, careened off the street when the steering mechanism failed.

HAMILTON TIGERS STILL RIDING VICTORY TRAIL

Defeat Owen Sound Mohawks 4-2 for 8th Straight Win

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers are still riding far in front of the O. H. A. senior A group on the crest of an eight-game winning streak and Owen Sound Mohawks are still in the cellar as a result of the Tigers' 4-2 victory at Owen Sound last night, but Owen Sound fans saw considerably less difference between the teams than the 14-point difference in the standings would indicate.

Well beaten by an 8-0 score in their first game against the unbeaten Tigers in Hamilton, the Mohawks outscored the visitors in two of the three periods last night and only a sparkling performance by Art Childs in the Hamilton nets staved off their determined closing rally.

The Tigers wrapped up the game in a 10-minute stretch of the second period with goals by Dillon Brady, Doug Runions, Polly Miocinovich and Johnny Conick. But the Mohawks had more than their share of the play the rest of the way, with Kilpatrick shooting them into a 1st-period lead and Ken Dolson breaking through for their second counter late in the final frame.

Little Cause for Joy

There was little cause for joy in St. Catharines last night as the crippled Falcons found themselves counting the number of players left in action and the number of goals scored against them by Galt Red Wings in an O.H.A. junior A tussle with the totals coming out about even.

With captain Eric Unger, leading Falcon scorer, signed up by an American Hockey League club and defenceman Fiery Gogan sidelined with a fractured wrist, the Falcons brought up two juveniles to plug the gaps, only to lose forward Billy Frick early in the game when his hand was cut by Galt's Trent Anderson.

Galt's 11-0 victory moved them into second place in the 10-team circuit, a point ahead of Barrie Flyers. But the standings may be shuffled again tonight as Flyers take on Stratford Kroehlers, tied for fourth place a point behind them.

Sports Roundup

By AI COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 4. (CP)—"Unionization of professional hockey will never work," was the opinion of a New York Ranger official when told that Robert Murphy, organizer of the American Baseball Guild, had plans to unionize the six National Hockey League Clubs. . . The Guild was unsuccessful in an attempt to organize major league ballplayers last Summer . . . "Sure the N.H.L. has dissatisfied players but what sport hasn't," the official commented. . . "But I dont believe the players, especially the stars, want a union because the average hockey player knows that he can only demand a price based on his season's performance. Then it is up to the owner and the player to concede a little to arrive at a mutual salary agreement. . . ."A holdout in hockey is a rarity because both parties usually end up satisfied. . . .You can't blame a player for trying to better himself financially but a union won't do it—there are too many difficulties—and a lot of hockey players are too selfish."

Players Cool?

The officials opinion follows a report that five Ranger players approached by Murphy on the subject of unionization turned him down, saying they are satisfied with contracts which have been improved this season to include a two-week dismissal notice instead of only 24 hours. . . But one ranger was reported as saying that the players really didn't want to unionize because, as Canadians on six-month visas to the United States ,they didn't want to be come embroiled in a union controversy."

Pension Plan Proposal

Last week the Boston Globe said that Murphy outlined his union program to ,the Rangers and asked them to draw up their demands. Murphy was to be given these demands when the Rangers are seeking a pension plan along the lines of that which Marty Marion of the Cardinals instituted for baseball players and other reforms including an allowance to cover costs of moving family and furnishings.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

They may not know it, but the galloping bangtails that cavorted around Canadian racetracks this year were worth their weight in gold. Phineas Phan, he of the racetrack variety did not spare the shekels when it came to laying the long green on the well-known line in the hope that his pet mustang would flit across the line ahead of the other Dobbins, or at least in second or third place.

In fact the amount of gold laid on the saddle-bags of the meandering mules gave horse racing a distinct Midas touch. For the boys and gals who throng around the pari-mutuels come race time wagered no less than $48,667,744 in 1946 at 33 race meetings extending over 385 days racing.

• • •

The total amount bet by the public in 1946 was $8,474,485 more than in 1945 and the largest amount since 1925 when $49,867,765 was wagered during 344 days of racing. The prize money paid in 1946 totalled $1,815,000 an increase of $228,745 over 1945.

Quebec—Number of days racing 42 (70), amount wagered $1,713,574 ($2,179, 529), prize money $188,000 ($243,600).

Ontario—Number of days racing 116 (98), amount wagered $30,714,144 ($25,907,764), prize money $912,300 ($747,000).

Manitoba—Number of days racing 28 (28), amount wagered $4,505,347 ($3,869,183), prize money $168,900 ($161,600).

Alberta—Number of days racing 41 (39), amount wagered $3,223,909 ($2,667,823), prize money $149,690 ($136,545).

British Columbia—Number of days racing 63 (56), amount wagered $7,693,792 ($8,859,-792), prize miney $354,900 ($262,075).

Among the cities, Toronto headed the list as the principal horse betting centre where in 63 days racing $20,175,390 was wagered, $2,716,280 more than in the 56 days racing in 1945.

• • •

Vancouver was in second place with $6,556,754 wagered in 49 days racing, $713,330 more than in 1945 when racing extended over 42 days. Fort Erie, Ont., was third with $4,673,984 wagered in 25 days racing, $1,763,925 more than in the 14 days racing in 1945.

• • •

Winnipeg was fourth with $4,505,347 wagered in 28 days, $636,164 more than in 1945 when the same number of days racing were held as in 1946.

• • •

The other places in which lesser amounts were wagered were, in the order of their importance, as follows: Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Ont.; Edmonton, Calgary, Alberta; Victoria B.C.; Ottawa, Montreal, Regina, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, and Claresholm, Alta., which had one day's racing with $1,331 wagered, $52 more than in 1945.

• • •

The largest amount wagered at any one track during the year was at the Spring meet at the Woodbine track, Toronto, when the pari-mutuels clicked a total of $2,633,838 in the seven days of the meet.

• • •

Pari-mutuel betting on race tracks in Canada is supervised by the Dominion Department of Agriculture and five per cent Dominion tax is deducted from the betting pools. The Government of the province in which the races are held also levies taxes ranging from five per cent in some provinces to as high as 10 per cent in others. The racing association is entitled to a percentage ranging from seven down to three per cent according to the amount wagered.

Don Mogard, ace heavy weight of the Diamond Athletic Club, Toronto, of which Vic Bagnato is one of the master-minds, headlines the smart boxing card being sponsored next Wednesday night by the R.C.A.F. laddies at the Mountain View Air Station. Mogard meets the flashy Keith (Dynamite) Presser, favorite of slug fans of London (in the bush) and who is reportded soon to enter the pro ranks.

• • •

Both lads are smart aggressive fighters and throw punches that pack plenty of power. They are among the up-and-coming heavyweights of the country and fans should see a slugfest plus when these boys tangle in the main bout at Mountain View.

• • •

The semi-final go brings together LAC. Leury, the station's crack middleweight and the classy Glen Dafoe of Trenton who has always been a favorite with Belleville box fans. Also featured will be Darky Brooks, Kingston heavy who is slated to match punches with "Smilin'" Sammy Ellis, a promising fighter from Trenton and a brother of the well-known "Jiber" Ellis. Four other high class bouts round out as promising a card as we have seen in many a moon.

• • •

RCAF people at Mountain View anticipate a large crowd of city fans and have arranged bus accommodation for those wishing to make the trip. The Smith buses will leave the four corners at 7.45 and will arrive at the station in plenty of time for the main bout.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

The five goals in last night's lone National Hockey League game served to thin scoring positions out with the first five held by lone players. Billy (The Kid) Taylor of Detroit was idle but maintained his lead of 7 goals and 16 assists for 23 points. Maurice Richard, Montreal, nicked an assist to take sole possession of second slot with 12 goals and 9 assists for 21 points. Roy Conacher, Detroit, holds third with 11 and 9 for 20 while Ted Kennedy, Toronto, is fourth with 11 and 8. Syd Abel, Detroit, follows with 11 and 7. Max Bentley, Chicago, and Bill Reay, Montreal, each notched a goal to move into a three-way tie for sixth berth with Milt Schmidt, Boston. Each has 16 points.

The Leaders	G.	A.	Pts.

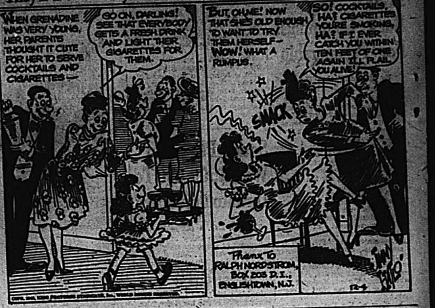
They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo



WHEN GRENADINE WAS VERY YOUNG, HER PARENTS THOUGHT IT CUTE FOR HER TO SERVE COCKTAILS AND CIGARETTES—
GO ON, DARLING! SEE THAT EVERYBODY GETS A FRESH DRINK AND LIGHT THEIR CIGARETTES FOR THEM.
BUT, OH, ME! NOW THAT SHE'S OLD ENOUGH TO WANT TO TRY THEM HERSELF—WOW! WHAT A RUMPUS.
SO! COCKTAILS, HA? CIGARETTES YOU'RE SMOKING, HA? IF I EVER CATCH YOU WITHIN TEN FEET OF ONE AGAIN I'LL FLAIL YOU ALIVE!

Regina, Dec. 4 (CP)—The cry "hands up!" rang out more often than usual in Regina this week and will be re-echoed across the prairies, heralding no crime wave but the beginning of the curling season.

J. E. (Wee Jimmy) Armstrong, President of the Dominion Curling Association, says this peremptory order in Scotland's national ice game which warns players to stop sweeping a path for the hurtling stones, will be carried out at one time or another this year by more than 40,000 Canadians.

The popularity of the centuries-old sport has been climbing steadily with 846 affiliated clubs this year in the Dominion Association, formed in 1935 with Senator John Haig of Winnipeg as its first president. Almost three-quarters of the clubs are on the Prairies but "thunderin' casts" are delivered on rinks from Victoria to Saint John, N.B., where the classic Macdonald's Brier Bonspiel will be held next March.

Farm-filled Saskatchewan is the most curling-crazy Province, with more than 280 affiliated and about 200 unaffiliated clubs this year. The sport is being taken up by the younger set here, too, with plans for a Province-wide meet of high school entries from 56 districts with play-offs at Regina and Saskatoon.

Manitoba follows up with some 200 affiliated clubs and Ontario comes next with about 130.

Wee Jimmy says "the grand old game is moving ahead all the time" but like most things these days it is plagued with scarcities.

For one thing clubs can't get enough rinks. Another irking rub is the shortage of matched stones. These prized implements of the game—manufactured only at one place near Glasgow—are beginning to arrive in quantity again but simply nowhere meets demand with clubs across the Dominion calling for more.

A Flin Flon, Man., club was fortunate in receiving a shipment of matched stones through the port of Churchill just before the Hudson Bay shipping route closed last fall.

Be it ever so clumsy, an akoolap uses a system he sticks to and frankly abuses. Be it ever so cumbersome, lumpy, or sour, his faith will endure to its last dying hour.

Maybe you sometimes worry about the rule that says an immediate jump takeout always promises six tricks. The puzzler may be that six tricks are needed even when the jump takeout is to a major.

You see, an opening one bid shows at least five tricks. A jump response shows the balance of tricks needed for a game. And a game requires ten tricks in a major or 11 tricks in a minor.

Thus, if partner opens with a heart or spade, your jump assist in his suit shows five tricks. His five and your five are enough; the ten tricks needed when a major suit in trump.

If partner opens with a club or a diamond, your jump assist in his suit shows six tricks. His five and your six are the 11 tricks needed when a minor suit is trump.

But if your jump is a takeout to a new suit, it always shows six tricks. Even if the jump takeout is from a major to a major. Why? The trump suit is not decided. It may end in a minor.

Partner opens with a club when you have this hand:

♠ A K 7 5
♥ Q 8 6 5
♦ J 5 3
♣ A 7

You have five tricks with at least two sure. Your response is a takeout to spades. But not a jump. It may not end in spades. The final trump suit may be diamonds or even clubs.

Suppose partner had opened with a heart. You still takeout to spades without a jump. But if he opened with a spade, you have to takeout. Jump assist in a major. Trumps will be spades.

Such definite information is comforting to the opener. It is important to him if he has added values that prompt him to reach for a slam. Take the load off your minds.

AT THE CAPITOL — Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton are again featured as Dagwood and Blondie Bumstead in Columbia Pictures' new comedy, "Life With Blondie", opening Thursday at the Capitol Theatre. This time, the ebullient pair become entangled with "dog-nappers" when Daisy becomes a Navy pin-up pooch. On the same program Gilbert Roland as the Cisco Kid in "South of Monterey."

The Movie Column

By HELAN BANNERMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The close co-operation between the Canadian and United States governments has had another boost in the presentation of the Library or Congress of the National Film Board's Washington collection of 200 information films in the regular 35-mm. size.

Canada is the first country to place at the Library's disposal a representative collection of government-produced information films.

If you saw Alan Ladd and Geraldine Fitzgerald in "O. S. S." you probably left the theatre wondering whether the dramatic story of United States espionage activities had any basis in fact. Well, you can relax. Maj.-Gen. William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan, the man who headed the United States Office of Strategic Services during the war, says the film gives an authentic account of the activities that were carried out under his direction.

Actually, says Gen. Donovan, "O.S.S." is a composite of incidents that happened in real life. The agency did send a woman into France by parachute to live behind enemy lines, as the picture related; there was an agent who collapsed because of lung trouble, and one wireless operator continued to communicate with his United States headquarters when he knew he was doomed to capture by the Germans.

Dana Andrews, Virginia Mayo and Cathy O'Donnell made such an impression on independent producer Michael Curtiz when he saw "The Best Years of our Lives" that he signed them up to star in his own forthcoming picture, "The Unsuspected." Claude Rains and Eve Arden will also have important roles in the suspense drama, based on a magazine story by Charlotte Armstrong.

Greer Garson's next picture will be Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of Margery Sharp's "The Nutmeg Tree." M.G.M. has owned the story for nine years and perhaps the success of the same author's "Cluny Brown" goaded them into getting busy on it. The story is about an English music hall singer posing as a great lady who wins the Prime Minister's affections.

Viceca Lindfors, the new Swedish star who is being hailed as worthy to follow in the footsteps of Garbo and Ingrid Bergman, will share the billing with Ronald Reagan in Warner's version of Philip Wylie's romantic drama, "Night Unto Night."

Frank Faylen, the red-headed bit player who made a hit as the hospital orderly in "Lost Weekend," will play a happy-go-lucky taxi driver in Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life."

Jeanette MacDonald is back in Hollywood, after 4½ years, to co-star with Jose Iturbi in "The Birds and the Bees." The two stars play a husband and wife endowed with three daughters, portrayed by Britain's Ann Todd supported by Jane Powell and Mary Donahue.

Maurice Chevalier, cleared of collaborationist charges, is back before the French cameras again and now is starring in "Silence is Golden," written and directed by Rene Clair for R.K.O.-Pathe.

AT THE BELLE — Those charming young people of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" are together in Paramount's refreshing new comedy about Cornelia and Emily—"Our Hearts Were Growing Up", which comes today to the Belle Theatre with Gail Russell, Diana Lynn, Brian Donlevy, William Demarest and Bill Wolfe. Shown with them are James Brown and Bill Edwards.

"Song of the South" is Walt Disney's latest feature-length film but anyone expecting another "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will be disappointed.

In "The Three Caballeros" Mr. Disney made use of live action in an attempt to keep down sky-rocketting cartoonning costs and the picture was so-so. "Song of the South" is also so-so, with a lot of mawkish technicolor sentiment about an unhappy little rich boy and an unhappy little Po'-white girl in a romantic version of the Old South.

Global Program For Baseball Is Expanded

Los Angeles, Dec. 4 —(AP)— The United States National Baseball Congress announced expansion today of its global program, with the addition of the Philippines as the 21st country which will decide a recognized national baseball championship.

J. G. Taylor Spink of St. Louis, publisher of The Sporting News, was renamed global commissioner, and Honolulu was added as a contestant in the 13th annual national tournament at Wichita, Kas., next Aug. 15-27.

The congress also announced that for the second year a Canadian-United States non-professional series will be held, starting Sept. 5 in Toronto. It will bring together the champions of tournaments at Wichita and London, Ont.

Starting in 1948, however, the series will be held in the home cities of the winning Canadian and American champions, with three games scheduled alternately in one country, the remainder of the seven games in the other. Carmichael, Calif., defeated Windsor, Ont., Auto Wreckers four games to one, in this year's inaugural.

Winchester, England (CP) — Winchester College War Memorial will be a £75,00 ($300,000) school hall and a £50,000 fund for scholarships.

Threatened Strike Averted

Minneapolis, Dec. 4 — (AP)— A threatened strike of teachers in Minneapolis schools was averted last night when A. F. L. Federations of men and women teachers, locals 238 and 59, unanimously accepted a settlement offer which will boost basic salaries by $1,200 yearly in 1948. Charles E. Boyer, men's federation president, said the settlement also calls for a flat $600 payment to all regular classroom teachers in 1947. In addition, those not at the maximum scale would receive an additional $100 under a previously-granted automatic increase scale.

COACH HEATER EXPLODES

Pembroke, Dec. 4 — (CP) — Maj.-Gen. Howard Kennedy, head of the Royal Commission on Forestry, narrowly escaped possible injury here yesterday when a heater exploded on his private railway coach a few minutes before he was scheduled to return to it. The explosion, occurring a few minutes before 5 p.m., when the commission's hearings usually end, tore a gaping hole in the roof of the coach, causing considerable damage and hurling pieces of metal over part of the railway yards.

Little Benny's Note Book

We had to light the lite to see to eat by this morning, and I said, Hay, ma, do you think it's going to rain?

You better wear your rubbers to school, that's the only way I can answer that, ma said.

Meening she didn't know but she wouldn't be serprised, and I said, Well what do you think, pop, is it going to rain?

That's something that only the weather man knows, and he genrelly wont say for sure, the big tease, pop said, and I said, Well anyways, the only time I want it to rain is just at noon, and then I want it to rain so hard that Mr. Cawdry will think it's not going to stop, so he'll announce a one session day for the whole school and we want have to go back this afternoon, so we'll just have to stay one exter hour and after that I want the rain to stop.

Your specifications are a model of clarity, pop said. Do you want me to telefone the weather man and ask him to fix it? he said, and I said, No sir, I just want ma to telefone Mr. Cawdry and ask him if there's going to be one session, I mean in case it really is raining at 12 o'clock.

Now why should I telefone to the principal for land sakes? ma said. If he decides it's a one session day, that'll be the end of it, she said, and I said, Well that's just it, ma. Mr. Cawdry might not even notice. G wizz, one time Miss Kitty sent me down to him, and he didn't even see I was in his office for 5 minutes, I said.

Do you mean you think you like rain? pop said, and I said, No sir, but if he's so absent minded he cant even see things in the office, he's even more libel not to notice them outside, so ma better call up and make sure he knows it's raining.

Which just then the sun came out almost as brite as if it had never been in.

Making the subject useless to keep up.

BURNED FINGERS

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 13

"I was so wrong," Eugene said in the merest essence of his old voice. "I was wrong all the way. I kept thinking of punishment. But it's all forgiveness — everywhere, for everything. It's so much brighter than I thought it could be."

Jennifer, awed, still could not speak. She raised her head and looked at him in a fearful fascination.

"Forgiveness—even for men," he whispered.

"You, Eugene!" Jennifer exclaimed. "You've always been so good. You don't need forgiveness!"

"Even for this—understanding and forgiveness. Even for me. I've judged everyone—except myself," he said after another pause in which he breathed hard, struggling to find his voice. "We mustn't judge. It's all forgiveness," he said. "I've been stumbling about in blackness—all these days. I saw it, you know. I saw it coming. I turned back. I've told my father. Nobody else. Not my mother—ever. Jennifer.."

His voice died away. A moment later Jennifer heard a stir behind her, the click of rosary beads, smothered sobbing. Various figures were kneeling in the shadows; someone was reading prayers. There was no sound in the room except an occasional "Amen". The girl knelt on, not moving, not turning her head. After a while the nurse came back and gently disengaged from hers Eugene's stiffened fingers.

Eugene's mother collapsed, and Jennifer saw Mollie and Joe and Dan Moore gather about her and half carry, half lead her away, a trail of friends and relatives following. She loitered in the hall for a few minutes, expecting, hoping she knew not what; at the end she saw Eugene's father coming down with two other elderly men.

"How are you getting home?" Old Michael Evans asked her. His voice was tired, abstracted, indifferent; his eyes were red and swollen.

"We can take you," he said in the same apathetic tone.

"Oh, no, please don't!" the girl protested in very real distress.

"You couldn't—" He drew her aside, lowered his voice. "You couldn't be kind to him? His heart broke for you," he said.

"It wasn't that. Truly it wasn't that." She caught his arm. She wanted him to be fatherly, to be kind to her now as he had been on the happy night of Mollie's party. "I can't tell you what it was, Mr. Evans. But truly it wasn't that! I did like him..You were all so terribly kind to me.."

"Ah well," he murmured, not hearing her. He joined the other men and they went away. Jennifer stood perfectly still for a long minute, her cheeks burning. Then she went out into the lightly falling rain, looked bewilderedly about to be sure of her directions, started to walk home.

The slow months wore away through the Christmas sparkle and the glow of red candles, the new year came in, and in February there was spring in the air. Acacia bloomed; grass pushed up knee-high on empty corner lots; the sun shone in a blue Italian sky.

Faddy and Elna stretched and yawned over their homework; supper in the kitchen could be eaten in daylight—albiet dying and darkening daylight—once more. March rains and winds swept by; asparagus was in the market, daffodils heaped the curbside carts. April brought shining, still heavy evenings; it was too hot to cook, too hot for the lights too hot to do the dishes. Jennifer dreamed over her solitaire; Betty rustled pages of the evening paper; radio music droned through the room; other music came from the open windows of flats all about; a coloratura solo pierced the heavy air The children were up and about in their pajamas, Elna kneeling at the window sill, exposing her face and stretching her arms to the warm night. Little Faddy lay on the floor, teasing and petting the scared little cat that had recently joined the family circle.

"Betty," yawned Jennifer, "why doesn't something happen? It's time for something to happen to people. Why don't they happen to us?"

"The only things that happen to people like us are lousy things," Betty observed thoughtfully. "You have to have your teeth fixed or the plumbing breaks down or they refuse to exchange your coat."

Jennifer put her head down on the table and laughed; when she looked up again tears were in her eyes.

"I wish I knew how to make things happen," she said.

"You have to have money," Betty volunteered doubtfully.

"There was a girl in the office," Jennifer resumed. "Her name was Violet Miller. She wasn't so terribly pretty, but she'd had harp lessons and she spoke good Spanish. At least she could say some things in Spanish. Old Mr. Peras, who runs the elevator, said she didn't speak much. But things really did happen to her. She was in the Long Beach earthquake, and when Winnie asked her if she was going to marry the man who waits for her every night she said, 'Definitely. As soon as I get my divorce!' She'd been married," Jennifer ended almost on an aggrieved tone, "and none of us knew it! And she's only about twenty-five, Winnie says."

It was Betty's turn to laugh.

"Well, you don't want earthquakes and divorces, I should hope."

"She had a picture of herself playing the harp with a sort of gone now." Jennifer returned to her card game.

"Someday you'll fall in love with someone," Betty said, turning the dials slowly. "And then maybe you'll wish you hadn't wanted something to happen. I don't mean crackpots like poor what's-his-name— Gene Evans. But that other man who used to telephone you—Burrows. You said he'd let you down. What happened?"

"I don't know were he is now." Jennifer made her voice sound mildly indifferent, casual. She did not speak again for some time. Then suddenly she jumbled her cards together and got to her feet.

"I'll tell you what," she said "I'm going to take those dish towels upstairs and hang them out. And then I'm going to bed."

"We're going upon the roof with you!" Elna stated.

"No, you can't. You'll get filthy D'you want to take baths all over again? Some night," Jennifer promised, "we'll put on old things and go up there, and undress on the back porch when we come down. so's not to track all that grit into the house. But not tonight."

She wrung the soaking towels with vigorous twists of her hands tossed them into a pan, climbed the iron ladder from the back porch.

The moment her head emerged from the square trap door in the roof she was out in the velvety blackness of the night under the great throbbing arch of the stars. Jennifer felt a moment's compuction; the little girls would have loved this breath of freshness by just one girl in a shabby house dress spattered with water with a pan of steaming towels in her hands.

"Oh, stars—stars—stars!" whispered Jennifer, her hands automatically busy with the clothespins while her eyes were turned toward the throbbing vault above her and the misty shining scarf of the Milky Way. "Oh, it's too beautiful! Why isn't it enough for us that anything as beautiful as this is right near us all the time!"

She went to the low cement parapet that fenced the roof and stepped up as she had many times before to the neighboring roof and so went onto the other roofs, wiping her cindery hand now and then in child fashion against her apron, and always staring overhead at the tapestry in silver and velvet black that was the sky.

At the corner there was a grocery with two flats above it, and beyond that on the side street a large building whose ground and second floors were occupied by an auctioneer. Sometimes during the long years when she and Betty had lived here Jennifer had stopped to listen to his voice rising and falling over the heads of the men and women who had straggled aimlessly in like herself and were scattered about on the aligned chairs. They were usually a drab uninteresting lot of persons, themselves in the secondhand furniture business for the most part with shops out in the mission or up on McAllister Street, and the merchandise in which they were interested was curiously dull too: cracked hand basins, rolls of materials or carpets, chipped cheap wooden chairs by the score, unassembled parts of sooty old stoves tied together with rope.

The third floor of the building rose half a story higher than the grocery building on the corner; it was apparently sort of loft, with glass doors opening on this hot night upon a brick terrace, now checkered with long oblongs of light from the room within.

A short ladder connected the two roofs. Jennifer, amazed to see light here at this hour of night where there had never to her knowledge been any signs of occupation before, quietly descended the ladder effaced herself against the wall, and took a sidewise view of the lighted room.

She had never seen a studio before but she had read of them and she knew at once that this room was a studio. There were easels, canvasses, a model platform in view, and with them, all in dire confusion was obviously in the process of moving in, a hundred other objects: heaps of drapery, a wooden table or two, a couch with two mattresses and a tangled heap of blankets thrown on the ticking, pillows, a barrel of china, plaster casts of arms and legs and feet. A nest of handsome copper casseroles rested in an old leather armchair whose stuffing was descending in a fringe of torn brown silesia upon the floor; a suitcase lying open bulged with shirts, socks, slippers.

The man who was working busily in the midst of this hodgepodge seemed old to Jennifer. His bald dome was fringed with light fluffy hair, his thin face was lined. He wore paint-spattered slacks and a smock a pipe was between his teeth, and he was whistling softly as he worked. Tall, stooped, with shrewd keen eyes, he gave an immediate impression of unconventionality, independence and a sort of lean and wiry virility.

As he dragged crates about, segregated several scores of shabby books in one corner, paused to look sharply at a canvass and straighten a toppling lamp, Jennifer grew more and more absorbed in watching him. She jumped and started back as he said conversationally:

"Come in if you want to. What are you doing out on that porch at nine o'clock at night anyway?"

For one second Jennifer thought only of flight. Then dignity and common sense came to her aid; she apeared in the opening of the nearer door and smiled at him shyly.

"I came up to hang out some dish towels," she explained. "But it was such a beautiful night I walked on the roofs. I didn't know anyone lived here."

"Nobody has until today. I'm moving in. You live next door?"

"Not next door. Halfway down the block. But the roofs are all the same level."

"Come in and sit down. I'll take a breathing spell. I only got my stuff in here at six o'clock and I don't know where to begin. Your name is..?"

"Jennifer Richie."

"And you're fourteen?"

"I'm past nineteen. I look awful.." Jennifer murmured, suddenly conscious of her appearance, with both hands smoothing her hair.

"You're all right. You appear damp. What'd you do, fall down in a puddle?"

"No. Washing dish towels."

"Of course. Well, my name's Montgomery Smith. And there you have my history. An impressive start and a sudden fizzle out into the commonplace."

"This isn't commonplace," Jennifer said simply with a glance about. "It's a studio, isn't it? It seems very fascinating to me. And this terrace—you could do anything with that."

"Have breakfast out there?"

"I never thought of that." Her eyes were alight. "But it would be wonderful to have breakfast out there, wouldn't it?"

"It's a north light, you see?"

She looked at him with the faithful eyes of a setter. "The stars, you mean?"

"No north light. An artist," he explained, "always likes a north light."

"Oh, and have you got one?" she asked still uncertain.

"The Lord has provided me with one," Montgomery explained. "The sun neither rises nor sets in the north. The light on your model is always the same"

"I like to know things like that," she said finally, half to herself.

"And black stockings for sharks," the artist added. This completely confused her.

"Black stockings," she repeated vaguely. Was he a little crazy?

"You've not read Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine?" he asked.

"No."

"It's a book by a writer of yesteryear," Montgomery said, resuming his activities with boxes and crates. "The writer was one Frank R. Stockton I never read it myself—it was before my day. But in it an extremely practical New England woman taking an ocean trip, announces that she always wears black stockings in case of accident at sea because they will render her legs invisible to sharks."

"Oh, but that's crazy!" said Jennifer laughing.

POINT TRAVERSE

Large Horned Owl With 54 Inch Wingspread Shot

These birds become numerous in the winter at which time their numbers may be increased by emigrants from the north. There was an influx of horned owls in Prince Edward County in 1936.

92nd Birthday.

Point Traverse's grand old lady, Mrs. Phoebe Rorabeck, observed her 92nd birthday on Thursday, Nov. 28th.

Mrs. Rorabeck was feted at a family dinner attended by a few intimate friends. She enjoys fair health and is very active about her home.

C.H. Ketcheson And Son in Money At Winter Fair

The father and son combination of Clem H. Ketcheson and son of Sidney township was eminently successful at the grain show in connection with the recent Royal Winter Fair at Toronto.

Mr. Ketcheson and his son Hudson showed two lots of oats, one of barley and oats and wheat in the sheaf and were successful in getting "in the money" on all entries. On the sheaf grain, Mr. Ketcheson won fourth place on both oats and wheat, while on barley he placed ninth and 14th and 15th on the two lots of oats shown.

Mr. Ketcheson has long taken an interest in the growing of seed grains and is a regular exhibitor at all the fall fairs in the Bay of Quinte district.

CAPTAIN CLEARED OF CHARGES

Manila, Dec. 4 — (AP)—Capt. Jose P. Paurel III, son of the president of the puppet Philippine Republic under the Japanese, has been cleared of desertion and misbehavior charges after a long investigation, Philippine Army headquarters announced today. His father is free on $25,000 bail pending trial on charges of collaboration.

Convention Hears Several Speakers Discuss Measures To Improve Cheese Industry

Fullest co-operation between the milk producers, the cheese maker and exporters will be necessary for Canada to maintain her place as a cheese exporter in the face of world-wide competition, members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association were tol this morning.

Speaking at the association annual convention Mr. W. O. Coone, of Elgin, president of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, told of his recent trip to the United Kingdom to study cheese marketing problems in that country. Canada will have to produce the highest quality cheddar cheese to continue exporting on a large scale in the face of competitions from the other countries.

New Regulations Outlined

J. L. Baker, creamery instructor with the dairy branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture told of proposed new regulations which are being suggested with the view of increasing the quality of Canadian cheese. Mr. Baker delivered the address in the absence of C. E. Lackner, director of dairying for the province.

Professor of Dairying for the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, W. H. Sproule, spoke of proposals designed to attract and train higher qualified men for the dairy industry. Increased remuneration for cheese and butter makers would be necessary to make a dairy career attractive, he said.

Tribute Paid Makers

Jack M. Bain, Chief Dairy Instructor for Central and Western Ontario, paid tribute to job which cheesemakers had accomplished during the past season in the face of handicaps of late delivered supplies and equipment. He quoted comparative figures showing cheese production for the two districts to be down considerably this season.

All sessions of the association convention this year have been well attended with registration at Wednesday noon nearing the 150 mark. Association president Douglas Rowe of Warkworth is acting as chairman for all sessions.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Dec. 4 —(CP)—Prices were down narrowly at noon but the early afternoon brought an up-turn that erased the losses. Trading continued in light volume however. Turnover for the first three hours totalled 332,000 shares.

Smelters gained 1¼, Nickel ⅜ and Quebec Manitou at 1.15 was up about 10 cents. In the golds prices were higher for Pamour, Osisko, Detta, Pickle Crow, Elder, Louvicourt and others.

The liquor, steel and food stocks ruled higher. Some of the papers also firmed. International Paper gained a point. Western Oils continued in light trade at small gains for Calmont, Calgary-Edmonton and Pacific Pete.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 4 —(CP)—Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs were unchanged at Stratford, to farmers $20.40, to truckers $20.55, delivered; unchanged at Barrie and Brantford $20.60, delivered; in markets reporting early today.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 4 — (AP) — Erratic moves ruled the stock market today as Wall Street watched anxiously for a hint of future business prospects from the Washington courtroom where miners' chief John L. Lewis appeared for a contempt sentence.

Quotations were mixed near the fourth hour.

Commission houses said optimism stemmed from belief in some quarters that attempts to break the coal deadlock were being undertaken along with the court action and that expected new labor control legislation would be constructive.

JACOBS, RULER OF FIGHT GAME FOR TEN YEARS, ILL

Suffers Cerebral Hemorrhage Which Leaves Him Semi-Conscious

By SID FEDER

The 66-year-old Jacobs, who bucked mighty Madison Square Garden at its peak of control, made it capitulate to him and went on to rule the fight game for 10 years, was stricken late yesterday.

Early today, doctors reported it was a question of time alone for the head of a $1,000,000 a year business.

"We're still in the woods," said Jacobs' personal physician, Dr. Vincent Nardiello. "If the acute condition subsides in the 48 hours after he was stricken, he'll make the grade. His blood pressure has come down. His pulse is better and he can swallow again. But he is in a grave condition, and it is now entirely a matter of waiting."

Suffered Minor Stroke

Just a month ago, the man who has controlled virtually every champion from heavyweight down to lightweight since he signed up the exclusive services of Joe Louis in the mid-30's, suffered a thrombosis—minor facial paralysis. That cleared up in 18 hours, and he returned Nov. 14 to his spacious Twentieth Century sporting club in Madison Square Garden.

Dr. Nardiello believes that might have been a "tip off" of some more serious trouble.

The man famed as the custodian of "Jacobs Beach" got his start when a newspaper circulation manager gave him two free tickets to a small-club fight, and someone paid him $2 for them, much to his amazement. This started him to ticket speculation and an assortment of promotions. He got into fistic promotion as somewhat of a "behind-the-scene" associate of the late colorful Tex Rickard. After Rickard's death, the Garden, controlling boxing, had some differences with the operators of the annual milk fund shows, who asked the operators to promote their fights.

The first was the Barney Ross-Billy Petrolle brawl in the Coliseum, far uptown in the Bronx, in 1933.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 4 (CP)—Queer things happen in the boxing business.

Bantamweight champion Jackie Peterson of Glasgow "knocked himself out" with a punch against Theo Medina of France. Jackie missed, lost his balance, flopped face forward to the mat and locked a leg muscle. He was counted out.

Londoners Peter Kane and Norman Lewis met at Albert Hall. Kane landed a right-hand jab to Lewis' jaw and Lewis automatically put his head back to "ride" the blow. He tried to right it again and couldn't, so dropped to the canvas and was counted out.

Medical explanation was that there was "involuntary muscle contraction" which might occur once in 20,000 times under similar circumstances. Lewis' head was "straightened out" after 15 minutes' massage.

Victor Hodgkinson, 27-year-old bachelor of Holywell, Flintshire, won £30,319 ($121,276) in a penny-point football pool, and immediately started to worry—how long he would be able to remain single when the news of his success was made known. Vic, boilerman at a paper mill, shared his winnings with his brother, Richard, an insurance agent.

Latest word is that he has managed to steer clear of "feminine" traps.

The Middlesex championships opened in the morning when no one could see the finish of a drive because of dense fog, yet not a ball was lost.

Tom Adams of Grimsdyke led the field by two strokes with a brilliant two-under-par 72 but his game was shot in the afternoon, under brilliant sunshine, and three disastrous holes gave him an 80 and third place with 152.

Charlie Whitcombe marked up his eighth tournament victory since 1927 with two rounds of 74, a stroke better than Algy Matthews of Potter's Bar, London.

This deal could come under the heading of "high finance":—Mike Quick of Warrington in the English Rugby League was transferred to Featherstone Rovers for £500 ($2,000)—seven times more than the gate money Featherstone took in their last match.

Golden View II, winner of the last Irish Grand National, crashed to his death when racing Prince Regent in the Champion Steeplechase at Aintree, Lancashire. It was the Irish horse's first appearance over the Liverpool fences and he was sent in the hope he would run well enough to justify inclusion in the Grand National next spring.

BRITISH BOXERS OF LOW CALIBRE SAY EXPERTS

Not One Who Could Seriously Threaten a World Titleholder

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 4 (CP)—Despite high-powered ballyhoo, admission prices as high as 20 guineas ($84) and great enthusiasm, analysis of British boxing reveals there isn't a fighter in this old kingdom who could seriously threaten a world titleholder.

Temperatures of sports writers and fans have sunk to depths over promoter Jack (King) Solomons' bread - winners — heavyweight champion Bruce Woodcock and a light-heavyweight champ Freddie Mills.

The "hot" season started last May 14 when Mills was knocked out in the 10th round by American Gus Lesnevich. The faithful felt Freddie made it a great fight and big things could be expected of him.

Four days later Woodcock was knocked out in the fifth round by Tami Mauriello at New York. Bruce made a tremendous hit and a few rash individuals connected his name with Joe Louis.

Three weeks later Woodcock and Mills met in London and the heavyweight won on points in 10 rounds. Everybody was happy because (a) Mills stayed the distance and (b) Woodcock's form was "tremendous."

The "bring-on-Lesnevich" cry was heard by Solomons. He did, and Bruce knocked him out in eight rounds.

A return Woodcock-Mauriello battle in London seemed natural but early this month American heavyweight Joe Baksi chopped Mills to pieces in six rounds.

"It was a badly-matched fight" screamed the experts. "It was too much to ask Freddie to give away 28 pounds. This should never happen again." Sports writers "advised" and "pleaded" with Woodcock to steer clear of "this tough American."

Now there's a good chance of the British Empire welterweight title going to Canada. Negotiations are underway for such a bout with Montreal's Johnny Greco and British champ Ernie Roderick in London. Roderich, 34, held the British middleweight title until a month ago when a green fighter, Vince Hawkins, outpointed him.

Calgary Stampeders, Canadian amateur hockey champions, invited by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to represent Canada at the 1947 European hockey championships at Prague Feb. 15 to Feb. 23, reluctantly refused the honor, it was announced late last night at Calgary. Reason given for the refusal was that the Calgary management would not be justified in taking senior hockey away from Calgary fans for the 2½ months demanded in the invitation "in order to provide exhibition games for Europeans."

Lloyd Turner, manager of the Victoria Arena at Calgary, making the announcement, said the team "would have loved to accept the invitation if it had been

New Spirit of Conciliation Seen as U.N. Sub-Committee Unanimously Adopts U.S. Plan

By MAX HARRELSON

Lake Success, N.Y., Dec. 5. (AP) — United Nations efforts to set up world-wide arms-limitation machinery started off on a note of harmony today when a sub-committee agreed unanimously to accept the United States plan as a basis for discussion.

The new spirit of conciliation, initiated yesterday by Foreign Minister Molotov's agreement that any inspection and control agencies to enforce an arms-reduction program must be free of the veto, was evident from the opening of the new 20-member drafting sub-committee's first session.

Senator Tom Connally of the United States and Mr. Molotov started the session by proposing that Assembly President Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium be elected chairman. The sub-committee agreed unanimously.

Dr. Spaak immediately announced that the committee would begin a sentence-by-sentence discussion of the American resolution which provides that the atomic bomb be given top priority and that "practical and effective" control machinery must be set up without any big power veto.

No Objection To Plan

There was no objection when Dr. Spaak, in response to a question from Senator Connally, asserted that the United States resolution would be used as the "basis for discussion".

The committee approved the first sentence without a dissenting vote. This merely declared that "the General Assembly recognizes the necessity of an early regulation and reduction of armaments."

Meanwhile, Bernard M. Baruch, elated over Russia's stand that the veto must not hinder inspection and control organizations watching over world arms limitation, was expected to urge swift, positive action toward curbing atomic energy for peaceful uses.

Mr. Baruch, the United States delegate on the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission, was said authoritatively to have prepared a statement and some resolutions for presentation at an important policy-charting meeting of the Commission.

Just what he will propose has been closely guarded by the delegation but observers pointed out that the United States wants action on the atomic question. This was said to be especially the case since Foreign Minister Molotov of Russia, made a statement yesterday which United Nations delegates had awaited for a considerable time.

M. Molotov got down to brass tacks on the inspection and control features of disarmament when he told the U. N. political committee that organizations should be set up within the framework of the U. N. Security Council for the inspection and control of arms limitation regulations.

Atomic Weapons

Russia has proposed general disarmament but the Russian delegation and the United States agree that atomic weapons should have top priority in considering control.

M. Molotov said the veto power of the five permanent members of the Security Council had no relation to the work of the commissions.

Russia, for long weeks of debate in the commission, has insisted that inspection would be a violation of national sovereignty and urged instead that atomic energy be regulated by an international treaty abolishing atomic weapons and providing for individual national control of offenders.

Thus the matter stood until October when Premier Stalin said in a statement that there should be international control for atomic energy. M. Molotov followed that yesterday with his clear statement, in answer to repeated questions from other delegations.

Sub-committees on disarmament and Spain, appointed by the political committee after long debate yesterday were called to meet today. As were a third sub-committee charged with drafting an acceptable compromise on the veto question, and the political committee.

Britain and the U. S. refused to vote or to record themselves as abstaining when the political committee decided to name a sub-committee to attempt to resolve the Spanish question. Both powers maintained that a sub-committee would be ineffective.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 5 — (CP)—Synopsis: The cold wave which moved down over the prairies yesterday afternoon pushed eastward into Northern Ontario during the night. Temperatures for the most part however remained above zero. This cold wave is expected to continue its eastward motion and will not therefore cause markedly falling temperatures in Southern Ontario. Temperatures will fall to slightly below freezing this evening and tonight but are expected to rise well above freezing tomorrow.

HINDU-MOSLEM DEADLOCK STILL UNBROKEN ISSUE

Govt. Fears Failure Of Two Parties To Compromise Will Cause More Strife

London, Dec. 5 (AP) — The British government was unable today to break the Hindu-Moslem deadlock over Indian independence, and informed sources said one of the first effects may be prolongation of Britain's stay in India.

The rival Indian leaders, now in London, will not be called into round table conference. This decision was reached today after a special session of the cabinet, which followed a meeting between Viceroy Viscount Wavell and the cabinet mission to India. The Indian constituent assembly meeting set for Dec. 9 to draft a constitution, seemed doomed before it could begin.

If M. A. Jinnah of the Moslem League stays away from the Dec. 9 meeting, as seems virtually certain now, the chances of agreement over India's constitution are "very slender indeed," informed persons said.

Nehru has indicated his intention to leave London Saturday or Sunday. Jinnah and the Moslem League Secretary, Liaquat Ali Khan, are not expected to stay longer than a few days. Sardar Baldev Singh, the Sikh leader, is expected to accompany Nehru back to India.

Government sources expressed fear that the Hindu-Moslem failure to compromise on their differences presaged new waves of fratricidal strife in India.

They said that when the danger of civil war was pointed out to Nehru by Mr. Attlee and his team of mediators, the Congress party leader calmly asserted that his group proposed to carry on the establishment of Indian sovereignty regardless.

Nehru was also quoted as having said the writing of a constitution for a united India, within the framework of the British plan, would be continued and, as soon as India was formally free, Britain would be asked to withdraw "all her men and all her works."

Federal Sessions Should be Cut Down Says Drew

Toronto, Dec. 5 —(CP)— Some of the country's ablest men would decline to run for federal office unless length of parliament's annual session is cut, Premier Drew of Ontario last night told 300 University of Toronto students at a Hart House debate.

"We won't be able to get people with any other occupation to run for Ottawa unless we can cut down the time taken by sessions," he said. The federal house had sat through more than nine of the 12 months ending Aug. 1.

Parliament could reduce sessions if the Dominion government returned to the provinces authority over "matters of local concern" it assumed during the war, Premier Drew said.

The undergraduates, by a vote of 145 to 125, rejected a resolution declaring that maintenance of an effective federal system of government in Canada "demands an assurance of the taxing powers of each individual government corresponding with the field of responsibility given it under the British North America Act."

Will Not Accept for Points in U.S. Commodities Not Allowed by I.C.C.

Montreal, Dec. 5 (CP)—J. A. Brass, General Secretary of the Railway Association of Canada, announced today that effective at 12:01 a.m., Friday, Canadian Railways will not accept for rail shipment to points in the United States any commodities except those permitted under the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission's embargo on express and freight.

Mr. Brass said that, insofar as movement of commodities in Canada strictly is concerned, there are no restrictions.

The I.C.C.'s embargo, effective after midnight tonight and ordered Tuesday night as a result of the coal strike in the United States, excepted food, livestock and poultry feed, livestock and poultry dry and liquid fuels, newspapers, magazines, newsprint, printing ink, water purification chemicals, insecticides and fungicides, ice, drinking water and some other supplies considered necessary for the public health and safety.

Mr. Brass said that, in view of the fact that American railways will not be permitted to accept other commodities and supplies at international points of transfer, the Canadian railways cannot accept them for shipment to the United States.

President Will Broadcast Appeal to Soft Coal Miners

Washington, Dec. 5 —(AP)— President Truman has decided to make a broadcast speech within a few days in which he will appeal to the soft coal miners to return to work, it was learned today.

Authoritative sources said today that the time for Mr. Truman's speech had not been definitely fixed but that it will take place within the next three or four days.

These sources said the President has had under consideration for some time a talk with the people on the economy-strangling effects of the coal strike.

He has withheld decision on such a speech, reporters were advised, while awaiting the outcome of court proceedings against John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers.

The White House would not comment officially on the situation. End of the Lewis contempt trial had brought fresh prodding by Congress members for a radio appeal to miners, or some other action aimed at getting coal production.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (Dem.-Colo.) suggested a fireside chat and there were indications this was getting serious consideration at the White House. A presidential aide told reporters it had been discussed but that no decision had been reached.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (Rep.-Wis.) renewed an earlier proposal that the draft law be used.

"Now that the court has acted I believe the President should use his powers to immediately draft John L. Lewis into the armed services," Senator McCarthy said in an interview.

POPOWICHES DIE ON GALLOWS FOR MURDER OF NATO

Authorities Refuse Request of Couple to See Each Other Before Execution

Welland, Dec. 5 — (CP) — Relatives early today claimed the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. George Popowich, who died on the gallows in Welland county jail not long after midnight in the first execution of a married couple in Ontario in more than 80 years.

The 45-year-old Popowich and his 38-year-old wife Elizabeth had been convicted of murder in the robbery-slaying of Louis Nato, Thorold merchant, last June. Ottawa authorities announced yesterday that an appeal for clemency had been denied. Rev. Dr. Harvey Forster, their spiritual adviser here, said a last-minute appeal made directly to Justice Minister St. Laurent, now in New York, was fruitless.

Almost until they walked up the gallows' steps, the Popowich's had clung to a hope of reprieve. When they were advised the appeal had been rejected, Popowich took the news quietly and said to the warden: "Give me a shave—I don't want to die with a grimy face." His wife was highly nervous at that time.

Request Refused

George Popowich was executed first, and was pronounced dead at 12:15 a.m. Mrs. Popowich was pronounced dead at 1 a.m. They were buried today in Welland's Woodlawn Cemetery.

It was understood that shortly before the executions both expressed a desire to see each other, and that the request was refused. When Mrs. Popowich confronted the hangman, she turned to the official witnesses and said "Good-bye — God bless you all."

Nato in a death-bed statement had accused the Popowich couple of beating him up in his car and robbing him of $180. Police said that Nato had been "taken for a ride" and beaten into unconsciousness. He stumbled to a paper mill office early June 16 after finding himself on a country road, his hands and ankles bound with rope, his trousers and $180 missing.

The trial lasted four days and ended in conviction Sept. 12. Ontario Court of Appeal postponed the original execution date of Nov. 12 to Dec. 5, but rejected the appeal.

Mrs. Popowich has two daughters, 18 and 13, by a former marriage.

DELEGATES SET 1947 OBJECTIVES FOR AGRICULTURE

Adequate Payment Will be Made to Western Farmers for Every Acre of Barley

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—Canada's 1947 food production targets, developed at three days of discussion by delegates to the Dominion-Provincial Agriculture Conference, were on the record today for consideration by Canadian farmers.

One of the most important of the recommendations made yesterday as the fifth annual conference concluded was one to the Federal Government that an adequate payment be made to Prairie Province farmers for every acre of land they seed to barley.

This suggestion, which Agriculture Minister Gardiner said would be placed before the cabinet, arose from the need for a higher production of the feed grains barley and oats if the present downward trend in the output of livestock and dairy products was to be halted and reversed.

It also was in line with the conference recommendation that barley acreage in 1947 be increased to 8,000,000 acres from the 6,730,500 sown this year and that oats acreage be boosted to 14,310,200 acres from this year's total of 13,162,700.

Wheat Acreage Set

The 1947 wheat acreage was set at 24,000,000 acres, down 1,900,000 from the 25,000,000 acres seeded this year, while the rye acreage was reduced to 487,100 from 518,000.

The recommendation dealing with an acreage payment on barley suggested that the present 15-cent premium paid farmers for each bushel of barley sold be removed but that the payment on freight assistance on feed shipped to the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia be continued.

Suggestions were made during the conference discussions that the acreage payment be $5 an acre and that the present price ceiling of 64 3-4 cents a bushel on barley be maintained. The suggestion for a payment originally was made by John Wesson, President of the Saskatchewan wheat pool.

Drew to Discuss Amendments To Liquor Control Act

Toronto, Dec. 5 — (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario in a broadcast address tonight will discuss amendments to the Ontario Liquor Control Act, it was learned today. The cabinet met this morning and gave its approval to the speech.

Premier Drew's speech is to be heard at 8 p.m. over a CBC Ontario network. Advance billing called it "an address of great public importance."

Faces Charge Of Plane Theft

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Arrested last Aug. 18 in Tampa, Fla., William Buzun, 21, of suburban Mimico is back in Toronto today to stand trial for theft of an airplane.

Buzun's travels started Aug. 12 when he took off from Barker Field here in a light aircraft for a two-hour flight. Four days later the plane was found at Darien, N.Y., but there was no sign of the pilot.

Tampa police, looking for an Indian on a different charge, took the heavily-tanned Buzun into custody but held him on charges of illegal entry into the United States. Later they learned the Federal Bureau of Investigation was looking for Buzun in connection with the alleged theft of the plane.

CITY OF OAKLAND A.F.L. LEADERS REACH ACCORD

Police Not to Be Used In Breaking Picket Lines, City Officials To Remain Neutral

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 5. (AP) —The City of Oakland and A.F.L. leaders today reached an agreement to end a general strike which has strangled commerce in East Bay cities for two days.

City Manager John F. Hassler, of Oakland, said a return to work order would be given to all union business agents at a meeting today at 10 a.m., (1 p.m. E.S.T.)

A union statement confirmed the agreement based on the conditions that police would not be used in breaking picket lines and that city officials remain neutral in labor disputes. Hassler said he gave assurance meeting the union conditions.

The agreement was reached at an early morning meeting after some 1,000,000 East Bay residents found all transportation tied up, food and other necessities in short supply and the City of Oakland under a state of emergency with full police powers voted to the Mayor.

The general strike, fifth of its kind in the history of the labor movement in the United States, moved toward a close shortly after announcement that the A.F.L. Teamsters Union and the Independent Machinists Union would go back to work today.

Still strikebound are the Kahn and Hastings Retail stores, source of the original dispute last October when the Retail Merchant Association declined to negotiate a contract for the two stores alone, but held out for blanket negotiations for all member stores when and if the union majority of employee were union members.

The general strike began Tuesday after escorts of Berkeley and Oakland police convoyed 12 truckloads of merchandise into the two stores, through picket lines, Sunday morning.

Mr. Hassler, who was named city manager after the strike began, said he had given the strategy committee assurances covering the unions' demands "consistent with the laws of our land, as far as city government is concerned".

Dave Beck, head of the Western Conference of Teamsters and Pacific Coast A.F.L. Labor leader, broke off the first large segment of labor support by ordering his teamsters to "break the general strike" immediately because it was punishing "innocent employers, workers and the public". Local Teamster leaders had no immediate comment.

Roy N. Brown, general vice-president of the Independent International Association of Machinists, instructed district representatives by telephone to get their men back on the job today.

Newly-Married Couple Recover Wedding Clothes

Baltimore, Dec. 5 —(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Allen Stoutt, Hamilton honeymooners, had their wedding clothes back today, and a 26-year-old Negro was under sentence of a year for the theft.

The couple testified in court yesterday that they were stopping off here en route to Miami, Fla., on their wedding trip when several suits, a suitcaseful of clothing and a hatbox containing Mrs. Stoutt's bridal veil were stolen from their parked automobile.

Makes No Move To Halt Strike Despite Huge Fine

$3,510,000 Fines Levied Against Lewis and Union

By STERLING F. GREEN

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP) — John L. Lewis grimly carried the crushing coal strike into its third week today despite $3,510,000 in fines and prospect of a new contempt citation.

From every outward indication, the bushy-browed miners' leader was determined to take jail, or what may come, rather than yield to a court order he contends is illegal and withdraw his termination of the United Mine Workers' contract with the government.

With the grim deadlock confronting the United States, a group of railway unions issued a plea that Mr. Lewis and the government both call the whole thing off and let a presidential commission settle all issues.

Counsel for the mine workers and for the government pressed plans to get an early supreme court ruling on the contempt of court conviction under which Judge T. Alan Goldsborough fined the U.M.W. $3,500,000 and Mr. Lewis $10,000 personally.

The justice department hoped to steer the Lewis-U.M.W. appeal directly into the highest court, by-passing the in-between Circuit Court of Appeals. The high court could conceivably announce Monday whether it will take the case without waiting for an Appeals Court ruling.

Mr. Lewis and his lawyers would not talk with reporters about their plans regarding the strike. But their demeanor hinted there would be no wavering from the walkout which Judge Goldsborough yesterday denounced as an "evil, demoniac, monstrous thing." Rather, Mr. Lewis' defiant courtroom behavior when sentenced gave his miners the cue—stand your ground.

Can Start Second Action

And if the strike goes on, Justice Department officials said they could start a second contempt action. This could bring a jail sentence for Mr. Lewis instead of just a fine, and could bite another great piece out of the U. M. W.'s $13,500,000 treasury.

A fine of $250,000 a day — as it figured out for the first 14 days of the strike — is suitable penalty for the "hunger and cold, and unemployment and destitution" which has been caused, Judge Goldsborough ruled.

The court emphasized also that Mr. Lewis deserved jail, in his opinion, and only escaped it because the government so recommended.

A government official, who is in daily touch with government strategy, told reporters that evidence is being collected to support prosecution under the Smith-Conally Act — also known as the War Labor Disputes Act — which forbids strikes against the government and provides a top penalty of $5,000 and one year in jail for persons who "coerce, instigate, induce, conspire with or encourage" any strike in a government-held plant.

Issues Injunction

When Judge Goldsborough imposed the big fines, he issued a temporary injunction. It requires Mr. Lewis to take exactly the same action as the earlier restraining order which he ignored with the resulting contempt conviction.

It tells him to end the strike by withdrawing his notice which broke off the contract covering the government-held coal mines.

The government could go on charging new "contempts" as long as Mr. Lewis fails to obey. It would take only four such fines as yesterday's to break the union's treasury.

In fact, A. F. L. general counsel Joseph A. Padway angrily told the court yesterday that this was the exact intent of the "cruel and unusual" fine. He declared it was designed to "break the union politically, financially and morally."

San Francisco, Philadelphia Lead For U. N. Capital

Lake Success, N.Y., Dec. 5 — (AP) — San Francisco and Philadelphia emerged today as the leading contenders in the battle over a permanent home for the United Nations, with the west coast city having an early edge of the basis of opening speeches in the 54-country headquarters committee.

Discussion was scheduled to resume this morning with India, the Soviet Ukraine, Iraq, Honduras, The Netherlands, Australia and Russia on the speakers' list. India and Iran have said off the floor they would back San Francisco.

Another meeting will be held tonight in an effort to speed a decision.

Boston, the fourth city visited by an inspecting sub-committee, has not been mentioned and generally was considered out of the running.

The trend of the early debate was believed to have set the pattern which finds the Pacific states, the Arab countries and part of the Latin-American group in favor of the west coast.

The Philadelphia group, spearheaded by Britain, was expected to draw general backing from the countries of western Europe and some from South America.

Russia and her supporters were plumping for New York, which could mean either the old World's Fair site in Flushing Meadows or the White Plains area in adjoining Westchester county.

The United States still insisted it was remaining neutral despite strenuous efforts leading to army agreement to turn over San Francisco's Presidio site to the U. N. France, the other member of the Big Five, contended it had not reached a decision within its delegation.

Regardless of the outcome of the debate, which was expected to bring a vote by tomorrow, persons high in the secretariat estimated it would be five to seven years before the U. N. could move from its interim headquarters here.

YALE MAY HAVE TO EXTEND HOLIDAY SEASON TO SAVE FUEL

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 5 (AP) —Yale University today was faced with the possible necessity of prolonging its Christmas vacation period to conserve fuel. William W. Randolph, University Service Bureau head, said the situation was "serious," and might mean that the vacation period would have to be extended.

Police Follow Footprints on Skis For Five Miles, Two Men Are Held

Kirkland Lake, Dec. 5 — (CP) —Arrested after a five-mile chase on skis, two Montreal men are in custody here today following an attack and holdup last night of a war veteran and his housekeeper in a small general store at nearby Dane.

The two, Roland Decarie, age 25, and Gaston Lederierre, age 24, were arrested after being tracked through deep snow by two Kirkland Lake policemen. They are in cells of the Teck township police department, awaiting the laying of charges.

Police said N. Robar, of Dane, told them that the pair entered his store on the pretext of buying soft drinks. One is said to have walked over to the counter, striking the proprietor with a wooden club before rifling the cash register. Only $15 was taken. Part of the money was scattered on the floor.

Brushing aside a curtain which covers the entrance to the veteran's living quarters, one of the thieves is said to have attacked Mr. Robar's housekeeper, Marie McPhee. Miss McPhee was struck over the head with such force that the wooden club was shattered.

It is said the men escaped into nearby woodland and police took up the search on skis. They followed footprints in the snow for five miles before reaching the men.

Police say they broke into a shack building after coming out of the bush. The condition of Mr. Robar and Miss McPhee is said to be good.

Economic History of America Is Based on 'Free Markets' Cheese Makers Are Told

Economic problems facing Canadian government and industry as the result of transition of her factories from wartime to peacetime production, were outlined to members of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at their annual banquet held in Tabernacle United Church Wednesday evening.

The banquet was staged by the association to conclude their two-day convention which had been staged at the Quinte Hotel where ranking dairy officials and other experts were heard by members. The banquet was attended by well over 400 members, their wives, members of county council and others.

As guest speaker at the banquet Mr. W. F. Loughead, Economist with the Canadian Bank of Commerce, told his listeners that much of the economic history of North America had been based on what may be called "free exchange" or "free markets." But in recent years under the necessity of war production price and wages have been continually pressing against arbitrarily determined ceilings.

Dangerous to Prices.

Partisan groups have supported upward adjustments presumably on the grounds that their parochial or limited interests would benefit. This attitude, when localized, was declared to be bad enough, but when it becomes widespread it is dangerous to the end that prices are beyond the reach of the average citizen. "When this occurs further disturbances emerge including the piling up of inventory and resulting unemployment, bringing with it a demand for government intervention.

The maintenance of voluntary markets and individual freedom on one hand, or the reversion to some form of stateism on the other was declared by the speaker to be the central problem of transition. Either there must be belief in the framework of law in which an individual is free to own the results of his own efforts, or the belief that a person has the right to take something from his neighbor, perhaps because he produces more.

Production Up

National production at the outset of the war in goods and services was indicated by the speaker to be about 4.5 million dollars at 1939 prices. Early in 1940 Canada began to orient her productive machinery to the necessities of war and by 1944 industrial plant and equipment had been increased 8.5 billions of dollars. In four years Canada had doubled her output, and at a time when 800,000 of her most employable men folk were engaged in warfare.

However, according to government estimates approximately 60 per cent of her wartime production was earmarked for the fighting fronts. This meant that a balance of roughly 3.5 billions of goods and services was divided among domestic customers — a reduction of 20 per cent from 1939, but with a reduction in domestic population due to the overseas forces.

"The fiction of prosperity was based on dollars, not goods," reminded Mr. Loughead. "Dollars were necessary to assist in obtaining the volume of production, but obviously too many dollars, against too few domestic goods necessitated rationing, price control, and other retarding fiscal devices."

Need Full Employment

The big question in the post war period was whether the 'know how' and productive equipment can be utilized to the extent it was used during the war. On this is based the answer to "full employment".

"Can Canada expect sustained markets abroad to the volume of wartime exports, and what rate and volume of consumption can be expected at home?" asked the speaker. It was on these two difficult questions that the level of Canadian prosperity hung, he said.

The importance of "buying" and "selling" in the nation's economy was stressed by the speaker who stated that the world would wait with interest the result of the forthcoming trade conferences in London.

Matter of Tariffs.

The matter of tariffs was mentioned, but it was held that it would be possible to eliminate tariffs completely and yet by means of administrative controls impose trade barriers equally effective, if not more effective than tariffs.

"Secondly, while it is assumed that trade talks will take place in a spirit of co-operation many countries may have to be prepared to give up certain advantages which might be unpalatable politically."

To illustrate the speaker asked what the reaction would be to a flood of foreign goods in a country that cannot employ fully those seeking employment. However, this is not to say that multilateralism is not a desirable end and failure of achievement in the first instance should not divert us to narrow nationalism. Stability of the American economy was declared to be of the highest importance to the success of international agreements.

In reference to the term "full employment," Mr. Lougheed indicated that the term "high level employment" may be much closer to the mark. This term as currently used meant industrial employment and suggests the output of goods and services.

Need Steady Market.

The necessity of a steady market to keep the wheels of industry turning was stressed by the speaker. Manufacturers must not find their goods backing up in their warehouses for if they do production slows down.

Looking at the framework in another way the speaker stated that the man today is both a producer and consumer. As a producer he sells his goods for money and buys goods or services. However a curious characteristic of human nature was to put almost all emphasis on selling and virtually ignore the role as a consumer. In any event money becomes the motivating force.

Must Complete

Now any one knows that if two similar products are offered at dissimilar prices the natural tendency—all other things being equal—is for the consumer to take the lower-priced product. We now are faced with the problem of competing in foreign markets with the United States, England and other countries. We must learn this very simple characteristic of human behaviour. On the home front the problem is equally important. On a fixed income a consumer is limited in scope. When a product normally purchased increases relatively in price and it is needed then the consumption of other products at the usual or established rate suffers. When the demand falls off who bears the burden? The producers of the product—true—but also labor suffers. Hence pricing becomes a problem of community interest not merely an isolated issue.

Must Learn to Operate

If we are to have an industrial economy we must learn to operate it. Much has been said about Russia bridging a gap from ignorance and backwardness to influence in a very short period of time. We, in this country, have had an industrial evolution during the past war. England underwent industrialization in a half century; half a decade is not sufficient to solve the problems inherent in such a development. Let us not be hasty in expecting automatic reconversion. Rather let us avail ourselves of the knowledge acquired in recent years to bring about a sound foundation of freedom and liberty upon which future generations effectively may build.

Splendid Entertainment

Reeve of Hungerford township Mr. Charles Rush acted as chairman for the evening's entertainment with the guest speaker being introduced by Mr. Clarence Jewell, manager of the Bank of Commerce, Belleville Branch. Mr. Jewell paid tribute to the cheese makers and also to Mr. J. L. Irwin, for their part in the excellence of the exhibition.

Other speakers during the evening included Mack Robertson of Belleville Creameries, and Warden of the county, James Nickle. Horace Palmer, grand championship winner at the cheese show was introduced to those in attendance.

Entertainment was provided by Morley Plunkett's youthful troupe of artists from Kingston. These included Jimmy Good of original Dumbell fame, who delighted with his black face comedy act; Tommy Strickland and his accordian; Miss Margaret Davis, Piano and violin; Connie Wilson and Teresa Summerville, tap dances and Miss Betty Pipe, vocalist.

Municipal Candidates Face Barrage Of Questions From Hecklers at Meeting

(By OBSERVER)

The thirty-sixth annual meeting of the Wharf Street Debating Club was held in their club room last evening. Mayor Follwell and his opponent Alderman "Twig" Woodley each gave a five-minute discourse of what the former has done and what the latter hopes to do.

The Mayor said through co-operative action the Federal government had dredged the harbor and an extension of the dock had been promised with the government footing the bill. The Industrial Commission had succeeded in bringing new industries into Belleville and he had great hopes that three large industries would locate here in the near future. The Parks Board had made a playground supervised by Foster Ward, at a cost of $1,500.00. A city incinerator was a necessity. Land will be purchased for the sites of new industries as at present there were no such facilities for industrial expansion. A real town planning scheme is of first class importance, while a comprehensive housing program is imperative.

Alderman Woodley, who has four years to his credit in the city council, wants to 'step up' and have a couple of years as mayor. He strongly advocated a large building program so that homes could be found for many veterans who have had no chance to secure decent accommodation for themselves and their families. He was in favor of an incinerator.

Ex-Mayor George Reid stated that he never made a statement on the public platform that could be refuted. He wanted $25,000 allocated for the purchase of land for industrial expansion.

Alderman Armstrong stated that 285 building permits had been issued during 1946 and as there was keen competition by all municipalities to secure industries, land must be acquired for such purpose. A new incinerator was a prime necessity.

Alderman Clarke, the treasury watchdog, was against spending another $40,000 on the Fair grounds, the total costs of which amounted to $123,750 to date while the remuneration was but $150 per day for three days annually. He was in favor of an incinerator, cost what it may.

Alderman Follwell wants a new incinerator, $25,000 to be voted to purchase land for industries. Five thousand dollars was a good investment for a special town planning scheme. Over two hundred houses have been built or partially built this year and dearth of material is holding up completion.

The aspirants for aldermanic honors were called upon to explain their programs—should they be elected. Messrs. George Brown, Angus Duffy, Harry Hill, D. Jeffrey, A. Keegan, Bruce Lattimer and Jim Lazenby were each given five minutes to present their views. All wanted a new incinerator, all wanted a progressive housing scheme and industrial expansion. Angus Duffy and Jim Lazenby very forcibly advanced the views of the veterans. No veteran expected a living from any government, but they were entitled to living accommodation for themselves and their families. Ted Schwab was brief and to the point. Get out and vote was his message. Mark Vanner stated that his No. 1 platform was housing.

Contestants for Board of Education were on hand, Enos David, A. Burke, Alex. Nathan, G. Wishart, F. Creeggan and Dick Hart gave brief addresses. Ex-Mayor Mikel appealed for funds to tempt tourists to stay in Belleville. Maurice Callaghan of the Parks Board was the final speaker. He was against incentrator scheme. The twenty-five acres of swamp land was a disgrace to the city and could easily be made into first class industrial sites by the dumping of garbage if such dumping was efficiently supervised by a couple of full time employees. To spend eighty thousand dollars of public money for the proposed incinerator was foolish, he asserted. Foster Ward claimed the biggest assessment in the city. Alderman Hyde stated that two more snow plows were on order but strikes were holding up delivery.

Pertinent Comments.

The annual meeting of the Wharf Street Debating Club is something that must be seen to be believed. An Irishman, when seeing a camel for the first time, said "Begorra, I don't believe it." The same statement can be made about the annual club meeting.

Unless one is thick-skinned and has a keen sense of humor, he should not attempt to give his views to this cosmopolitan audience. If the speaker fails to impress — the crowd will start a conversation among themselves. If the speaker does not appeal to his listeners, he is raucously called upon to "shuddup." Gales of laughter will convulse them when a speaker gets rattled. Sarcastic epithets are hurled at the very staid and sincere type.

Last evening there was a well-fed chap who sat under the very nose of each successive speaker. This chap was the star of the show. In sotto voice he would ask a pertinent question. But he was never offensive. For instance Ex-Mayor Harry Rollins was holding forth about new houses — then the joker chirped "That's right, Harry. You build 'em and I'll heat 'em."—which sally brought down the house.

Good it is to attend this annual talk-fest — and while such sense of humor lasts — while such good natured raillery can be taken — and given — then this Canada of ours need have no fear of dictatorship, for even a Hitler or a Mussolini would be joked out of their martial stride if they had addressed such a gathering as this Wharf Street Debating Club. Democracy will never die while Wharf Street lives.

Some Limitations Accompany Removal Wartime Salaries Order

With the cancellation of the Wartime Salaries Order, salary adjustments which formerly had to be sanctioned by the board in Ottawa, again become a matter to be decided between the employer and employee.

Feeling that there is a certain amount of information which should be brought to the attention of employers in connection with the cancellation of the Wartime Salaries Order, the following letter has been received from K. M. Reid, Inspector of the local Income Tax Office:

"As a result of the cancellation of the Wartime Salaries Order, wartime control over salaries has been lifted. This means that the control of the amount of salary which may be paid by an employer reverts to the employer, subject to the general restriction in the Income War Tax Act as to excessive amounts paid above and beyond what is considered reasonable for the services rendered by the employee.

Another point, which should be brought out, is that no increase in salary can be made retroactive to a period prior to the date of the cancellation of the Wartime Salaries Order. If such increase, as is made, becomes retroactive prior to the date of the cancellation of the Order, even though the increased salary is reasonable, the amount of the increase applicable to the period prior to the date of cancellation will be disallowed for income tax purposes.

Another point, which must be considered, is that employers may now pay bonuses, provided that such bonuses are reasonable. The amount of bonus paid which it is considered is in excess of a reasonable bonus will be disallowed for income tax purposes."

MAX REMINGTON ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CHEESE MAKERS

Max Remington of Newburg will be the new president of the Central Ontario Cheese Bakers' Association for 1947, it was decided at the concluding session of their annual convention held here Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Mr. Remington succeeds Douglas Rowe of Warkworth, who had acted in the above capacity for the past twelve months. Vice president of the Association will be Tom Heath, Hastings county.

Directors named for the next year are: Douglas Rowe, Bert Jones, Tom Heath, Herb Atherton, Max Remington, Earle McNeil and Horace Palmer. The president-elect was chosen by the directorate body at a special meeting.

PRESTO MUSIC CLUB TO PRESENT PROGRAM

Members of the Presto Music Club will present a concert at Bridge Street United Church on Friday evening, the concert to be staged under the auspices of the Woman's Association of the church. Many of Belleville's prominent musicians will take part in the program.

The program will consist of piano and organ duos, piano duet with organ obligato, violin and vocal numbers and readings by Mrs. Ralph Morden. The program will conclude with a Christmas Cantata "Bethlehem" for ladies' chorus and soloists, directed by S. Alec Gordon.

SISTER OF CHIEF BOYD DIES

Brantford, Dec. 5—(CP)—Miss Katie Boyd sister of Daniel F. Boyd, chief of police of Thorold, Ont., died here Tuesday night.

London (CP) — The British Film Institute has recommended that a government inquiry be made into the effect of films on children, with particular reference to children's matinees.

Firm Attitude by United Nations Can Do Much to Preserve Peace

I. Norman Smith, Ottawa Editor, Speaks on International Relations

"If Russia knows that we, the United Nations, will not let her do us harm she may not try to do us harm," said Mr. I. Norman Smith, Associate Editor of The Ottawa Journal, addressing the Belleville Lecture and Study Club in the library of the B.C.I. and V.S. on Wednesday evening.

Speaking directly from personal observations at San Francisco and in Europe Mr. Smith said: "I wish I could tell you something encouraging, but the aspect of international relations is not very cheering, in fact I find it so grave that we should not try to pretend the gravity is not there."

In April 1945 there was a conference held in San Francisco to consider the peace of the world. Two weeks later Germany surrendered, and almost at once the nations were no longer 'One World.' The war was over, meetings dragged, jealousy and pettiness crept into discussions, with Russia unjustly reading a meaning of judgment against her, and a new word was born,—'the veto,'—not of Russia, but of the insistence of all the powers. Russia has been blamed for the veto, but the United States and Great Britain were also interested. Canada would not oppose the insertion of the veto, because Canada thinks no price is too high to pay for the peace charter.

In spite of differences the delegates were still hopeful; feeling there was a desire among many of the nations to work together.

The first meeting in London was held the following January but the sessions were tiring and difficult, with no new frame of internationalism formed. discussions were prolonged, irregular, without point. There was real need of rules and regulations, consequently the meeting bogged down. Molotov showed a mischievous hand, and the other Slavic representatives supported his views, until it was felt that Russia's way of being difficult might cause an unbreachable rift. Next, in New York, during the first meeting of the Security Council, Russia refused to participate in the Iranian dispute.

After attending these meetings Mr Smith spent three months overseas travelling in England, France, Belgium and Germany. He gained some conception of the attitudes of the people of these nations toward the United Nations organization, and the search for peace.

France Friendly to Russia

Mr. Smith continued: "England's victory proved a success. English people pretend their country has not been affected and try to carry on as formerly. In England there is almost no black marketing. In France there is confusion, and hardship and a large black market, with 75 per cent of the food coming through the black market. There is evident everywhere a friendship for Russia. And perhaps France will be the link between the nations and may be responsible for the wooing of Russia into World Friendship."

"In Germany, I passed through Berlin to the region of British Occupation. Everywhere I saw destruction beyond my powers to appreciate or describe. The people are stunned; their cities are rubble. The United Nations have taken away Nazism, but have not given them a satisfactory substitute as yet. Belgium is the lush country of Europe; an extreme contrast to Germany, and the people are intensely interested in the work of the United Nations, anxiously awaiting results. But results are slow in coming; Russia considers herself as being excluded in proposals toward peace. But, it is thought she intentionally clogs the machinery by continuing to dwell upon small and unimportant details. The Allied Control Council seldom meets, because the representatives of the great powers cannot agree, although it has been conceded that they should, and that they must keep Germany from re-arming.

Russia Still Aloof

"At present," said Mr. Smith, "Russia more or less remains aloof, and aloof Russia appears to try to force the United States and Great Britain to do as she wishes, but an aloof Russia may get off the delegation entirely."

"When the General Assembly met in New York there was a vast contrast between the meeting here and the former meeting in San Francisco. Men were now really working, for as many as twenty hours a day. Mr. Truman made at least one outstanding statement in his speech here notably "The United Nations must be used to settle not to air disputes."

Molotov spoke constantly for disarmament, but objected to the United Nations seeing that this is carried out in Russia. He complained and scolded the other nations but did not mention Russian policies, even stooping to deliberate misrepresentation in quoting fro mthe speech made by another delegate.

Inject Propaganda

It is hard to do business with Russians because of propaganda constantly inserted in their debates. They are clever men, able men, speaking without notes, and speaking directly to the ears of every listener throughout the world; they speak past the delegates to people outside the conferences. Other delegates are not reaching the ears of the people of Russia."

Summing up his observations Mr. Smith said in conclusion:

"Russia really seeks to enfeeble the United Nations organization, so that it will never have power to oppose.

"Russia contends that the big powers should run the world,—but I do not believe she wants to conquer the world.

"There are definitely two armed camps,—Russia and the British Empire. We misunderstand Russian attitudes and are quick to blame her, but the British Empire and the United States are not wholly without blame either.

"So this is not one World,—It is a world of great powers still. The United Nations may influence these powers, but will not begin to keep the peace."

IN MEMORIAM

HANSEY — In loving memory of our son and brother, Pte. John W. Hansey, H. and P. E. Regiment, killed in action in Italy, December 8th., 1944.

Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And there, sometime, we'll understand.

HANSEY — In fond memory of my brother, Pte. John W. Hansey, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, killed in action in Italy, December 8th., 1944.

Soldier rest, thy warfare o'er,
Sleep the sleep that knows no breaking.
Dream of battlefields no more,
Days of danger, nights of waking.

Closes His Case Against Carefoot

The Crown closed its case of fraud and false pretences against E. M. Carefoot at the afternoon session of the General Sessions on Wednesday afternoon before Judge F. S. Lane of Picton and after a short resume of the evidence to the jury that he proposed to offer, Malcolm Robb, appearing for Mr. Carefoot called two witnesses before an adjournment until today was ordered.

Technical evidence comprised most of the evidence submitted by the Crown on Wednesday. Reginald Elson, Department of Health, Toronto, Dr. T. C. D. Storms of the D.V.A., Toronto, Dr. Ray Farquharson, associate professor of surgery at University of Toronto and Dr. Isaac Erb, Pathologist of Toronto, testifying at some length. Mr. Elson a physicist explained the machine placed in exhibit stating it was composed of three parts and asked by the Crown Prosecutor to describe in lay language the machine Mr. Elson said it was "close to a Model T Ford." He was asked by Mr. Robb to explain how radio was jammed he stated "that is a trade secret."

Can't Diagnose With Machine

Dr. Storms stated that no machine can diagnose disease and as for the Polysine generator exhibited, it is used to give passive exercise of weak muscles but would have no effect in the diagnosis or treatment of disease. The doctor stated he was never interested in the Abrams technique. Dr. Erb showed that the only way that a proper diagnosis of cancer can be made is by pathological research. He claimed that he had never seen a duodenal ulcer the size of a 50 cent piece nor had never seen a cancer of the duodenal. Dr. Farquharson claimed the machine in exhibit was incapable of diagnosing human ailment and could not medically treat any disease.

In presenting the defence Mr. Robb addressed the jury at length, claiming it was his purpose to present such evidence that it will bring the care and treatment of patients advocated by Mr. Carefoot before the Province and that the jury will recommend this action. He stated Mr. Carefoot had been waiting for twenty years to put his theories before the people and claimed his theories were based on the Abrams technique. "It is not an exact science" said Mr. Robb but people came to Mr. Carefoot as a last resort and generally as a skeptic. His first witness was Percy Dulmage who told of a conversation he had with McAninch previous to the time McAninch went to Toronto to have his operation. Dulmage claimed that McAninch told him he was feeling fine but had to have a certificate of health to go back on the road and as Mr. Carefoot could not give it to him because he was not licenced to practice he would go through with the operation. Mr. Dulmage told of relatives being treated by Carefoot after being treated by doctors and in each case they showed an improvement in health.

Emo A. Strebe, of Eldorado and now of Trenton claimed he had had two operations in Kingston which cost $800 and as a last resort went to Carefoot and after 27 treatments was feeling like a new man. The court was then adjourned.

County Show Small Decrease

Expenditures of the County of Hastings to December 1, 1946 for the year amounted to $278,014.87 as compared to $301,024.29 for the same period in 1945, County Treasurer Ross Bailey told Hastings County Council in a report on Wednesday.

One of the main features of the expenditure was the sum of $114,368.01 spent on county roads this year as compared to $97,320.23 expended in 1945. This was brought about, the report stated, by the large amount of work done on the Belleville-Madoc highway. At that, it was stated, the sum expended was still well within the appropriation set aside for this purpose.

Administration of justice costs were well above those of 1945, the report revealed. This phase of county business cost $34,455.58 as against $25,584.17 of a year ago. Municipal government cost $11,863.30 as compared to a sum $1,000 less of a year ago.

Approximately $23,000 was expended on Children's Aid Societies, an increase of nearly $3,000 over the 1945 figures.

Receipts for the year amounted to $126,779.13 as compared to $113,677.79 of 1945.

Two Shots Fired By Unknown Men, One Person Hit

London, Ont., Dec. 5 — (CP)— Two bullets fired out of the night by unknown assailants in opposite ends of town were the subject of police investigation today as one man lay in hospital with a bullet wound in his side and another reported that he had been fired on by a masked man outside his Westminster township home.

In hospital was James Roberts of London, shot down as he answered the door of his home. His wound was not believed to be serious.

Meanwhile Arthur Evans of Westminster township told provincial police a masked man had stepped out of the darkness and fired at him as he was about to open the door of a chicken coop behind his house. The bullet went wide and the gunman fled. Evans told police he knew of no reason for the attack.

RESCUED BY NEIGHBOR

(Brantford, Dec. 5— (CP) — In danger of being overcome by dense smoke when fire broke out last night on the second floor of Able Avenue his home, Mahlon Hardy was led out by a neighbor, Tony Moskwa, after he had attempted to extinguish the blaze with pails of water before the arrival of firemen.

Firemen brought the fire under control before it spread to the remainder of the two-storey dwelling.

To Grant Permit For Building

Picton, Dec. 5—Because of failure of town council to grant a building permit for a proposed $30,000 machine shop to H. J. McFarland, the town may lose this building. At town council Tuesday night, a letter was received from Mr. McFarland stat-

Reliance Aircraft, and that he is considering transferring his business to that locality. He asked that his building permit application to stand until a definite decision is reached by his firm.

When the application was discussed, building inspector L. C. Ward objected to its location and council decided that Mr. McFarland would have to comply with the building by-law before the permit is issued.

No further action was taken by council on the matter as it is understood the contentious building by-law will either be scrapped or revised by the new council.

Area of Trieste?

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Dec. 5 — (AP) — A dispute over who should pay the bills for the proposed new international territory of Trieste appeared likely today to spread from the Foreign Ministers Council to the United Nations Assembly.

Moreover, unless the issue is settled in a few days some diplomats see a possibility that the Four Council last night that the U. N. Assembly be asked to authorize the payment of funds for Trieste to cover both the salaries of the governor and his staff and any deficit which might be incurred in the operation of the territorial government.

Foreign Minister Molotov opposed this on the ground the territory itself should meet its own financial needs and he indicated a belief that any deficit might be financed by assessing the costs against private property in the Trieste area.

While there was some hope on tion to the United Nations a row might very well break out in the Assembly over using U. N. funds for such a purpose.

A decision will have to be reached before the Assembly completes its work here. The question of finances is the last unsettled issue in the long debated problem of Trieste. There are several other open questions, however, involved in the Italian and Balkan peace treaties which are yet to be decided by the Big Four foreign ministers before they can count their work on the treaties completed and move on freedom of navigation on the Danube.

Incinerator By-Law

On Monday Dec. 9th property-owners of Belleville will vote on the proposed plan of a garbage and burnable refuse incinerator. The plant proposed by the engineering firm of Meadows, Gritoph and Co. of Toronto, who have prepared the plans and specifications for the city is a Nichols Monohearth Incinerator of 40 tons normal rated capacity which can handle 120 tons during eight hour periods that will occur at certain times.

This plant is capable of serving a population up to 25,000, which would mean an increase of fifty per cent. Assuming such an increase in the number of residents and a proportionate increase in garbage and refuse tonnage, the engineers point out an increase of the present average of 32 tons a day, namely 48 tons a day and a proportionate increase from the present peak of 49 tons a day to 75 tons a day would be handled by this incinerator. Should the population go beyond 25,000 consideration would have to be given to an increase in incinerator capacity by means of construction of an additional unit.

The proposed plant will handle garbage, street sweepings, dead animals and accumulations from the unsewered portion of the city, the material being safely incinerated, this disposal ending any health menace from that source.

A three-storey building is required for the equipment and the differences in level of the proposed site on Zwick's Island makes for economy in construction and preparation of the grounds and roads. The cost, estimated for incinerator complete, chimney and building, constructed of concrete block walls reinforced concrete floors, road and landscaping is $87,000 or if the front of the building is brick, $90,000.

It is proposed to finance the project by issue of twenty year 3 p.c. serial debentures requiring a yearly payment of $6,048 for a brick building or $5,846.40 for concrete block construction.

The site chosen in the southeast part of Zwick's Island is considered by the council committee and the engineers as advantageous from the standpoint of access to incoming loads and of its proximity to the marshlands to the west of the highway on the Bay Bridge Road. On the marshlands it is proposed to dump ash and clinker from the incinerator to form a fill of the marsh to make possible development for park purposes. The plant itself is such as to make it possible to keep the plant and grounds spotlessly clean. At the same time the building will be of such a nature as not to detract from the grounds and any plans for development of the island will not be tampered with.

The Ontario Intelligencer believes after a study of the plans and the present condition that the ratepayers considering the present and looking to the future should go to the polls on voting day and there cast their ballots in favor of this project which will be a step of progress for the municipality because it will provide the most modern, sanitary and scientific method of disposal of garbage and refuse, present the opportunity for the development of a very fine municipal park area along the bay and not interfere with the development of Zwick's Island whatever form that may take.

In reference to the financing it is worthy of mention that the market at the present time is favorable for financing the sale of municipal debentures.

Churchill's Active Life

Men cannot help admiring the former Prime Minister of Great Britain, the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill. The other day he observed the seventy-second anniversary of his birth. He remains a man of great activity and his interest in life allows him no such thing as retirement. He stills feels his responsibility to his country, which expresses itself in an active life.

His life training and experience have been of untold benefit to his own country and to the world for his tireless mind and body carried a load few men in all history could have equalled. That was in the war years when his striking personality was one of the great defences and weapons of the United Nations' fight against the aggressors. His natural genius for government, his knowledge of the course of history and civilization, his matchless skill in public address, which has made, his speeches treasures of great value and have shown in him the master artist and painter in words, and his tireless endeavor place him among of human dignity [illegible] which is freedom.

Most Heat Lost Through Walls

The accepted idea that, because heat rises, the greatest loss of heat in the winter months is through ceilings and roofs, is disputed in the weekly letter issued by the Dominion Experimental Station at Swift Current, Saskatchewan. It is contended that there is a much greater loss through walls than through ceilings, and also that the loss through the glass in windows is nine per cent more than through the ceilings and roofs.

As the result of tests by Swift Current officials, the heat loss through ceilings is rated at over 16 per cent, through walls, 27 per cent, through glass, 25 per cent, and through cold air entering the house through ill-fitted doors and windows and other points is 29 per cent. Only 3 per cent is lost through floors.

The advice is given to weather-strip doors and windows, insulate the walls before insulating the ceilings, to properly fit storm doors and windows. The complete winterizing of a wood-frame construction house will, it is claimed, reduce the heat loss 30 per cent. The house that has been built for some years is often difficult to winterize, but it can be mode much more comfortable and economical to heat by insulating over the ceilings and giving attention to doors and windows.

His Own Sermon

I have recently had the experience of having a part of a sermon recorded by the BBC. This gave me the opportunity of hearing the voice that my congregation hears Sunday by Sunday. I would never have recognized it as my own. All sorts of queer solecisms and odd pronounciations fell upon my astonished ears, and the experience was both interesting and humiliating. I shall do my best to correct the more obvious faults.

Would it not be an excellent thing for every clergyman to hear one of his own sermons? So many of us have acquired pulpit drones and other tricks of speech that the man in the pew finds distracting and offensive. My suggestion is that every diocese should possess a recording apparatus and every licensed clergyman should be compelled to listen to one of his own sermons once a year.

New Word Born

Among other achievements of Monty Woolley's was the invention of a word —"delovely," which Cole Porter used in a popular song. During a world cruise in 1936 which Woolley made with the Cole Porters and Moss Hart, Porter, his wife, and the bearded former Yale professor were standing on deck when their ship entered the picturesque harbor of Rio de Janeiro, just at dawn. Porter says he exclaimed, "It's delightful!" Linda Porter chimed in with "It's delicious!" Then Woolley, exhilarated and inspired, cried, "It's delovely!"

Moss Hart, not himself present, gave the credit for all three lines to Monty.

Monty holds it was a three way collaboration, largely inspired by a delicious native punch.

John L. Lewis' Stormy Life; Worked in Coal Pits as Boy; Now Powerful Labor Leader

Labor Leader With the Rumbling Voice and Flair for the Dramatic Started Humbly and Rose to Power Which Has Worried More Than One President

The life of John L. Lewis, the powerful labor leader in the coal strike, is the subject of an article by Rowland Evans, Jr., Associated Press special writer in Washington. Mr. Evans writes:

In deep, resonant tones, John L. Lewis said, "We cannot fight the government." The time was 1919. Thus Lewis ended his first personally conducted coal strike. From his sickbed, President Wilson publicly commended the bulky shouldered, unsmiling labor leader for his action.

Lewis, whose name was to recur in labor news for more than a quarter of a century afterward, was then acting president of the United Mine Workers. A year later, by a mail vote, the union made him its president. At the time of the strike, he was officially its vice-president.

Lewis inherited his interest in trade unionism. His father, an immigrant coal miner from Wales, was a member of the Old Knights of Labor, which flourished in the eight hour day agitation of the 1880's. More than once the elder Lewis read his name on the coal operators' black lists.

His son, the future president of the UMW, was born in the little mining community of Lucas, Iowa, Feb. 12, 1880. His mother was also a member of an old Welsh mining family.

Married Guiding Teacher

The man who now easily and accurately quotes Shakespeare and Plato received little formal education. He led the life of any small boy in a mining town attending school until the age of 12 and going from their directly into the coal pits.

He saw plenty of action on the baseball diamond, was respected by his playmates for his fistic success and occasionally turned his hand to small town dramatic productions. He always had a flair for the dramatic. His curiosity kept him busy reading everything from the Bible to Shakespeare.

The books he read were often picked for him by a young school-teacher, who later became his wife. She was Myrta Edith Bell. During the years when Lewis was making his way up the organizational ladder of the UMW and fighting for the big men of the American Federation of Labor in an effort to get them to organize the basic industries on an industry-wide basis, she was a constant intelectual prod in his side. She helped him polish the dramatic rhetorical style which he uses today with such effectiveness.

In 1901 Lewis left Lucas and roamed through the west. He wanted to see the country and try his luck. He dug copper in Colorado silver and coal in Montana, gold when the opportunity presented itself.

He displayed his audacity early. One day he was attacked by a vicious mule in a coal mine corridor. He brained it with a sprag of a coal car, the heavy wooden stick used to brake the car. He covered the fatal wound with clay and told his foreman the mule had died of a heart attack.

In 1906 Lewis drifted back to Lucas and was elected to his [illegible]

[illegible] Lewis moved to Illinois and in 1909 was elected state legislative representative for the UMW. He quit this post two years later to become a field representative for the American Federation of Labor with which the UMW was affiliated. This appointment was primarily due to the sponsorship of Samuel Gompers, then president of the AFL. Gompers was impressed with Lewis' noisy energy and ability.

The post of field representative gave Lewis an opportunity to travel all over America, to gain firsthand knowledge of the glass, rubber, lumber and other industries. He was to utilize this knowledge later as founder and first president of the CIO.

Lean Years After Victory

After six years as AFL field representative, Lewis went back to the UMW staff as chief statistician. By that time he knew the labor setup as well as anyone in the country. He was prepared for the presidency of the largest union in the AFL, his own UMW, and he wasn't long in getting it.

The 12 years that followed his election as president of the UMW in 1920 were lean ones. The unions' membership was about 410,000 in 1920. By 1932 it had fallen to fewer than 150,000.

Responsibility for the loss in membership was blamed partly on Lewis. He ran his union on a piecemeal basis and not as the closely joined, well knit organization it is today. He settled disputes in one part of the country without regard to situations in other mining areas. The rapid growth of coal substitutes—oil, gas and electric power — and speedier methods in mining coal also played a part in the apparent disintegration of his union.

But Lewis maintained his own standing in the UMW. He squelched all opposition. His personal salary was increased to $12,000 a year.

He was still a "craft union" man. He had not yet learned the full meaning of "industrial" organization. He was still conducting his business after the fashion of Samuel Gompers.

The election of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 and subsequent passage of the national industrial recovery act (NRA) bolstered Lewis' position. One section of the act acknowledged the right of workers to "organize and bargain collectively with representatives of their own choosing."

Lewis quickly applied this to his own union. In a short time, his membership list of 150,000 grew to one of more than 400,000. He recovered all the ground that had been lost in the twenties.

Got C.I.O. Underway

The significance of the NRA hit Lewis squarely between his dark, bushy eyebrows. He urged the AFL to get busy and unionize, unionize and unionize—and on an industrywide basis, not by crafts.

But the executive council of the AFL wasn't so sure. It was steeped in craft unionism. Lewis stormed at what seemed to him AFL's inactivity and finally tired of waiting for the extensive organizing campaign which never came. Other heads of unions affiliated with the AFL were ready to back Lewis. One of them was Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

In his long career, Lewis has thrown many punches. One that he threw in the controversy over industrial unionism was probably the most significant he ever got off. It was not a verbal punch.

An associate in the AFL called him "a big—," and found himself sprawling on the floor. It was at the AFL's convention at Atlantic City in 1935. Lewis had been arguing for industrial organization. The punch was the opening campaign blow of the Committee for Industrial Organization, later renamed the Congress of Industrial Organizations —the CIO Lewis had broken with the AFL.

Three years later Lewis was bossing an outfit which claimed 4,000,000 members. In those three years much had happened. Lewis declared war on management in the steel and automobile industries. His CIO spread rapidly into textiles, rubber, glass, aluminum, maritime, transportation, oil and shipbuilding, new and fertile labor fields.

The CIO's activity was made possible largely by funds advanced from Lewis' own United Mine Workers and by the astute planning of Hillman.

These were the years of sitdown strikes, mile long picket lines, bloody violence and vigilante groups. Lewis won over 'Big Steel', gained collective bargaining rights in the rubber and automobile industries and prepared to invade new fields.

But he ran into trouble and defeat at the hands of a group of steel operators known as "Little Steel." Little Steel successfully turned back Lewis' challenge, and the defeat is regarded as a turning point in Lewis' career.

Row With Roosevelt

Lewis had expected President Roosevelt to throw his weight behind the CIO in the Little Steel strike, but when the president was asked what he planned to do, he replied, "A plague on both your houses."

Lewis had a stinging rebuke ready. He said: "It ill behooves one who has supped at labor's table....to curse with equal fervor and fine impartiality both labor and its adversaries when they are locked in deadly embrace."

That was 1937. The incident marked a break in relations between Lewis who was a lifelong Republican and the New Deal. The CIO had lent $500,000 for the Roosevelt campaign in 1936. A former cabinet member has stated that Lewis expected the president to consult him after his reelection in 1936, but Mr. Roosevelt never did.

In 1940, Lewis entered the presidential campaign on the side of Wendell Willkie, the Republican nominee. He tried to get the CIO to vote his way, threatening to resign the CIO presidency if Mr. Roosevelt were elected.

And that is what he did. Philip Murray became the next president and Lewis became, in the view of some, the power behind the throne.

But Lewis and Murray squabbled, partly over political differences, and in 1942 Lewis withdrew his UMW from the CIO.

Last January, he took the UMW back into the AFL. He was promptly elected a vice-president of the AFL, a position he holds today.

Many observers are convinced Lewis will some day become president of the AFL. They say his long range aim is to consolidate the two vast camps of labor, CIO and AFL into one well integrated organization.

Today, sphinxlike, he is the center of a new labor crisis, challenging one and all to gauge his temper and his next move.

IN FOND MEMORY OF TONY THE WIRISH TERROR

this grandmothers, aunts et cetera—this is going to hurt me as much as it will hurt you. But the question is submitted by one of our most important readers —and I mean important—so I feel bound to give an unequivocal answer. Here is the problem:

Dear Dr. Brady:

I am a girl twelve years old. My dog is a small fox terrier. She is clean and house-broken. She has no skin disease, no worms and no fleas, as I wash her once a week and the only times she goes out she is right around the house or with me. The purpose of my letter is I want my dog to sleep every night at the foot of my bed on a blanket of her own. My Mother and Father said that if you say it is sanitary she may sleep there. So please, Dr. Brady, decide whether it is sanitary or not.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) ......

Every dog has his worms, Marion—or at any rate you can never be sure the very finest, cleanest and best-behaved dog does not harbor stomach or intestinal parasites (worms) even though the dog is as healthy in every way as a dog can be. Presence of ordinary round worms in the intestine of dog or human being may cause no symptoms or disturbance of health.

But if a dog harbors worms the dog's saliva is likely to contain the microscopically small eggs of the worms. So the most casual lick of your hand or cheek by the dog's tongue may transfer worm eggs, and these find their way into your mouth and stomach and presently you have worms.

For this reason it should be imperative, as a matter of hygiene, that anybody, infant, child or adult, who pats, handles, pets, or even touches a dog, any dog, at any time, immediately thereafter wash his or her hands with soap and water—before a finger or hand touches lips, tongue, mouth, food, etc.

With this precaution against parasitic infestation clearly understood and conscientiously heeded, my answer to your question, Marian, is yes, certainly, that is the place for your dog, right there at the foot of your bed.

This, Marian, is my opinion merely, and your Mother and Father must remember I am no authority about anything except maybe pipes and bowling on the green. But I have a handsome portrait hanging right over my desk—a portrait of Tony the Wirish Terror—who lived at our house for about ten years, ten years of just one fight after another with everything on four feet and bitter fueds with most of our neighbors, yet ten happy years, notwithstanding that last reproachful wag of Tony's tail when I left him to the veterinary for euthanasia.

Every boy should have a dog, and every girl should have either a dog or cat or other animal or bird as pet, dependent, companion, guardian.

Caring for such living things, in the intelligent, scientific way—be they dogs, cats, chickens, pigs sheep, cattle, pigeons, ants, bees, snakes or turtles—improves the education and develops the character of boy or girl.

Marian, as I call her here, is twelve years old. Most children ten years old, and some only eight or nine, are capable of caring for such pets. But it is a grave mistake, I think, for parents or other guardians to give any living thing to a child only three or four years old as a toy or plaything—a cruel mistake that encourages cruelty in the child.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did "tweedledum and tweedledee" originate?

"Tweedle" is an old English word of echoic origin and is supposed to be imitative of the sound made by a musical instrument, especially a fiddle.

A player who produced a succession of shrill, high-pitched sounds on a fiddle or who plays upon the instrument riflingly or carelessly is said "to "tweedle."

"Tweedledum" and "tweedledee" are nothing more than humorous expansions of "tweedle" and are employed to suggest that an alleged difference between two things or parties is imperceptible or insignificant, corresponding to the somewhat more colloquial "six of one kind and half a dozen of another."

The earliest known use of "tweedledum and tweedledee" occurs in "On the Feud Between Handel and Bononici," a satire written by John Byrom, English poet and stenographer, and published in the "London Journal" June 5, 1725.

At that time George Frederick Handel, a German, and Giovanni Battista Bononici, an Italian, were the two most popular composers in London.

Scarcely an opera was produced for several years in the British metropolis that did not contain airs by either the German or the Italian.

A keen rivalry grew up between the melodious Italian and the far-superior German and each had his partisans. This rivalry was fanned into a flame when the public had an opportunity to compare the work of the two composers in the same opera, "Muzio Scavola," on which they collaborated. Bononcini, who later left London when detected in a musical plagiarism, finally went so far in the quarrel as to attack his rival in a pamphlet. In the midst of this historic musical controversy Byrom wrote these lines:

Some say, compar'd to Bononici,
That Mynheer Handel's but a ninny;
Others aver that he to Handel
Is scarcely fit to hold a candle.
Strange all this difference should be
'Twixt tweedledum and tweedledee.

The last couplet has been attributed erroneously to both Swift and Pope.

Merits Current Cheese Grading, Cause of Openness in Cheese

A spirited discussion on the relative merits of current cheese grading procedure and as to the possible cause of objectionable openness in cheese highlighted the closing session of the Cheese Makers' Convention Wednesday afternoon as the meeting was thrown open for discussion following an address by J. F. Singleton, Associate Director of Marketing Services, Dairy Products, Ottawa.

Referring to remarks made by various speakers during the convention, Mr. Singleton stated that he appreciated the fact that there were some unrights in the dairy industry, particularly in the wide differential between the price received for cheese milk and that which was received by farmers supplying the bottle trade.

Higher Standard Required.

He pointed out, however, that producers supplying milk for the bottle trade had a higher standard of sanitation requirements to adhere to, while he must also maintain an even supply of milk. On the other hand milk produced for the cheese and butter trade was produced largely in the summer during pasture conditions.

"Pooling of milk has been suggested in Canada before," stated Mr. Singleton, as reference was made to the Fraser Valley Milk Producers' Association in British Columbia. "At that time pooling had an unfavorable reception, but that does not mean that it cannot be done in Canada."

Exact Figure Not Known.

Professor A. L. Gibson, Kemptville, inquired if it were true that the American contract for cheese shipped to the United Kingdom called for a price of 40 cents. Mr. Singleton replied he did not know the exact figure but admitted the price was 40 cents per pound or "possibly more."

W. O. Coone, president of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association wanted to know if it were true that the British Food Ministry was paying the federal fluid milk subsidy on export cheese and was told that next year this would be the case.

To a question from the floor as why a higher price was not paid by the British Food Ministry for Canadian cheese and thus bolster production in this country instead of purchasing cheese from the United States, Mr. Singleton replied that he doubted very much if a price increase would increase production. Rather, he said, it would merely tend to divert milk from some other branch of the industry into cheese.

Senior Dairy Grader T. J. Hicks in opening the discussion on the objectionable openness in cheese, Gives His Opinion.

This brought a rise from W. R. McCreary, Belleville cheese buyer, who stated that in his opinion there should be but two grades of cheese, "good" and "bad."

"Our present system of grading is all wrong," contended Mr. McCreary. "Here we have a good counter cheese dropped into second grade with a consequent loss of subsidy by the producer, merely because of openness. I think it would be in the national interest to have only two grades of cheese. Then production would be encouraged."

"If we did that, we would have to change our present grading standards," returned Mr. Hicks.

"Personally, I would not like to see the industry go back to where it was 20 years ago."

"It would make no difference to the processor, but it would mean a considerable difference to the producer whether he gets 1st or 2nd grade," stated Mr. McCreary.

May Add Another Grade.

"The officials of the cheese industry have the interests of the producers at heart just the same as the cheese distributors," interjected Mr. Singleton. "I feel we have acted wisely in setting up our present standards.

"Two grades of cheese have been suggested here. The department has been considering adding another grade to the three which we already have and asking a higher premium for the best grade."

At this point of the discussion the cause of openness in cheese.

In his address to the convention Mr. Singleton admitted that the dairy industry had been "managed" during the war years when milk was diverted according to the urgency of production.

Should Fulfill Contract.

He felt, however, that as long as the British government wished to continue "contract" buying of cheese, the Canadian government should be willing and there should be a reasonable effort to fulfill the contract.

He pointed out that Canadian cheese was costing the British Food Ministry considerably more than the 20 cents per pound received by the farmers. Transport and other charges increased this approximately 5¾ cents per pound loaded on ship at Montreal.

Canadian dairy production figures and commitments for overseas shipment were cited by Mr. Singleton.

Achieves Success With First Book

By J. D. HOLDSWORTH
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia —(CP)— Seventeen-year-old Catherine Gaskin of Sydney has achieved overnight success as an authoress with the publication in Britain of her first novel, "This Other Eden," which has gone into two editions in a few weeks. The publishers have taken an option on Catherine's next two books.

Her first effort runs to about 1,550,000 words and is set in England and the United States. It tells the adventures of an American girl. There has been some astonishment over the fact that the Australian authoress has never been away from her own country.

Catherine started the book two years ago and left school and gave up her music studies to finish it. Most of her writing was done between 4 a.m. and eight o'clock breakfast. After breakfast she wrote as the mood prompted her.

Unlike her heroine, the Australian girl writer is no sophisticate. Her one ambition is to be a success as a writer and otherwise her interests are reading and orchestral concerts. She has fixed ideas about boys. She finds those of her own age are boring.

She has started work on her second book and has picked its title — "With Every Year." She says its about a boy genius. The setting is Connemara, Ireland, from where her parents came. Mr. and Mrs. Gaskin are providing the information about Connemara.

Quebec Girl Knows Much About Soccer

Montreal —(CP)— Miss Myrtle Stewart, winsome resident of suburban Ville St. Pierre, is the only woman secretary among Quebec soccer clubs. Her only known rival in Canada is Miss Jean Gordon of Toronto Greenbacks.

When players of the Blue Bonnets were honored by townsfolk in the St. Pierre community hall, the players did not forget Miss Stewart and presented her with a tangible token. The club won the Frontenac and Coronation trophies during its season.

Since the pretty secretary assumed office, succeeding Gordon Harmon, she has acquired a practical knowledge of every duty connected with the office of a soccer secretary, including extensive knowledge of rules of the game.

Pete Shaughnessy, well-known Montreal soccer referee, paid tribute to Miss Stewart's ability when he said "you don't get away with faulty decisions if Myrtle is looking on."

"She is particularly strong on the offside law which puzzles so many," he added, "and would score a high percentage in examination, oral or written, were her knowledge of football law generally put to the test.

HOLSTEIN FRIESIAN OFFICERS

Brantford, Dec. 5 —(CP)— Results of the annual election of directors of the Holstein Friesian Association of Canada for the provinces other than Ontario were released here by G. M. Clemons, secretary of the association.

The new slate of directors includes W. H. Hicks, Agassiz, B.C.; H. W. Hays, Calgary, Alta.; R. E. Stewart, Regina; J. E. Crawford, Winnipeg; Hon. Antonio Elie, Labaie, Que.; C. B. Sherwood, Norton, N.B.; Courtney B. Lusby, Amherst, N.S., and R. A. Profitt, Freetown, P.E.I.

Directors to represent Ontario will be elected at the annual meeting of the association to be held in Toronto Feb. 5.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Putman, Belleville, wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Emily Joy to George Spence Wonnacott, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Wonnacott, marriage to take place Saturday, December 28th., at 11 o'clock in Christ Church.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Timmerman Forin Street, attended the Ice Capades Revue, in Toronto yesterday.

Miss S. M. Ford, Alexander Street, was in Toronto, yesterday for the Ice Capades Revue.

Friends of Mrs. "Bill" MacDonald, Station Street, will be sorry to learn that she is confined to her home through illness.

Misses Velma Radford, Marguerite Matthews and Betra Fairman attended the Ice Capades in Toronto last evening.

WEDDINGS

HAIRE—MORIN

At three o'clock on the afternoon of Nov. 30th., St .Michael's Church, Belleville, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Helen Yvette Morin, daughter of Mr. Charles O. Morin, of Cap St. Ignace, Quebec, was united with Mr. Frederick Albert Haire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Haire, Belleville, with Monsignor Nicholson officiating.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Mr. Leonard Langevin, the bride wore a grey woollen dress, black accessories and a corsage of American Beauty roses. Her only attendant was Mrs. Robert Maxwell, wearing a beige woollen dress, black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Harry Ashton, of Belleville, performed the duties of groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, where Mrs. Albert Haire received in a dress of green wool with Talisman roses in her corsage.

Mr. and Mrs. Haire left for a trip to Toronto and Detroit, and after their return will reside in Belleville.

The cheerful surroundings of the I.O.O.F. Hall on Front St., was the scene on Wednesday of another busy bazaar and afternoon tea, sponsored by the Quintena Rebekah Lodge No. 133, with Mrs. Eva Turvey convening, assisted by Mrs. Mary Fleury and Mrs. Jennie Redner.

Christmas colors of red and green were used throughout as decorations in the bazaar, where a great variety of merchandise was offered the prospective buyers.

A table convened by Mrs. Andrews held aprons of all sizes, styles and colors. A novelty table featured hand crocheted centres, lace edged handkerchiefs, unusual knitting bags and handpainted china. These were in charge of Mrs. Turner.

The "Home of Babywear", where small knitted garments and handmade dresses in pink and blue were on display, was the rendezvous for many grandmothers; and Mrs. Kolver willingly demonstrated the soaps, pow-

The tearoom, with the small tables set among potted ferns, was very inviting; the long attractively arranged tea table with its cream colored lace cloth being centred with a silver bowl of pure white baby 'mums and carnations, in striking contrast to the tall red tapers, on either side, in triple silver candelabra.

During the first hour Mrs. McKeown and Mrs. Cornish presided over the silver services; Mrs. Sandercock and Mrs. Twiddy during the second hour, and for the last hour, Mrs. Neate and Mrs. Crake. Assisting with serving were Misses I. Muir, H. Miller, J. Marshall and Mesdames Webber, Duesbury, MacMillan, White, Cherrie and H. Shorey.

Mrs. Noakes was the convener for the committee replenishing the plates and teapots; and Mrs. J. Fitzgibbon, Mrs. Sinfield and Mrs. Elliott were kept busy supplying the refreshments.

Treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. Youker and Mrs. Pollitt, who report the results highly satisfactory to the ladies sponsoring this social event.

Possible Cut In Butter Ration Early in 1947

Ottawa, Dec. 5 —(CP)—A possible cut in Canada's butter ration early in 1947 was forecast before the dominion-provincial agricultural conference here, in a report released Wednesday.

Reporting on butter production the federal agricultural supplies board told the conference this year's output "may not provide sufficient stocks at the year's end to meet a six-ounce ration in the first four months of 1947." The present allowance is six ounces a week.

Production of creamery butter in 1946, the report said, will be 270 million pounds, a drop of 8 per cent from 1945. Dairy butter production estimated at 53,000,000 pounds

This had not been sufficient to maintain a six-ounce ration throughout 1946, the report said. It added that, with dairy production relatively stabilized at about 55 million pounds, creamery butter production would have to total about 295 million pounds to maintain a six-ounce quota during 1947 from domestic production.

(In March and April of this year the ration was slashed from six to four ounces because of lowered winter production and depletion of reserve stocks.)

Butter requirements on the basis of normal (non-ration) consumption would amount to 345 million pounds of creamery and 55 million pounds of dairy product. This would be 80 million pounds up from the current year.

Last Monday evening in St. George's Hall, Station Street, the Senior A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church were honored to have as guests Mr. and Mrs. Villetorte. Mrs. Villetorte is a daughter of the late Dr. Alger, of Stirling. She, her husband and two children, lived in occupied France during the six years of the war. Mr. and Mrs. Villetorte gave very thrilling accounts of their experiences during that time.

Their home was about thirty miles from Bordeaux but they were in Portiers when France fell. The roads were so congested with refguees that it was very difficult to travel, taking twenty-eight hours to go three hundred miles by motor.

Food Situation Desperate

As time went on the food situation became desperate. There was no grease of any kind, and all food had to be boiled. Mrs. Villetorte told of trying to fry an egg in a little milk. The soil near Bordeaux was sandy and very little food could be grown. Turnips and artichokes could be obtained for a price. Prices, of course, were and still are extremely high. Cabbages cost $1.25 each, milk was $1.00 a quart in 1945 and two months ago coal was $70 a ton. Food and heat, two essentials of life, have been and still are scarce in France, although the situation is gradually improving. Mrs. Villetorte mentioned that a welcome item in relief parcels sent to France would be a few cakes of toilet soap. This commodity is $1.25 a cake in France at the present time and is treated as a luxury; and that only in very well-to-do families.

Member Of Maquis

Mr. Villetorte was a member of the maquis, the famous French underground organization. The maquis operated in small places and kept in close touch with England by listening to the BBC news. Often, phrases were slipped into the news which constituted messages to the maquis. Listeners were warned to turn the needle on the radio dial immediately the news had finished, since anyone found listening to BBC by the Germans was sent to Germany. Mrs. Villetorte was once almost caught.

Mr. Villetorte related a few of the horrors of the German occupation. He told of the "releve", the exchange of French prisoners, usually ill, taken by the Germans, for slave laborers. German soldiers would raid a town and herd all the people who happened to be on the streets into railway freight cars and send them into Germany. Many were never heard of again.

Taken Prisoner

He told of a member of the maquis being discovered and taken prisoner by the Germans. To try to make him betray his group the Germans hung him for 32 hours by his feet over a bathtub. Water was raised in the bathtub until the man almost choked to death. Failing to talk, his heels were then burned with hot irons, the marks of which he still has. But he did not betray his friends and was sent to a concentration camp for the duration of the war. At that time he weighed 70 pounds and is still in hospital recovering from his ill-treatment.

Little Imagination

Mrs. Villetorte stressed the fact that the Germans had very little imagination and, although it was senseless to argue with them, it was easy to bluff them. To illustrate this she told of an experience she, her husband and a friend had one night. A nine o'clock curfew was in force and they were coming home at three o'clock in the morning, when a German officer stopped them and asked for their permit to be out at that hour. Mr. Villetorte showed the officer a mere postcard, with which he was satisfied. Mrs. Villetorte said that the Germans believed they were superior and did not think anyone would dare to disobey. On many occasions she was confronted with an officer who lost his temper so completely he was white-faced and actually frothing at the mouth and who burst into a tirade about the Master Race. It seemed to be their main defence.

Interesting Addresses

These are only a few of the many harrowing experiences endured by Mr. and Mrs. Villetorte. Their message greatly impressed all those present.

Rev. Grant Sparling introduced the speakers and Lloyd Gladwell, president of Senior A.Y.P.A. thanked them. A number from the Junior A.Y.P.A. of Christ Church also attended.

Women's Activities

HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

The December meeting of the Holloway Street W.M.S., was held in the church parlors with the President, Mrs. Reid, in charge.

The program was presented by Mrs. Weese and her group of ladies. A beautifully lighted tree, with long green streamers reaching from the platform to the star at the top representing the path of the Wise Men to the Star, made an attractive background for the presentation of a Christmas program. With Mrs. Downey at the piano, the program began with a Christmas hymn, after which prayer was offered by Mrs. Perkins. The Christmas story, taken from the second chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel, was read by Miss Dorman; and Mrs. Moynes read the story of "The Star and The Shepherds".

A candle-lighting service was effectively presented by the members of the group, with the ladies and their leader, Mrs. Weese, lighting the candles as each one recited her part. Mrs. Denton read the old Christmas poem ,"Everywhere, Everywhere Christmas Tonight", which was followed by a solo contributed by Mrs. Bell.

Mention was made of Mrs. Livesay, a member of the group, who through illness could not be present, but great satisfaction was expressed when messages from her were delivered by some of the members.

The program closed with a Christmas hymn, and the president thanked Mrs. Weese for an enjoyable afternoon.

During a business period the various secretaries gave reports, and special mention was made of the splendid "Thank Offering" received last month. A donation was received from the C.G.I.T., and an expression of appreciation read from them. Mrs. Slavin reported for the Mission Band, Mrs. Doxsee for the Baby Band. Mrs. Wickett and Mrs. Denton were reported as having attended every meeting during the year, while Mrs. Weese's group had the best attendance and received congratulations.

A letter from Miss Coultes and Miss Willows, W.M.S. workers at Maynooth, was read by Mrs. Hubbs. Members of this Mission charge have undertaken the building of a parsonage, and an appeal is being made for assistance in furnishing same. A contribution was voted for this worthy cause.

A slate of officers for 1947 was presented as follows:

Hon. Presidents, Mesdames Hall, Perkins, and Reid.
President, Mrs. Kilbank
1st Vice President, Mrs. F. Wilson
2nd Vice President, Mrs. McKee
Treasurer, Mrs. Burrows
Cor. Secretary, Mrs. Scott
Rec. Secretary, Mrs. Bell
Community Friendship, Mrs. Denton
Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Cordes
C.G.I.T. Supt., Mrs. Campbell.
W.M.S. representative to C.G.I.T. Work Board, Mrs. McMurray and Mrs. Hitchon.
Mission Band, Mrs. Slavin
Baby Band, Mrs. Doxsee
Supply Secretary, Mrs. Hubbs
Press Secretary, Mrs. Morton
Temperance Secretary, Mrs. Johns
Pianist, Mrs. Downey
Monthly Missionary, Mrs. Moynes
Finance Committee, Mesdames Cordes, Andrews and Hagerman

The offering was received by Mrs. Lough and Mrs. Wilson. The meeting closed and refreshments were served.

ST. PAUL'S W.A. MEETING

Stirling.—The December meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. C. I. Hatton, Tuesday afternoon, with the President, Mrs. Gordon Bailey, in the chair. The meeting opened with the theme song and prayer.

During the business period Mrs. Nora Wescott read the secretarial report along with all communications received during the last month. Twenty-two cards were sent in November and Mrs. Hatton and Mrs. Fair reported having made twenty calls. A report from the Friendly Group was given by Mrs. W. Preston and the treasurer of the W.A. gave a complete financial statement. It was decided to hold the January meeting at the home of Mrs. Gordon Bailey, with the River Valley ladies in charge of the program, Mrs. Armstrong, assisted by the W.A. members, to form a visiting committee for December.

The following slate of officers was presented and accepted for 1947—

President, Mrs. Walter Elliott
1st Vice President, Mrs. A. Armstrong.
2nd Vice President, Mrs. Gordon Bailey
Treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Thompson
Secretary, Mrs. Nora Wescott
Pianist, Mrs. Harold West
Assistant Pianist, Mrs. Herb David
Parsonage Committee, Mrs. Bradburn, Mrs. W. L. Fox, and Mrs. C. I. Hatton.

The program for the day emphasized the true Christian spirit of Christmas, beginning with the singing of age-old carols, with Mrs. Patterson in charge. Mrs. A. M. Laverty read the Christmas story from St. Luke's gospel, and "Meditation Thoughts" were given by Mrs. Patterson.

by Mrs. Gordon Bailey, and the final story "Two Golden Doors" was read by Mrs. Patterson.

A hymn and the Mispah benediction brought this profitable program to a close. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, and the hostess was tendered a vote of appreciation.

Donations given by Bill Cook Cigar Store, Christian's Electric, Doyle's Drug Store, and Cody's Groceteria.

JULIUS A. KRUG

CAPT. H. COLLISSON

Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug and Captain N. H. Collisson, federal coal mine administrator, were government witnesses as U.M.W. Chief John L. Lewis resumed his court battle against contempt of court charges. Interior Secretary Krug testified that if all of Lewis' demands for improved working conditions for the m'nes were granted the result would be an increase in the price of soft coal of 50 cents a ton. Lewis has been found guilty of civil and criminal contempt of court for disregarding his order to call off a U. S. nationwide strike of coal miners. He was fined $10,000 and his union $3,000,000.

LIBERAL-LABOR MEMBER FINED $25 FOR ASSAULT

Jos. Meinzinger Pleads Guilty to Hitting Kitchener Dairy Worker

Kitchener, Ont., Dec. 5—(CP)—For assaulting Edward Selling, Kitchener dairy worker, Joseph Meinzinger, Liberal-Labor member of the Ontario Legislature for Waterloo North, today was fined $25 and costs and ordered to pay Selling $22.50 for time lost from work. Meinzinger pleaded guilty through his counsel, Kenneth Sims.

Selling said the assault took place at the dairy which employs him on Sunday morning, Nov. 24.

"I had loaded my wagon when a man came up and asked me to come to the back of the barn as someone wanted to see me. Joe Meinzinger was there. He knocked me down. He knocked me down three times."

He suffered a black eye and facial cuts and was away from work four days.

Cross-examined, he said there had been a disturbance at a party at his father's home earlier in the day.

"Did you take some part in it?"

"Yes," said Selling. "All I did was to tell Mr. Meinzinger to get out, that he wasn't welcome at the house."

"My client told me what had happened but I advised him in law he had no legal justification for what he did," defence counsel told the court. "I think my client has had sufficient punishment now by the publicity given to this unfortunate affair."

"This case rates the same as any other assault case," said Magistrate H. Polson. "I'm not interested in publicity. There will be a fine of $25 and costs."

Rebuild German Economy on Sound Lines is Object

By SYDNEY GAMPELL

London, Dec. 5 — (Reuters)—The keynote of the Anglo-American zone economic merger is its object of rebuilding the German economy on healthy but non-aggressive lines, to serve Europe, the rest of the world and Germany itself.

The aim is to make western Germany — pending reintegration of a unified economy for the whole of Germany, if and when attainable — a self-supporting element for European prosperity instead of, as recently, a pauperized slum and breeder of adjoining slums, or as formerly, an aggressor and breeder of wars.

The method is to turn the money which Britain and the United States have hitherto been fruitlessly paying to Germany into a fructifying investment. It is hoped that repayments can begin after 1949 by way of Germany attaining a surplus of exports over imports.

The big economic question is whether the envisaged amount of pump - priming — £250,000,000 ($1,000,000,000) — will suffice to get the pump working.

At the lowest the agreement should put a term to the subsidies which Britain has had to provide for German imports, merely to keep the British zone alive on slum level. These subsidies or reparations, which have recently been at the rate of £100,000,000 a year and mostly in dollars, were an almost intolerable burden on Britain.

When more of Germany's imports can be obtained from sterling or "soft" currency sources, the dollar burden on Britain will fall sharply. If for example such sources provided a quarter of the total, only half of Britain's contribution would have to be in dollars.

By far the most important financial point is the Anglo-American agreement on early establishment of an exchange value for the mark, and on financial reform. This, when achieved, will cut clean away from the Potsdam arrangement which has been the biggest handicap to the British zone, that all Germany's external and inter-zonal trade must be in dollars.

PICTON

Stresses Need For Brighter Church Programs

Picton, Dec. 5—"Today, the church must provide a good, clean bang-up program in order to compete with cocktail parties," declared Rev. Earl Lautenslager, minister of Howard Park United Church, Toronto, in an address at a banquet held by the "50-50" Club of Picton United Church, Monday night.

"The church today must be realistic and more logical; there must be a welcome for everyone and an opportunity to become acquainted. A lot of young people say the church is cold, and use this as an excuse to stay away," said the speaker.

Speaking of the "50-50" clubs which he originated, Rev. Lautenslager said the members eventually become the backbone of the church, though there was no religion included in club programs.

Club members are composed of husbands and wives of those ages not included in young people's or older people's groups. Each office is filled by a married couple.

Mrs. E. J. Williams presided alone as Mr. Williams is in hospital. Rev. A. E. McCutcheon welcomed the 140 persons present. Vice President Jack Ward thanked the speaker. V. Lockwood led in a sing song and Woodrow Blakely gave an instrumental. Don Hill won an amusing hat contest.

No County Court

Picton, Dec. 4—There was no session of the County Court here as no cases were on the docket. Judge W. S. Lane is presiding at County Court in Belleville.

Comfort, Ease and Contentment of Cows Declared Advantageous

College Park, Md., Dec. 5 — (AP)—The "comfort, ease and contentment of the cows" should be the primary objective of barn builders, says Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the agricultural extension service of the University of Maryland, in welcoming 75 dairymen and health inspectors for a three-day conference yesterday. Symons declared: — "I would not suggest lessening sanitary requirements, but I think milk quality would be improved with a milking parlor plus a well-bedded enclosure in which the cows would be free to move around.

"Hard cement and limited space to lie on are unnatural."

FATHER FREED

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 4 — (AP) — Albert F. Lewis, 66, was free today of a murder charge in the fatal shooting of his 27-year-old son, Wilbur A. Lewis, for throwing missiles at the apartment in which the father and his wife lived.

A jury acquitted Lewis yesterday on a defence contention that the shooting last June 22 was justifiable homicide. The father testified that his son had become belligerent from drinking and had threatened his life. Lewis said he tried to scare his son away.

Republicans Wait Chance to Explore Certain Charges

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP) — Republicans in the United States Senate today waited a chance to explore charges that immorality, venereal disease, dishonesty and incompetence in the armed forces jeopardize success of the occupation of Germany.

The Republicans will have control when the new Congress is organized Jan. 3 and there seemed no doubt of their determination to investigate the allegations despite:

1. A War department denial that conditions are as bad as described.

2. President Truman's statement that he does not think an investigation is necessary.

Your Republican members of the Senate War Investigating Committee made public, over objection of the six-man Democratic majority, a report by Committee Counsel George Meader detailing the charges.

The report recounted tales of immoral conduct by some of the American Occupation troops, unsatisfactory performances by Negro soldiers, misconduct by officers, and an expensive influx of Jews and other displaced persons into the United States zone.

War Department's Contention

The War Department contended many allegations made by one of Mr. Meader's principal witnesses, Col. Francis P. Miller, were unsupported and based upon "gossip" and "hearsay".

The report made these assertions:

1. Conduct of Negro troops "is no credit to the Negro race. . . in 1945 the average Negro strength was 10 per cent of the theatre strength. Negroes committed 50 per cent of the major crimes.

Since last March the venereal rate among Negroes has ranged from 897 to 1,049 (more than one case to a man) for each 1,000 troops.

2. "The quality of white troop replacements has been inferior". In one shipment of 236 enlisted men "about 1-10th are not even high-grade morons."

3. Officers have been charged with moral turpitude, illegal movement of art treasures, trading with the enemy, black market activities, obstruction of justice, drunkenness and disorderly conduct, embezzlement and neglect of duty.

trial for Thomas Leyzac of Toronto. Leyzac was charged with breaking and entering and theft of G. A. Deverell's jewelry store last February. When arrested at his Toronto home, he had in his possession a wrist watch stolen from the Mount Forest store, police testified.

Dr. Petre Groza, Rumanian prime minister, is shown casting his ballot in Bucharest during the recent elections in which the Communists scored an impressive victory. At RIGHT is Gheorghe Tatarescu, vice-premier and minister of exterior affairs, as he waited for his turn at the ballot box. The U. S. and Britain have withheld recognition of the Rumanian government on grounds that the elections were not free. A group of peasants in a village south of Bucharest are shown in photo at RIGHT reading a government poster which says, "Vote for the Sun," as Rumanians recently went to the polls in the parliamentary election. One of them holds a voting card, showing only government candidates, which was picked up in the street of this village where only 30 out of 500 families were said to have received voting cards, none of which listed the opposition.

'Enjoy the Fruits of Eating Fruit'

Winter and apples go together in Canada. After last year's short supply, everyone welcomes their return to the daily fare.

Apples have a very interesting "past". They originated in Southwestern Asia, migrating from there to Europe. The histories of ancient Egypt, Greece and Rome paid tribute to the apple. From Rome, apples were introduced into England during their occupation of that country. Thence, the Pilgrim Fathers brought them to America, and today Canada ranks as one of the leading apple-growing countries of the world.

Due to the great variety of uses to which apples may be put, plus their attractive appearance and palatable flavour, the apple has been called "The King of Fruit." Besides these qualities the Canadian homemaker appreciates the economic value of apples in the household budget. Furthermore, many homes depend on them as their chief source of fresh fruit throughout the winter months.

If apples are purchased by the box, they will be graded, according to government standards — "Extra Fancy", "Fancy", "Combination" and "Cee". If bought in barrels, hampers or baskets, the grade mark will be "No. 1", "Domestic" and "No. 3."

Store apples in a well-ventilated, comparatively dry room, with as low a temperature as possible, without danger of frost. If the apples have been stored for sometime the addition of cinnamon, cloves or lemon will improve the flavor.

With the frequent serving of apples, variety must be the "keynote"—applesauce and apple pie, however toothsome, will become monotonous. Here are a few suggestions from the home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

—Core apples and fill centres with mincemeat. Bake until tender—very good.

—Chopped, tart, red-skinned apples add to the flavour and appearance of cole slaw.

—Serve unpeeled red apple wedges and grapefruit sections on lettuce with French dressing — a tasty and easily prepared salad.

Spiced Apples

3 medium-sized tart apples
1-4 cup brown sugar
1-4 cup molasses
1-2 cup tomato catsup
1-4 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter

Wash, core apples, but do not peel. Cut in half crosswise and place in baking dish. Blend together the brown sugar, molasses, catsup and salt. Pour over apples and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F until tender — about 35 minutes. Turn apples once during baking and baste with sauce.

This makes an excellent accompaniment for vegetable plate, fish, meat or poultry. 6 servings.

Apple Juice Salad

2 tablespoons gelatin
1-2 cup cold apple juice
1 3-4 cups apple juice
1-4 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar
1-2 cup finely chopped celery
1 cup chopped apples
2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
1-3 cup finely chopped peanuts

Soak gelatin in 1-2 cup cold apple juice for 5 minutes. Heat remaining apple juice to boiling point, add soaked gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add salt, sugar and vinegar, blend well. When mixture begins to set, fold in remaining ingredients. Pour into moistened moulds and chill until firm. Unmould on salad greens and garnish with tomato wedges. Crackers sprinkled with grated cheese and toasted go especially well with apple salads. Six servings.

Apple Cheese Cobbler

6 Apples
1-4 cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon butter
1 1-2 cups all-purpose or
1 2-3 cups pastry flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-4 teaspoon salt
3-4 cup grated cheese
2 tablespoons mild-flavored fat
6 tablespoons milk
1 egg
1-4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons boiling water
1-2 teaspoon almond extract

Peel apples, cut in thick slices and arrange in baking dish. Sprinkle with brown sugar and dot with butter. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt, add grated cheese. Cut in fat; beat egg and mix together and mix quickly into dry ingredients. Pat dough into shape and size of casserole and cover apples with it. Bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees 5, about 15 minutes. Combine sugar, water and flavoring and pour over partly baked dough. Return to oven and bake 15 minutes longer. Six servings.

IN HOLLYWOOD

Eight-year-old Katherine Beaumont arrived in New York recently with her mother en route to Canada for a holiday. M-G-M scouts spotted the youngster and arranged for a screen test while she awaited transportation to Toronto. Katherine is shown on her arrival in Los Angeles, Calif., for a possible film role. The blue-eyed blonde actress has been on the stage since she was five years old and has appeared in several British pictures.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, saying, to pop, I had the most provoking dreem last night, William, although I make it a point to never force my dreems on other people. Still, if you insist, I'll tell it to you, she said.

I wont take no for an answer, pop said and ma said, Well, I dreemed that one of my deerest dreems came true. I mean I dreemed I was invited up on the studio stage in the broadcast of the Multybubble Soap Powder program where they give the contestants the most dazzling array of gifts for answering the simplest question.

And you couldn't answer your question, too bad, pop said, and ma said, Not at all, I answered perfectly. The question was, how many threes are left in 333 after the middle 3 goes for a walk? Well I answered like a flash, Two threes and none in the middle, and the man said, That is correct, and Multybubble Soap Powder takes pleasure in awarding you one solid silver refrigerator with cold running Peppy Cola, two mink dressing gowns lined with ermine for added warmth, and 3 diamond wrist watches already wound for 15 years each, or 45 years in all. And that's where the provoking part came in, ma said.

You woke up before you had time to receive your prizes, pop said, and ma said, No, if it had only been that, I could hardly blamed the Multybubble Soap people. What happened was, the man went right on to say, I have just been handed the following dispatch, owing to the length of the shortage, Multybubble Soap Powder will be unable to deliver the aforesaid gifts, and there's nothing the contestant can do

NO CURE FOR BABY'S COLDS

. . . But You Can Help Nature To Fight Them Off

Medical Science denies there is any such thing as a cure for colds—only Nature herself can do it. So when baby's sniffles, or stuffy breathing warn you of a cold's presence—cooperate at once with Nature.

See that baby is kept warm, gets plenty of sleep and take extra care that the bowels are thoroughly cleared of harmful wastes which drag down vitality and resistance. To do this without upsetting baby's whole system and further weakening it, try Baby's Own Tablets—easily crushed to a powder, if desired. Mild, yet act promptly in getting rid of the irritating materials that make baby restless and feverish . . . and in this way they encourage restful sleep. Used with confidence by thousands of Mothers for over 40 years, too, for teething fevers, constipation and other simple baby ailments. No "sleepy" stuff—no dulling effect. Get a box of Baby's Own Tablets today. Only 25¢. If they fail to help, call your physician at once.

Maori Princess Stands Out as Leader of Race

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

Auckland, N.Z. (CP)— Acknowledged by authorities on the Maori race to be the outstanding Maori woman of recent times and one of the most influential living leaders of the race of either sex, Princess Te Puea Herangi, O.B.E., received good wishes from all parts of New Zealand and from abroad on her 63rd birthday recently.

Princess Te Puea is one of those rare personalities who although self-effacing and retiring in manner, is automatically respected and admired by all who meet her. She is a grand-daughter of the Maori "King" Tawhiao and aunt of Koroki, the present "king," leading chief of a large group of tribes in the Kaikato district of the North Island. Perhaps the measure of her greatness is that although she herself never uses the title Princess, it is universally accorded her in New Zealand and by many prominent overseas visitors.

Feeling that the Maori race was on the down-grade, losing its old pride and skills and in danger of becoming merely a lower element in the white population, she dedicated her life to its regeneration. She started land settlement schemes, calling on the ancient tribal practice of mobilizing whole communities for the task of breaking in land. Men did the heavy clearing and women and children carried out lighter tasks.

At Ngaruawahia she established a model village as a central headquarters for the people of the Kaikato. Here she maintained a nucleus of Maori carvers skilled in the ancient arts of decoration. The meeting house has always been the centre of Maori communal life and she had built a magnificent example well worthy to rank with the greatest Maori buildings of the past. She also built a fine "King's house" for the Maori King and the whole area now has become a home for her people where they are proud to welcome distinguished visitors.

Imposed Discipline

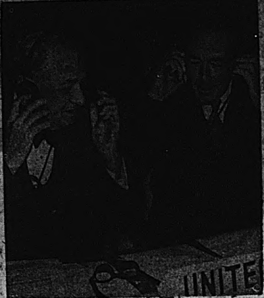
To achieve her purposes she imposed a firm discipline on herself and expected it from others. Often she worked with her laborers.

To mark New Zealand centennial celebrations, Princess Te Puea's carvers built a fleet of war canoes, finely decorated and among the largest ever constructed. When fully manned and speeding over the water to the Maori war cries and canoe songs, they were one of the best sights at the celebrations.

Princess Te Puea had always maintained that there could be no true fellowship with Europeans until long-standing grievances over lands confiscated from the Maoris during the Maori wars in the early days of European settlement had been adjusted. When a financial settlement was offered by the government she was the first to emphasize the need for its acceptance and played a leading part in securing Maori agreement to a solution of the problem.

An ardent patriot, she worked hard throughout the war to raise funds among the Maoris to assist the war effort.

She has often been asked to enter parliament but prefers to remain among the people where she can keep in closer touch with the progress of the prospering lands she has opened up and with the day to day problems of her people. She was awarded the O. B. E. in the Coronation honors in 1937.



Senator Tom Connally, LEFT, U. S. delegate, and Sir Hartley Shawcross, United Kingdom's delegate, as they adjusted their earphones before start of first Sunday meeting of the U. N. Security Council. In discussing the controversial veto question, Shawcross argued that the major powers "must at present retain the right of veto," because a combination of smaller powers might form a voting bloc and outvote one of the Big Five on a vital issue.

Threat to Wartorn Area

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rome (CP)—Widespread starvation has been averted in Europe and the food situation generally is improved compared with a year ago; but millions still go hungry from Cherbourg to Istanbul in the stupifying economic maladjustments of the continent.

There is as good food in Europe, at a price, as you can get in Canada or the United States. There is far greater variety than Great Britain has seen for seven years. Yet hunger haunts many in practically every country.

In the small-place, uneven recovery of Europe, food distribution everywhere has been handled badly. Black-market operators and food racketeers are doing a tremendous illicit trade. They fleece the wealthy and the middle classes—and the poor get no break at all.

Worst over-all food situation is in Germany, under four-power occupation and control. Several times during the last year there were food crises, particularly in the British zone, which took all the ingenuity of the control authorities to overcome.

Austria, also under similar control, seems to be the next worst. In both countries there is widespread undernourishment. There is some actual starvation but it has not reached any high proportion. This winter is again a testing time.

Salvation of many countries undoubtedly has been the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, to which Canada was the third largest contributor.

Valuable Contribution

In Italy, Greece, the Balkans, Poland and Austria this humanitarian organization—with all its faults the most successful international undertaking of the post-war period—has been of tremendous help.

Some U.N.R.R.A. food got into the black market. Some was poorly distributed. But all in all the organization, through the last year particularly, helped a vast number of people to bridge the food gap between war and peace.

U.N.R.R.A. is folding up and its disappearance will leave a vacuum in Europe. Countries such as Greece desperately hope the United Nations Organization will rapidly take over many of U. N. R. R. A.'s essential services.

In countries such as Italy and Greece there are great disparities, depending on how much money the buyer can spend. Regular banquets can be obtained in restaurants in Rome and Athens for a goodly sum, yet distribution is so faulty, that the majority of people are on the borderline for rations.

Switzerland eats remarkably well, as she has all along in her neutral position, and in Belgium and the Netherlands food is plentiful. But even in Brussels, despite the good ration scale, the black market functions openly. A butcher frequently says he has no rationed meat but offers to sell at black market rates.

France has had food troubles all year. This autumn appalling scandals in food and wine were meals while the ordinary French family struggles to make ends meet.

JOSEPH BERG Re-ARRESTED

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP)—Joseph Berg, freed on bail Nov. 27 to await trial on charges of breaking and entering and theft, was re-arrested late last night after morphine and a hypodermic needle were found in his possession, police said today.

Berg was committed for trial Nov. 27 in connection with the Oct. 31 break-in at a Windsor drug-store, where razors, cigar lighters, cigarets and stamps valued at $425 were stolen.

With Americans

Moscow, Dec. 4 (AP)—Tass' correspondent in Ankara said today Britain is negotiating with Americans for the sending of at least a small contingent of United States troops to Greece "to ease the British position in that country and create an excuse for the further presence of British troops there."

Another report published here today said Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, British Chief of Staff, visiting Greece, had had two conversations with the Greek War Minister and had been received next day by the King and the Acting Premier.

Extent Organized Labor Movement's Gains for 1946 Subject of Controversy

By JACK WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—Canada's organized labor movement tested its new strength in 1946 but the extent of its victory remained a subject of controversy. The year went down in the record as setting a new high in strikes.

On the one hand labor could claim it had effected industrial wage increases in the neighborhood of nine to 15 cents an hour. On the other hand it could be claimed that workers had lost money through idle time — some were on strike for as long as five months—and had seriously hampered the reconversion program.

The year had brought disillusionment to those who claimed unions would slump in membership when the war ended. The two major groups—Trades and Labor Congress and Canadian Congress of Labor—both reported membership increases and more than 700,000 Canadian workers held union cards.

Post-war strikes had been regarded as inevitable, particularly after work stoppages spread through the United States. In Canada they reached their peak in the summer months with something more than 75,000 workers involved altogether. Their effect far exceeded the number of strikers.

The 81-day basic steel strike became the focal point of the dispute and was eventually settled on the basis of a 13-cent increase, compared to the union's original demand of 19 1-2 cents. Settlement of other strikes followed quickly, but not before factories across the country had been slowed down by material shortages from the strike-bound plants.

Employment Up

Employment continued at a high level, even when strikes were prevalent workers found jobs in seasonal occupations. Canada's working force at the end of the year stood at 4,900,000, compared to 3,800,000 in 1939.

Labor shortages were troubling some industries. There was a shortage of skilled workers in construction, and in such primary industries as mining and logging. War conditions which had cut or eliminated the training of apprentices in some trades were an important factor in this condition.

To some extent this was being met by special training courses. Vocational training schools which had been used to train war workers, now were busy fitting veterans for peacetime occupations. Men were learning skills in mining and logging as well as in the industrial crafts. Total enrolment of veterans approached the 90,000 mark.

In the field of labor legislation major event of the year was a conference of Dominion and provincial labor ministers to discuss the future of collective bargaining legislation introduced during the war scheduled to expire early in 1947.

There seemed little inclination to implement demands for a national labor code and as an alternative the Dominion proposed amending the Industrial Disputes Act, which was suspended when the wartime code came into effect, and allowing it to stand as a model which the provinces might adopt if they see fit. The provinces gave fairly general approval to the basic plan but made no specific commitments.

NEW CHEMICAL ANTIDOTE

Toronto, Dec. 4 — (CP)—British anti-Lewisite — or Bal — one of the top hush-hush developments in chemical warfare was yesterday revealed as an antidote for the whole field of deadly arsenical poisonings. The wartime discovery involves an entirely new principle in medicine, its discoverer Dr. R. A. Peters, Professor of bio-chemistry at Oxford University told the University of Toronto Physiological Society.

The Proposed Incinerator
AND
Purchase of Lands for Industrial Purposes

MR. C. A. MEADOWS, of the firm of Meadows and Critoph, Consulting Engineers, Toronto, who have been retained by the City of Belleville, to provide Plans, Costs and Specifications for the Incinerator, will be present to explain plans and answer questions.

AFTER THE DISCUSSION RE BY-LAWS

The Candidates For Public Office Who Care To, Will Have The Opportunity To Address The Meeting

Frank S. Follwell
MAYOR OF BELLEVILLE

Johannesburg (CP)— Because of their natural artistic temperament, native women from the kraals and native reserves of South Africa are being employed in several Johannesburg dress factories to do the bead-work on dresses. If they can get them, the factories take women of the Zulu, Fingoe and Xosa tribes, whose bead-work has a fine reputation throughout the country.

The manager of a large Johannesburg factory said that in one of his workshops alone 45 native women are kept busy all the time on beadwork. The patterns are devised by Europeans but it is left to the native women entirely to put them on the dresses.

"Dress buyers from abroad have told me that the beadwork on South African garments is far superior to that of any other country," the manager said. "I ascribe South African superiority in this respect to the unskilled native woman worker who is artistic by instinct."

There is a keen demand from Britain and the Continent for dresses "made in South Africa" but the demand in South Africa itself is so great that export has been forbidden.

The manager of one large clothing factory said he had an open order from a Scandinavian dealer which would in itself take at least three years to complete, if he were allowed to export. He felt the export ban was fully justified, but that it might be relaxed just a little to allow South Africa to gain a footing in the world market.

This manufacturer says that although a fair number of womens' clothes are being imported from Britain and America, South African women are beginning to show a preference for South African made clothes. "South African clothes designers no longer find it necessary to copy Paris or London styles. We have developed our own fashions to harmonize with our particular climate and other general conditions prevailing in our country."

The manufacturer said South African women preferred "solid" garments to "showy" ones, and that local designers were therefore concentrating on simple durable garments "which nevertheless include the elements of smartness and sophistication."

LAST MINUTE WHEAT MOVEMENT

Fort Erie, Dec. 4 — (CP)—In a last minute rush to beat the 1946 navigation season deadline, thousands of tons of grain today were being rushed down the Great Lakes to Buffalo's big waterfront elevators. Their cargo holds bulging with 10,000,000 bushels of grain, 32 freighters either were docked here or sailing toward this port this weekend. The steamer J. H. Hillman, Jr., arrived from Port Arthur with 463,000 bushels of Canadian rye, one of the biggest single cargoes of the season.

FOURTH NEW CAR STOLEN

Galt, Ont., Dec. 4 — (CP)—The fourth theft of a 1946 auto here in the past two months occurred here last night when C. Risdale lost his machine, parked outside a local hotel. The other three cars have not yet been recovered.

One of the smallest engines on display at the Power Show in the Royal York is this working model of a live steamer locomotive. Its builder, G. H. Roberts, 834 Carlaw Ave., tightens a tiny screw. He has been working on the model for 12 years and, when it is finished next spring, it will pull him and the weight of four other men.

And the largest engine at the show is this famous "V" engine, used successfully by the British navy during the war. The one pictured was brought back from the beaches of Normandy after driving a tank landing craft across the English Channel. Expert Robert Onions keeps the machine turning over at one of its few public showings.

Shanghai Still Shows War Scars

The civil war fighting fronts are now a comfortable distance away, but this crowded, noisy metropolis of 4,000,000 continues to reflect dramatically the frenetic chaos of war-induced inflation and economic upheaval, Henry R. Fieberman writes from Shanghai to The New York Times.

Returning after an absence of six months, one finds the speculator still a more dominant figure than the producer; rockets and smuggling are still flourishing, and the cost of living is still going up. With 1936 as a base of 100 the general cost-of-living index for October was 521,855, with the clothing index about twice that figure and the food index slightly lower.

New Mayor Praised

A new mayor, the Western-educated Dr. K. C. Wu, has won praise from both English-language and Chinese press for his display of energy in the stabilization of rice prices. The number of American military uniforms on the streets, thronged with hordes of pedestrians, sidewalk hawkers, money changers, phrenologists, rickshaws and tinkling pedicabs has dwindled considerably.

The shortage of power appears to have blinked out many Neon signs over cabarets, still doing a fairish amount of business despite the fact that Russian dance-hall girls seem to have more time on their hands, now that the Shanghai Army headquarters has been liquidated. A new decorum has come to the 17-storey Broadway Mansions, billet for the Shanghai detachment of the Army Advisory Group, which overlooks the gray men-of-war in the Whangpoo River and hundreds of Chinese junks choking the murky Soochow Creek.

Dazzling Ladies Gone

The elevators are now filled with Army dependents. Children carrying textbooks home from the American School and women who have just come from Main Street, U.S.A., have replaced young bucks from the Air Force and dazzling young ladies named Olga and Sonya.

Despite these and other manifestations of sanity, however, the frenzy of Shanghai still gives the visitor a feeling that he has taken off into space and settled six inches off the ground.

There must be thousands of persons who are living what they consider to be normal lives, but one gets a fleeting impression, nevertheless, of frantic little men knocking each other down in an attempt to get rich overnight. One of China's chief requirements for recovery, aside from the need for stabilization of the currency and the rebuilding of broken communications, is to narrow the wide gap separating heavy imports and meagre exports. This fact was recognized in the recent establishment of import licencing and over all exchange control, which seems to have been designed primarily to conserve foreign exchange.

Import-Minded

But Shanghai continues to be import-minded rather than export minded especially since the export trade is handicapped by high domestic prices. Exchange shops that proliferate in Shanghai are now required by the government not to carry out transactions above the official rate of 3,350 Chinese dollars for one United States dollar. But all along the exchange shop belt on Szechuen road there are sidewalk money-changers who continue to offer 4,000 to 4,500 to 1 in the black market operating within the black market.

The facts of life appear to have been recognized also by overseas Chinese, whose remittances before the war used to help straighten out China's unfavorable balance of trade. Many of these, it is understood, are now remitting parcels of goods instead of money, apparently expecting the relative to be able to get by the customs somehow and sell the goods in the black market.

Interest Rate High

A high black market interest rate of 14 percent a month is diverting available capital from risky and less profitable industrial investment to speculative fields. Profits available in money-lending are indicated by the case of an American who rented a house for two years at an average outlay of $18,000 (United States). The money will reproduce itself for the landlord in five months if lent out at compound interest at the current rate.

Shanghai, through which the major part of China's exports normally flow, has been seriously affected by the disruption of internal communications, the upheaval in the cotton and silk industries and high domestic prices, caused largely by the paper money inflation that is financing the national army. Its recovery hinges on the solution of these national problems.

PATROLMAN KILLS JANITOR

Detroit, Dec. 4 (CP)—Patrolman George Wysocki shot and killed William Tennell, 48-year-old janitor of a downtown office building on Monday night after Tennell allegedly lunged at the policeman with a knife. A single shot struck Tennell in the heart.

Police said Wysocki was called after Tennell injured John Lawson, a fellow janitor whom Tennell had accused of taking a pint of whisky.

Said the patrolman:

"I told him to drop the knife and he lunged at me, so I fired."

NEW DEADLY TORPEDO

Washington, Dec. 4 — (AP) — The United States Navy disclosed yesterday that in the last days of the war it possessed a new proximity torpedo warhead described as "a versatile and deadly weapon of almost fool - proof performance." The new warhead, the Mark 9 Torpedo Explorer, designed to function either by proximity to the target or by contact, enables a torpedo to be launched from aircraft or submarines. Firing of the warhead is not dependent on collision with a ship.

Home and School Associations Hear Candidates for Board Of Education at Collegiate

Interest in educational matters was evident Wednesday evening when the combined Home and School Associations sponsored a public meeting to give the aspiring candidates for the Board of Education an opportunity to express their viewpoint on matters pertaining to education in this city. A representative audience gathered at the Collegiate auditorium and listened with intent interest as present members and candidates congratulated this association which is non-political, non-sectarian, and non-commercial for showing that they had a lively interest in the future citizens of the community by trying to select the best leaders possible to guide the destiny of the schools.

Mrs. G. G. Wright, President of the Collegiate Home and School Association was chairman for the evening, which was opened with a sing-song led by Rev. Mr. D. C. Amos with Mr. W. E. Fletcher, musical director, at the piano. The sixteen speakers appeared in the order in which their names were drawn from a box, and speeches were limited to five minutes.

Alex Nathan:

As a candidate for election Mr. Nathan stated that his policy was that there is nothing too much we can do for our children in the line of education. Our past Board has provided us with fine teachers and he would like to join the Board and give them what service he could. He felt that his experience in service clubs would be helpful. He was gratified that one plan they had had for school children had been realized with playgrounds under proper supervision. He believed in sponsoring sports as a healthy outlet for children. He would like to see High School education for junior farmers developed into a scientific industry for the progress of the country.

J. Edward Shortt:

A member of the present board as well as a candidate for re-election, Mr. Shortt said that the Board had tried to develop policies of sound and progressive education, and it was the intention to continue such a policy always reaching out to new developments in educational systems. Here in Belleville we have been able to build a home economics centre at Queen Mary School, which is the most perfectly equipped in the province of Ontario. Mr. Shortt told a story to illustrate the fact that if a boy was put together properly the world would be all right.

W. H. Finkle:

The chairman of the present Board of Educaiton, Mr. Finkle, is standing for re-election. It was as a member of the Home and School Association that Mr. Finkle first became interested in the work of the Board. He stated that he had an abiding conviction of the infinite worth of education in the home and in the community, so that one might be of use, not only to oneself but to others. The school and grounds must be kept in good condition, clean and bright and attractive. Health, both physical and mental, must be maintained. A child must be disciplined by hard work to face the difficulties of life. A good teacher is one who is well qualified, properly remunerated, and who can inspire and enthuse the pupils. Mr. Finkle quoted, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it."

Miss Josephine Tickell:

A member of the Board Miss Tickell has another year to serve in office, but wanted to thank those who gave her the opportunity to serve by electing her last year, thus putting their trust in her, and conferring the kind of honor that inspires a person to do his best at a job. In spite of the long hours spent at Board meetings, keeping mentally alert, the fact that the road led to ultimate progress was satisfaction gained. Miss Tickell stated that she would like as co-workers persons who (1) were able and willing to give the necessary time, (2) give the welfare of boys and girls first consideration, (3) were willing and glad to follow certain rules, but if the occasion and common sense demanded would break rules, and (4) would face situations as brand-new 1947 situations with new problems.

A. L. Burke:

A new aspirant to the Board, Mr. Burke quoted a Biblical text "Where your treasure is there will your heart be also." Our treasures were our boys and girls. Adequate education must be provided if they are to become satisfactory individuals. Teachers of Ontario are persons of high calibre and perform an excellent service, second only to the Christian Church. There should be whole-hearted co-operation between parents and teachers, teachers and pupils, and the Board. If elected, Mr. Burke promised to exercise constant care to work in conjunction with the Board to equip children adequately so that they might not only live but live more abundantly.

Enos David:

Mr. David is a candidate for election, and expressed his opinion that it was the essence of democracy to hold a meeting of that nature, and also commended the Junior Board of Trade for trying to get out the vote. His experience in service clubs had taught him that it was better to be an active participant than to sit on the side-lines and criticize. He stated that as a taxpayer he was definitely interested in economy, but not at the expense of progress or health. He believed in harmonious relations between the city council, school board, school and homes.

Dr. R. W. Tennent:

As a candidate to the board, Dr. Tennent briefly expressed his interest in children, teachers, parents and taxpayers.

George Wishart:

A member of the present board, Mr. Wishart is standing for re-election. It was his belief that civilization was at a critical point in the history of affairs, and whether we make democracy work or not depends on us and our children. We have been shown in Germany how education can be used to indoctrinate a whole nation for evil purposes, and we can use education for democratic citizenship. Many teachers have been lured into other occupations by higher salaries. The teaching profession must be considered one of the most important and be suitably paid. A trustee has two obligations, Mr. Wishart stated, not to spend the taxpayers' money more than is necessary, and to provide the best educational facilities for our city. The present Board has tried to improve the efficiencyof of the teaching staffs, and that had resulted in increased good-will and efficiency in the schools. Education must have a firm foundation, and a foundation starts at the bottom, Mr. Wishart explained as he pointed out the position of his name on the ballot.

Mrs. Violet Camken:

In her seven years as a resident of Belleville, Mrs. Camken stated that she had always tried to do her duty to the best of her ability wherever she was asked, and pledged her word to continue to give her best efforts if elected. She believed mothers had a predominant influence in the lives of children.

Col. E. A. Geen:

The present Chairman of Finance on the Board, Col. Geen is a candidate for re-election. He stated that the Board carried out the policies laid down by the Department of Education. Many improvements had been carried out in Belleville, and many are on the agenda for next year. The manual training class at Queen Victoria School was an example of what the present Board had accomplished. Further accommodation must be provided at Queen Mary School, and a line of trees planted at the rear of King George School to mark the boundary of a projected playground. Col. Geen read statistics pertaining to the Public and Secondary Schools to give the audience some idea of what large sums of money are required for educational purposes.

Richard Hart:

Mr. Hart is a new aspirant to the Board, and expressed his belief the progress can be attained by education. The child learns at home from the examples he sees, and at school he learns from his teachers who are his leaders. It was the duty of the home to prove the truth of the moral and ethical standards. Education was a continuing force and does not end with school. There was a need of proper balance in vocational and academic training. He thought the Board should work in harmony with the teaching staff and encourage and retain its staff. However the growth of a community must be commensurate with the ability of the taxpayer to pay.

Lewis Watson:

A candidate for the first time, Mr. Watson said that his chief interest was in pre-employment training. He spoke on the apprenticeship system which he declared was a waste of time and which had died in Canada during the war. We must have craftsmen in industry, and youths need vocational training. As an instructor in the War Emergency classes Mr. Watson felt that he understood some of the problems of teachers. We must have the children's interests at heart and remember that children are people.

Harold Seldon:

As a member of the Board, Mr. Seldon claimed that the Board should be more than a rubber stamp for the Department of Education. It was most important, he thought, to elect members who were clear thinking, right minded and unbiased by any club, affiliations, or other prejudices. It was of major importance that the high morale among teachers be sustained, that there be real friendship and mutual understanding with members of the Board. The guidance department is now a going concern. The Board is important because it deals with the most important people in the world — our children.

Frank Creeggan:

Mr. Creeggan is a candidate for the first time to the Board. In stating his qualifications he said that he had helped to organize a men's branch of the Home and School Association in Picton which had been responsible for building playgrounds and rinks there. He had become interested in developing educational opportunities. The fact that only about 10% of pupils in the academic course ever graduate from collegiate was a matter for serious thought. There is room for advancement in education, and he promised to devote as much time and energy as possible if he was elected. He offered the suggestion that the Board and teaching staffs should have a social evening and become better acquainted, and more satisfied with their work.

H. B. Fetterly:

At present a member of the Board and not a candidate for election this year, Mr. Fetterly reviewed some of the work which had been accomplished in the schools. Manual training and household science are finally under way; music is now an established course, and Belleville schools have one of the highest ratings of any school in the province. This has been one of the most successful years the Board has ever had, Mr. Fetterly claimed. In the larger sphere it has been a momentous year with the Hope Commission which was appointed to study educational methods having completed their work after a year of study. A program will evolve from this to fit all activities. Hundreds of briefs were presented to the twenty-four men who comprised the commission. The Province of Ontario is facing a crisis in educational matters, Mr. Fetterly stated.

Farm Conditions in County Favorable During Past Year Linn Fair Tells County Council

The trend of farm conditions in Hastings County during the past year has generally been quite favorable. Mr. Linn Fair, county agricultural representative told the County Council on Wednesday afternoon.

The cost of agricultural production has risen somewhat, he said, brought about largely through higher wages asked by farm labor, because of the small grain crop in 1945 and also because of the very dry pasture year which materially reduced milk production.

To the end of October Hastings County cheese production was down approximately one million and a half pounds and butter production down roughly 150,000 pounds. This meant a considerable decrease in farm income while the general cost of production was still rising.

The county had favorable weather in the Spring for seeding with the result that a large acreage of Spring grain was put in under favorable conditions. The grain crop harvested this year was the largest since the high yields of 1942 while hay was average for size and was harvested under good conditions.

Good Quality Hay

This means, Mr. Fair pointed out, that farmers will have a good quality hay for feeding purposes this winter. There was also some carry-over from 1945. The corn crop was generally below average and this means that silage will not be plentiful. The county has a large livestock population but farmers generally do not anticipate any scarcity of roughage feeds this winter. Considerable amounts of western grain will be needed over and above the fine county crop of this year.

Hog production was fairly well maintained with some increase in quality and farmers were able to keep up the number of hogs only through the purchase of western grain.

"The county poultry population is the highest it has ever been at the present time," Mr. Fair said. Most hatcheries reported an increase in the number of baby chicks sold last Spring.

Good Prices Paid.

Sales of grade and pure bred dairy cattle have been conducted at satisfactory prices with a large percentage of the cattle being exported to the United States. Some of these cattle, mostly grades, have gone to Toronto and Montreal milk sheds.

Farm labor was very scarce but most farmers with their families worked overtime and did a splendid job of harvesting good crops with a minimum of outside help. The services of farmers from Western Canada for the hay harvest was greatly appreciated.

There was little activity in the horse market during 1946, Mr. Fair said, and very few horses have been sold out of the county. A relatively small number changed hands during the year. A number of stallions are not routed at the present time but stand for service at their home barns. The number of stallions in the county is the lowest of any time during the past eight years. The great increase in the sales of farm tractors has lessened the demand for horses.

Cattle in Demand.

Good dairy cattle have been in demand during the past year while large numbers of cows have been sold out of the county. Farmers generally have been satisfied with the prices received. Good grade cows near freshening have sold as high as $200 while most pure bred cows have sold from $250 to $300 with a few tops selling even higher.

The sheep population in Hastings has decreased somewhat in the county during the past year. The factors responsible for this decrease are largely because of heavy losses due to stock killed by dogs and wolves.

There is a large area of land in the county that is suitable for sheep raising, the representative told council. Some townships that had large sheep populations five years ago have very small numbers at the present time. Unless the losses increased by dogs and wolves decreases considerably, the sheep population will decrease still further.

Hog Production Down.

Hog production in the county dropped off about fifteen per cent during 1945. Production amounted to 56,500 a decrease of 10,000 from the year previous. The Dominion subsidy on quality hogs has had a tendency to improve the weights and finishing of animals going to market and this has somewhat improved the grade of hogs marketed in the county.

Poultry dropped off somewhat during 1945, but this trend this year is somewhat reversed as hatcheries report large orders of chicks last spring. There has also been an increase in the number of cockerels purchased for meat production.

Mr. Fair outlined the progress of the several county farm organizations stating that all were thriving and interests in the various subjects being well maintained. Agricultural societies are all endeavoring to improve their programs to fit the need of agriculture in their communities. Most of these societies sponsor club work and field crop competitions.

British Forces Hold Two Million Acres of Land

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 5 — (CP) — A year and a half after the war's end, Britain's armed forces still hold some 2,000,000 acres of land in these small islands with no indication of speedy release.

Week after week there are official statements that one of the services plans to retain — or even requisition — some famous area for training purposes. Public concern forced a recent debate in the House of Lords.

Now the cabinet, not the services, has the final decision but newspapers still are not satisfied that quick action has been guaranteed.

There have been renewed suggestions that:—

1. Training be concentrated in such places as the north of Scotland instead of the more populous sections of southern England and Wales.

2. Arrangements be made with the Dominions, particularly Canada and Australia, for training of British mechanized forces in their open spaces.

3 A Royal Commission be formed to go into the whole problem of military training and widespread requisitioning of land.

Want Permanent Use

The War Office still retains 1,500,000 of the 11,000,000 acres it held during the peak war period. It is understood to be asking the permanent use of at least 500,000 acres to train the peacetime army — about double the pre-war area.

The Air Ministry held 391,000 acres at the end of 1944 and only about 20,000 acres has been de-requisitioned so far. Before the war it had 85,000 acres. Admiralty land holdings have not been disclosed.

Speaking for the government, Lord Pakenham, Undersecretary for War, told the House of Lords no final decision has been reached on training abroad but it would be misleading to hold out hope of any large reduction of training areas as the result of sending troops overseas.

"It would be treachery on the part of the government if it allowed training areas to continue on the same scale (as pre-war)," he said. "We need battle training where live ammunition can be used."

sure kept on the jump. Many times he was implicated in the fines himself but he did manage to collect a fair amount of coin. One of the main reasons for the fines was the fact that 1st Vice-President Lion Bill Hopper was filling in for President Rollie Haryett and the boys didn't address Lion Bill properly. During the business part of the meeting Lion Harold Skuce, chairman of the welfare committee, brought up the subject of handing out of Christmas boxes to the needy aged people of the district and an open discussion was held as to what territory should be covered for this work. Lion Harry Price, chairman of the publicity committee, was asked to give more publicity to the sale of tickets on the money-dressed doll, which tickets will be drawn later this month. Vice Chairman Lion Robert McLauchlin was called upon to give an account of the work done in connection with the annual Santa Claus treat and parade which takes place in Bancroft each year and Vice President Bill and Past President Lion Jack Follis stressed the point very strongly that a lot of quick action should be exercised in respect to the Santa Claus treat to see that sisters, Mrs. Hutchison and Mrs. Moore of Detlor.

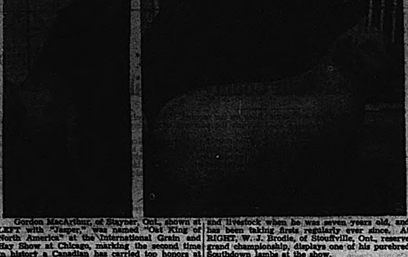
Mr. Rodney Robinson of the village had the pleasant experience of uniting with his bride once more. Rodney married an English girl on April 10th, 1946, and although he has been out of the armed forces for some time, having served as an officer in the wireless department of the navy, Mrs. Robinson did not have the opportunity of coming to Canada before Friday of last week. They arrived in Bancroft late Saturday afternoon and at present are residing at the home of Mr. Robinson's mother, Mrs. R. W. Robinson.

Santa Claus and the children should not be disappointed this Christmas season insofar as trees are concerned as truck loads of evergreens have been moving through Bancroft daily for the past couple of weeks.

THROW 3,600 EGGS

New York, Dec. 4 — (CP) — Four men threw 3,600 eggs at each other in an argument over 20,000 pounds of shortening in a butter and eggs store here Oct. 28. Seymour and Leon Kresch, filed charges against the other egg throwers, owners of a rival butter and egg store. Yesterday in court they withdrew their charges saying it was foolish for business men to throw eggs at each other.



Gordon MacArthur, of Stayner, Ont., shown at LEFT with "Jasper," was named "Oat King of North America" at the International Grain and Hay Show at Chicago, marking the second time in history a Canadian has carried top honors at the show. MacArthur won his first prizes for grain and livestock when he was seven years old, and has been taking firsts regularly ever since. At RIGHT, W. J. AT INAUGURAL OF CHINA'S NATIONAL ASSEMBLY

Power Rationing Seen Possibility Due to Shortage

Toronto, Dec. 5 —(CP)— Shortage of Hydro power in Southern Ontario has reached such serious proportions that rationing may have to be introduced as during war days, Dr. Thomas H. Hogg, chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, said yesterday at a press conference.

Dr. Hogg said the reason for the present shortage was "inability to expand during the war; lack of labor and materials with which to construct new sources of supply, and an increased demand following the war."

Indicative of the seriousness of the situation, said Dr. Hogg, was that Tuesday certain industries in the Niagara district had their power reduced by 350,000 horsepower.

The commission chairman said an appeal has been sent to all municipalities urging a voluntary curtailment in use of electrical power, but indicated that if the appeal fails rationing will be reintroduced.

"We still have the power to do that under the Power Control Act, which we made use of in war days," said Dr. Hogg. He said the shortage was not peculiar to Southern Ontario but "general across Canada and particularly serious in the United States."

Hamilton — A. W. Bradt, manager of the Hamilton Hydro Commission, announced yesterday that he is endeavoring to arrange a special meeting of the local commission to deal with an acute power shortage in Hamilton.

The following proposals will be considered: Limiting Christmas decorative lighting to from Dec. 21 until Christmas; curtailing street lighting; urging economy in homes and factories.

COLLEGE IN A BOMB CRATER

On the blitzed site beside the main building of the Birkbeck College in London, prefabricated classrooms have now been built below ground level to replace those destroyed. Sunk in the ruins of a blitzed site, these pre-fab classrooms enable students to carry on with their studies. The college, just a stone's throw from Fleet St., was founded in 1823, and incorporated in London University. It is the only London college for part time students who come for degrees from all walks of life.

May Build Export Market for Eels

Invercargill, N.Z. —(CP)—The possibilities of developing an export market for the millions of eels which swarm in streams in the south of New Zealand are being examined by several firms here. Inquiries have been made by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for huge quantities of canned eels and it is thought that even after U.N.R.R.A. goes out of existence there will be a brisk demand from the Far East and Europe.

Eels are not eaten in New Zealand except by the Maoris who prize them as a delicacy and their presence in the streams is looked on as a menace by fishermen who maintain they eat the trout food and even young trout and consequenty spoil the fishing. Occasional eel drives are held by anglers but their numbers still seem to be increasing.

A local firm has carried out tests with a simple method of put across a stream and a quantity of animal blood is then put into the stream. This has been found to attract eels from great distances upstream, and in many streams in this district eels can be carted off by the drayload.

Glad Plumbers Leave Tools

New York, Dec. 4 — (CP) — Plumbers are always forgetting their tools and Mrs. Anna Steingold of Brooklyn is glad of it. Yesterday when an armed man invaded her home she warned him to leave because plumbers had left for their tools, but would be back any moment. The gunman fled, not knowing there were not any plumbers, forgetful or otherwise, in Mrs. Steingold's house.

Controlled Sale Cheddar Cheese Draws Comment

Stratford, Dec. 5 —(CP)— Commenting on the statement of a spokesman for the department of agriculture that requisitioning of cheese for the British market had stopped Oct. 15, John I. Ballantyne of Atwood, president of Atwood District Cheese Producers Association, said:

"At the time requisitioning for the British market was stopped, the dairy commissioner said he intended to control sale of all Cheddar cheese in Canada from the time requisitioning for Britain went off until it was put on again next spring."

The statement from the department of agriculture was in reply to a reported statement by Mr. Ballantyne at the annual meeting at Atwood Monday of Atwood District Cheese Producers Association, that cheese producers had decided to buy cheese in defiance of government order.

"Technically, we may be all right so long as we are holding cheese," Mr. Ballantyne said yesterday. "The rub would be if we should try to sell it."

RESTAURANT ASSOC. SEEKS HIGHER MEAL PRICES

Hamilton, Dec. 5 —(CP)— The Canadian Restaurant Association has applied for lifting of the ceiling from restaurant meals, Norman Nicholson, president of the Association's Niagara Peninsula branch said yesterday.

Increase in the cost of food would leave 40 per cent of Canadian restaurants operating at a loss in 1946, he added.

"Inasmuch as many of these operators lost money in 1945 as well as in previous years, their business is dangerously jeopardized and failure is inevitable unless relief is granted."

Motorists Protest Stiff Auto Taxes

Sydney, Australia — (CP) — Australian motorists' associations are campaigning for taxation relief which they claim is crippling motoring and has made it a luxury beyond the reach of the average man.

The organizations say the cost of keeping an average-sized car has risen from about $4.80 before the war to $12.80 a week. They estimate that few family men earning less than $3,200, which is much higher than the average Australian income, can afford an automobile.

Two charges against which they argue are a federal sales tax on cars and the gasoline tax. The sales tax is up from six per cent in 1939 to 12 1-2 per cent and applies to higher car prices. The gasoline tax is 15 1-3 cents on a gallon of gasoline that retails at 34 2-3 cents. The tax represents an increase of about 84 per cent compared with the pre-war rate.

The associations contend also that not a large enough proportion of government revenue from the gasoline tax goes to highway upkeep. Last year, they claim, only $12,000,000 of $40,000,000 collected from the gasoline tax was distributed to state governments for road maintenance.

Pravda Makes Charge Against Ambassador Allen

Moscow, Dec. 4 — (AP)—Pravda charged today that George V. Allen, United States Ambassador to Iran, wanted to "provoke armed conflict" in that country.

The Communist party newspaper made the accusation in connection with reported remarks of Allen in support of the Iranian government's intention to send troops to semi-autonomous Azerbaijan to keep order in the coming parliamentary election.

MOST POTENT WEAPONS

Paris, Dec. 4 — (Reuters) — The atomic bomb placed fourth today in a list of the world's most potent weapons. Prof. Frederick J. Currie said the two most dangerous weapons are — not the atomic bomb, warplanes or guns — but "science and journalism."

He added that the tiny microbe might be more deadly than its much tinier constituent, the atom.

Prof. Curie did not amplify his remarks.

Big Reduction In Wheat Acreage Recommended

Ottawa, Dec. 5 —(CP)— The Dominion-Provincial agricultural conference yesterday recommended that Canadian farmers seed only 24,000,000 acres to wheat in 1947 for a 1,900,000-acre reduction from the 25,900,000 acres seeded this year.

Announcing 1947 farm production targets at the end of a three-day meeting, the conference also recommended that oats acreage be boosted to 14,310,200 acres from the 13,162,700 seeded this year and that barley acreage be increased almost 20 per cent to 8,000,000 from this year's total of 6,730,500 acres.

The target for mixed grains, grown principally in Quebec and Ontario, was placed at 1,453,400, a four-per-cent gain over this year's total of 1,399,300 acres.

Dealing with meats, the conference recommended that marketing of 5,175,00 hogs in 1947 against the estimated total of 4,350,000 this year and left the total of cattle marketings unchanged at 1,720,000 head.

On dairy products, the delegates budgeted for a 1947 milk production of 17,893,000,000 pounds against the estimated 1946 total of 16,909,858,000 pounds and the 1945 output of 17,618,810,000.

The creamery butter recommendation was set at 295,000,000 pounds against the estimated 1946 output of 270,100,000, Cheddar cheese at 183,000,000 pounds against 139,775,000 and concentrated milk products at 300,100,000 pounds against 277,500,000.

BRILLIANT STUDENT DIES

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 4 — (CP) — Carl Soderkrist, 17, brilliant collegiate student, musician and artist, died in hospital today from injuries suffered when knocked down by a taxi-cab last Saturday. An inquest will be held.

Bail of $5,000 was posted by Joseph O'Leary, alleged driver of the cab when he appeared in court Saturday on a charge of reckless driving and was remanded a week.

Carl is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Soderkrist, a brother and sister.

NOT ONE LOST PLACE

Santa Barbara, Calif., Dec. 4— (AP) — A fire's one thing — a nylon line another.

Fire Chief C. L. Tenney reported that not a woman in a half-block-long queue outside a dress shop lost her place when engines roared up to extinguish a minor blaze.

A large number of American Sherman and Stuart tanks have arrived in Canada and are finding their way to active and reserve forces of Canada's post-war army. The tanks, once earmarked for the European fighting front, are serviced at the ordnance depot at Longue Pointe, Que., and at Camp Borden, after which they are distributed to the units. Pictured ABOVE is a long line of Stuart tanks at the ordnance depot at Longue Pointe, Que., awaiting rechecking before being sent to units. This type of tank was successfully used in the North African campaign.

Two Witnesses Declare Judge Smelled of Liquor

Cobourg, Dec. 5. (CP)—Two witnesses yesterday swore that Judge J. C. M. German of Cobourg, smelled of liquor following an accident Sept. 3 which his automobile allegedly struck and injured Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg, who still is in the hospital.

They gave evidence in the second day of the trial of Judge German on charges of drunken driving and dangerous driving.

Freeman Bell, of Cobourg, said he saw Judge German at the scene of the accident and noticed that the Judge was unsteady on his feet and smelled of liquor.

"I believed him to be under the influence of liquor," Bell said.

Defence Counsel Arthur Greer read to the court a statement Bell signed last Sept. 30 in which he said Judge German did not stagger and that while he showed signs of drinking he was not drunk. Bell said he made and signed the statement.

"Your memory was fresher then than it is now," commented Mr. Greer.

"Yes," Bell replied.

"The Judge walked properly into the station?"

"With the Constable's assistance," said Bell.

Husband of the injured woman, Cyril Taylor said Judge German smelled of liquor at the scene of the accident.

"I don't consider he was in fit condition to drive," Taylor said.

Constable Joseph Taylor of Cobourg, testified that Mrs. Taylor told him at the scene of the accident that Judge German had driven off the highway and struck her. The constable said Judge German was swaying back and forth and staggered when he attempted to walk.

"The Judge told me he had been driving to Port Hope and that Mrs. Taylor slipped on the highway and he couldn't avoid hitting here," the constable continued. "His face was flushed and his eyes were glassy."

"I formed the opinion that Judge German was not in fit condition to drive or walk on the highway. I considered him intoxicated from the symptoms. We took him to the police office where he became very talkative. The Judge said he was drinking but not intoxicated."

The constable said marks on the highway indicated that a car had gone off the highway for 40 feet to where Mrs. Taylor was.

B35 COUPON DUE DEC. 19

Ottawa, Dec. 5 —(CP)— Because of a typographical error butter coupon B35 was reported in several places as coming due on Dec. 12 the Prices Board said Tuesday. This should have been announced as coming due on Dec. 19th.

DELEGATES SET

back to their provinces with "confidence" that Canadian farmers would be able to sell all they could produce in 1947.

The Agricultural Supplies Board, which prepared the production objectives for the conference, reported that the 1946 output of butter, estimated at 270,100,000 pounds, may not provide sufficient stocks at the year's end to meet the current six-ounce individual butter ration during the first four months of 1947. For next year, it budgeted for a butter production of 295,000,000 pounds.

Milk Quota High

For milk the target was set at 17,893,000,000 pounds against this year's estimated total of 16,909,858,000 pounds while the cheddar cheese objective was 183.000.000 pounds compared with 139,775,000 this year. Concentrated milk products were increased to 300,100,000 pounds from 277,500,000

Hog production was put at 5,175,000 head for 1947 against the estimated 1946 total of 4,350,000. Sheep and lambs were reduced to 1,100,000 head from 1,275,000. Cattle and veal calf marketings were left unchanged at 1,720,000 and 770,000 head, respectively.

The recommened egg output for next year was 378,500,000 dozen against 345,000,000 while poultry meat objective was held at 325,000,000 pounds.

It will be the first time since the strike began that the two parties in the dispute, which has made about 1,000 employees at the mine idle, have been brought together.

The walkout was called to enforce demands for a 15-cent-an-hour wage increase retroactive to Feb. 8 and a union checkoff. The company has offered a 10-cent-an-hour increase effective Nov. 1, but no checkoff.

The mine will be represented at the Ottawa Conference by R. V. Forritt, assistant general manager, and the union by T. F. McGuire, district co-ordinator, Olliver Bretton, international organizer, and two miners.

OSHAWA ★ BELLEVILLE

For a Young-Looking Figure

By HELEN FOLLETT

IN the svelte anatomy — in every human frame in fact—there is what is known as the "vital centre." You can find it easily enough. Place your finger tips between the breasts, send them downward to the point where the ribs meet. Keep that portion lifted and extended outward and you'll have a figure that will be a credit to the prettiest, most expensive frock. It will be impossible for the shoulders to sag forward, for the back to be rounded, for the chest to sag. The body assumes an attitude of energy and grace.

Practice Makes Habit

This is an easy role to remember. To practise it all the time means that it will become a habit; you will be unconscious of it. It is helpful to the fat and to the thin, alike, because it causes one to breathe deeply. Deep breathing accelerates the circulation of the blood. Brisk circulation means that you will grow red roses in your cheeks, not have to resort to the rouge pad. The rewards are many.

Poor posture is pure laziness, when it is not the result of ill health. Certainly any girl worth her salt should have thought of figure appearance and be willing to pull up her back bone, keep her head balanced.

For Health and Grace

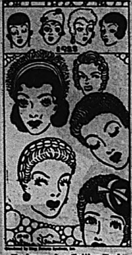
Good posture is necessary for health and vitality. When the figure slumps, the muscles of the abdomen lose elasticity, do not hold the internal organs in place as they should and, often, these organs fail to function normally. Digestive trouble can result.

Without good posture there cannot be lightness of movement or grace. One tires easily because the musculature is not strong. Sometimes this bad habit means that the lungs are not getting sufficient oxygen.

If you, my paper friend, give never a thought as to the way you stand, sit or move—and there are millions like you—just remember that the vibrant, healthy body, enjoying muscular activities, helps to keep the mind alert and spirits high. Pride alone should prod one into keeping youthful-looking.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON



Eyebrows Are Getting Back

Eyebrows And Eyelashes

Let the members of the grand army of pulchritude seekers lift up their voices and rejoice that it is no longer a daily duty to uproot and pull apart those pretty decorations that ornament the womanly brow. It is one thing to nip out a wild hair here and there, so as to keep the premises neat as a pin; it is something else to weed the entire growth until only a few little fuzzers remain to carry on.

Eyebrows were created to serve a purpose. They catch dust that might otherwise fly into the eyes. They catch perspiration, on those hot summer mornings when the hard-working housewife has been doing heavy work—maybe pushing the lawnmower about because poor delicate Daddy, who can spend a day tramping over a golf course, is just too tired to trim the grass.

The eyebrows give the face character and expression. Mona Lisa hasn't any eyebrows, but she has a radiant, mysterious smile that makes one forget the lack. A little bit of eyebrow wouldn't have done her a bit of harm.

Observe the pretties of the silver screen. You will notice that eyebrows are getting back to normal.

When the eyebrows need tweezing, apply moist hot applications beforehand. You won't shed so many tears as the cultivating process goes on. Use tweezers with squared ends; they take better hold than pointed ones. Don't deplete the growth entirely from the under border; that may give the eyebrows a high, unnatural position. If you do that, your eyes will look smaller than if the growth is in the normal place, which is along the bony ledge just above the eye socket.

Eyebrows should be shampooed when you wash your face. This practice makes the silky threads soft and keeps them in form. While they are wet, put a little brilliantine on the small brush used for eyebrows, and give them a gentle grooming.

Brush upward at the inner terminal; when you get to the center brush downward, forming a pleasing arch.

Applications of mineral oil will act as a tonic on eyelashes. Wonderful what that two-minute daily treatment will do for winkers that are scanty or short. If the oil gets into the eyes, it will do no damage. If it remains on the eyelids, that is all right, too. Lids should never be powdered; that gives the eyes a heavy appearance. A bit of gloss seems to make the eyes more lustrous. The oil forms a foundation for mascara, in case you lashes need a darkening agent.

Soaking the feet in warm sudsy water should be an important part of the beauty routine

By HELEN FOLLETT

DO you get good footage out of your tootsies? Can you tramp around all day and never feel a twinge? Pretty feet are a grand asset, and strong, healthy ones are a great comfort.

Unless the feet are properly shod, tendons and fibers in normal condition, they are capable of registering so much distress that the general health is affected. The nervous system gets all tangled up. Leg muscles are under strain. Locomotion is punishment. The body structure is thrown out of alignment.

A girl must be fleet-footed if she is to move with grace and rhythm. A brisk walk is then a pleasure; it stirs up the circulatory system, makes the complexion rosy, stimulates the appetite and the digestive mechanism. But when feet are sick abed as is the case with the majority of women, one just gets where one is going with no benefit to health or spirits.

Abuse, disuse and misuse of the feet, lack of exercise, and the wearing of ill-fitting shoes may cause the bones to become misplaced and the arches to sag. Be good to your trotters. Give them proper care. They tote you around, will never protest unless they are neglected or packed into shoes that are too short, too narrow, or of the wrong last.

Says a chiropodist: "Ill-fitting shoes will cause callouses to form on the ball of the foot. Or the toes will huddle or contract, in which event the nails will turn in and corns will also result. The feet are weakened, will perspire freely, causing smarting and discomfort. The distress is not limited to the feet but often extends to remote portions of the body.

"Stubborn cases of headache may result, or pain in the back that is mistaken for neuritis. I must include fatigue and grouches among the penalties one pays for not selecting the right kind of shoes."

Some Suggestions of Making New Friends

A few weeks ago a letter was printed in this column from a girl signing herself "B.L.M." who had moved to a new city and was having trouble getting acquainted. She wrote to ask the best ways to meet young men and women, when a stranger in town, and make friends among them.

This letter attracted the attention of a girl, "Miss M.," living in a city all the way across the country from the other girl. She was anxious to get in touch with the letter writer because she herself had had the same experience of being a stranger in a new place and had been successful in working out her problem and building up a happy social life for herself. She thought she might pass along to "B.L.M." in a personal letter, some of the ideas that had worked so well for her.

As this particular problem seems to be one a great many people have to meet, I thought it would be interesting if "Miss M." wrote a letter to this column telling us all just what she did. She was kind enough to comply with my request and this is what she says:

"I would like to help others who are lonely and feel out of place in strange towns, and perhaps if I told about my own situation it would help these people.

"I had been a very quiet and reserved person before moving to the large city where I now live, and had many friends in my home town. I found the people of a big city were quite different from the people I knew. At first I couldn't get hold of myself. I tried to make friends, but couldn't. The girls where I worked liked me enough, but I was strange to them and their ways.

"One day I got up courage to invite one of my co-workers to my home for dinner. She came. And although I hardly knew her before that night, by the next day we were pretty well acquainted. She, in turn, introduced me to her folks and their friends.

"As we got to know each other better, we formed a sort of crowd of our own. We all went to places of entertainment together and one day went to a fan club. After seeing how the members of this fan club met each other and enjoyed knowing and being with each other, decided to start a club of our own. Now several lonely people who have come to the city from out of town have joined our club and found new friends and much pleasure. Through all this I now have many friends and am never without a date or have to be alone.

"I am not suggesting that every stranger start a club to gain friends, but I am suggesting that the only way to win friends is to work for them. You have got to be interested in your fellow-worker or school mate in order for the other person to get interested in you. Discuss your hobbies, your home town—anything at all—but start a conversation. If the other person is the kind of friend you want, you will learn more about him or her by making trivial conversation. Then, when you learn what he or she is really interested in, that person, is well on the way to becoming your friend.

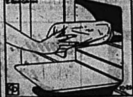
"You can invite your friends at work to your home, or make a date for a show, or go somewhere else where the activities would help you get acquainted. Don't act too anxious or too eager, or the person may run. Just be friendly and casual. Once you have acquired a few friends, you will automatically be swept into their social circle and introduced to many others.

"It's really easy to win friends. All you have to remember is to be informal and interested."

This is a fine program and one that I am sure will do the same for anyone anxious to make friends. The whole point of it is that you must be ready to take the initiative, not merely sit around waiting for someone to do so.

It would be fun to hear from some others who have solved the problem of getting acquainted in a strange place. Won't some of you who have done this write and tell us what your own program was?

Wife Preservers



If your loaf of bread is stale, put it into a paper bag, sprinkle the bread lightly with warm water, if very stale, and close the bag tightly. Place in a 350 degree F oven for 10 to 15 minutes, and it will taste almost as good as freshly baked bread.

"Master" or "Mr." Before a Boy's Name?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our family is involved in a problem I wish you would settle. Our oldest son, aged fourteen, has just gone to boarding school, and our question concerns how to address an envelope to him. My husband maintains that there should be no title before his name ...just Henry Matthews. I think his letters should be addressed to Master Henry Matthews. And our 12-year-old son says it should be Mr. Henry Matthews. Which is right?

R. M.

Your husband is not right... the name written on an envelope should have a title written before it. And while you are correct in suggesting "Master" before his name, I agree with your younger son that "Mr." before his older brother's name is better. And the 12-year old son knows that his brother would prefer "Mr.", just as he himself would prefer having his letters addressed to "Mr." Any teen-age boy is proud and pleased to have his letters addressed to "Mr."

Should He Write His First Wife's Friends About His Marriage?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

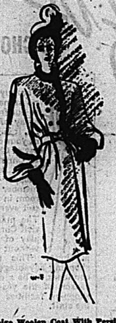
I am a professional man, and have a home in California. Five years ago I married a wonderful woman, whose home had always been in the East, and she came to live in my home. She had more devoted friends than any person I have ever known, and they all kept in close touch with her here and entertained us elaborately when we made trips East together. After three years of perfect married life, she died and her friends sent me beautiful and deeply touching messages and letters. Now I have recently married a widow, an intimate friend of my first wife since she lived here in California. We have not sent out formal marriage announcements, and are not planning to. But I admit I'm disturbed by my realization that there probably isn't any way these devoted friends of my first wife will know about my remarriage. Shall I just not do anything about it, taking a chance that they will be told by someone sooner or later?

H. M.

I hope I can persuade you to be polite enough and thoughtful enough to write notes to your first wife's devoted friends in the East, telling them of your remarriage. You certainly owe this consideration to these friends who have always loved her so dearly and who have also been so kind and generous to you. I can understand that you undoubtedly feel that your marriage will seem "hasty" to your first wife's friends, but even exposing yourself to this point of view is kinder than leaving them with no information about your new marriage.

I particularly hope I can persuade you to write these notes, because a friend of mine told me recently about the complications that arose in her group of friends in similar circumstances. The friends knew nothing of the marriage-plans of the widower of their adored friend, and wondered why he did not reply to their notes of remembrance of her birthday and to their memorial notes on the anniversary of her death. Finally a friend returning fro mthe West told them...and their devotion to him and their respect for him have fallen to zero. Not that he remarried, but that he showed no regard for their devotion to his first wife and their always and generously including him in that devotion and friendship.

Scaled For Height



Beige Woolen Coat With Persian Lamb Trim

By VERA WINSTON

PRETTY small sizes have come into their own, and in the shops are coats, suits and dresses scaled to their height and measurements, thus avoiding costly and sometimes futile alerations. Geared for the five-foot-five-and-under sisterhood is this coat of beige woolen which uses just enough black Persian lamb to be smart without being overdone. A narrow banding of the fur outlines the neck and continues down one side to the waist, with cuffs of the fur for the full sleeves. The top is softly bloused and the skirt has a slight drape below the belt. The coat is double breasted with small, self-covered buttons.

The British bride of a Canadian soldier who spent only four hours with her husband in Canada has returned to England. She is Mrs. Rose Hanikenne, 23, of Coulsdon, Surrey, seen here with her 3-year-old daughter Sheila after they had landed at Liverpool from the Scythia. Four hours after her husband met her at Prince Albert, Sask., said Mrs. Hanikenne, he threw up his job and went to Vancouver. It cost her all her savings to get back. Now Mrs. Hanikenne plans to begin life again as a hair-dresser. "England may be a slow place," she says, "but there is security here."

21 Cars Are Piled Up In Fog at Intersection

Los Angeles, Dec. 4—(AP) — Police, during the current siege of fog, have become accustomed to an upturn in traffic accidents. This one was the topper: when investigators finished counting, they discovered that 21 cars had piled up at one intersection. Three persons were hurt, none seriously.

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI

New York, Dec. 5 (CP)—Hats off to stocky Bill Juzda, the Winnipeg locomotive fireman, for filling the Rangers' defensive position like a Christmas stocking—despite a broken toe. The rejuvenated Rangers won four of their last five games since he joined the team...Goshen, long danger of losing its prestige. The registrar's office, there for years, will be closed and the United States Trotting Association may centre all its activities in Chicago...It costs a professional hockey team $3,000 to $4,000 a year for equipment with skates at $40 a pair the biggest item...Although the cost of hockey paraphernalia has gone up 25 to 30 per cent the quality still below pre-war standards...According to Cosby Brothers, athletic outfitters for two N.H.L. and five A.H.L. as well as several amateur and college teams, a complete outfit for a player—long underwear and garter belt included—costs around $140 and a goalie's duds hit the $200-mark.

Punching the Bag

The story they tell of Promoter Mike Jacobs, seriously ill following a stroke Tuesday, is of the time when Uncle Mike was sitting in a Washington hotel on the day of the Buddy Baer-Joe Louis title fight in Griffith Stadium...The baseball schedule had made no room for postponement and on the afternoon of the fight a heavy downpour threatened to wash out the $150,000 match and brought on a stream of worried callers...But Uncle Mike just ordered sandwiches, kept on sitting, and began telling the story of his life ...He recalled the days when he was a concessionnaire on excursion boats that sailed the waters from New York to New Jersey and how he wound up owing the ships...He told of the remedy for seasickness—a vial of weak tea—which he sold for 25 cents and how he peddled peanuts aboard one boat which had no drinking water...Of course Mike's soda pop stand did a going business... Straw hats were the thing then, and Mike sold the passengers string to be run from hatband to lapel and thus the skimmer was safe from the breeze.

These were the stories he told as the phones buzzed and cloudbursts continued. Asked afterward how he could take it so easily, Uncle Mike said: "What's a little rain. I've been battling the elements all my life."

WEMBLEY HOCKEY DIRECTOR WON'T STAND ROUGHNESS

Says Players Must Learn to Keep Their Tempers on the Ice

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 5. (CP)— Sir Arthur Elvin, managing director of Wembley Stadium who has a lot to say about the way his two Canadian hockey teams play the game, says he won't "tolerate Hooliganism on the ice."

His players must learn "to keep their tempers and if they don't, I'll send them back to Canada or sack them." A lot of fans, who like to see body-checks, are wondering what Sir Arthur means by "Hooliganism".

His statement was made after what newspapers called a "rough" game at Wembley which produced a total of 17 minutes in the penalty box.

"I have come to the conclusion spectators do not like that beastly rugged type of play, which is contrary to British sportsmanship," Sir Arthur said. "If the game had to rely on that type of spectator it would die out in six months."

He may be right—but in games at Wembley last season Canadian services Clubs engaged in some thumping knocking around and the fans loved it.

Sir Arthur said he didn't want to turn hockey into a sissy game, "but I am not going to stand fouling which, I understand from certain American papers, is encouraged in some parts of the United States and Canada. Players there are even coached in the arts of foul play."

Percy Nicklin of Fort Frances, hockey maestro at London's Harringay arena who can "smell" a jutting knee or elbow at 50 yards, said he couldn't hold to Sir Arthur's opinion. Percy, general manager of the Arena, which also has two all-Canadian Clubs, says the brand of hockey "isn't unduly rough."

CERDAN FAVORED TO BEAT ABRAMS

New York, Dec. 5 — (CP) — The big worry for tomorrow night's battle between Marcel Cerdan, the Algerian middleweight, and Georgie Abrams of Washington, is the third man in the ring. They're looking for someone who can speak French—they say Mr. Cerdan's English is limited to a financial statement.

The gate is likely to exceed $100,000 from about 18,000 persons. Cerdan is due for a 27½ per cent cut which should net him something like $30,000 and Abrams will collect 22½ per cent.

The 10-rounder will have naval flavor too. Cerdan served with the French Navy in the recent war. Abrams has 3½ years with the U. S. Navy behind him.

Though the Frenchman has been training in comparative privacy he has been installed at 2 to 1 odds.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Although all six teams swung into action last night, the National Hockey League scoring race was unaffected as leaders were held pointless. It was the first time this season that games had not affected the scoring standings. The leaders:

RECORD SALES MADE

Newmarket, England, Dec. 5 — (Reuters) — Records went by the board at the December bloodstock sales here yesterday when the cream of Britain's thoroughbred racehorses realized more than £250,000 ($1,000,000) at this racing centre.

Yesterday's total of £232,000 for 183 horses surpassed the previous record for one day by about £19,000. Nearly £500,000 has been taken in with two more days of the sale to go.

Foreign buyers have made substantial contributions and 56 horses sold for shipment aboard have brought £90,000.

SCORING LEADER

Minneapolis, Dec. 5 — (AP) — Don Morrison of Omaha took over scoring leadership of the United States Hockey League during the last week, official figures from loop headquarters showed today.

Morrison has counted 16 goals and 13 assists for 29 points in the 19 games he has played this season. Stan Smith of Minneapolis, has 10 goals and 15 assists for 25 points in the same number of games.

IS EVOCATIVE AND MESMERIC

"It's the Poetry of Sport" Quoth London Writer in 1937 — D'ya Know He Thought of Dickens and Kipling.

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 2 (CP) — Some people may snicker at the idea hockey is "the poetry of sport, an art, evocative and mesmeric," or that the puck, "that merry wanderer of the ice," could have "a restless evening." Mark down their buffoonery to lack of artistic appreciation for Canada's great game.

For proof to show such Doubting Thomases, submit this account of the Britain-Germany game in the first round of the European and World championships at London's Wembly Stadium February 17, 1937. It was written by the special representative of the old London Morning Post.

"Under the arcs we saw the puck flashing from zone to zone, flitting across the icy surface like a shadow skimming the high moors in summer.

"Your ice-hockey player, remember, does not move like any normal man; he pounces, hurtles, dives; he flickers and he spins. Sticks clatter, skates rasp, ice-chips whirl like flying spume. There is a glitter-and-flash-and-scurry, a tempo ever-quickening, excitement ever-mounting."

And so he went on:—

"Have you seen a film many times accelarated? Have you watched a swooping gull or the 'russet-pated choughs' that 'madly sweep the sky?' Have you been stirred by Kipling's 'East Wind':—

"'The reeling junks behind me and the racing seas before.

"'I raped your richest roadstead—I plundered Singapore..'

"Instinctively one thought of these things while the puck sped across the Wembley ice and the players swept toward the goal. Here, indeed, is the poetry of sport."

And Then Dickens.

Getting impatient for Pickwick?

"As the crowd shouted for Mr. Quade and Mr. Davey (probably Canadian players on Britain's team) and their fellow-skaters, English and German, one remembered Mr. Pickwick and his 'excessive satisfaction' at those 'pleasant and astonishing devices' on the pond of Dingley Dell.

"Here were players converting their legs into compasses, exercising themselves 'in a very masterly and brilliant manner,' performing feat after feat that would have left Bob Sawyer standing."

The special representative was a trifle annoyed at people who call "ice-hockey" a game.

"Never was understatement more gross," he wrote. "This is an art, evocative and mesmeric."

Perhaps your doubting friend now is impatient about the score? Well, the special representative didn't say, exactly. He noted, though, that "six times .. the puck found a haven in the German net" and "at 10 o'clock Wembly cheered a British win."

Sorry, we can't say how victory was achieved. The special representative was an honest fellow. He admitted that "experts—men who can control the lightning—must saw how Britain won; a novice is dazed."

Driver Darling Of The Racing Fans

By JOE MacSWEEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, Dec. 5 —(CP)—Even a lochinvar could not impress Shirley Gay, although she is just 18 and pretty, for to her the thunder of a horse's hooves is but an ordinary bill of fare. "I'd rather be the best woman-driver than the most beautiful girl in Canada," she says.

Each Saturday she is to be seen, her small face fiercely determined under a cowboy hat, as perched atop a speeding sulky she pilots Darky Tell, a long-limbed trotter, along the rail in the weekly North Common racing here.

The habitues of the Halifax horsemen's club are usually rugged veterans who can speak offhandedly of horses which lived before Shirley was born. But one and all they have accepted the up-and-coming youngster and speak with respect of her skill and with admiration of her courage.

"She has an honest little horse there—and can handle him," one grizzled old horse-trainer remarked.

Win or lose, she doesn't mind; she loves horses and the race—but it makes her angry when the crowd yells at Darkey.

"Sometimes, when he breaks, they call him 'Rabbitt,'" she confided with blue eyes flashing, "But he'll show them yet."

The young sportswoman could not be the daughter of Alex Gay and fail to love horses. Alex used to drive a hack in the good old days and besides he now owns the big pacer, Tom Volo, driven by his son Cyril.

Mrs. Gay does not object to Shirley's racing, however, merely admonishing "please be careful."

Cyril never ceases to be amazed at his sister's coolness around spirited race-horses

HORSE OF YEAR BY BIG MAJORITY

Triple - Crown Champion First Horse to Win $400,000 in One Year

New York, Dec. 5 — (AP) — In a poll that popped up with the first unanimous vote in the history of the balloting, Assault today was named king of the three-year-olds and "horse of the year" for 1946 by the sports writers of the United States.

The triple-crown champion of the Derby, Preakness and Belmont and first horse in history to win more than $400,000 in one season of galloping, was the unanimous choice as three-year-old boss among the 174 writers voting in the 11th annual poll of the Turf and Sports Digest magazine.

Then the chocolate champ from Texas went on to take the horse-of-the-year honors by a 3 to 1 margin over Warren Wright's Armed — 110 votes to 37. Armed, greatest gelding the turf has ever seen, probably would have been tabbed head man, after a remarkable running and weight-carrying record for the year, if he hadn't "tailed off" in the late fall.

The divisional champions were Educatin among the two-year-old colts — a $6,600 yearling but who won $164,473 for Mrs. Fred W. Hooper of Jacksonville, Fla., Sonny Whitney's First Flight, winner of the Belmont Futurity and $134,965, among the two-year-old fillies; Assault, for the three-year-olds and Armed among the older handicap horses.

Five horses split the 174 horse-of-the-year votes. The turf's biggest bargain baby, Stymie, came in with 15 to take third place; Mrs. George D. Widener's Lucky Draw, the year's top comeback in sports, polled eight, and First Flight drew four.

Toronto Ties Boston, Wings and Hawks Draw and Rangers Beat Habitants

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With two more ties and an upset victory of the National Hockey League record today, the only explanation for the in-and-out form shown this season seemed to be that the wierd travelling demands of an extended schedule has just about wiped out any soft spots.

The champion Montreal Canadiens, for instance, went into last night's game with the Rangers at New York with an excellent chance to extend their first-place margin. Instead, they took a 2-1 beating from a fifth-place team.

Toronto's young Maple Leafs meanwhile came out with a 2-2 deadlock with the Bruins at Boston and that meant that the Leafs moved back to within a single point of the league-leaders.

Just to complete the round of dizzy doings, Chicago Black Hawks, whipping boys of the league of late, returned home to give a crowd of some 15,059 loyal supporters a treat. The Hawks didn't beat their visitors, but they played Detroit to a 0-0 stand-off and that was practically a moral victory after three straight losses.

The three results didn't change the order of standings any, but they did tighten things up a point or so all down the line.

With Toronto now one point behind Canadiens, Boston also gained a point on the league-leaders by their draw and remained three points behind the Maple Leafs. Detroit held fourth position a single point behind the Bruins and Rangers made the biggest gain by closing in within two points of the Red Wings.

11 Points Behind

By their draw, Chicago held last place a point closer to Canadiens, now being being 11 points behind the leaders.

It was a goal with just 32 seconds of play remaining that gave Rangers victory over Canadiens and prevented all three games ending in deadlocks. Tony Leswick broke the 1-1 draw by beating goalie Bill Durnan on a double relay from Niel Colville and Ab Demarco.

Playing before a crowd of 14,914, the Rangers had taken the lead in the second session on Al Gardner's tally, only to see Montreal tie it up at 1:38 of the third when Toe Blake and Butch Bouchard set up Elmer Lach.

The Maple Leafs, who have yet to beat the Bruins in four games, came out fighting at Boston. The game was a tussle all the way. With Toronto tying it up at 1-1 in the first period and Boston then coming from behind in the second to make it 2-2. But the crowd of 13,900 found the extra-curricula fighting even more interesting.

There was an outbreak of violence in every period. Little Howie Meeker, Toronto winger, drew a major for starting this one. Murry Henderson of Boston and be-moustached Garth Boesch of the Leafs drew major penalties for the other outbreaks.

Harry Watson scored both Maple Leafs goals. Ken Smith and Babe Pratt, sold to Boston by Toronto in an off-season deal tallied for the Bruins.

There was only one fight to liven matters in the scoreless draw at Chicago, with Johnny Mariucci of the Hawks and Jack Stewart of Detroit mixing it up in the third period. Both drew a major and a minor and when they started slugging again in the penalty box, were ejected from the game with misconducts.

Beattie Ramsay No Supporter of Scramble Hockey

Regina —(CP)— The scramble hockey the Toronto Maple Leafs play these nights may draw in the fans but Beattie Ramsay prefers the open, passing game they featured when he played for them the year the club was formed.

The 51-year-old contractor says however, that "the fans seem to like it this way and you've got to give them what they want."

Beattie is one of the few players to write his own professional hockey contract. The management of the Leafs told him to name his own terms when contract time came along in the 1925-26 season. He took them up that year and the following season. But when the same offer was extended for the 1929-30 season, Beattie turned it down. At 32 he felt he wasn't worth his weight in hockey and stayed with his engineering work in Saskatchewan.

That ended a hockey playing career which led from the open rinks at Lumsden, Sask., 20 miles northwest of here, to the Olympic Games of 1924.

While studying engineering at the University of Toronto in 1921 he found time to captain the Blue and White team. Dr. Billy Dafoe, brother of the Quints' physician, was coach.

Beattie joined the famous Toronto Granites in 1923 and played defence for the sextette at the Olympic Games the following year when they beat the United States team for the championship. With him on that team were Hooley Smith, Al McCaffrey, Dunc Munro and sensational Harry Watson, tempted but never lured to professional ranks.

Famous Teammates.

Teammates on the Leafs who "would make plays in which everybody could see who was scoring" included Hap Day, "Ace" Bailey and Art Duncan. John Ross Roach was the Leaf goalkeeper.

Hockey has speeded up since those days but Beattie prefers to see a neat play rather than a scramble. But he is not getting much satisfaction along these lines from the Regina Patricias, the junior hockey club of which he is president. The Pats, formed this year in an alliance of the Abbotts and Commandos, are winning games but most of it is scramble hockey. Beattie doesn't take any hand in coaching the Pats.

He coached the Princeton University squad for three seasons following his retirement from the Leafs, travelling east from his highways job in Saskatchewan. Then, in 1937, the Prince Albert senior team came under his wing and they won 21 out of 22 league games in one season. The Regina Aces later prospered under his direction.

Now his winter sports activities are confined to curling with the Caledonia club here and administration of the Pats.

"Junior hockey will come into its own in the next few years," Beattie believes. "We can't afford first class professional hockey in the West so we do our best with the so-called amateur senior hockey."

Generally the fast skater has the advantage these days with hockey speeded up, and he says that western players therefore have a bit of a break since it is "generally accepted" that the westerner is on the average a faster skater.

WINGY JOHNSON HIGH SCORER

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors, under the direction of their new coach Reg Hamilton, came up from the cellar of the United States Hockey League's northern division last night to swamp the division-leading Minneapolis Millers 8-0.

Wing Johnston sparked the Pla-Mors' comeback with three tallies and four assists. Butch McDonald, the league's leading scorer last year came across with three assists for Kansas City. Red Mitchell, Tom Fowler, Andy Chakowski, Baldwin and Olmstead were the other Kansas City net crashers.

It was Kansas City's sixth win of the season.

In the southern division, Houston Skippers went down to a 6-1 defeat before Dallas Texans. Young Doc Halderson, Bobby Thorpe, and Ken McKenzie led the Dallas attack, each with a goal and two assists. Two more Dallas tallies came from Gerry Bellemarre and Johnny MacArthur.

Walkko Lund counted for Dallas in the first stanza. Carlson got the Skipper's lone goal.

First Defeat for Irish in Thirteen Contests This Season

(By The Canadian Press)

Oshawa Generals, who have feuded long and enthusiastically with Toronto's St. Michael's College majors for many a season, last night accomplished what no other O.H.A. Junior "A" team has brought off this season, pinning back the Irish ears by a 5-3 count.

The two teams, sharing a monopoly of the league title that dates back a number of years, gave Oshawa fans a rousing exhibition of hockey with the smooth work of Oshawa's first line of Don Bauer, Ike Hildebrand and Johnny Milliard tipping the scales in favor of the locals.

While George Scholes scored what proved to be the winning goal for the Gens, it was Bauer and Hildebrand who offset the Majors' early two-goal margin and it was Hildebrand who tied it again when Fleming Mackell sent the Irish into a 3-2 lead in the hectic final frame.

And Hildebrand's third goal settled the matter after the fiery Mackell had talked his way into a 10-minute misconduct penalty. Les Costello was the other Toronto goal-getter.

In the other Junior game, Stratford Kroehlers tightened the standings in the 10-team group by edging Barrie Flyers 4-3 at Stratford.

The night's play left Oshawa and Stratford tied with Galt Red Wings for second place, eight points behind the Irish who dropped their first game in 13 starts. The Flyers were fifth, one point back, and Toronto Marlboros, another point back, held sixth place.

Sam Casonato, Bill Mitchell, George Robertson and Mickey Roth were the Stratford scorers. Heale, Mousseau and Meger got the Barrie goals.

In the only senior contest, Hamilton Pats took over sole possession of second place by turning back the fourth-place Stratford Indians 5-2 at Hamilton.

Gluck of Hamilton and Zuke of Stratford, were the game's scoring leaders with two goals apiece. Hollinger, O'Hearn and Tom Smelle were the other Hamilton scorers.

What's Doing in Sport

Leo (The Lip) Durocher, Brooklyn Dodgers manager, isn't free from the spotlight's glare even during the baseball off season. Yesterday in Los Angeles he was charged by airport executive Ray Hendricks with having wrecked the marriage of Hendricks and film actress Laraine Day. The allegations were contained in an answer filed by Hendricks to Miss Day's suit for divorce. Durocher was charged with having "clandestinely pursued" Miss Day's affections, while posing as a family friend.

Miss Day said through her lawyer, "All the charges are deliberate and malicious lies."

Heavyweight champion Joe Louis was presented yesterday with a bronze plaque by the New York Uptown Chamber of Commerce in recognition of his service in the field of race relations.

The Buffalo Evening News said yesterday that Paul Richards, Detroit Tigers catcher, would be signed to succeed Leo (Gabby) Hartnett as manager of Buffalo Bisons of the International League.

It was decided by directors of the Canadian-American Baseball League, meeting yesterday at Los Angeles, that their 1947 season of 140 days would open April 27 and close Sept. 7.

Baseball heads of 42 minor leagues comprising the National Professional Association votel last night to retire their president of the last 16 years, 72-year-old William G. Bramham, on a $10,000 yearly salary.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

(By. The Canadian Press)

Harry Watson and Syl Apps, Toronto, with two goals and two assists, respectively, as Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins tied 2-2.

Paul Bibeault, Chicago, and Harry Lumley, Detroit, who turned in their first shutouts of the season and Black Hawks and Red Wings played to a scoreless draw.

Babe Pratt, Boston, whose unassisted goal at the three-quarter mark of the period gave Bruins their tie

Tony Leswick, New York, high-scoring forward who tipped in the deciding goal as Rangers edged Montreal Canadiens 2-1.

Vancouver, Dec. 5 — (CP) — A football movement is definitely underway on Canada's traditionally gridiron-weak Pacific coast.

The movement is a product of Vancouver's alert Junior Board of Trade. And a direct result of this movement are the Vancouver Blue Bombers, unbeaten until Calgary's touted Tornadoes took them by a single point — 8-7 — in the Western Canada junior football final here recently in a contest which may become an annual affair.

The Junior Board set-up is divided into three classes. At the top is the junior A's, whose only requirement is that players be under 21. Next come the junior B's, who must be under 18 and weigh less than 165 pounds. Last are the juveniles, 15 and under and tipping the scales at less than 150. More than 20 teams are operating under these classifications and sponsored by the Junior Board.

Norm Burley, an executive of the Western Big Four senior League, which opened this year following a lapse during the war, plans to lobby for revision for a junior league. Plans call for the winner of such a league to meet the champion of the Board of Trade League for the provincial crown.

The provincial champs would then proceed into the western finals against the Prairieites.

There is little competition for such a team on the coast, although it has been announced that the Bombers will meet Vancouver College in the second annual 'Evergreen Bowl' game to be held New Year's Day. The collegians play against high schools in neighboring Washington State under American rules and have agreed to play under a combination of American-Canadian laws for the tiff with the Bombers.

Father Whelihan, Tornado coach, said during Calgary's show here that he hopes to see his team playing a return game against the Bombers in Calgary next year. If everything goes according to play, Pacific Coast coaches say, it is possible that the Western Canada football crown may move west of the Rockies — an occasion that would no doubt be the pay-off in the west coast's football revival.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By JACK SULLIVAN

London ,Dec 5. (CP)—Britian's soccer face has been saved. And all "thank you" notes may be addressed to the Wolverhampton Wanderers.

Moscow Dynamos rubbed the country's football noses into the dirt in a stormy, succesful tour last season, and it looked as if the champion Swedish team, Norrkoping would humiliate the soccer clan just as effectively in a quieter way. With a record of three straight victories over big-league clubs, the Swedish team met the Wolves in their final game and were held to a 1-1 draw.

Without fanfare or fuss, they defeated Charlton Athletics 3-2, Sheffield United 5-2 and Newcastle United 3-2, all in less than a week, and sports writers were busily oiling their typewriters for a "blast" against everybody connected with the sport in this country, if Wolves were defeated.

After all why should Britain, the country which taught the game to the world, take a back seat in international competition? The post-mortem promised to be gory.

After three straight losses, Roy Peskett, sports writer of the London Daily Mail, went out to discover the reasons.

Stan Seymour, director-manager of Newcastle, said the Swedes "play real football, wing men to inside forward, and they are always inter-passing .... Against Newcastle: they had only three real chances and they scored three times."

Manager J. E. Davidson of Sheffield: "Relying on positional play, great accuracy in passing rather than speed, they play purely as a team, covering and backing up magnificently. They employ square pass to perfection."

Manager Jimmy Seed, Charlton: "The Swedes provide the stiffest opposition my team has met this season, and Charlton has already played a dozen or more of the toughest elevens in the English first division."

Stanley Rous, secretary of the Football Association: "Norrkoping has not introduced new methods They are simply playing what we taught them years ago—the proper English type of football.'

Willie Webb, referee in the recent English-Wales international football game, used the silver whistle presented to him after the 1939 Scottish cup final. He keeps this one specially for international and cup final games.

Nottinghamshire county cricket club will have a 17-year-old slow bowler next season. A club advertisement was answered by Alan Hey, six-foot Leeds grammar schoolboy. He has been on his school's first team since he was 14.

Sir Alexandra Korda, the Anglo-American film producer whose headquarters are in England, has contributed an analysis of the respective positions of Hollywood movies and those from other countries to the current controversy in the United States about the new British product.

"The gap between the ideal and the actual—the falling off in the quality of films, is the chief reason why at the present date a definite revolution is brewing in many countries against the Hollywood films," Sir Alexander says in an article in the New York Times.

"What is this revolution?

"It is against the utter domination of world's screen by Hollywood. The peoples of Great Britain, France and other countries cannot be satisfied any more with their film fare produced exclusively or even overwhelmingly in that fabulous city! They want their own films as well—ideas nearer to their own life, embedded in the realities they are accustomed to, expressed by their own artists. National Film Industries are coming into being. France has already a brilliant, although small industry. England is destined to have a great film industry worthy of the greatness of the British Commonwealth."

Outstanding British Film

"Western Approaches," under its United States title, "The Raider" is breaking box office records in Philadelphia. The technicolor British Information Services film is a drama of seamen in the North Atlantic, and is one of the few first-class movies to be acted entirely by the real life people it portrays.

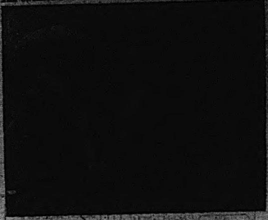
AT THE BELLE — Gail Russell and Diana Lynn take over Brian Donlevy and he thinks it's a wonderful idea. He's their adopted uncle in Paramount's hilarious comedy, "Our Hearts Were Growing Up," new gladventures of Emily and Cornelia, featuring William Demarest and Billy DeWolfe. James Brown and Bill Edwards are the girls' beaus, just as they were in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay."



AT THE CAPITOL — Gilbert Roland, as the dashing Cisco Kid, faces trouble in Harry Woods, held back by Frank Yaconelli, while Martin Garralaga watches in Monogram's dramatic "South of Monterey," now at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "Life With Blondie," with Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You know bridge players who flounder around fishing for right bids. Not just for the halibut. It is because they have no direct method of swapping their dope. Their potshots rely on inferences.

An immediate one-jump response is a very precise hunk of info. As a takeout to any suit or an assist in a minor, it shows six tricks. As an assist in a major, it shows five. With two sure in either case.

That takes care of the suit department. But how about no-trump as an immediate one-jump response to an opening of one in a suit? Can this be precise? Brother, it can be precise.

For this do you need to learn a cumbersome honor trick table with halves and pluses and other fractions? Like I need a hole in the head. No more than you need the zodiac for that purpose.

A jump is simply a signal that you see enough to help make a game. To make a game in no-trump you need nine tricks. So, when you discover nine no-trump tricks in your pair, you can jump in no-trump.

No-trump tricks are high cards; aces, kings, queens. Each ace or king or queen is counted as one no-trump trick. So, when you discover nine high cards in your pair, you have a no-trump jump.

Among the five tricks shown by an opening of one in a suit are four high cards. Remember? Well then, such a player says he has four no-trump tricks among his other values.

If he says he has four, how many no-trump tricks will his partner need for a no-trump game? Only five to make the balance of nine. So, partner should one-jump reply in no-trump with five high cards.

Partner opens with one club when you have this hand:

♠ A Q 3
♥ K 8 6 5
♦ K 9 4 3
♣ Q J

With no takeout or assist, bid no-trump. With five high cards, one-jump to no-trump at once. Say you see enough for a no-trump game.

As easy as rolling off a log.

Truck Driver Painfully Hurt In Accident

Picton, Dec. 5—Walter Thompson, driver for Belleville creameries, escaped with shock and painful bruises along the ribs and side, on Tuesday when he was struck by a car driven by a Kingston motorist. Mr. Thompson was putting parcels in his truck on Main Street, in front of Shannon's when the Kingston car struck the side of his truck and knocked him to the street. He was given first aid at Dr. C. R. Richmond's office. Injuries were not as serious as first feared.

CHAPTER 14

"I imagine the whole story is fanciful. But the fact remains that to anyone especially provident in emergencies you quote 'black stockings for sharks'."

"I'll remember it." Jennifer frowned a minute, committing it to memory. "Can't I help you?" she asked.

"You wouldn't want to put those books on the shelves there?"

"I'd love to. But I wouldn't know how you'd want them." She crossed to the corner of the room, sat down beside the pile of books.

"Any way they come. Just set them in rows. I'll sort them all out someday." Montgomery gave a combined groan and grunt as he shifted a heavy case. Jennifer stacked books with anxious care; she turned them right side up, put all the shorter ones on the top shelf.

"Do you need any help with that piano?" she asked as her companion hurled his whole thin body against the case of an old-fashioned square instrument that projected into the centre of the room.

"You think," he gasped, "that you'd be the one to give it?"

"I could help," she said sturdily.

"Jacqueline. . ." he began, and paused.

"Jennifer," she corrected him.

"Jennifer, in what academy of learning are you enrolled?"

"I'm working. All I did was finish high school."

"That's more," he said, "than I did."

"You!" she exclaimed, incredulous.

"I stopped in the middle of the third year. An aunt of mine left me thirteen thousand dollars. I immediately took a trip around the world, took another trip around the world, and studied for four years in Paris. So, you see, you know more than I do."

"I don't know anything," Jennifer answered seriously. "I wish I did. I am always wishing I was one of the girls whose families let them travel, teach them things. Riding horseback, and tennis, and how to talk about things. And playing the harp. A girl I know can play the harp."

"Why, you sound quite sad—you have a sad little face!" Montgomery said. "You've nothing to worry about. Very few persons ride horseback nowadays, you can learn tennis, and as for the harp—well, you might as well learn how to milk a reindeer as to play the harp nowadays!"

"Girls look beautiful playing the harp.'

"Well, you might manage it some other way. Now talk—that's different,' the man went on half seriously. "Talkers are born, not made. All you have to do is say what you're thinking quite naturally. Sooner or later somebody'll listen. But of course you have to think first. This girl who plays the harp—is she a professional player?"

"Oh no. She once worked in the office where I do. But she played the harp; she had a harp."

"She probably played rottenly. You've never heard her play." He moved an enormous canvas, dusted his hands, grinned over at Jennifer, who was sitting small and subdued on the floor. "Can you make coffee?" he asked.

"Oh yes. Would you like me to make some?" She was on her feet, fascinated at being put in charge of a two-burner gas stove and a box of groceries. She found cups, wiped them on a rag, shook sugar from a box into a china bowl. Montgomery pushed two chairs up to a packing case.

"Perhaps your harp-playing friend couldn't make coffee?" he suggested.

"I don't know that she could," Jennifer said, laughing.

"You see? You can do things she couldn't do. But as for education, Jennifer," the man said, immensely enjoying a steaming cup of coffee, and rapidly buttering crackers, "here's something that has interested me for a long time: how much do you have to know of a thing to be considered pretty well up in it?"

"Well, you have to study it all your life," Jennifer answered.

"I wonder if you do?" Montgomery mused.

"Look at Mme Curie," Jennifer said. "We had her in school. And Edison."

"Oh, I'm not talking of the great scientists. Everyone gets out of his depth with them." Montgomery sat back in his chair and packed his pipe. "You and Id be lost after five minutes with them. But I mean just casual conversation. For instance if I spoke of Berlin and you said, 'Ah, the beauty of that Milet Gate in the Pergamum Museum,' or if I spoke of Wagner and you asked for the "Siegfried Idyll'—I'd think you were pretty well up on museums and German opera, wouldn't I?"

"And I would be!" Jennifer exclaimed with conviction.

"The question is, how much more than just those phrases would your have to know?" the man said, speaking more to himself than to her. "Suppose, now, you got up twenty little remarks—smarty remarks, touching on every conceivable thing from heraldry, say, to Robert Browning—from Minorca to Paul Revere. Suppose you wrote them down in a blank book and memorized them. Then suppose next week you worked up twenty more, and so on for—oh, twenty weeks. Odd and ends of poetry, anecdotes about Emma Hamilton. Twenty times twenty is four hundred, isn't it?"

"But I was thinking that, tonight," she put in eagerly as he paused, "and thinking that it would take me years and years just to read those books you have here. And then I wouldn't remember them, and even then people wouldn't talk about things I knew but millions of other things."

"Ah, but I don't mean that you should study them, Genevieve! I've got your name wrong again, but if you'll tell me once more I'll have it . . . Jennifer. Of course. I don't mean study those things, for you're quite right—it would take years, and then the conversation would be eternally getting away from astronomy or asbestos or whatever you'd mastered. I mean regular little parrot speeches. Like, for instance, I ask you to fix my books. You say you don't know how to arrange books but you are 'not bred so dull' but that you may learn."

"Why do I say that?" Jennifer asked dutifully.

"Because that makes the hearers think you have a knowledge of Shakespeare. They don't go any further," Montgomery said, smiling at some whimsical thought of his own and staring into space. "They never go any further! You rip off a dozen words in German and someone hears you and tells someone else that you're a linquist. You see a pretty child and say, "What a little Romney!" And it—it—by George, this would be a very interesting experiment," he ended, breaking into his own soliloquy enthusiastically. "Not a book in the whole course. Just a flock of cultural phrases. I wonder how far we'd get with it? Every time you see a picture of Venice you say, 'Ah, Guardi, Guardi, what aren't you responsible for!' If anyone speaks of Swinburne——

"But would anyone?" she put in earnestly and he laughed.

"Well, it doesn't have to be Swinburne or any other one poet. You simply say, 'Swinburne would turn in his grave,' and you get your effect. If he's like Swinburne you're all right. If he isn't —if he's like Whitman, for instance, someone says, 'Ah, poor Swinburne!" and you're all right anyway."

"Oh, I never could. I wouldn't know what things to pick anyway," Jennifer objected.

"Now I'll tell you, little Miss Jennifer Richie," Montgomery said, "you trot along home—it's almost ten o'clock, and whoever's responsible for you is probably calling the police. Here I'll go with you; I'll at least get you onto your own roof. You think it over, and if you like, come back any evening—you can tell by the light if I'm here—and we'll start the 'Smith Capsule System'. Tell your mother that I'm very respectable, that my aunt Sarah lives in Portland and is married to a minister and is eminent in good works, and that I'm twice your age and then just four more. . . Here's my flashlight. Let's get going."

Once or twice, as they stepped up or down on the levels of the roofs, he grasped her hand, and after she was in bed that night she thought what an extraordinarily pleasant experience a handclasp was, what a thrilling thing a studio could be, how heart-warming it was to have a friend.

* * *

"How old would my father be, Betty? Would he be forty-two?"

"Oh, heavens yes!" Betty paused in the making of cream gravy, looked into space with knitted brows. "Your father was abonty fifty-four when I married him," she said. "You were three and I was seventeen and that was sixteen years ago. Does that come out right?"

"Was my father that old?"

"Yep. Why?"

"Well, Mr. Smith—my painter over here in the studio, you know—is forty-two, and I was wondering if he was old enough to be my father."

"Well, of course he could be," Betty decided judicially; "but that's only twenty-three years older than you are—but yes, lots of men have children when they are twenty-three. Is he married?"

"No. Maybe he was once. He never talks about things like that."

"He'd better not," said Betty darkly. Betty had met Montgomery Smith. Without any suggestion from Jennifer he had called formally upon her a week or two after Jennifer began her frequent evening visits to the studio. Betty had observed that there was no harm in him. She hal told Jennifer later that he seemed to her uninteresting. If Jennifer wanted to waste her time on him that was okay with Betty, but it was about time she was getting a regular beau.

But to Jennfier her new friendship opened new doors; instinctively she felt safe with Montgomery Smith, instinctively she reached for the sympathy, companionship, help that he could give her. The difference in their ages was only one element that prevented any idea of romance between them; there were a hundred others. Jennifer's whose spirit shrank away from love-making; she was silenced, disillusioned, scarred on that score. Just how or why she knew that Montgomery was equally immune to emotional contagion she could not have said, but she did know it. She knew that she could accept his teasing instruction, ask him questions honestly, share with him all her troubled and inconsequential thoughts, and that she would not only receive enlightenment in return, but that he thoroughly enjoyed exploring the heart and mind of a girl, found the whole venture in friendship almost as fascinating as she did.

Half seriously at first but with growing concentration, she accepted his phrases for her blank book. She could sit on the floor, her back braced against the couch, studying, occasionally looking up at him with a question.

"What does this German mean, Monty?"

"Which one, Jinny? Oh, that means 'Did you ever hear such nonsense!'"

"But that," she objected, "wouldn't be very polite. If I hear people speaking German, surely that isn't a very nice thing to say?"

"You toss it off, d'you see? At the end of their conversation you murmur it, sort of good-naturedly: 'Haben-Sie je etwas so unsinniges gehort?' Don't worry about that. The way things are going, that'll fit anything you're about to hear about Germany for some time to come."

"But suppose he—the person I say it to —comes back at me in German?"

"You can be pretty sure he won't today, but if he should you just say carelessly, 'You are right!' and turn to the man on your other side."

"At dinners—real dinner parties, do you always have a man on each side?"

"You do; I don't. I have a lady on either side."

"But—d'you know, Monty," she said one night, "it would take an awfully smart woman to really use this system of yours —this capsule education. A woman very quick on the uptake, someone who could get herself out of fixes. And if she was that smart she wouldn't need your capsules!"

"Well, you are smart, Jinny. If you remember half of what you have written down there in your book you'll get along."

"You know, after what you said of Tolstoy I got Anna Karenina at the library, and I'm reading it."

"But you don't have to do that," he protested. "Now what'sd you do the other day but buy a cheap book about fifty great operas. You don't have to go that far. Nobody cares whether you know those things or not. You just have to seem to know them."

"But Monty," she persisted, laughing, "all I knew of Pagliacci was that it was written for a prize competition!"

"Well, that was plenty. And you knew why it didn't win?"

She pondered. "Cavalleria won. Oh yes, I remember now!

"Tennis? Bridge?"

"Oh no. Parlor games. I'll tell you," he said with a sudden animation in his voice, "you come to my party here on Saturday night and you'll see what I mean."

"Are you having a party?" Her eyes shone.

"Not a real party. About a dozen—fifteen maybe. Housewarming."

"I won't know anyone."

"That's no way to talk," he said sternly. "Yes, you'll have to come. I don't know why I did not think of you at once, but I only planned it today. Come around seven, say."

"The reason I felt scared is that I haven't got the right clothes, Monty," Jennifer said in a meek, obedient little voice.

"You've no idea what clothes you'll see. I won't change, for one." He looked at his paint-spattered smock and corduroy shorts. "I'll comb my hair, probably, what there is of it," he said. And laying down the palette knife and canvase he wandered about, groping in chests and peering in corners. "Come here," he said then.

Jennifer went over and stood like a child beside his chair.

"That ruffly blouse," he said, jerking at her sleeve, "could that be washed—French laundry on the corner, eh?"

"Oh I can do it myself!"

"And what about the black skirt you had on yesterday—the one gathered around like an old umberell'?"

"Yes. It's home."

"Well, look. Stand still." He had a long narrow length of Roman sask, heavy and gaily striped, in his hands. He wound it snugly about her hips, knotted it on the side. Its brilliant yellow, black, ultramarine, scarlet were dimmed against her thick brown wool skirt. "It looks lousy there," Montgomery said thoughtfully, "but it'll be fine on the black. And these. . . "He put a long string of coral beads about her throat . "And these," he said, displaying long bell earrings, also of tiny coral beads, in the palm of his lean, long-fingered hand.

hhatS codft,atqemet5

'Oh, but it is fancy-dress?" Jennifer exclaimed. 'I've never been to a fancy-dress party!"

"You'll think it is," he said with a touch of grimness, "when you see how some of them look!"

"And will the redheaded lady —woman—lady—will she be here?"

"What redheaded lady?"

"The one you've painted all the sketches of and the big picture that isn't finished?"

Monty's tone had been unsurprised, almost amused, but Jennifer felt a little frightened.

"Yes, she'll be here. I didn't know I was so transparent or you were such a sleuth. That's Mrs. Carteret—Julie Carteret. Yes, she'll be here."

80 Persons Hurt In Riotings In Calcutta

Calcutta, Dec. 5 — (Reuters) — The communal situation, which was practically normal after savage killings in August, deteriorated today on the 10th day of Moharram, Moslem religious festival.

An official statement said 80 persons were injured in Calcutta, three of whom died. Three police officers were among the injured.

Police and troops, posted at strategic points as a precautionary measure, opened fire on the rioters more than once.

Crowds attacked three villages north of Dacca in Eastern Bengal yesterday, killing three persons including a woman. Villagers again were attacked today and 40 houses are reported to have been burned down.

A report from Bombay said several persons were injured in knife attacks and acid-throwing incidents as the city passed from its first curfew-free night for 3 months.

Petition Asks To Have Property Retained for Park

Trenton (Special)—At a meeting of the town council held on Monday evening, a petition was received which was signed by over one hundred citizens requesting the town not to sell 'Slip' property to Eben James but to retain same for park purposes. Council held the matter over until the next monthly meeting.

Council advertised for new M.O.H. and received one tender from Dr. E. A. McQuade. They will re-advertise to see if any other bids are received before appointing Dr. E. A. McQuade as from January 1, 1947.

The garbage collector gave his 30 days' notice and the new appointment is Mr. Yarrow as from November 18th, 1946. Mr. Yarrow's bid was the only one received.

The town police department was given a 10 per cent increase in salary as from November 1st, 1946.

A bid was received from H. Kaye and Co. to purchase the land known as Gilmore Park which is wanted for factory expansion. Council decided to hold the matter over until the next meeting at which time Mr. Kaye will be invited to address the council on the matter.

Trenton Firm Tenders on Ten Coastal Ships

Trenton, Dec. 5 (CP)—Charles Springer, general superintendent of the Central Bridge Company, Ltd., of Trenton, said today in an interview that his company has submitted a tender to a New York firm for construction of 10 combined passenger and freight ships for use on coastal waters. If the bid is accepted, the company will build the ships here.

Mr. Springer said he could not reveal the name of the New York firm nor the amount of the tender.

He added that E. Hill, general manager of Central Bridge, is in South American for negotiation of another contract.

Explosion Kills Two Soldiers In Sarafand Camp

Jerusalem, Dec. 5 —(AP)— An explosion today killed two British soldiers and wrecked the army office of the Sarafand Camp, largest and most-closely guarded military cantonment in Palestine.

An official announcement said that besides those killed — an officer and one other man— four officers and a number of the civilian staff were injured.

The official statement said the explosion came 15 minutes after a truck drove up to the office and parked there. The statement did not mention any attackers, thus suggesting the explosion could have been accidental.

Obituary

JAMES ARTHUR MacDONALD (Stockdale)

Frankford, Dec. 5—(Special)— The funeral of James Arthur MacDonald, who died at Stockdale on Friday, Nov. 29th, after a lengthy illness, was held under the auspices of the Orange Order on Sunday, Dec. 1st, from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur MacDonald, to the Stockdale United Church where service was conducted by the Rev. H. H. Lackey.

Interment took place at Stockdale Cemetery. The bearers were George Striker, Max Houlden, Clayton Rose, Harry Orr, Fred Hall and Wesley Elliott, all members of the Orange Order.

Kingsley Foster, former United States army air force officer, who had stowed away on the Queen Elizabeth to reach his English wife, Kay, and eight-month-old daughter, Leslie, is shown with them upon their arrival in New York aboard the U. S. liner John Ericsson. Foster, 28, a Minneapolis lawyer, almost didn't get aboard the ship at Southampton, Eng., but when a passenger cancelled his reservation, he was handed a ticket by a U. S. lines agent. His wife and baby, as a soldier's dependents, had reservations.

French Red Party Beaten in Bid For Leadership

By ROBERT C. WILSON

Paris, Dec. 5 — (AP) — The Communist party was defeated in its bid for leadership of the French interim government when Maurice Thorez, its candidate for premier, failed election in the new National Assembly.

Election tabulaots said, M. Thorez lacked 51 votes of the necessary majority. He would have required an absolute majority of 310 votes.

His defeat for the office followed the announced decision of the Moderate Mouvement Republicain Populaire and the Radical Socialists to abstain from voting for him.

DUTCH COMPLETE CRUISERS

Amsterdam (CP) — The Dutch Admiralty is to complete construction of the cruisers Zeven Provincien and Eendracht, begun in 1938. Sabotage during the Nazi occupation prevented the unfinished ships being removed to Germany. Each will have the most modern equipment and carry a crew of 900.

Latest to Feel Campaign Weight

Montreal, Dec. 5 (CP)—Frank Roncarelli, Montreal restaurant owner who has posted bail for some 300 members of the Witnesses of Jehovah sect, was the latest to feel the weight of the Quebec government's campaign against the sect as today his liquor permit was cancelled and his stock removed.

The move, made yesterday on orders of Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, who is also attorney-general of the province, was carried out by representatives of the Permit Department of the Quebec Liquor Commission who removed the liquor and beer stock in a Commission truck.

Premier Duplessis, in a press statement at Quebec, said that Mr. Roncarelli was "identifying himself with the odious propaganda of the Witnesses of Jehovah and I have ordered the Quebec Liquor Commission to cancel his permit. . . ."

Mr. Duplessis has charged that the sect is distributing "seditious propaganda" especially as far as the pamphlet "Quebec's Burning Hate" is concerned. The pamphlet, he said, attacks the Catholic Church and members of the clergy as well as various other provincial bodies.

400 Awaiting Trial

As more than 400 members of the sect now await trial before the courts in Montreal, Quebec and several other cities in the province, Mr. Duplessis said: "The Communists, the Nazis, as well as those who are the propagandists for the Witnesses of Jehovah, have been treated and will continue to be treated by the Union Nationale government as they deserve for trying to infiltrate themselves and their seditious ideas in the Province of Quebec.

Most of those awaiting trial were arrested for distributing circulars without a municipal permit.

Sect Takes Action

It was announced that action had been taken by the sect against the City of Montreal for $15,000 damages arising from the arrest of numerous members of the sect here.

Also the Superior Court was asked to declare sect members Christian ministers, entitled to exercise their profession as ministers without being subject to arrest.

The owner of Roncarelli's a two-storey restaurant on Midtown Crescent Street which has been operating for 35 years, said last night in an interview that confiscation of his licence and removal of his stock was "another example of the odious discrimination going on in Quebec."

He said that "everyone has the right to worship God according to the dictate of his heart. If Premier Duplessis can prove to us that to follow in the footsteps of Jesus Christ, like the Witnesses of Jehovah, is wrong, we will admit willingly that we are wrong."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was sitting at ma's desk starting to write a letter, and ma said, I wish your berthday wasn't so far off, William, I'm tired of seeing you make faces at that fountain pen of yours, and sometimes even threttening gestures as though you were about to try to get it started by furiously flicking the ferst drops on the defenceliss carpit.

What are you thinking of getting me for my berthday, a black carpit that wont show ink? pop said ,and ma said, Certainly not, what I was thinking of is one of these new fountain pens that are being avvertized far and wide as going years and years without ink, I mean more ink, and writing as smooth as glass and never leeking though the heavens fall, and even werking perfectly under water and I dont know what all.

You'd better get me the black carpit instead, or at least a small black rug, pop said. If I had one of those new fangled pens, the same thing might happen to me that happened to my frend Bogart Lindust, he said, and ma said, Why, didn't it werk?

The darn thing werked too well, in fact it more than lived up to the avvertizements, pop said. It werked smoother and smoother till finely it started writing all by itself and Bogart found himself signing other men's names to his checks. But before the police could nab him, Bogart drowned in his own bathtub. He was testing how well it wrote under water and he was composing a little verse and decided not to come up for air till he found a werd that rimed with orange, and that was the last of poor Bogart, pop said, and ma said, Now William that's a lot of utter nonsense. But come to think of it, I cant recall a rime for orange either. Isn't there any, William, I mean seriously? she said.

You'd better not try to find one with your head under water, pop said.

Meening there probably isn't.

London (CP) —Tailors are being asked to co-operate in efforts to stamp out dishonest dealings in cloth which have assumed such proportions that the trade is greatly perturbed.

Frau Brigitte Frank, widow of Hans Frank, former Nazi governor of Poland who was hanged as a war criminal at Nuernberg, is shown with two of her five children, Brigitte, 11, and Norman, 17, in their Munich home. Since the execution of her husband Mrs. Frank has grown bitter, but not against the Allies who hanged him, but against the Germans who punish the children for the sins of their father. The children are ostracized by former comrades. Most recent blow to fall on the Frank family was when a gang of armed thugs broke into the home of Mrs. Frank's married daughter and cleaned it out of furs, jewels and clothing to the value of $20,000.

Scots Fear Effect Of New Rationing

Strathdon, Scotland —(CP)— Residents of the remote glens, who have enjoyed the traditional Scottish fare of oatmeal even if all else failed, now wonder how they are to manage under new nationing regulations.

In districts like Strathdon and Corgarff some families are nine miles from the nearest shop and in winter roads are blocked with snow for weeks at a time. In the past, purchase of a boll (140 pounds) of oatmeal in the fall provided a safeguard against hunger in the winter. Under rationing this represents 280 points and each is allowed only 32 points a month.

Storekeeper Thomas Shand said he has known families to be snow-bound for 13 weeks. Before the war a common order for a family in a remote district was a bag of oatmeal, a bag of flour, a bag of salt and 100 pounds of sugar.

Cannot Understand Order Kilts Issued Only to Bandsmen

Windsor, Dec. 5 (CP)—Lt.-Col. L. A. Deziel, officer commanding the Essex Scottish, said he found a defence headquarters order limiting kilts to bandsmen "extremely difficult to understand."

He said instructions had been received that the kilt henceforth will be issued only to bandsmen of Highland and Irish regiments."

"I find the order extremely difficult to understand in view of previous assurances that the kilt would be authorired for walking-out dress and ceremonial occasions."

Col. Deziel added: "The public looks for color in peacetime armies and this cannot be found in drab khaki battle dress."

FURNITURE EXHIBITION

FOURTEEN ARE KILLED AS GUN CARRIERS STRUCK MINE ON ROAD

Batavia, Dec. 5 (Reuters) — Fourteen persons were killed and 10 injured when two Netherlands bren gun carriers struck a mine on a road east of Padang, on the west coast of Sumatra, a Netherlands East Indies army communique stated.

The army communique said Indonesians had mined roads from Padang to Emmahaven and to the airfield. There had also been sniping activity east of Padang. The military situation at Medan (Northern Sumatra) had shown no improvement.

In Java, Terrorists were stated to have fired on Netherlands forces at several points.

Had Great Distress With Gas, Bloat, Constipation

Food Soured in Stomach, Felt Dizzy and Short of Breath. Grey Very Nervous, Became Tired Easily. Now Praises Syntona for Giving First Real Relief.

"After suffering with a nervous stomach and intestinal condition for the past eight years, I have had more real relief by taking Syntona Herbal Compound than anything else I ever used," said Mrs. Jessie Johnson, 198 Mary St., Hamilton, Ont., in a recent report.

"The gassy pains, bloating and sourness in my stomach just kept me feeling miserable from day to day. My food seemed to ferment and I would belch up hot, sour liquids. Unless I took harsh laxatives I would go four or five days at a time without a bowel movement. I felt dizzy and short of breath and dark spots danced before my eyes. My nerves were all on edge. I would get nervous headaches and often couldn't get to sleep for hours after going to bed at night. As a result, I felt very tired all the time. Everything I tried to do seemed to tax all my strength.

"My daughter had taken Syntona some time ago and she urged me to try it. I had used so many things without getting the results that I expected that I didn't have much faith in anything, but on her recommendation I agreed to get some. In a few days I was surprised to find that my food was digesting better. As I continued taking it all the gas, bloating and sourness cleared up and I began to feel better. It relieved the constipation and the dizziness and headaches stopped troubling me. Now my nerves are relaxed and my sleep is so much more restful that I awaken mornings feeling better than I have for a long, long time."

Yes, Syntona has helped many men and women suffering as Mrs. Johnson did. Syntona is a tonic medicine made from 12 of Nature's Finest Herbs and Roots. It is pleasant to take and results are quickly felt.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Likes New Zealand

Auckland, N.Z. —(CP)— The internationally known Hungarian woman pianist, Lili Kraus, and her husband, Dr. Otto Mandl, have decided to settle permanently in New Zealand. Lili Kraus, whose records have a wide sale throughout the world, has decided to take music to the small towns and villages throughout New Zealand, many of them too small ever to have had a visit from a noted musician.

By her marriage to Dr. Mandl, Lili Kraus became a Czechoslovakian citizen, but they lived in England before the war and for some years have been "stateless people." They intend to apply for naturalization in New Zealand.

During the war they and their children were interned by the Japanese in Java. After their release Lili Kraus made a triumphal tour of Australia and New Zealand, playing to packed houses in the large cities.

Kitchener, Dec. 5 — (CP) — Divorce proceedings are not suitable for the ears of children, it was ruled in court here by Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier.

The judge welcomed a group of grade 12 children and their teacher and said it was a good thing that they should see the inside of a courthouse. He also thought it was a good idea that the students see how justice is administered but as the case before him Tuesday "has to do with the breaking up of a home" they "should not be at liberty to listen."

Lewis, Union Post Bond to Meet $3,510,000 Fines

Truman Confers With Top Officials on Radio Talk

Washington, Dec. 6 — (AP) — John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers today posted bond to meet the $3,510,000 in fines levied against them for contempt of court stemming from the United States coal strike.

Mr. Lewis posted a cash bond of $10,000 to cover his personal fine of the same amount.

The union deposited $3,500,000 in face value of United States government bonds.

With the posting of bonds, Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough signed an order staying actual collection of the fines pending final disposition of the case.

Court Clerk Charles E. Stewart told reporters the $10,000 cash and $3,500,000 in government bonds were deposited in the court registry and immediately transferred to the treasury.

Washington, Dec. 6 —(AP)— President Truman conferred with top government officials today on his projected Sunday night coal strike broadcast as organized labor marshalled a solid front against ending the walkout by injunction.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters, as the weekly cabinet meeting convened, that Mr. Truman was consulting with administration officials on the broadcast.

C.I.O. President Philip Murray formally invited the rival American Federation of Labor and the Independent Railway Brotherhoods to join the C.I.O. in "unified action" to combat what he called a "deliberate and monstrous movement" to cripple labor.

In a letter directed to A.F.L. President William Green and to leaders of the railway workers, the C.I.O. chief declared the federal court injunction against John L. Lewis and the "vengeful fine" of $3,510,000 upon the mine workers is the first step in a campaign of "hysteria" against labor.

After today's cabinet meeting, members told reporters that the coal crisis occupied virtually all of the discussion.

Navy Secretary Forrestal said the situation at naval coaling stations overseas is "critical."

One cabinet member who declined to be quoted said:

"There will be no turning back in this fight."

In a series of denunciatory statements, union leaders of all camps turned pressure on the Truman administration to back away from pressing the legal action which has brought fines of $3,500,000 on the United Mine Workers and $10,000 on John L. Lewis, the miners' adamant leader.

It was Mr. Lewis' disregard for the order which brought him the fine for contempt.

C.I.O. President Philip Murray, brushing off a long-time bitter feud with Mr. Lewis, announced he would join the U.M.W. in appealing Judge Goldsborough's rulings to the Supreme Court.

A.F.L. President William Green called the government's course "applying the rule of the jungle."

Railway labor executives, through their association, already had spoken out similarly.

FREIGHT, EXPRESS EMBARGO WILL AFFECT CANADA

Possible Layoff of Thousands of Workers May be Seen in Manufacturing Plants

(By The Canadian Press)

The paralysis afflicting United States industry in the wake of the soft soft coal strike hung like an ominous cloud over Canadian manufacturing plants today as a fuel-saving embargo on freight and express shipments in Canada and the United States went into effect at 12:01 a.m.

Not many Canadian industries will feel any immediate serious effects but if the embargo should last any length of time possible layoffs of thousands of workers was seen by some manufacturing officials.

In Canada the embargo is confined to shipments of commodities across the border except those permitted under the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission's embargo. The announcement was made at Montreal by J. A. Brass, general secretary of the Railway Association of Canada.

At Ottawa Postmaster General Bertrand announced that effective immediately parcels mailed to points in the U. S. will be limited to a weight of five pounds and that the restriction will remain in force until further notice.

Expected to be hit hardest by the embargo are the big automobile plants in Windsor and Oshawa, a Ford Company spokesman said Tuesday a continuing shortage of steel will likely lead to "serious curtailment" or "actual stoppage" of some manufacturing processes in the Windsor plant. The spokesman declined to estimate the number of workers who might be laid off.

This cool air is being replaced by warmer air of Pacific origin which should push well into northwestern Ontario today.

BREAD AND BACON RATIONS MAY BE CUT IN BRITAIN

Former Because of U.S. Coal Strike and Latter Because All Canadian Supplies Are Down

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 6 (CP). — Food Minister John Strachey told Britons today their bread and bacon rations might be cut—the former because of the United States coal strike and the latter because Canadian supplies for export are "running below expectations".

At the same time he visualized a pile-up of food supplies in the United States which, when eventually released, would ease the supply situation and enable Britain once more to import "in full measure supplies of which today we stand in such great need."

However, as far as the immediate future was concerned, the food minister was glum. He told the House of Commons that "it would almost certainly be necessary to decrease the (bread) ration" if the United States could not meet his requests for wheat and flour shipments in the near future.

That would mean a cut in the present basic bread ration of nine ounces weekly but "the most immediately threatened of our supplies" was bacon, cherished tidbit of which Britons each get three ounces weekly.

Imports Too Slow.

Mr. Strachey said imports from Denmark were increasing too slowly to affect the situation. It was impossible to increase domestic supplies until imports of animal feeding stuffs could be improved.

He declared that when Britain once more is importing on a large scale "we shall not forget those exporting countries which despite their present difficulties have stood by us during the period of scarcity."

If the bacon ration is reduced it is thought likely that the new ration will be two ounces weekly.

A food ministry spokesman said long-term food contracts with Canada were looked on as an important protection of the British ration and temporary reduction in Canadian supplies had not weakened faith in them.

Know Gravity

The spokesman said Britain seeks food supplies the world over at the moment but that Canada was provided protection against future diversion of food purchasing by these food contracts.

No special representations were made to Canada recently on food as the Dominion was kept informed constantly and knew the gravity of the situation.

Mr. Strachey said stocks of wheat were only half what they were last year. He added that large quantities were being im-

Temperance Advocates Voice Regret At Proclamation of Licensing Act

Toronto, Dec. 6 —(CP)— Temperance advocates early today were quick to express regret at Premier Drew's proclamation of the new Ontario Liquor Licensing Act to take effect Jan. 1.

And members of city council were divided as to whether Toronto should proceed with its municipal ballot on the cocktail bars at the civic elections on New Year's Day — the very day the legislation comes into effect.

Rev. C. W. DeMille, General Secretary of the Ontario Temperance Federation, declared that he found Premier Drew's radio speech "very smooth and adroit. The Premier claims the right to hold opinions. He has a perfect right to his opinions. I wonder why he doesn't allow other people who differ from him in all honesty, to hold and express their views. Despite anything he said Toronto and the other large cities have a right to make their own decisions. Mr. Drew has made up their minds for them by proclaiming the new liquor act."

Rev. John Coburn said Premier Drew had expressed the "pious hope" that the new law would actually decrease liquor consumption. "As an elector in High Park riding which the Premier represents, I want to ask him this question: Will he pledge himself to resign if it does not do so?"

Rev. Mr. Coburn said the Premier's "excuse" for disfranchising the voters in Ontario's five largest cities, in which the sale of liquor-by-the-glass becomes effective without the plebiscite, was "exceedingly lame." Conduct of the government in passage of the legislation was "a blow at democracy itself."

A poll of city councillors indicated that seven were in favor of going ahead with the municipal ballot, six had some objections, and five had no comment. Mayor R. S. Saunders himself could not be reached at the time.

Ald. Allan Lamport, the only member of council who steadfastly opposed the city vote on cocktail bars, said he would move at Monday's meeting that the ballot be dropped.

Ald. Charles Sims said "It looks as though Premier Drew has torpedoed our plebiscite."

Ald. Stewart Smith said he thought the vote should go on "and I hope Mr. Drew will be guided by the result in spite of his statement."

Controller David Balfour said: "I think the vote will go ahead, and if it will bring out a strong expression of public opinion then I am in favor of it."

Editorial

LET EVERY VOTER VOTE

Next Monday, December 9, voters of this city have the opportunity to exercise their municipal franchise, one of the most precious rights of a free people. Like the right of free speech, the right of the free and untrammeled ballot is treasured by a democratic people. In this age every citizen knows how much attention has been paid in the news to the rights of the free and safeguarded ballot. It is well known that under conditions in some lands expression of opinion is not safeguarded as it is in Canada.

The municipal ballot to be given the electors is to be used. To have the right to vote and then not to vote when opportunity and duty call, is a disregard of that very principle. To vote is the voter's duty to himself or herself and to the municipality.

In recent years much attention has been given to the fact that in many a community many voters fail to vote and this situation has caused much concern to municipal leaders with the result that they strongly impress upon voters the duty of voting.

The most democratic community is the community which has the most alert citizenship, ever ready to voice its views on municipal matters.

In Monday's voting, the voters will cast their ballots for the mayoral office and for the election of seven aldermen for a two years' term. Five trustees of the Board of Education for two years are to be elected.

Property-owners are urged to express their opinion on two by-laws which have been submitted. One is to authorize the construction of a municipal incinerator for the disposal of garbage and street sweepings and such like. The other by-law asks authority to purchase lands for industrial use to the amount of $25,000.

The hours of voting on Monday are from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

$400,000,000 Yuletide Seen, Early Rush to Buy Exceeds Previous Canadian Records

By IAN MacNEIL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Currently Canadians, faster with a dollar than ever before, are in the midst of the greatest of all spending booms. By the time the Great Day—Christmas—has come and gone they will have spent upwards of $400,000,000.

That figure is based on estimates in the retail trade, where officials, going back over Christmas sales records, find no equal to this year's early rush to fill the nation's Christmas stocking, a Canadian Press survey reveals.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics retail sales index last December was 187.4, basis 1935-39 equals 100. This was 50 per cent higher than the boom year of the late 20's and about 70 per cent higher than 1939. But last year's figure is due for eclipse.

"With sales for the first nine months of this year averaging about 15 per cent higher than last year, there isn't any doubt but that we are on the verge of a new record," said a Toronto retailer. "The only question is how much higher sales will be than last year."

In Ottawa buying has been about the same as last year. Baby clothes are much in demand. Merchants said shoppers are quality conscious this year and are looking things over closely before buying. Buyers are showing a preference for serviceable items.

"If purchasers can get what they want they don't mind paying the price — but the shopping public has definitely become more choosy," a St. Catharines merchant said. However, choosy or not sales are reaching a record high in the city and are expected to be 15 per cent above last year.

In Niagara Falls without exception, stores report a prevalence of luxury buying. So far buying has been 20 per cent higher than last year. The emphasis of early buying is on plastics, household knick-knacks and wearing apparel. Buyers are shying away from jewellery and chinaware.

An overall picture of the Dominion's supply shows that durable goods will be hard to get unless orders are placed well in advance. Refrigerators are scarce but radios are in sufficient supply to meet the demand.

Jewelry and leather goods, supplemented by imports, are in fair supply. The clothing supply is limited with men's shirts practically non existent. More lingerie is available than last year.

Metal toys are back with a supply expected to satisfy the demand. Cosmetic supply remains the same as last year. Tobaccos are plentiful with the addition of imported cigarets. Good pipes are scarce.

Hon. Chas. Stewart Dies at Ottawa

Ottawa, Dec. 6. (CP)—Hon. Charles Stewart, 78, Canadian Chairman of the International Joint Commission and former Liberal Premier of Alberta, died early today after an illness of several months.

Mr. Stewart was Minister of Interior and Mines in the Dominion Government from 1921 to 1930. He was appointed to the joint commission following the Liberal victory in 1935 and had since served on that body in the investigations it had conducted into boundary waters

He was a distinguished figure in parliament, being more than six feet tall with broad shoulders. He was an authority on matters pertaining to the Prairies.

He had enjoyed good health since his appointment to the Commission until early this year when he had to undergo treatments.

A convincing speaker, Mr. Stewart was a strength to the front benches of the Liberal government where he sat for so many years.

After holding the portfolios of Municipal Affairs and Public Works in the Alberta Government he was selected Premier in 1917 and held that post until he was chosen Minister of Interior and Mines by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in 1921. The next year he was elected to the House of Commons as Member for Argenteuil, Quebec. Afterwards he sat for Edmonton West.

Mr. Stewart was a farmer and came to parliament with an insight into the needs of Prairie agriculture. As Interior Minister he was able to take an important part in framing the policies of the government in regard to Prairie development. Since Indian affairs came under him he took delight in pressing anything that would improve the lot of the Indians and Eskimo.

A devout Anglican, Mr. Stewart took an active interest in Christ Church Cathedral where he was on the financial board. Funeral arrangements have not been completed, but it will be held in Ottawa.

"COCKTAIL BARS" WILL BE LEGAL ON JANUARY 1ST

Premier Drew Proclaims New Liquor Law Permitting Sale by The Glass

Toronto, Dec. 6. (CP)— The new Ontario Liquor Licensing Act comes into effect Jan. 1, providing for sale of liquor by the glass in Ontario for the first time since 1917. And that's the day voters in the Toronto Municipal elections ballot on the question whether they are in favor of the so-called "cocktail bars".

The Toronto municipal vote—which has no legal effect on Provincial legislation—was not mentioned at all by Premier Drew of Ontario in his radio broadcast last night which announced proclamation of the act and the date of its coming into force.

But in his half-hour speech he dealt at length with the liquor question generally, and emphasized that "the only choice is to provide outlets for legal sale of spirits in the same way as in every other country in cities of their size."

Under the new Act, only in Ontario's five largest cities—Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London and Windsor—will there be sale of liquor by the glass in hotels and taverns, in dining lounges which are already called "cocktail bars". In smaller centres liquor-by-the-glass must receive a three-fifths majority vote in local plebiscites.

Premier Drew explained that in the five largest cities the consumption and sale of liquor was more than a local problem. Each had a large transient population and a large influx of tourists—he said Toronto in a single day might have as many as 100,000 visitors.

Hard To Find Place To Drink

"This creates a situation which has nothing to do with the ordinary requirements of the people living in those larger communities". Visitors could buy liquor legally, but had great difficulty finding a place where they could drink it legally. Hotel accommodation was limited. They proceeded to consume it behind doors, in motorcars and lavatories, in other undesirable places.

"We are not prepared to permit this intolerable condition to continue any longer," he said. "How is it to be stopped? By prohibiting drinking in hotel bedrooms? By stopping all this sur-

LONG HORSEBACK JOURNEY

Calgary, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Despite the fact there are two railway lines, an air route and a bus service from Calgary to Montreal — a distance of about 2,250 miles — William G. Hunderson of Calgary prefers to make the trip on horseback.

Hunderson, hoping to start his saddle marathon in about a week or 10 days, plans on travelling an average of 45 miles a day and possibly exceeding 50 if conditions are favorable

His route will take him along Canadian roads as far as Winnipeg where he will turn south and travel through Minnesota, returning to Canada at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

'Horse Will Always Reign Supreme' In Phases of Work of Mounties

Ottawa, Dec. 6. (CP)—One of the best friends of man's best friend, the Royal Canadian Mounted police rose today in spirited defence of the horse.

Although he has been driven into the background by modern mechanism, the horse is for from being through, say the Mounties stoutly.

"Police forces everywhere have become mechanized. But while this supplanting process has advanced far, it is certain from the police viewpoint that a final blow to live horsepower never will be struck."

Moved to the defence of its traditional equine ally by a Canadian Press dispatch, the R.C.M.P. Quarterly devoted its leading editorial and a photograph of one of its most famous horses—Billy—to support its arguments.

Billy, registered No. 2036, "unsurpassed in beauty, stamina, intelligence and good dispisition, with the possible exception of Black Peter, (Reg. No. 214)," was ridden by Commissioner S. T. Wood and led the R.C.M.P. contingent at the Coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

Billy was destroyed in 1944 at the age of 22.

Warmed to its subject, the Quarterly then considered The Canadian Press story, which reported a survey had shown fewer than 200 mounts on the police forces—including the R.C.M.P.—of all Canada, and said, "that fine figure on horseback, the mounted policeman, has had his day."

The Quarterly disagreed.

"Though nearly ousted by the motor car, motorcycle and plane in the fast pace set by modern law enforcement the horse still must take over on back concessions on those not infrequent occasions when nature holds the polished machine helpless in her grip.

"Since the Force's inception in 1873 the horse has been a major factor in our history. In the future, too, he will have his special role, for he continues to reign supreme in some phases of police work."

No Patients Hurt, Loss Estimated At $1,500,000

228 Inmates Taken to Safety In Less Than Five Minutes

Peterborough, Dec. 6 (CP)—A spectacular fire which levelled the spacious Department of Veterans Affairs frame hospital and reflected a sweeping glare over the city's west end early today, was caused by a discarded cigaret butt, it was announced by Fire Chief George Gimlett.

Damage was estimated at $1,500,000 to the building and equipment and this morning Inspector J. A. Grant, as representative of the Ontario Fire Marshal, left Toronto to investigate. Prompt action by orderlies permitted 228 tubercular patients from all parts of Canada to escape injury.

As volunteers worked frantically to salvage equipment, looters moved among them and carried off radios, mattresses, sheets, pillows and chairs.

The blaze, believed to have originated in a basement storage room, was first noticed shortly before midnight last night by Bill Anderson, a hospital orderly, while changing into his working clothes. He sounded a general alarm through the hospital switchboard and the 228 patients were cleared to safety in less than five minutes.

As the alarm sounded hospital orderlies rushed to fire "action stations" and carried out their routine of closing windows and doors as smoke filled the central ramp of the hospital and flooded into the two lower wards.

There was no panic among the veteran patients who filed out to escape doors at the rear of the hospital. Under direction of Dr. J. A. MacNeil, doctor in charge, the orderlies marshalled the men as they awaited orders to evacuate the building.

Arouse Sleeping Veterans

Some patients were not wakened by the alarm and orderlies raced from ward to ward arousing the sleeping veterans. In some cases it was necessary to assist patients through smoky corridors to the escape exits.

Many patients climbed out of lower windows and down ladders in an orderly race to escape the flames which swept rapidly through the building.

In tribute to his staff and the patients, Dr. MacNeil said: "The evacuation was brilliant. They obeyed orders and the hospital fire alarm instructions."

First to be evacuated was J. E. Patterson, former R.C.A.F. flight lieutenant, who was lying critically ill in an oxygen tent when the alarm sounded. Along with Walter Kemp, another patient in the "seriously ill" class, he was carried to a waiting ambulance and dispatched to Peterboro Civic Hospital.

Immediately after the alarm sounded an emergency switchboard was established at a nearby house and calls relayed to off-duty members of the staff. Hospital workers responded quickly and helped carry patients from the hospital to a cafeteria across the street.

High Spirit Marks Attitude of Victims Of Peterborough Fire

Peterborough, Dec. 6 (CP) — "Hey Scotty, this is the first chance I've had to get out at night since I came to the damn place," one patient shouted today as blanket-wrapped patients huddled in a cafeteria while the Department of Veterans Affairs hospital they had just evacuated, burned across the street.

The high spirit which marked the attitude of victims in overseas casualty clearing stations, was evident as many of the 228 patients who escaped to safety, drank coffee, smoked and cracked jokes beneath smoked blankets and singed sheets in the temporary cafeteria quarters.

As the war veterans watched the hospital burn along with their personal belongings and heard the damage estimated at 1,500,000, they saw the spacious cafeteria converted in record time from a table-studded diningg room into an emergency hospital.

Cots which had been removed from the burning hospital by men forming a human chain in the upper part of the building, appeared in the cafeteria as if by magic. Orderlies and civilians staggered into the building carrying matresses, blankets and stacks of sheets.

Laughing and merriment among the veterans drowned out the crackling of leaping flames as the men joked after spilling coffee on "our dark gray stepping out attire."

"Do you know how the fire started?" one patient asked.

"Yeh," answered another, "they put Forever Amber in our library yesterday."

Bob Stark, a former newspaperman who realized a portable typewriter he left behind in the blaze now was molten metal, wondered where he could buy a new one—"just think, if I could get hold of that old one right now I'd beat out the hottest copy ever written."

Churchill Congratulates Syracuse Chapter

Syracuse, N.Y., Dec. 6—(AP)—The Syracuse Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution has the congratulations of Winston Churchill on its 50th anniversary. Several relatives of Mr. Churchill live in the Syracuse area.

FEWER ACCIDENTS

Kingston, Dec. 6 (CP).—Kingston, reversing the current Ontario trend, reports a better traffic record this year than previously. Twenty-two fewer accidents were registered in the 11 months of this year than in the corresponding period of 1945, and the number of vehicles involved in accidents dropped from 431 to 394.

400 TO JOIN IN SEARCH FOR WOMAN

Berlin, Mass., Dec. 6 — (AP)— Police prepared today to throw 400 searchers into the hunt for 78-year-old Mrs. Ellen Boland, missing from a rest home since Sunday. Fifty searchers and three civil air patrol planes failed to find any trace of the women yesterday.

Executive Body Of Junior Trade Board Entertained

Members of the Chamber of Commerce entertained at luncheon at the Queen's Hotel on Thursday the executive body of the Junior Board of Trade to discuss the brief sent out by the associated bodies for the province. A most delightful luncheon was served by the host Jake Yanover and after pleasantries were exchanged and civic topics formally discussed the guests retired to the Chamber building for their business meeting. Those of the Junior Board of Trade present were Ted Schwab, Tip Tummon, Tommy Carruthers, Orliff Lloyd and Bruce Lattimer. The Chamber members were Jamieson Bone, Lorne McDougall, Fred Deacon, Jim Galloway, Jack McIntosh, Jack Trudeau and Irvin Hefkey.

The Junior Board of Trade members informed the Chamber of Commerce they were using Dave Price's office as a centre for their "get out the vote" campaign and a battery of telephones will be placed and about sixty cars will be operating from this headquarters on election day on Monday. They requested that the Chamber of Commerce supply 15 cars and this matter was handed over to the transportation committee for action. Proposals of the Chamber with respect to the age limit of the Junior Board of Trade members were advanced by Lorne McDougall, who requested the Trade Board not to take in any members older than 35 and to start in 1947 not to take any members older than 40 and reduce a year at a time until the age limit of 35 was reached.

Executive To Act.

It was moved that the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce so inform the Junior Board of Trade and the matter will then be dealt with by the executive. The chamber offered co-operation with the new body in providing more secretarial assistance and it was proposed to have an inter-change of members so that each body will know of the progress of the other. Bruce Lattimer suggested that the president of each board be interchangeable. Jamieson Bone reviewed the history of the Chamber of Commerce and opined that a man of 30 should be ready to take his place in the life of the community.

Ted Schwab explained to the Chamber members why older men were taken into the Junior Board of Trade when it was organized. "It was felt," he said, "that older men would give guidance to the younger members and as they progressed in community work the older men would leave the organization and join up with the Chamber of Commerce. I don't think there was any suggestion that any members older than 35 that belonged to the Chamber of Commerce would leave that body to join the younger one permanently." Mr. Schwab explained there was no spirit of opposition in the Junior Board of Trade toward the Chamber of Commerce but the members felt there was a field for community effort.

Mr. Hefkey explained that he had instituted a motion that a director should not serve more than two consecutive terms and his idea was that more could be brought into the advisory board by this method. "You know this motion will affect me because I will be retiring at the end of the year," said Mr. Hefkey.

Townships to Honor Returned Veterans

Residents of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure townships will honor their returned veterans of the armed services, some 60 all told at a townships party to be held in the near future, Reeve William Davis said yesterday.

The party will take the form of a chicken dinner, presentations and a dance to be held in Maynooth. Each returned veteran will be presented with a scroll of honor suitably inscribed, and with other gifts.

There is a possibility, Reeve Davis said, that the townships of Monteagle and Herschel will join with the sister townships in honoring their war heroes and make the function a joint affair.

$114,376 Spent on County Roads and Bridges Up To November 15th Says Report

$24,376 Total Cost of Three-Mile Strip of Madoc-Belleville Highway

Gross expenditures on the county roads and bridges system up to November 15, this year were $114,376.61. Included in this were $24,376.61 spent on the three-mile portion of the Madoc-Belleville Highway and $10,000 used on suburban roads, the report of the Roads and Bridges Committee presented to County Council on Thursday revealed.

Presented by Roads and Bridges chairman Reeve William West, Stirling the report stated that 195 tons of calcium chloride were used on 52.8 miles of county road for dust prevention purposes at a cost of $119 per mile. Eleven tank cars or a total of 80,025 gallons of asphalt dust layer and primer were also used as was an additional tank for suburban road purposes.

On county roads, 54,998 gallons were used which cost $7,754.72 which treated 24 miles of road at a cost of $323 per mile. More mileage was treated this year than any other year in the county history, the report stated.

Roads Sealcoated

Maintenance resurfacing programs cost $16,880 and 12,402 cubic yard of crushed rock and gravel were used. Approximately 6.3 miles of various widths of road were sealcoated this year at a total cost of $4,826 or an average of $768 per mile.

Minor repairs were completed on several bridges of the county system but major work on the Marsh Bridge east of Eldorado could not be carried out as the committee was unable to procure heavy steel spikes necessary to handle the 22,000 feet of new decking and new stringers.

Last Spring, the report stated, the greatest damage to roads in many years occurred in Eastern Ontario. Hastings County suffered in common with other road authorities and this unforeseen condition boosted ordinary maintenance expenditures materially. Over $7,500 was spent on gravel and rock patching alone while pavement patching amounted to over $2,200 where a year ago this item amounted to $325.

Costs up Considerably

Costs of everything from labor to machinery repairs have risen since the first of the year. There were no deletions from the county system this year but the one-quarter mile of surface on Sidney Street was assumed by the Suburban Road Commission.

Authorization was granted to instal warning signals at the C.N.R. crossing one mile north of Shannonville and flashing light and bell signals have been erected.

The major operation of the year was the construction of the three-mile strip of road on the Belleville-Madoc highway at a cost of $24,469.02. The road was widened to a 66-foot right-of-way by removing old fences and erecting wire fencing in exchange for land acquired. The average cost per mile was $5,852 on the county section while the contract part cost $6,592.66. The new road has met with approval from all sides and a real good job has been done so that paving can be completed in 1947 if so desired.

Engineer Praised

County Engineer W. L. Langlois was the recipient along with the members of the Roads Committee for the excellent job done on this part of the highway and in other sections as well. Reeve George West of Madoc told council that he was very pleased with what has been done. "I worked hard to get this project started and we in Madoc are delighted I would like to have seen the curve in the road near the Danford property taken out as it is a dangerous place and several accidents have occurred there. I feel that if this could be done it would add to safety and be appreciated by the general public."

Would Have to Remove

Chairman West told his colleague that the hydro line near the curve mentioned would have to be completely removed in the near future. This would have to be done before any attempt to straighten out the road could be made. Reeves Sprackett, Buskard, Kirby and Post complimented the committee on the fine job done.

Reeve Ken Vivian, Tyendinaga expressed his appreciation of the installation of the warning signals installed at the crossing one mile north of Shannonville. "We have tried hard to get these signals for the public safety and I personally appreciate what has been done and so do the people in the vicinity.

Angus B. Duffy New President Canadian Legion

Angus B. Duffy, former Regimental Sergeant Major of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was the unanimous choice of the members of Branch 99 of the Canadian Legion, for president in the coming year when the election of officers was held in the Legion Hall on Thursday evening. Present also at the meeting were aspirants to public office in the elections on Monday and every speaker was given a sympathetic hearing and at the conclusion of their addresses the members were allowed to ask questions of the speakers. A great deal of constructive criticisms was offered and housing was the chief interest of all the veterans present.

Every speaker earnestly desired to remedy the housing situation and many schemes were offered that could be explored by the incoming council and out of them all something tangible would result in providing housing for veterans and civilians alike. There was a spirit of good fellowship prevalent throughout the meeting and at the conclusion refreshments were served and the talks continued until the early hours. A very strong executive was chosen to lead the Legion members with Mr. Duffy promising to give a year of his life for the progress of the Legion. He asked for the co-operation of the members and wanted them ready to do a job when requested just the same as they did when in the army.

Other officers who were elected were Immediate Past President, Col. H. E. Smith; 1st Vice President, Leroy Madden; 2nd Vice President, Ernie Dainard; Assistant Secretary, Max Matthews; Treasurer, Gavin Scott; Sergeant-at-Arms, Eddie Lee, and Executive, E. Cliff-Phillips, Walter Harden, E. Ingram, Everett Liddle, Charles Lundy, H. Nesbitt, Rodney Newton, Max Porritt and Dr. Russell Scott. The new Zone Commander, Frank Gardiner was officially welcomed by the members and he presided during the election of officers. Leroy Madden in the absence of the president was in the chair.

MEDICAL OFFICER TO SPEAK ON AIR ON INCINERATOR

Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, will be on the air tonight over station CJBQ from 8.30 p.m. to 8.45 p.m. to give a resume of the by-law with respect to the construction of an incinerator from a health stand- which the ratepayers will vote on Monday. Dr. Cronk will speak on the subject: "The value of an Incinerator from a health standpoint." The speaker is well qualified to deal with this subject and the ratepayers would be advised to tune in and learn at first hand all the salient points about this important question.

Witnesses Testify Taking Treatment With Carefoot

A total of 22 witnesses testifying as to the benefit they had received as the result of treatment taken from Dr. E. M. Carefoot were called to the stand on Thursday by defence counsel as the hearing of false pretences charge against Mr. Carefoot completed its fourth day.

The Crown had closed its case on Wednesday afternoon following the taking of evidence from expert witnesses who had testified as to the relative curative and diagnostic powers of electrical apparatus seized by police at the Carefoot home at the time of the defendant's arrest last spring.

Eight witnesses were called by the defence during the Thursday morning session, while during the afternoon fifteen witnesses, all former patients of Mr. Carefoot, gave testimony on the stand.

First witness called during the afternoon session was Mrs. John Boldrick of Plainfield who told of travelling with her husband to Regina 15 years ago to receive treatment from Mr. Carefoot. Both she and her husband had received treatment at the time, Mrs. Boldrick stated. She had been treated for a growth which she had "imagined" was cancer and had been in good health since.

Paid for Diagnosis.

Mrs. Ethel Lounsberry of Cobourg told the court that she had gone to Mr. Carefoot in Oct., 1944, and had been told she had a kidney stone. "Dr. Carefoot told me he could do nothing for me," she said. Under cross examination Mrs. Lounsberry stated that she had paid Dr. Carefoot $5 for the diagnosis.

Grist miller at Queensboro, Ernest Groves, testified that some years previously he had suffered pains in the region of his heart and could not work or eat. He had taken treatment from Dr. Nickle of Madoc and from Dr. George at Tweed, but with no improvement.

Finally he had gone to Mr. Carefoot who took a blood sample from his ear and later had been told his trouble was cancer. Treatment had consisted of drops on the tongue and application of electric pads on the sore spot. He felt better in a week's time and now could work every day handling bags in his grist mill.

Had Two Growths.

Mrs. Lillian Mastin residing 25 miles north of Marysville, stated that approximately seven years ago Dr. Cronk of Belleville had operated on her lower abdomen at the Belleville hospital. Later pains returned and she had doctored with Dr. Boyce at Deseronto and Dr. Hall at Napanee who had advised her to have another operation.

Refusing to have another operation Mrs. Mastin had gone to Mr. Carefoot, who, after taking a blood sample, had told her she had two growths, one in the side and one in the left breast. She had taken treatments and after the first four had felt better. A second blood check three months later had shown that she was again normal.

"I never paid Dr. Carefoot at any time," Mrs. Mastin said. "After paying the other doctors, I didn't have much to pay." This was in answer to a question put by the Crown at the time of cross examination.

Mrs. Hilda Joslin, Foxboro, told of going to Dr. Gibson for a check-up in September, 1943. She had been sent to Belleville hospital and then to Kingston hospital for "three or four days." There she had several radium treatments and had been confined in hospital for three months.

Plainly distraught in the stand, Mrs. Joslin brokenly told of again becoming ill and of Kingston hospital authorities telling her that she had cancer and had only days to live unless she had an operation. "With two small children at home, I consented to the operation," went on the witness. "But they would not take my consent alone. A few days later my husband came and took me from the hospital and to see Dr. Carefoot at Belleville."

After treatment from Dr. Carefoot witness stated she had felt better until January of 1946 when she had bladder trouble. When this trouble was remedied at Kingston she had been told her cancer condition had cleared up. There had been no talk of money with Dr. Carefoot, she said.

James Joslin, husband of the previous witness, corroborated his wife's testimony as to her condition. The Crown offered no cross examination.

Treated For Twenty Years.

Henry Whiteman of Cooper stated he had doctored for 20 years for a cough which had gradually worn down his strength and made him unable to sleep well at nights. He had doctored with Dr. Eagleson without results. On going to Dr. Carefoot a sample of blood had been taken from his ear and his trouble diagnosed as tuberculosis. He had taken treatment for two weeks and after the first had shown improvement and then better every day.

Mrs. Russell Pigden of Madoc told of having doctored for 12 years with Dr. Nickle and Dr. Beattie of Madoc for a trouble which had been diagnosed as gall stones. Her condition had failed to improve, however, and she was forced to sit up at nights with gas pains.

On going to Dr. Carefoot the customary blood sample had been taken from her ear and she had been told her trouble was ulcers. This after she had told that Madoc doctors had been treating her for gall stones. She had taken treatments twice per day and was now cured. She had paid Dr. Carefoot "what she felt like", she said.

In Good Health Now.

Mrs. Sarah Strebe of Trenton told of doctoring unsuccessfully with Dr. Nickle of Madoc for pains in the side and swelling in her neck which was shutting off her breath. She had gone to Dr. Carefoot in 1945 and had been told she had cancer of the thyroid gland and the right ovary. There had been no physical examination except the sample of blood taken. Treatments had consisted of a few drops of liquid plus the application of some electrical appliance. She was now in perfect health, she said.

A former railroader, and now farmer, Mr. Andrew Langstaff told of having suffered from a pain in the lower left abdomen since 1921. He had doctored with Ameliasburg doctors and in 1945 at the direction of Dr. Cronk had been X-rayed at Belleville, the plates showing a crooked gall bladder. At the time Dr. Cronk had advised an operation for hemorrhoids but he had declined.

Was Told he Had Growth

A friend had recommended Dr. Carefoot and on visiting him and following a blood test had been told he had a growth which was causing the hemorrhoids, the symptoms indicating it "may be" cancer. He had taken 27 treatments and since had felt no pain except when he disregarded the doctor's orders to do no heavy work until cured.

Mrs. George McKinnon of Madoc told of being operated on 20 years ago at Kingston for appendicitis and some years later for gall bladder trouble following which she had had temporary relief from her pains. With pains recurring in 1944 she had gone to Dr. Eagleson at Madoc who advised X-ray. Instead she had gone to Dr. Carefoot and had been told she had cancer of the stomach. She had taken 30 treatments, showing improvement in "two or three" days and since had felt fine.

William J. Chambers, Stirling farmer, told of taking his wife to Dr. Carefoot when she refused to have an operation for what had been diagnosed as a growth in her stomach. For a long period she had been sick and failing, he said.

Drops on Tongue Used

Mrs. Chambers, when called to the stand, told of feeling better after five or six treatments by Dr. Carefoot in January of 1946. Dr. Carefoot had diagnosed her trouble as cancer of the bowel. Treatment had not been by machine, but consisted of drops on her tongue and something which had been rubbed on..

Mrs. Greta Sharpe, Belleville, told of treating with numerous doctors since 1933 for pains in her abdomen and for a general poisonous condition of the body. Dr. Cronk had stated tonsils were responsible, while Dr. Connor had advised an appendectomy. Tonsils later had been removed. Following a serious gas attack she had gone to Dr. Carefoot and had been told she was suffering from ulcers. After a few treatments of tongue drops and massage she was able to sleep nights and now was in good health for the first time since 1933.

Treated For Cancer of fStomach

Sam Fargey, of Huntingdon Township, told of having stomach trouble first in 1911. Intermittently he would be "off work" while his family physician had stated he could do nothing for him. He had finally gone to Dr. Carefoot and had been told he had cancer of the stomach. He had been subjected to treatments by application of a brass or copper plate attached with wires and had improved after the first treatment.

Last witness called was Mrs. James Ray, Sidney Township, who said that ten years ago she had been told by her family doctor that she had a growth and about seven years ago had had a tumor removed at Belleville hospital. By consent of the Crown the family doctor was not named.

Three years following the operation Mrs. Ray stated she had again suffered hemorrhages and had gone to the hospital for blood transfusions. She had gone to Dr. Carefoot in 1944 and although he had not been keen in taking on her case had finally been persuaded to do so. Her condition had been diagnosed as cancer of the bowel and after treatment rapid improvement had been shown. At the present time she was able to do all her own work about the house.

At this point court was adjourned until Friday morning.

IN MEMORIAM

AYLESWORTH — In loving memory of my dear daughter, Bessie Aylesworth, who passed away fourteen years ago today, December 6th., 1932.

We think of her in silence,
Her name we oft recall,
There is nothing left to answer
But her picture on the wall.
Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her troubled nights are past,
And in our aching hearts we know
She has found sweet rest at last.
You're not forgotten, Bessie, dear,
Nor ever shall you be,
As long as life and memory last
We shall remember thee.
—Sadly missed by Mother and brothers Harold, Edwin, Garfield.

FOX — In memory of a loving husband and father, Charles Fox, who passed away one year ago, December 6th., 1945.

He suffered much, with patience bore,
Physicians were in vain,
Till God above, in His great love,
Released him from his pain.
He bid no one a last farewell,
He said goodbye to none;
The heavenly gates were opened, a loving voice said come,
Weep not for me or wish me back.
I now from pain am free,
And in my Jesus' arms I rest
Where I have longed to be.
One year has passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from our home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
The flowers we place upon his grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for him who sleeps beneath
Shall never fade away.
What would I give to clasp his hand,
His happy face to see,
To see his smile that meant so much to me.
—Sadly missed by Wife, Son and Sister.

Machine Used for Patients Not Same As Seized by Provincial Police Says Witness in Carefoot Trial

The machine by which electrical treatments were given by E. M. Carefoot to patients at his home at the corner of Bridge St. and MacDonald Ave., was not the machine seized by provincial police at the time of their investigation last Spring.

Such was the evidence brought out by the defence today in the trial of Mr. Carefoot, who is being tried before Judge W. S. Lane, on a charge of false pretences involving medical practice.

Giving evidence in the court, Jack Carefoot, son of Mr. E. M. Carefoot, and student at Toronto University, stated that the machine exhibited in court and on which Constable Ernest Keays had sworn he had received treatments, had not been used since his father had come to Belleville.

Had Been Dismantled

Instead a similar machine had been used for treatment of patients, the component parts of which were introduced to the court. Witness stated that he had dismantled the machine on instructions of his father during the Christmas season in 1945 and had hidden the various parts in different places in the basement of the Carefoot home. These parts had not been found at the time of the police search last Spring following Mr. Carefoot's arrest.

Under cross examination by Crown Attorney A. G. Davis, of Brampton, the witness explained how the machine actually used by his father differed from the one seized by police and on which the Crown claimed treatments had been given.

Dismantled On Instructions

"Why did you dismantle the machine?" asked the Crown.

"On instructions from my father," returned the witness. "We had understood there was some sort of an investigation to take place."

"Then you as an intelligent young man dismantled a machine which you knew the police would require for evidence?" asked the Crown.

Witness replied he had not actually hidden the parts and that he could have found them easily. Panel of the machine had been secreted inside the outer lining of the oil burning furnace in the basement.

"If the machine had been dismantled with innocent intention, it would have been a natural thing to have placed the parts all in the one place," returned the Crown.

In all eight witnesses were called during the morning proceedings by Defence Counsel Malcolm Robb, all with the exception of Jack Carefoot, being patients at one time treated by his father.

Showed Improvement

First witness called was Mrs. Ed. Carter of Thomasburg, who told of having a gathering in her head in 1941. She had gone to Kingston for three weeks' treatment but the condition of her ear got worse and finally in 1945 she had gone to Mr. Carefoot. After a sample of blood was taken she had received treatments by electrical machine and rapidly showed improvement, she said.

Next witness called was Mr. George Bassett, of Madoc, who stated he had been troubled with severe pain in his hip and after diagnosis in both Kingston and Toronto had been told his trouble was cancer. At Toronto he had been told nothing could be done for him.

Returning to Belleville he had gone to Mr. Carefoot who had not wanted to take on his case. However, Mr. Carefoot had consented to give him treatments and after three weeks he could "get around" and was now in "fine shape". He had paid Mr. Carefoot of his own free will an amount that had been fixed by himself.

Given Medicine

Under cross examination the witness stated he had not been treated by electrical machine for his hip trouble, but had been given medicine to take inwardly as well as to rub on.

Mrs. Mary Ketcheson, of Tweed, Tweed told of having had a growth in her throat which was stopping her breath and also of a lump in her breast. She had been treated at Tweed and had finally gone to Mr. Carefoot and received treatment by electric plate and had been given lotion. She now had no trouble.

Under cross examination Mrs. Ketcheson stated that Mr. Carefoot had told her her trouble was cancer both in the throat and in the breast. She had paid Mr. Carefoot what she "thought it was worth" but he had not asked for payment.

Mrs. Fred Mitchell, 2nd concession Thurlow township told the court that 13 years ago she had suffered terrible pains in her back and after seeing doctors had been told her trouble was gall stones. One doctor had wanted to operate but she had not had the operation.

Told She Had Gall Stones

Mr. Carefoot had been recommended and following diagnosis had told her she had a bad case of gall stones. She had felt improvement following the first three of four treatments and now felt fine. Under cross examination Mrs. Mitchell maintained she had told Mr. Carefoot nothing of her symptoms, but he had diagnosed her trouble as gall stones. She had received treatment by electrical machine and had paid Mr. Carefoot "something."

Douglas Harnes, Prince Edward county, told of having been troubled with tuberculosis and hemorrhages and having been put to bed by his physician for seven or eight months. After getting no better he had seen Mr. Carefoot in 1945.

He told the court that he had received treatments twice each day for a time with splendid results. "They put me where I am today and saved my life," he said. I a mnow working hard at farming and trucking.

Witness Did Not Agree

Crown Attorney Davis suggested to the witness that his tuberculosis condition had been arrested at the time that he first saw Mr. Carefoot and that he was merely feeling weak from the result of being in bed for a lengthy period. To this witness did not agree.

Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Sidney township, when called to the stand to give testimony told of having felt weak and of being troubled with a lump in her breast. An X-ray examination and diagnosis by a local doctor showed a cancer condition and she had been informed to this effect by letter which was produced in court. The doctor had stated that it was a fast growing type of cancer and that it should be operated on as quickly as possible. The doctor had doubted, however, if any surgeon touch the case unless there was deep X-ray therapy following the operation.

Went on Recommendation

A few days following receipt of the hospital report Mrs. Thrasher stated she had gone to Mr. Carefoot on the recommendation of a friend and there the hospital report of cancer had been confirmed. She had taken 20 treatments and after the third treatment had felt improvement and had since felt fine. Questioned by Judge F. S. Lane, Mrs. Thrasher stated she had not shown the hospital report to Mr. Carefoot.

Mrs. Ellen Boldrick of Plainfield was called to the stand but when details of former treatment for her condition were asked by Defence Counsel Robb, Judge Lane objected on the grounds that it was irrelevant to the case. Court was then adjourned until the afternoon.

Statements Made By Judge German Inadmissible

Cobourg, Dec. 6 — (CP) — After listening to three hours' argument by counsel over admissibility of statements allegedly made by Judge J. C. M. German after a motor accident here last Sept. 3, Judge E. A. Wright late yesterday ruled the statements inadmissible.

Crown Attorney F. E. D. Wallace then cited authorities to support his contention that the statements should be admitted. Court was then recessed.

The discussion came toward the end of the third day of Judge German's trial on charges of drunken and dangerous driving arising from an accident in which Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg suffered injuries. Police allege Judge German was driving his car at the time it allegedly struck Mrs. Taylor.

Earlier, Constable Harold Pearse of Cobourg said that, called to the scene of the accident, he found Mrs. Taylor lying in a ditch.

"Judge German was staggering around at the scene of the accident and I took him by the arm," he said. "I could smell liquor on him and I considered him intoxicated."

Want New Wing On County Home

Recommendation that a new wing be erected on the west end of the County House of Refuge as soon as possible, was embodied in the annual report of the House Board of Management to Hastings County Council on Thursday.

The existing verandah is in bad condition and is definitely unsafe. Sooner than repair it, the Board felt the money might better be put into cost of a new building.

The report stated that the Board had held a special meeting this summer with the Belleville Chamber of Commerce with regard to the sale of the county farm for industrial sites. The Board felt that the decision to dispose of the farm should rest with the County Council.

The report also recommended that future boards be given authority to purchase more land for the county farm, if the opportunity arises. The farm now possesses the necessary machinery to work a good deal more land, and additional pasture is needed as well.

Since the last report, the Board has purchased a pure bred Holstein sire at a cost of $200.00.

The Board also recommended that the north end of the barn be repaired.

Magic of This Time

Local shops to the little boys and girls at this time must have the appearance of magic palaces and wonderland in the days of old, something like the pleaces described in fairy stories and illustrated in the picture books. For many a child has been with his mother in some of these stores crowded with the loveliest creations that appeal to the imagination and with the deftest devices and mechanisms and cannot fail to carry home abiding impressions which will linger in the mind until Santa Claus has come and emptied a good part of his bag of gifts in the family home at Christmas.

The stores help to build up the idea of magic palaces and the impressions that are clustered around the festival. In this they do something of the highest importance, instilling thoughts of things of beauty and appeal that are capable of giving so much pleasure to those who are to receive them.

Credit must be given to the business men who take so great care in the season's preparations and back of them to the factories and the small plants where toys of all kinds are turned out and to the artisans who devote their time to the creation of these devices and playthings as well as articles of wear.

Shops at this time must be truly a wonder place to all the youngsters.

New Knights of The Garter

His Majesty King George has appointed seven of the great British leaders in the Second World War to be Knights of the Order of the Garter, the highest order of British chivalry. They are names familiar wherever the English tongue is spoken and abroad, Viscount Alexander, Governor General of Canada, Viscount Addison, Viscount Cranborne, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery of Alamein, chief of the Imperial General Staff, Field Marshal Viscount Alanbrooke, Viscount Portal, Marshal of the R.A.F. and Viscount Mountbatten.

In reference to the appointments Prime Minister Attlee's office said that Mr. Attlee and the opposition party had agreed that the King should make such appointments "without any formal submission" from the Government, this following the procedure for the award of the Order of Merit. The idea is to remove the order from party politics, a Treasury official stated.

There are two stories of the origin of the Order of the Garter, one is that Richard I at the siege of Acre caused some of his followers, to place leather thongs around their legs as a distinction. The origin is however generally attributed King Edward III and the legend is that the Countess of Salisbury having dropped her garter while dancing, the King restored it amid the jesting of courtiers, the King using the words so famous "Honi soit qui mal y pense" (shame be to him who thinks evil of it.")

One of the middle age writers Jean Froissart says it was established in 1344 as an order of chivalry. The order is believed to have been founded in honor of the Holy Trinity, the Virgin Mary, Saint Edward the Confessor and Saint George, the latter being its patron saint. In the reign of Edward VI it was commonly known as the Order of Saint George.

It was originally awarded for signal services and awarded by the king without ministerial advice but some decades ago it became the custom for prime ministers of the day to make recommendations to the king regarding the award as recommendations are made for the Order of the British Empire and other orders. The award of the Order of the Garter has now reverted to the original procedure.

The new Knights of the Order of the Garter are men who have rendered oustanding knightly service in the recent struggle with the aggressor nations.

In 411 Years

For the 411th navigation season the last cargo ship of Montreal had sailed from the harbor at dawn on Wednesday, says the Montreal Gazette, which takes the opportunity of going back into history and of telling the story of that port. The mention of the years seems to belie the term "New World," applied to the American Continent, for 411 years is a long time in the life of the world. It is about one fifth of the time from today back to the dawn of the Christian era. These, four hundred and eleven years have been marked with progress at Montreal and the thoughts of Canadians everywhere can linger over the foundation of their own settlements. Some of them are grown up, many have age behind them but four centuries in the new world has not made them or Montreal old. They have gathered strength and charm with the passage of time and it is a pleasant thing to think that they have a small measure of antiquity about them. We are proud of our old cities and old settlements as well as the new.

Those who like to delve into the past find it interesting to consider "hardy Jacques Cartier opening navigation in the St. Lawrence at what is now Montreal in the fall of 1535. It was 1653 when Champlain came along and "heard proud-faced Iroquois speak of mighty lakes to the west", as the Gazette says.

There is the story of Champlain's adventurers exploring and mapping the Great Lakes while Champlain staked out the harbor, now that of Montreal. It took years before Montreal became a transatlantic port —that was in 1853. In the years between Canada had been growing into nationhood

Mention of Champlain attracts attention in these parts for the great famed French explorer and his heroic adventurers did some exploring up this way, following the waterways deeply inland.

It is one of the miracles of growth, this development of Canada in a few generations. Today from Canada goes a great amount of shipping to the wide world. To read some parts of ancient history four centuries seem but a short time, but four centuries have created a whole new world which is exerting a magnificent influence upon the rest of the globe. In that four centuries great nations have grown up in this new world and have taken their place among the world's oldest peoples, bringing with them the spirit of the new and the free.

At the rate of growth that the present day may suggest, the thought comes, how wonderful will be the present New World four centuries hence!

The Friendly Fireplace

America, these December days, is witness to considerable "log rolling" of a strictly nonpolitical variety as hundreds of home fireplaces, inactive since spring, are lighted. The process involves considerably more than touching a match to a gas or oil-burning furnace. Chunks of wood, carefully chosen and dried in basements, must be brought up, and kindling must be expertly placed to assure a successful blaze.

Mid-evening finds father relaxed in his accustomed armchair and absorbed in his favorite book, flanked on one side by his newspaper-devouring daughter and on the other by mother, busy with her ever-present mending; while Junior, stretched before the cracking blaze, does his homework a la Abraham Lincoln.

But the fireplace has proved more than a congenial warmth center. It has contributed in no small measure to the upbuilding of the Nation. In Colonial days it provided not only warmth and light, but likewise served as kitchen range. Wherever the pioneer went, the fireplace followed. Seated before its companionable flame, the lonely and discouraged homesteader found his mountainous problems resolving themselves into molehills, and so was able on the morrow to tackle his tasks with renewed determination. Likewise today many a harassed householder, confronted with similar difficulties, finds his courage renewed and poise and perspective regained A deep obeisance, then, to the friendly fireplace. May it long endure—and never smoke!

THE ETERNAL QUESTION

At times, when I had been away,
Long years ago I used to say,
As any doting father would:
"Come tell me, son, have you been good?"

Eternal question! Parents all
Have asked and will of children small:
"Have you done everything you should?
Come tell us now, have you been good?"

"Have you been good?" Today it slips
As though it dwelt upon my lips.
I question my grandchildren three:
"Have you been good as you should be?"

When done with life and every task,
The Father of us all may ask —
Where good and ill are understood—
No more than this: "Have you been good?"

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

Dec. 6th., 1926.

Thirteen inches of snow which fell in the city between nine o'clock yesterday morning and seven o'clock in the evening, did little damage outside of tying up traffic. The storm was the heaviest for so early in the season, according to old timers. It was cold, too, the temperature being at zero for the first time this winter.

The Baptist Church here celebrated its 53rd anniversary yesterday.

Timothy Hogan, Belleville's oldest citizen, died yesterday at his home on Baldwin Street. He had reached the advanced age of 105 years and was in good health until two days ago. He lived in this city for 56 years.

"Bouncer" Holway of this city is playing with the Kingston Intermediates this season and according to the Kingston paper he can deliver the goods. At the first practice in the Harty Arena he made them all look up by his great defensive work and his marvelous rushes. Others taking part in the practice game were Joe Smith, "Chummy" Lawlor, Eddie Watts, Frank Bellsinger and a few new comers.

Rt. Ex. Comp. A. H. Walton of Madoc, Grand Superintendent of this district, made his first official visit to Moira Chapter No. 7, R.A.M., of Belleville last evening. There was a large attendance of the members of the order and after the work of the chapter had been completed a banquet was served. Ex. Comp. J. O. R. McCurdy presided. During the evening speeches were made by Ex. Comp. W. C. Mikel, K.C.; Grand Superintendent, A. H. Walton; Ex. Comp. William Thompson and Rt. Ex. Comp. Col. W. N. Ponton.

40 YEARS AGO

Dec. 6th., 1906.

Three degrees below zero at 8 a.m. and a stiff breeze blowing from Bancroft is certainly sufficient to make people realize that winter is here.

By the way, has anyone seen an aldermanic candidate about town? It is about time they were coming out into the open.

Owing to the formation of considerable anchor ice and a rather heavy downfall of snow the mouth of the river became blocked last night and in consequence the water in the river rose to an unusual height. While no particular damage was done some cellars in dwellings near the lower bridge were flooded and some cellars on the west side of Front Street also contained considerable water. Should mild weather continue for a few days the anchor ice will no doubt get away, but if it should turn cold there is every likelihood of trouble. This is unusual for this time of year.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did "assassin" originate?

"Assassin," though singular in English, is derived through French and Italian from the Arabic plural "hashashin," literally "eaters of dried herbs."

It acquired its meaning of "one who kills by surprise" in a curious and roundabout way.

In the 11th century Hasan-
The chief purpose of the sect
ibn-Sabbah, a native of Persia, after many strange adventures, settled near Kuhistan and began to teach a new Moslem doctrine.
was to rid Persia of its Arab overlords and all caliphs, sultans, princes and other persons of distinction who stood in the way of this object were to be secretly murdered.

In 1090 A.D. Hasan, through a strategem, obtained possession of Alamut, a strongly fortified castle in the Elburz mountains. Secure in his mountain fastness, Hasan pretended to be invested with divine authority and proceeded to organize one of the most powerful secret societies in the world, himself assuming the title Sheik-el-Jabal, "Old Man of the Mountain."

The order had elaborate rituals and was divided into classes ranging from common members to a class of princely rank. One class consisted of young men who knew nothing of the real secrets of the society but who were pledged to carry out the mandates of the leader without question or hesitation. They were known as "Fidais," devotees. Theirs was the task of killing those doomed by the Shei-el-Jabal.

This semi-religious, semi-secular sect was thus dedicated to the murder of rules. For two centuries Hasan and his successors in the high command terrorized the Moslem world. A caliph of Egypt and princes of Aleppo, Damascus and Mosul died mysteriously by daggers driven into their hearts by the Fideis of the Old Man of the Mountain. One branch of the sect established itself in attention largely to crusaders. A dagger dispatched Conrad of Montferrat soon after the crusaders had proclaimed him king of Jerusalem. Raymond, Count of Tripoli, met a similar fate. An attempt was made on Edward I of England, but he recovered from the wound.

This sect was expert in the preparation of a powerful drug known as "hashish" because it was made from the dried leaves of Indian hemp. Excited to a frenzy with hashish, the fanatical Fideis went forth on their errands of death. It was the Arabs who gave these murderous users of hashish the name "hashashin," which the Crusaders carried back to Europe in the form of "assassin."

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Incinerator By-Law and Your Baby

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

If you saw a fly crawling up your baby's blanket, if you knew that the feet of that fly carried the germs of "Infantile Paralysis", what would you do?

You would stop whatever else you were doing and you would shoo that fly away before it reached your baby's face. If it took the rest of the afternoon or evening, you would stalk that fly until you killed it.

Would it be worth 30 minutes of your time to cut in half the chances that the fly in your house is the bearer of typhoid or dysentery or polio?

If you think it would be, you had better spend those 30 minutes going to the polls next Monday.

You can't keep disease from striking down your children by mounting guard with a fly swatter. But you might keep disease from striking down your children by making possible the construction of a sanitary system of garbage disposal.

This can be done only if at least 1,501 registered property owners — and you may be the 1,501st — go to the polls next Monday and vote for the Incinerator By-law.

Why is the success of the By-law so urgent?

It is urgent because germs that cause typhoid, dysentery, polio and other diseases breed in refuse and filth.

It is urgent because under the present system of garbage disposal, filth is exposed within our city limits and masses of it float on the surface of the bay.

Flies and other insects walk in this filth. Then make a beeline for your children's food or for your sleeping baby's face.

To end this menace it is necessary to eliminate the dumping of raw garbage in the City of Belleville; it is necessary to eliminate this condition by building a modern, scientific plant for the treatment of all garbage.

Vote for the incinerator by-law next Monday.

Jack A. Marshal.
Chairman of the Local Board of Health.

Miss G. Batchelor Dies of Burns

Bancroft (Special) — Severely burned when she rushed upstairs to save Charles Malloy, her employer, when the latter's home caught fire last November 26th, Miss Gertrude Batchelor, 57, Ormsby, died in Bancroft Red Cross Hospital early Friday morning.

Explosion of coal oil which was being used by Miss Batchelor to start the fire to prepare the evening meal was given as the cause for the blaze which partially destroyed the home. Malloy, also burned in the fire as he was being led from the home by Miss Batchelor, is in fair condition.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

HELLO, SUCKERS!

Who was the night club entertainer who greeted the customers so cordially and frankly? Trixie Fernanza or some such name, wasn't it? In like manner I greet all readers who harbor the notion that some kind of physic is beneficial now and then for any one, not just in the spring after a long cold winter but whenever one's bile gets all balled up or lazy, as the ad writer says, or out of sorts—I don't know just what it is, for, after all, it is all Greek to me. Indeed, as far back as I can remember, it has been a great mystery to me how the almanac fellows, the vendors of "vegetable" nostrums and liver pills and plain and fancy salts can tell that the sucker's "bile is lazy" or that his "liver is acting up" or that he isn't "eliminating poisons" of some kind or other. I pored over every authoritative textbook of physiology or pathology I could lay my hands on, for many years, but I never learned the trick!

"Quite some time ago" writes a reader—using four good words too many, since they do not mean anything—"I sent for your pamphlet" (The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene — for copy send ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address. Do not use clipping, ask for it in writing) "followed your instructions faithfully and obtained remarkable results. As a matter of fact I have discarded cathartics, which for more than thirty years I had used almost daily, as I believed it would be dangerous to fail to take my regular aid .... Many thanks for this relief."

This reader does not say how long he or she has managed to worry along with the "aid" of physic, but even if it is less than a year, it is not unlikely that there has been time for the reader to experience considerable relief from one chronic complaint or another which was due to the untoward by-effect of his or her favorite physic.

This being a health column I refrain from mentioning familiar complaints which are caused by frequent, habitual or regular use of laxatives or cathartics, but these familiar disorders include not only digestive disturbances and nutritional deficiencies but various functional troubles incident to pelvic congestion in men and women. Indeed, it is my own opinion—and don't forget I'm no authority....that a good many patients who are more or less constantly under treatment for chronic non-disabling ailments would get well without any treatment if they could only get rid of their Wiseacre introspection — you know, their vast store of almanac and trick-healer pathology —and learn the rudiments of physiology.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Chocolate

In a class discussion the students referred to your article "Sorry, Kids: These Drinks Not for You". We were under the impression that chocolate milk as an occasional treat is good for a person.

(Mrs. C. R.)

Answer—I agree I never used the title you ascribe to me — if anything of mine appeared under that title you had better take it with a grain of salt—the bright young lady who "edited" my copy may have changed some of my teachings to conform with her own "policy."

Modified Dakin's Solution

Blank looks, patronizing advice and impudent questions I get when I try to buy sodium hypochlorite, but no hypohlorite.

(D. L. S.)

Answer—Diluted Solution of Sodium Hypochlorite (U.S.P.) is a modified Dakin's Solution. For use as antiseptic, deodorant mouth wash, mix a teaspoonful of this standard solution with eight teaspoonfuls of water—rinse mouth thoroughly with this mixture three times a day.

Smoking

Mother doesn't want to worry me, but she tells me smoking cigarettes during pregnancy gives the unborn child a predisposition to cancer—she says this is a proven scientific fact. My baby, now one year old, seems perfectly healthy and happy, but mother still says.

(Mrs. D. H.)

Answer—I'll go along with your mother to this extent — Smoking by the expectant mother never does her or the li'l stranger any good But so far as I know, it has nothing to do with cancer or predisposition to cancer. The consensus of medical authorities seems to be that as long as the smoking has no untoward effect on the expectant mother's health it will not affect the health of her unborn child.

1,100 BREWERY WORKERS TO RETURN TO WORK

Philadelphia, Dec. 6 — (AP) — A two-month long jurisdictional battle which was punctuated with outbreaks of violence and which created a shortage of beer here was ended Thursday by a promise of the 1,100 striking C. I. O. brewery workers to return to work. The men walked out Oct. 2 in a dispute about turning over beer to A.F.L. teamsters.

M.O. for County Calls for Generous Support of Christmas Seal Campaign

Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health for Hastings County, today, called for all-out support of the forthcoming Christmas Seal campaign of the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association.

"The Hastings County Tuberculosis Association is to be congratulated on its initiative in sponsoring such an undertaking," Dr. Cronk stated, "and, as Medical Officer of Health, I believe it will be able to accomplish much in tuberculosis control work in this community. Its efforts will be financed through the sale of Christmas Seals."

Dr. G. S. Cronk said that money from the sale of Christmas Seals is helping to carry on a winning battle against TB all over Canada. He pointed to the fact that the disease has now been reduced from first to seventh place as the cause of all deaths and that, if the work continues as it has in recent years, TB eventually, may be eliminated entirely. Such a goal, however, while in sight, cannot be accomplished unless the public co-operates to the fullest possible extent.

Offer Welcomed

The Hastings County Tuberculosis Association has welcomed the offer of the Provincial Department of Health to hold a mass X-ray survey of Trenton, Deseronto and Belleville and district in 1947. This survey, the costs of which will be substantially under written by Christmas Seal money, will provide a free chest X-ray for everyone in this area with the exception of pre-school children. By examining everyone, it will be possible to determine the existence and extent of TB among our people. Since every new case of tuberculosis springs from an old case of tuberculosis, the survey will enable us to help those who may be infected to get well quickly, and to stop any spread of the disease, which is highly communicable, to others who are healthy," he said.

"Christmas Seal money will also help to pay for health education efforts of the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association, which is working in close co-operation with the Canadian Tuberculosis Association," Dr. Cronk added.

General Distribution

The Seal Sale began November 25th., and will carry through Christmas. Every family in Hastings County and district will receive two dollars worth of Seals. This amount is not intended to set the contribution; any gift, large or small, will be appreciated.

Campaign headquarters for the Seal Sale are at 50 Highland Avenue and, as of Monday, November 25th., will be open from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Compensation Terms of State Rail Plan Earn Considerable Criticism

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 6 (CP) — Transport Minister Barnes announced the compensation terms under his £1,000,000,000 ($4,000,000,000) Railway Nationalization plan, "to put an end to uncertainty" — and brought a financial storm about his head.

"It is nationalization on the cheap," stormed the usually-sedate weekly, The Economist. "It comes very close to legalized expropriation of income rights."

"It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that this scheme .. runs very close to confiscation," said the Sunday Observer.

The government's plan for transport nationalization were set out in a bill presented in the Commons in late November and earlier Mr. Barnes made public the terms of compensation based on London Stock Exchange quotations.

Not Over-Generous

Even the pro-Labor Weekly Tribune, while suggesting the confiscation angle shouldn't be taken too seriously, said the minister's plan "should allay the fears of those who considered the government was being over-generous in compensating nationalized industries."

Mr. Barnes broke new compensation ground in the railway scheme, which will be incorporated in the Inland Transport Nationalization Bill.

Instead of the principle of "net maintainable revenue" which was followed in taking over the coal-mining industry and cable and wireless, the Transport Bill will provide that compensation for railway, canal and London transport undertakings be based on the stock market value of their securities on specified dates.

Value of Securities Set.

Stockholders will receive "such an amount of stock guaranteed by the government as in the opinion of the treasury equal in value at the date of issue" to the average value of their securities from November 1 to November 8 this year or the average mid-monthly quotations for February to July, 1945, if the latter value is higher.

Financial experts have calculated that the four main-line railways will be entitled to slightly more than £1,000,000,000 in government stock. This is about £200,000,000 below the railways' issue capital.

But it is the loss of income revenue to stockholders which has drawn most criticism. The expectation is that the government-guaranteed stock will pay 2½ per cent, giving stockholders some £25,000,000 a year. This compared with the present earnings of £43,000,000 guaranteed by the government to the railways under a wartime agreement; and with actual net revenues of about £33,500,000 during 1938, a poor year.

PHILIPPINE CENSORS BACK FILM

Manila, Dec. 5 — (AP) — Curvaceous Jane Russell lost another battle with the censors — 10,000 miles from Broadway this time — when the Philippine Board of Motion Picture Review today prohibited the showing of her film "The Outlaw."

But the Manila censors, who understood that a lady may have to keep cool on a hot day, were not objecting to her liberal display of charms.

They said the picture shows Billy the Kid remaining alive contrary to fact, and violated the rule that crime can not pay — at least not in the movies.

Boosts Scoring Leadership

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP)—Hugh Barlow of the second-place Hamilton Pats has boosted his scoring leadership of the Ontario Hockey Association senior A group to 4 points over team-mate Murray Comfort, official statistics released yesterday showed.

Tied for third place a point behind are Tom Smelle of the Pats and Dillon Brady of the league-leading Hamilton Tigers.

FISHERMEN FEAR ICE DAMAGE

Wheatley, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Though whitefish are just beginning their spawning run, local pound net fishermen are pulling in their gear, fearful of ice damage.

TRENTON

Statement Shows $36,926 Surplus In Town Revenue

Trenton — Financial interim statement of the Town of Trenton, as at October 31, 1946, presented to the ratepayers on Friday night last, shows total revenue of $241,739.68 and an excess of revenue over expenditures (subject to two months' expenses less sundry receipts of $36,926.25)

The statement says that from the proceeds of the 1946 paving debenture of $100,505.89, there was paid to the contractor $175,590 up to October 31, and that $24,906.89 remained in the bank account for payments on pavements.

General debenture debt is shown as $156,767.12, of which the corporation's share is $146,755.10, and the Public Utilities Commission (waterworks) share is $10,012.02.

For local improvements the town's share of $75,593.60 is only $1,531.62. The Public Utilities (waterworks) share is $39,216.16 and owner's share $34,845.82.

Other debenture items are. Public Utilities (water department) $48,774.10, Public Schools, $107,748.26, and High Schools, $1,663.07. Grand total of all debenture debt is $390,546.15.

There was a substantial reduction in the general debenture debt during the year, and will be others in 1947.

Under the heading of "Revenue" some of the larger items are: tax levy $185,378.42, provincial mill subsidy $3,783.39. Debenture debt charges recovered $15,988.56 appropriated from 1945 surplus, $18,308.98. Unemployment relief grants, $14,216.72. Sundry revenue $2,015.03.

Largest item of expenditure was $68,535.80 for education for the full year which includes debenture debt charges. Others are: debenture debt charges (excepting schools) $31,757.15, protection to persons and property which includes cost of police and fire department administration $36,048.45, public services, library and market $4,215.02, health and sanitation, $11,388.77, highways and streets $16,614.87, parks $2,688.64.

Total corporation assets are $123,782.99. There is reserved for taxes and agreements, $42,974.73. Floating debt surplus is $40,837.83.

On Monday evening, Dec. 2nd., Albert Nancarrow was installed Master of L.O.L. No. 206, Trenton, before a large gathering.

District Master H. L. Ketcheson presided, aided by County Master J. E. Elliott, W. M. Charles Fair, of Wallbridge, and W. Bro. Clifford Reid, Trenton.

Arrangements were completed for the R.A.P. meeting to be held here on Monday, December 9th. A large attendance is expected and several out of town lodge members it is believed will be present.

The officers and members of Colborne Chapter No. 82, Order of the Eastern Star, paid tribute to Sister Ruby Fleming, P.M., P.D.D.G.M., of Trenton, who has brought further honors to the chapter in her recent election as secretary treasurer of the Benevolent Committee of the Grand Chapter of Ontario. This tribute was the gift of a pair of lovely ear-rings. The address and presentation was made by Sister Margaret Lapp, P.M., editor of the Brighton Ensign, at the installation ceremonies at Brighton, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 20.

NAVAL CUSTOMS AND TRADITIONS No: 10

CHRISTMAS AT SEA: All hands enjoy the Navy's memorable Yuletide customs. Every ship that can obtain some evergreen—tree or sprig—fastens it to the masthead. And the youngest rating becomes, theoretically, master of the ship, replacing the real Captain, who discharges his duties for him. Tradition also demands that the Captain personally serve Christmas dinner to the crew!

WEDDINGS

McFARLAND—ELLIS

Trenton.—At three o'clock on the afternoon of Nov. 30, St. George's Anglican Church, Trenton, was the setting for a very pretty wedding when Miss Audrey May Jean Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Ellis, became the bride of Mr. William Gordon McFarland, son of Mrs. Martha McFarland and the late Garnet McFarland, of Frankford, Ont. Rev. A. S. McConnell, M.B.E., performed the ceremony.

The bride made an attractive picture in a gown of white lace, panelled in net, with a sweetheart neckline. Her white floral headdress held a shoulder-length veil, and she carried a bouquet of red roses. Mrs. William Lucas, was her sister's matron-of-honor, wearing a rose taffeta gown with a floral headdress and matching shoulder-length veil.

The bride's brother, Mr. Harry Ellis, performed the duties of groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was made attractive with a color scheme of pink and white featuring "wedding bells".

For a wedding trip to Toronto, the bride dinned a brown tailored suit with matching accessories. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. McFarland will reside at 83 Bay Street, Trenton.

WHITE—BUCK

Trenton.—The Church of Nazarene, Trenton, was the scene recently for a quiet wedding, when Miss Sylvia Marion Buck, daughter of Mrs. F. Buck, became the bride of Mr. Austin Edward White, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward White, all of Trenton, with Rev. C. V. Freeman, pastor of the Missionary Alliance Tabernacle, of Belleville, officiating.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. A. Gainsforth, the bride entered the church to the strains of wedding music played by Mrs. W. Davidson, pianist of the church, looking charming in a gown of ivory satin, featuring a sweetheart neckline and a bouffant skirt; her only ornament being a necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom. Her full length veil of net fell from a headdress of white velvet flowers, and she carried a shower bouquet of red roses and white baby 'mums.

Miss Audrey White, sister of the groom, was very attractive in a gown of pale pink chiffon over silk, with matching veil and headdress. She carried pink carnations and 'mums.

Mr. Douglas Buck, the bride's youngest brother, was groomsman, and the ushers were Messrs Harold Buck and Robert White.

For a reception at the bride's home, Mrs. Buck wore an ensemble of black and white with a corsage of mauve 'mums, the groom's mother assisting in a gold-colored gown with brown accessories and a corsage of red roses. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. R. Crowder, pastor of the Church of Nazerene, to which the groom responded.

Mr. and Mrs. White left on the evening train for a short honeymoon in Toronto. After their return they will take up residence in Trenton.

Guests of honor for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Young, grandparents of the groom, who recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

WEDDING BELLS WILL RING DEC. 9

Rt. Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, Governor-General of Malaya and former British high commissioner, is shown with his bride-to-be, Mrs. Audrey Fellowes Rowley of Ottawa, shortly after his arrival at Rockcliffe Airport. The wedding will take place in Ottawa on Dec. 9. The bride-to-be, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenyon Fellowes of Ottawa, will become First Lady of Malaya.

Women's Activities

The November meeting of Pine Grove W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. C. Ross on Nov. 28.

Mrs. H. Coulter president, opened the meeting with the Institute Ode followed by The Lord's Prayer, and community singing.

Roll call, was answered by giving different uses for corn.

The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance on hand.

It was decided to send one dollar per members to the Adelaide Hoodless Foundation Fund and the sum of $10 is to be donated to the Welfare Work of C.A.S., Belleville.

It was also decided to give a gift of one dollar to each new baby in this Institute Community.

Mrs. Tanner and Mrs. Ross were named as a committee to purchase folding chairs.

Sympathy was expressed for Mrs. F. Lough, who is ill.

Mrs. F. Finkle invited the Institute to her home for the Christmas meeting, Dec. 27. "Current Events" was given by Mrs. J. Marshall.

Mrs. Tanner, convener of Home Economics, gave a splendid paper on that topic, telling of many new and useful fabrics on the market now. She read a most interesting articles entitled, "A Dream House".

A contest on "Soap" was conducted. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction, after which refreshments were served.

WEST HUNTINGDON W.M.S.

The November meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of St. Andrew's Church at West Huntingdon was held in the evening, the ladies serving supper to the members and adherents of the church, after which they met in the auditorium for the regular meeting of the W.M.S. and Ladies' Aid.

The president opened the meeting with a poem entitled, "Begin Today" followed by a hymn, and prayer by the minister, Rev. R. H. V. Walker. The Scripture Lesson was read by Mrs. Donald Haggerty. An excellent paper was prepared and read by Mrs. J. McInroy on the key work "Grace".

The business period included the election of officers for 1947, conducted by Mr. Walker with the following results:

AIKENS' W.M.S.

The December meeting of Aikens' W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. S. Westover. The Christmas theme was emphasized throughout the program which was planned by Mrs. H. Hamilton, Mrs. W. Hamilton, Mrs. H. Hubble and Mrs. P. Hamilton.

For opening the meeting Mrs. H. Hamilton conducted a responsive worship service, entitled "The Promise Fulfilled", telling the Christmas story in Scripture selections and carol singing. Mr. Hillis led in prayer and the Bible lesson, Isaiah 9: 2-7 was read by Mrs. O. Pearson.

A story, "The Christmas Box", read by Mrs. S. Westover, was a true account written by a pastor's wife, of great need at a Christmas season: of that need ministered to through church members in a distant city, restoring faltering faith in God. "Silent Night" was sung as a solo by Mrs. P. Hamilton.

"Making a Christmas List" was the title of a reading given by Mrs. H. Hamilton. It was a challenge to put Christ at the head of the Christmas list of friends and to give Him a Birthday gift.

Mrs. E. Hubble, president, took charge of the business at this point. She began by using a reading entitled "No Time For God?" A warped soul could be the only result of such a life. Mrs. Hubble thanked the hostess and the members of the program committee. Mrs. P. Hamilton reported $14 raised by the Mission Band and Mrs. U. Parry reported 18 members of the Baby Band with $7.60. Master Gordon Hamilton then received the W.M.S. offering.

The election of officers for 1947 was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Hillis from the slate of officers presented by Mrs. L. Grills, convenor of the Nominating Committee.

The final service was a candle-lighting ceremony in charge of Mrs. H. Hubble, assisted by Mrs. F. Moon, Mrs. W. Bush, and Mrs. L. Grills speaking for women of India, and Mrs. G. Denike for the women of Canada. Candles were lighted about a globe, light falling upon India and Canada; the speakers emphasizing what knowledge of Jesus had already accomplished and the challenge of things still to be achieved. Two carols were used in this ceremony. The meeting was closed with the use of the Watchword—"Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit said the Lord. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it."

Mrs. Westover served dainty refreshments.

BRIDGE ST. EVENING AUX.

The December meeting of the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary of Bridge Street Church, took place on December 3, at a quarter to six o'clock p.m., in the Sunday School room. This was the Christmas meeting, and an exceptionally large number of members enjoyed a hot supper provided by Mrs. Richard Arnott's group.

After supper the meeting continued with the singing of Christmas carols led by Mrs. K. Bird, reaching an effective climax in the quiet beauty of "Silent Night". During the business period, the President, Mrs. R. Morden, made three important announcements. First, the C.G.I.T. annual Christmas Vesper Service will be held in the Baptist Church. Secondly, the Baby Band Christmas Party is to be held one afternoon in the near future when every mother in the congregation who has a child up to five years is invited to be present. And another shipment of handmade lace from a native pastor in India has arrived.

The nominating committee brought in its recommendations for officers for the coming year and their report was adopted.

Christmas Play Enjoyed

Miss Irene Grills, in charge of the program for the evening, made a few helpful remarks about the play which was to follow and asked Miss K. Daly to assist in creating the atmosphere of Christmas by reading from the Bible the ever delightful story of the coming of the three Wise Men to pay homage to the Christ Child. Miss Grills then spoke of the play, saying that it was taken from "The Man Born to be King" by Dorothy L. Sayers, and was entitled "Kings of Judaea". Miss Sayers had spent two years writing it for BBC, and it has been transcribed and broadcast over the CBC network recently. The play was then carried through in the form of a broadcast, the voices coming to the listeners from behind an appropriate setting of a radio, a Christmas tree and two lighted candles.

There were four scenes, each introduced by a short Scripture reading. The first scene took place in Jerusalem at the Court of King Herod, portraying the breaking of the news of the birth of the Christ Child. The second was in a shepherd's cottage near Bethlehem where Mary and Joseph and the Infant Jesus had taken refuge. To this cottage came the three kings of the Orient, bringing precious gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. The third scene was in the tent of the three kings, where they discussed their visit to Bethlehem and the wonder that was filling their hearts. The fourth scene went back to the Court of King Herod in Jerusalem, where, on receipt of a message from the three kings telling of their loyalty to this Babe, Herod makes his wicked plans and sends forth an edict that all male children of two years and under are to be slain, forgetting in his anger and jealously that you can slay the dreamer but you cannot slay the dream.

The play was brought to a dramatic close with a very simple prayer by the president, in harmony with the spirit of the evening.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I Guess You Will Just Have To Be Patient, Cathy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have read many times about girls who have written to lovelorn columns, asking how they should go about meeting nice fellows. The advice usually given is: go to dances, join church organizations, obtain a position in a company where there are plenty of men, go to classes and meet veterans, etc.

Now, suppose we take the case of my girl friends and myself. We are young, normal, fun-loving girls who have our share of dates for a while and then, either the fellows we are dating get too serious, or we lose interest and break off with them. Then comes a stretch where you have to meet some new fellows and that is where our problem comes in.

Naturally, if you have a good job, you just don't change it for the opportunity to meet men. We all belong to church organizations and go to church every week, but nowadays it seems that fellows are not interested in church meetings. As far as going to dances are concerned, the fellows you meet there usually turn out to be wolves. And you just can't pick someone up on the subway going to work, or off the street.

I hope you don't get the impression we have set our standards too high, but we do like a fellow to be fairly intelligent and interesting. I think this is a problem of many girls today, don't you?

"Cathy"

This is not only a problem of girls today, Cathy, but it has been a problem of girls for years past. And I think that the modern girl has less of a problem in this direction than those who lived before her. How do you suppose your grandmother or great-grandmother, and those women still further back, met men, when they couldn't go to all the places you girls go to, or mingle with men on the free-and-easy basis current today? Yet they managed, all right. Maybe they were just more resourceful than you modern girls.

If you are already taking an active part in organizations and other groups where boys and girls meet and have good times together, then I think about all you can do is to keep on with your present program and wait until some new boys turn up, as they are bound to, sooner or later.

Time, And a Little Effort on Your Part, Will Fix You Up "Moe"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a guy who has been in love for a year. Some time ago, things started to break up between me and my girl. I thought I could forget her by going out with the fellows, but no go.

Have you a cure for a guy who is always thinking about the past and that "certain girl?"

"Just Moe"

Certainly there's a cure for anybody in your situation, Moe. The cure is, instead of just "going out with fellows," look around for another girl. Or, rather, take a lot of girls out and have good times with them. You probably won't believe it, but, if you make up your mind to carry through such a program, even when it seems as though you still keep thinking of the past, you will find that your unhappy experience will gradually lose its power to disturb you and, eventually, will lose it altogether.

You won't necessarily forget this girl, but you certainly won't go on mourning her loss. After a time, you will probably find yourself wondering what you ever saw in the girl anyhow. It may be disillusioning, but somehow that is just the way life works.

However, you must be patient and do something besides concentrating on the experience you are trying to forget.

He Is Ten Years Older Than She is — Is that Too Old?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 19 years of age and in love with a fellow who is ten years older than I am. I met him seven months ago and, since then, neither of us has gone with anyone else. He says he loves me and I believe him.

What I want to know is, do you think 10 years is too big a difference between us? My parents like him but want to discourage me because of his age.

"S. M. N."

Differences of this sort, between the ages of a young woman and man, become less important as people grow older. For example, if this man were 39 and you were 29, I would say there was probably no reason at all for you to hesitated.

But, since you are 10 years younger than 29, and even though this man is 10 years younger than 39, I am not so sure. It is all a matter of maturity, and 19 and 29 are not usually as congenial as 29 and 30 might be. On the other hand, it may be that you are a more mature 19 than the average girl and your young man may be a very young 29, in which case it would not be surprising if you had the same interests and points of view.

If I were you, I think I would not be in a hurry to make up my mind to marry this young man. If you are truly in harmony together, your congeniality will probably grow as the days go on and, if the opposite is the case, that will show up, too. So give yourself a little time and see if things don't become clear. If your parents realize that you are a congenial twosome, their objections will most likely disappear.

There is Safety in Numbers, "Unhappy Vet"—You're Not Ready For Love, Yet

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a 21-year-old discharged war veteran. While I was overseas I wrote to five different girls. Since I've been home I have taken these girls out at different times. The girls have put me on a tower so high that I feel if I would try to get down I would hurt them.

My problem is, how should I go about finding the one girl of the five that I truly love and, when I do find out, should I explain to her about the other four that I've been dating regularly while she thought I was only dating her?

"Unhappy Vet."

I think perhaps you are taking your problem a little more seriously than necessary. If you have to ask me how to find out which one of five girls you are in love with, then my answer is that you are not in love with any of them.

Why should you try to force yourself to make up your mind at this time? It seems to me it would be much smarter for you to keep on going out with these girls, and perhaps some others, too, until you meet some girl with whom you are sure you are in love.

Have you been telling one of these girls that she is the only one you love? Is that why you are worrying about having to explain to some particular girl among them that you were taking out four other girls? If you have done this, you have been pretty foolish. But if you haven't, it is no girl's business how many other young women you take out.

You do as I suggest, and have a lot of fun with a lot of girls. There is safety in numbers, and when you fall in love, you'll know it.

How to Acknowledge Wedding Gifts

Dear Miss Fairfax:

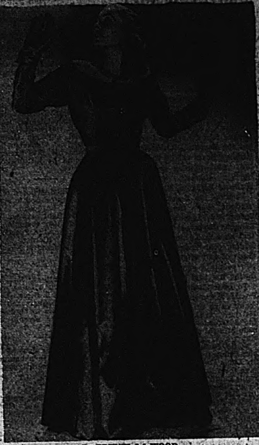
Would you please tell me the proper form to use when writing a thank-you note for a wedding gift? Should I mention the name of the gift, etc.?

"A Bride"

The thank-you should be written on a sheet of note paper—not a folded visiting card—and in your own handwriting. If possible, write each acknowledgement on the day the present arrives. If you know the giver well, address her as, for instance, "Dearest Eleanor"; a more formal note would of course be to "Dear Mrs. Jones." In thanking a married couple, address the wife, but thank both. Word the letter as if the gift belonged equally to your husband, although technically all gifts belong to the bride.

Yes, of course mention the gift, stating briefly and enthusiastically how useful it will be to you and how much you and your husband will enjoy it.

Gown for a Great Occasion



By PRUNELLA WOOD

ANYONE with an eye to fashion can see that this beautiful satin evening gown deserves a great occasion; what's not visible to the eye is that a notable occasion inspired it. Hattie Carnegie, its designer, has a passion for music and owns a big collection of records. Listening to a preview pressing of Boston Symphony's stirring recording of "Semper Fidelis," and learning that it would be the billionth Victor record put out, Hattie then and there decided to design a dress to adorn the occasion brilliantly.

This mink beige satin robe de style, with off-shoulder neckline and starry embroideries of brown sequins and topaz baquettes, is the model. It will adorn any great occasion.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Includes Stepsons in Her Sympathy-Appreciation Notes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband died recently, leaving two sons twelve and fourteen, who are my stepsons and who live with me. Our friends were most kind in sending flowers and messages of sympathy, and I would like to write personal notes of appreciation, as you always advise should be done. When I write these notes should I include the boys' thanks? If so, how . . . should I have them sign the notes also?

Widow.

Yes, in your notes of thanks you should include the appreciation of your two stepsons. Include this expression of thanks in the body of the notes, not in the signature, for only you should sign the notes. For example:

Dear Mrs. Robbins,

The boys and I thank you for the beautiful chrysanthemums you sent to my husband's funeral, and for your kind message of sympathy. Your friendly thoughts were a deep comfort to us.

Sincerely,
Janet Brown

Dinner Party to Celebrate Wedding Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My husband and I are to celebrate our Thirtieth Wedding Anniversary by giving a large dinner party. On the invitations, is it improper to request a reply?

2. Would it be out of place for the butler to receive the guests and present them to me?

3. Is it proper to have a wedding cake? If so, should my husband and I cut it together?

4. The thirtieth wedding anniversary is the "pearl" anniversary. But would it be proper for me to suggest silver?

5. If the guests present gifts as they arrive, how should I accept them? And how should I go about showing the gifts, and when?

6. Should my husband and I make a speech? If so, what kind?

B. E.

1. Although, on formal dinner invitations, it is not considered proper to request a reply, nowadays, when people are so careless about answering invitations promptly, "R.s.v.p." is sometimes added. Or in notes of invitation you might write, "Please tell me if you and Bob can be with us on the tenth." Or you may do what many of today's hostesses do: telephone your invitations so that you can get your reply at that time, and send "reminder" cards or notes to those who accept, stating again the day, date, hour, place.

2. The butler opens the front door for arriving guests, and when the guests have left their wraps in the rooms assigned and have returned to the entrance of the living-room, he may announce the guests to you. If he recognizes the guests, he announces the wife's name first, then her husband's. If not, he asks, "What name, please?" and announces either "Mrs. Smith" and then "Mr. Smith," or "Mr. and Mrs. Smith."

3. Yes, an important feature of a wedding anniversary party is the anniversary cake; white cake with white frosting, usually with dates (1916-1946), and initials of couple. The first piece is cut by you, the "bride," and shared with your husband, the "bridegroom."

4. No. Such an arbitrary change of symbols would, I should think, cause much unpleasant comment.

5. Thanks the guests as they hand their gifts to you. But since at that moment of receiving your guests, you will be too busy to open the gifts, wait until after dinner, then as you open each gift, thank for it and comment enthusiastically about it in general and about certain special features. (Then, in a day or two, write a follow-up note of thanks.)

6. Since there will undoubtedly be toasts proposed to you and your husband, your husband would express thanks for you and himself. Or, if you wish, either of you may say some words of welcome to your guests, thank them for coming and speaking of the occasion.

Fashion Flashes

A FLASH of color does much to lighten a murky winter day. So cheers for a delightful coat of bright blue wool jersey fleece-lined in sharp red rayon crepe. High closing below small club collar. Wide sleeves with turn-back cuffs above a raglan shoulder, and curved, slanting pocket flaps.

SUBDUED is this season's glitter, but it is handled with impressive taste and elegance. To wear with a street-length or long skirt to make a beautiful suit is a cardigan bolero of American broadtail. In black, it is worked with a window-pane plaid design in jet, each block centred with jet beaded roses.

KEEP OUT blustery winds with a turban. A new, smart turban is of royal blue wool jersey. It encases the head with a twisted piece of the fabric terminating in two ends which are adjusted through jewelled side rings. Back is worn snood-fashion or draped to suit.

IT'S PLEASANT to review coming fashions, especially when Spring clothes are shown on a dull Winter's day. An advance suit is of gray flannel softly striped in lemon yellow, a nice color scheme. Hip-length, fitted jacket has a cardigan neckline with a keyhole detail above the high-placed two-button closing. Similar closing at waistline. Big patch pockets use horizontal stripes. Skirt has box-pleat in front and back.

New Soapless VEL
Makes Suds Old Fashioned

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Have you tried soapless VEL yet? It's the newest thing in washing helps. Over a million dollars have been spent in developing this new cleanser. It does everything that any good soap will do—yet it is not soap and doesn't act like soap.

OUTCLEANS—OUTLASTS SOAP SUDS

When you add warm—or even cool water to VEL, it forms light, billowy suds instantly. But just like a frothy drink, the bubbly foam soon subsides, leaving a clear solution that cuts grease and lifts out dirt in double-quick time.

WATER STAYS CLEAR

Unlike the cloudy, milky-white water which soap produces, VEL keeps the water almost transparent so that you can see what you are doing . . . see the things you are washing. A teaspoonful or so of VEL in the dishpan quickly dissolves grease making that inevitable chore of dishwashing less tedious. VEL contains no soap so leaves no soapy scum—makes china and glassware sparkle so that drying is unnecessary.

VEL LIFTS OUT DIRT

VEL literally lifts out the dirt from soiled clothes and deposits it at the bottom of basin or wash tub. Lack of suds has nothing to do with VEL's new and scientific cleansing action, so don't contrast it with soap products. You need have no fear of VEL's effect on colours or fabrics for it's a mild gentle cleanser which is as safe for woolens and nylons as it is for the weekly family wash.

WONDERFUL FOR FLOORS—WOODWORK

For the speedy removal of greasy dirt from floors, walls and woodwork, just put about a tablespoonful or two of soapless VEL in a pail and add hot or warm water. You'll find VEL makes hard rubbing and rinsing unnecessary.

THOROUGHLY TESTED

My own rigid tests with soapless VEL prove that it's foolish to cling to old-fashioned ideas about suds. And don't think VEL is just a temporary substitute for soap. It has a permanent place of its own in every home.

"VEL" is a registered trademark of the COLGATE-PALMOLIVE-PEET CO. LTD.

Transportation Troubles Keep N.H.L. Clubs on Move To Fill Their Several Dates

If Coal Strike Continues in U. S. Some Teams May Have to Use Dog Sleds

By JACK MITCHELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Dog sleds remained one of the few modes of conveyance still untested today by National Hockey League teams kept on the hop by efforts to crack the narrowing transportation bottleneck. Given a good track and a fair wind, the boys may yet have to try mushing.

With the United States coal strike throwing train schedules further out of kilter, two instances in the last few days emphasized the hazards of orthodox travel between the six cities. One club started out by train and finished by autobus, another changed from rail to air in mid-journey.

Toronto Maple Leafs, returning home yesterday after Wednesday night's 2-2 draw with the Bruins at Boston, traded their train tickets in for a private bus when it was discovered a five-hour layover faced them at Buffalo, N.Y. Even then, the boys got home late for dinner, the trip taking 20 hours in all.

The Chicago Black Hawks switched from rail to aircraft at Windsor a day earlier when they found themselves returning too late from a 4-1 pasting by Montreal Canadiens Tuesday night to fill a home date the following night.

The Hawks made it. That was the night they finally cracked a three-game losing streak, featured by a memorable 11-0 trimming by Toronto, and played a scoreless deadlock with the fourth-place Detroit Red Wings.

While most of the clubs turned to air travel during the war years, manager Conn Smythe says he intends to put all his Maple Leafs in one basket only as a last resort. If upset train schedules threaten to wreck the schedules, the team will turn to buses and then perhaps aircraft, he said last night. But no more than six men would be sent in one plane.

If the underlying reason seems a little callous, just think what an accident could do to a hockey team. The Leafs rebuilt a team that finished fifth last season into a top-place outfit and they hope to keep it that way.

With no games scheduled until Saturday, all six teams get a chance to nurse their wounds from Wednesday night's three-game card.

The only Saturday night game finds the third-place Bruins scheduled for a return match at Toronto with the Leafs, one point behind the leading Montreal Canadiens with two games in hand. Sunday night, they all get back into action again.

Toronto goes on to Detroit to meet the Red Wings; Montreal visits Chicago and the Bruins return home to take on New York Rangers.

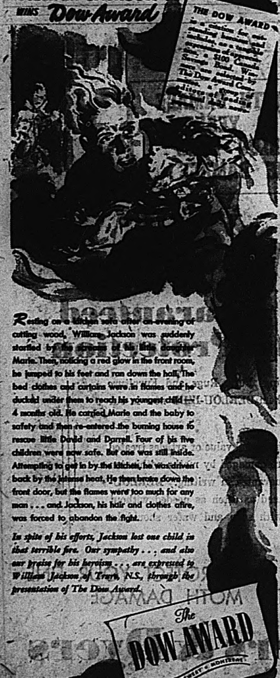
CLOTHES AND HAIR AFIRE, FATHER BATTLES BLAZE IN HEROIC RESCUE ATTEMPT

WILLIAM JACKSON wins Dow Award



Resting on a kitchen sofa after an evening of cutting wood, William Jackson was suddenly startled by the screams of his little daughter Marie. Then, noticing a red glow in the front room, he jumped to his feet and ran down the hall. The bed clothes and curtains were in flames and he ducked under them to reach his youngest child — 4 months old. He carried Marie and the baby to safety and then re-entered the burning house to rescue little David and Darrell. Four of his five children were now safe. But one was still inside. Attempting to get in by the kitchen, he was driven back by the intense heat. He then broke down the front door, but the flames were too much for any man . . . and Jackson, his hair and clothes afire, was forced to abandon the fight.

In spite of his efforts, Jackson lost one child in that terrible fire. Our sympathy . . . and also our praise for his heroism . . . are expressed to William Jackson of Truro, N.S., through the presentation of The Dow Award.

ANGLING, GAME RESOURCES TO BE ON SOUND BASIS

Probably Will Establish 100,000-Acre Wood Lot in Lanark County

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Extensive development of angling and game resources in Eastern Ontario are being worked out by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, W. Z. Steele, district forester of nine Eastern Ontario townships, told the Royal Commission on Forestry at its hearing here yesterday.

The touring commission headed by Maj.-Gen. Howard Kennedy, is holding a three-day sitting in Ottawa.

"With the amalgamation of the Department of Fish and Game with that of Lands and Forests, we are in the midst of extensive reorganization," Mr. Steele said. He discussed economic use of farmers' woodlots in the Ottawa district and advocated formation of an organization which would be run on a co-operative basis. This would give the farmer a better price on lumber than he now received.

A county forest of 100,000 acres could be established in nearby Lanark county, he added. Much of the land was no good for farming but would be suitable for trees.

Complaints against fires started by blueberry pickers were lodged by A. E. Blair, secretary of Lanark reforestation committee, who said fires had frequently been set by the pickers but no prosecutions had resulted since they could escape apprehension so easily.

Immediate Inquiry

Gen. Kennedy advised immediate investigation of blueberry pickers' fires and speedy prosecution.

John Fulton of Lanark complained that the price ceiling on pulpwood was out of line with that on lumber and urged formation of a co-operative to sell farmers' wood at a fair price.

James W. Paterson, woods operations manager of E. B. Eddy Company, said his company would be glad to furnish farmers with information about pulpwood prices at any time.

"There are 300,000 acres of actual and potential forest land in Lanark county. If this area was even half managed it could provide our Hull mill with half the supply of pulpwood needed to operate it annually."

A. W. MacCallum, forest pathologist of the Federal Agriculture Department, presented a brief showing that 750,000,000 cords of wood were destroyed annually in Canada by fungi and tree diseases. He reviewed the work which had been done by the department in prevention and control of white pine blister rust and Dutch elm disease. The latter had spread over a wide area of Quebec and he feared it would cross the Ontario border in a few years.

Phillies Offer $150,000 For Enos Slaughter

Philadelphia, Dec. 6 (AP)—The Philadelphia Inquirer reported today it has learned that Philadelphia Phillies have offered $150,000 for Enos Slaughter, star outfielder of the World's Champion St. Louis Cardinals.

The newspaper said President Bob Carpenter of the resurgent Phillies has offered Sam Breadon, President of the Cardinals, either a straight cash deal or one involving cash and Phils' outfielder Ron Northey.

Both Carpenter and Breadon are attending the major-minor confab at Los Angeles.

New York, Dec. 6 —(CP)— A survey of 87 leading colleges in the United States shows football attendance up 48 per cent over last year and with the turnstiles due to click in at least a score of post-season bowl games a new high in American gridiron history is forecast . . . Michigan, with an attendance of 514,579 at its Ann Arbor, Mich., stadium, led all United States colleges and on the basis of their reported gross of $1,121,000, big time college football drew well over $22,000,000 at the box office — bowl games still to come . . . The University of Pennsylvania was the only other team to crash the 500,000 attendance mark in seven games at Franklin Field, Philadelphia . . . Many colleges reported their best seasons in history . . . Biggest spurt was in the Southern States where attendance jumped 58 per cent.

Hoof Beats.

Trainer Max Hirsch says that 1947 definitely will be the last season of racing for Assault, the triple-crown champion of the three-year-olds voted yesterday as the "horse of the year" in a country-wide poll of sports writers . . . The veteran trainer says Owner Robert J. Kleberg, Jr., plans to retire the Texas-born son of Bold Venture to stud after the 1947 season but first wants Assault to take a crack at equalling Whirlaway's all-time winnings record of $561,161 . . . With $119,716 still to go to catch up, Hirsch plans to take Assault to the west coast in March for the $100,000 Santa Anita . . . Of course, there's still a horse named Stymie with $516,285 in earnings behind him and Stymie is far from the glue factory.

Odds and Ends.

Freddie Fitzsimmons has been named general manager of the Brooklyn football Dodgers of the All-American Conference . . . Fitzsimmons, former manager of the baseball Philadelphia Phillies and for many years a leading hurler with the New York Giants and Brooklyn, will be in command of the front office and operations on the field . . . Marcel Cerdan, the French middleweight who makes his American debut against Georgie Abrams in the Garden tonight, had his French title vacated by a Vichy government edict and regained it the same way when Germany was defeated . . . After the Nazis overran France the French boxing commission ordered Sailor Cerdan to defend his crown against Jose Ferrer, the Spanish champion—the Frenchman belted him out in short order and then took off for North Africa to the great indignation of the Nazis . . . So they declared his title vacant and he didn't regain it until the Germans were out of France.

Horses Temperamental?

Charles W. Howard, an official of an airline which will go in for ferrying horses, says thoroughbreds take to the air well and do not suffer from air-sickness and nervousness that spoils flying for many humans . . . "Only only once did a horse, finding himself aloft, not like it," Howard pointed out . . . "The horse started thrashing about but someone aboard who understood horses quieted him down before the plane was wrecked. The horse fell down and so the fellow sat on his head. That wasn't so comfortable for 10½ hours but it saved the ship."

HARVEY BENNET LEADING GOALIE AMERICAN LOOP

Hershey Bears in Position in League Due Entirely to Fine Netminder

(By The Canadian Press)

Other American Hockey League teams have goal scorers, but the Eastern Division-leading Hershey Bears choose to rely on the goal-stopping qualities of Harvey Bennett, 21-year-old goalie of Edington, Sask.

Leading the Bears to a 6-0 shutout over the hometown Springfield Indians last night, Bennett displayed the qualities that have made him the league's leading goal-tender with an average of only slightly more than two counts a game against him during his first year as a pro.

To back Bennet at the net, Frankie Mario and Armand Gaudreault came through with two Hershey tallies apiece while Lloyd Grondahl and Pete Barbado brought the Bears' count to six.

Eddie Bush's tally two minutes before the end of play saved St. Louis Flyers from defeat and gave them a 3-3 tie with Indianapolis Capitals on the Caps' home ice in the only other league fixture last night.

Eddie Olson and Pat McCreavey cut down a 3-0 Caps' lead on counts by Cliff Simpson, Enio Sclisizzi and Steve Wochy but without Bush's score Stam Louis still would have gone under 3-2.

N.Y. Yankees Make Big Trade With Cleveland

Los Angeles, Dec. 6 (AP)—New York Yankees today traded two pitchers and outfielder Hal Peck to the Cleveland Indians for second baseman Ray Mack and a catcher in the biggest deal so far of the winter baseball meetings.

The Yanks gave up Peck, formerly of the Athletics and who batted .247 in 48 games this year, and Al Gettel, right-hander who won 6 and lost 7 this year, and Gene Beardon, southpaw who was with Oakland, Calif., in the 1946 season.

In exchange the Indians sent to New York Mack, who hit .205 in 61 games this year and catcher Sherman Lollar, who was batting champion of the International League in 1945.

This year Lollar was in 28 games for the Indians, then was optioned to Baltimore where he hit a .242 average.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

"Slammin'" Sammy Snead, British Open champion, took a two-stroke lead yesterday in the $10,000 Miami Open golf tournament with a five-under-par 65 over the 6,310-yard Miami Springs golf course.

At London, Ont., yesterday, Prof. Nelson C. Hart, secretary of the Canadian Olympic Committee, said it was unlikely the International Olympic Committee would bar a Canadian hockey team from the 1948 games, tho' there would be justification for such a move.

Britain's Boxing Board of Control yesterday refused to approve a proposed European middleweight title fight between Vince Hawkins, British champion, and Marcel Cerdan, the French 160-pound king. Cerdan opens a United States stand at New York tonight.

Two Williamsport, Pa., hunters, kept up their winning streaks this year. Grant L. Street shot his 24th deer in 25 years and Ruth Wilson, who likes to hunt alone, knocked off her seventh in as many years.

Toronto Huskies downed Chicago Stags 65-61 in a basketball Association of America game at Chicago yesterday.

Chicago White Sox yesterday announced signing of Charlie (Red) Ruffing, former New York Yankee great as a pitcher and pinch hitter.

Would Have Effect

Chrysler Corporation officials said the shutdown of parent automobile companies in the U. S. would have a noticeable effect on the Canadian plants. At Windsor's large automobile parts manufacturing plants, a spokesman said they would be forced to close their factories if the car manufacturers ceased operations.

National employment service officials at Ottawa said the coal strike has not affected industries in the Ottawa area so far but they are "watching the situation closely." At Montreal the Canadian Manufacturers' Association said their office had not received any reports of layoffs in the Montreal area.

In Niagara Falls, Ont., industrial leaders yesterday attempted to determine how long they can maintain production schedules if the strike should be prolonged. The majority of the large industries in this district depend on shipments of raw materials from the U.S.

Reduce Train Crews

Officials of the Canadian National Railways at London, Ont., said the embargo may lead to a reduction of train crews at Sarnia from 33 to five. Canadian Pacific Railway officials at London said it was too early to gauge the possible number of layoffs in its area.

Officials of three companies at Peterboro, said the embargo might seriously have temporary crippling effect on their plants if shipments of materials were delayed too long. When manager Ian M. McRae of the Canadian General Electric Company said so far the plant has not been hit by the strike but by the end of the week "it may be different."

Hugh Campbell, president of the Outboard Marine Company, said orders were being held up by lack of material, several shipments having been delayed in Detroit. He did not expect there would be any large layoffs at the plant for the next two or three weeks.

St. Thomas reported that passenger train service on U. S. railway branch lines have already been cut 25 per cent and that a reduction of another 25 per cent is expected today.

At Kingston, one company which has been exporting to Europe via New York is considering shipping via Saint John, N.B., although the rate is higher.

Mishearing Gives Incorrect Report Attlee Remarks

London, Dec. 5 —(AP)— The Press Association said today a "mishearing" of a statement by Prime Minister Attlee in the House of Commons yesterday was responsible for an incorrect report that the two atomic bombs were dropped on Japan after the Japanese had offered to surrender.

The association, which distributes its reports to most British newspapers and to various news agencies operating in the United Kingdom, dispatched a correction story to editors explaining:

"Owing to a mishearing of a reply by the Prime Minister to a question in the House of Commons yesterday, the impression was conveyed by our report that Japan had made a peace offer before the first atomic bomb was dropped.

"Mr. Attlee's statement was that the first atomic bomb was dropped on Aug. 6 and that the offer of peace made to Japan by the Potsdam Declaration on July 26 was not accepted until Aug. 10."

The correct version of the Prime Minister's statement, The Press Association declared, was:

"The decision in principle to use atomic weapons against Japan was taken at the beginning of July, 1945, and the first bomb was dropped Aug. 6. The offer of peace made to Japan by the Potsdam Declaration on July 26 was not accepted until Aug. 10."

The earlier Press Association account of what the Prime Minister said was:

"Mr. Attlee, answering Mr. (Thomas L.) Horabin(an independent member of parliament) said the decision to use the atomic weapon against Japan was taken at the beginning of July, 1945. The first atomic bomb was dropped on Aug 6, and the offer of peace made by Japan on July 22 was not accepted until Aug. 10."

Mr. Horabin announced today he planned to ask the Prime Minister in the House of Commons "when the first overtures for peace were received from Japan." He said he would put the question at the first opportunity.

That Cold, Calculating Man, Cripps, Showing Signs of Becoming Popular

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 5 (CP)—In the uttermost recesses of Whitehall where political gossip is distilled, an amazing rumor is going the rounds—that Sir Stafford Cripps is becoming popular.

Sir Stafford, thin, cold and blunt, is president of the Board of Trade, the prophet of high thinking and lean living, the butt of cartoonists and music hall comics who quip at the "Crippsian planning" supposed to be behind the controls which Britain still bears.

He gives the impression of a man who doesn't expect to be liked but will do his duty.

Sir Stafford is supposed to oppress British business with his regulations and controls, his insistence on goods for export, and his delight in socialist achievements. But after a year of Labor Government in which Cripps' doleful predictions of other years were remembered many businessmen feel that although their lot is hard enough with Cripps it might have been harder with a confirmed optimist who let the supply and production situation get completely out of hand.

As for the ordinary man, he has jested at Sir Stafford's mannerisms for so long that he probably has come to like him. Sir Stafford may not be popular among some Labor supporters but he is respected as a clear thinker, a veteran of public life, a scourge of the Conservative opposition.

If Sir Stafford is becoming popular the Labor leadership scene may be changed. He is not even a member of the cabinet of 18 where top level decisions are made under the chairmanship of Mr. Attlee. But if any one of the 18 dropped out, the former Lord Privy Seal, Minister of Aircraft Production, British Ambassador to Russia, authority on Indian affairs and Solicitor-General could slip up gently to replace him.

Cripps is 57, six years younger than Attlee, a year younger than Morrison, eight years younger than Bevin.

Talk of him being Prime Minister in the future is expected by Whitehall gossips soon to develop again.

Myriads of Toys Brighten Christmas; Best Supply Since 1941 Seen

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—If it be true that children's Christmas-morning faces are the most important item of the big day, this ought to be the merriest Christmas in years.

For the bravest array of toys since 1941 is ready to make the younger generation's eyes pop this Dec. 25, a Prices Board survey of the toy shops shows. And junior, accustomed to makeshift wartime substitutes, may well be overwhelmed.

Such articles as skates, construction sets, bicycles and metal wagons not on the market last year will be in some quantity, the board reports. There will also be electric trains—if dad gives junior a chance to use them.

Other items in good supply are toy trucks, fire engines, cars, steam rollers, scooters, airplanes, tricycles and kiddy cars. For little girls there will be lots of pianos, cradles, electric irons, dishes and laundry sets.

Ceiling prices on all toys have been removed, with the prospect of somewhat higher prices than prevailed in 1941.

The Christmas tree will be better-dressed than usual. More tree decorations will be available than at any time during the war, except lights, since the Dominion is not receiving her usual large supply from Japan.

Other miscellaneous items covered in the board's survey follow:

Gift Wrapping Paper—Supplies are much better.

Christmas Cards—A "very liberal" supply of cards at prices from five cents to a dollar. The more expensive cards are making their first post-war appearance.

Stationery—Prospects are good for an adequate supply of social stationery.

Criticizes Sending Of Immature Boys To Rugged Bushland

Kapuskasing, Dec. 6 — (CP)— Magistrate E.R. Tucker criticized employment service officers and employment agents for sending "immature boys from the city without either physical or mental stamina" into Ontario's rugged bushland as bush workers when he dealt Wednesday with the case of George Ascot, 20, of Windsor.

Ascot pleaded guilty to charges of breaking and entering. He said he came here about 10 days ago to work in the bush but could not do the work. He had no money and came to Kapuskasing where he attempted to break into a garage.

The Magistrate told accused:— "As your father is apparently willing to pay your fare back to your home in Windsor, I am releasing you on suspended sentence for a term of one year."

Russian Criticism Of MacArthur Seen New Russian Campaign

Tokyo, Dec. 5. (AP)—Blunt Russian press criticism of Gen. MacArthur was regarded in informed quarters today as the start of a new Russian propaganda campaign against occupation policies in Japan with the supreme commander for the first time under direct fire.

Official comment was not available, but some sources saw a planned timing between an article in Red Star yesterday and an intensified Left-Wing propaganda campaign within Japan coinciding with Winter and the restlessness of the unemployed.

Kilt Question Stirs Highlanders At Calgary

Calgary, Dec. 5 — (CP)—Calgary Highlanders are not going to be stripped of their kilts without a battle, Col. D. K. Robertson, commanding officer, declared last night.

"And they're the fighters," commented Norman Dingle, former commanding officer.

These remarks were the result of the latest "kilt crisis." Army headquarters has ordered kilts will be purchased from public funds only for bandsmen. There is nothing to prevent other members from buying their own kilts for ceremonial occasions such as church parades and Remembrance Day service.

But both Col. Robertson and Mr. Dingle were strongly opposed to this action.

"It's just jealousy on the part of other regiments that they won't let the Highlanders wear their proper dress," Mr. Dingle asserted. "We get the recruits and they don't. We fight and they don't."

Mr. Dingle later qualified the latter statement by saying the Highlanders have the most outstanding battle record and are reputed to be "better fighters."

"At the beginning of recruiting the reserve were given the understanding kilts would be provided as they were in pre-war days," Col. Robertson explained. "This is the first we've heard otherwise and I heartily disagree."

"We'll do all we can to have the order changed," Col. Robertson declared. "We don't intend to take it sitting down. The kilt has always been a strong attraction for the Highlanders."

"It is ridiculous to think of the men buying their own kilts," Mr. Dingle claimed. "The government pays reserve so little they have to take the pay of the officers and the men to carry on for the year. To take their pay and then expect them to dig into their pockets for kilts is expecting too much."

MORAL STANDARDS INJURED

12 COLUMNS NECESSARY

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — In pre-war days payroll cheques for the city's employees were made out by typewriter — a comparatively simple task — when earnings were shown in three columns. Now, 12 columns are necessary to show such items as unemployment insurance, income-tax deductions, bond savings, etc., and the city has decided to install a mechanical system to write the cheques and make deductions.

"WHITE-TAILED DEER" by W. B. Herbert.
The above illustration shows white-tailed deer at the close of day.

Poised and alert, among the lengthening shadows of a snow crusted bush trail stand a Buck and a Doe. Yet, at the crack of a twig, the white tails vanish into the fastness. Truly a superb example of Canadian wild life whose continued existence in our forests can be ensured through the whole hearted support of conservation measures.

50 P.C. of Students in Urban High Schools County Residents Survey of Committee Shows

Survey reports submitted to the Hastings County Consultative Committee on secondary school education in the county revealed that on an average over 50 per cent of students in urban high schools are county or non-residents; that transportation facilities are few and unorganized; that most of the secondary schools in the county are giving only a minimum program and that there is a great pupil wastage or falling off in attendance, county council was told today in a report submitted by Reeve George West, Madoc, chairman of the committee.

The report urged taxpayers and parents to ask themselves, is the county which on the average supplies 55 per cent of the pupils in secondary schools adequately represented on the urban high school boards of trustees; why should pupils near one high school be taken by bus to a more distant one and why should the pupils in Centre Hastings have advantages that are not enjoyed by farmers in more distant localities when all pay taxes to support secondary schools?

Only Minimum Program

It also requested ratepayers to ask themselves why should pupils in centre Hastings have to attend schools which give only a minimum program while many pupils in South Hastings attend a composite school which has not only the general or academic course but a vocational school with industrial arts; home economics, commercial and vocational agriculture courses.

The report suggested that the fact that most secondary schools have only one course may have something to do with the large number of pupils who quit school before completing their training.

Chairman West told council that in the spring of this year North Hastings had been organized into a high school district with bus lines transporting pupils to Bancroft which now has about 182 students.

32 Districts Formed

Thirty-two high school districts have been formed in Ontario and the trend to larger areas was continuing, the chairman said. After analyzing the grouping the assessments and school population it was felt that Hastings might well be divided into three high school districts with one in the south, one in the centre and the other in the north. To get an accurate picture the Consultative Committee had made a survey of secondary schools in the county.

The report created a lengthy discussion with members arguing pro and con on the matter. Reeve William Davis, Bangor, Wicklow and McClure said that according to present plans and specifications of the new school at Bancroft, students would be able to get the education equivalent of one year in university. Vocational and other courses were on the curriculum of the school.

Still in Infancy

County Clerk Denyes warned council that the high school district question was still in its infancy. "Other counties were having trouble with the system," he said, and he predicted some confusion might reign in Hastings when the matter comes up for districts in the south and central sections of the county.

"The Hastings County by-law has been accepted by the Department of Education as the model for the province," he said.

Reeve William West, referring to the fact that the report contained a note that a great many pupils are leaving school before their training is completed, asked the chairman the reason.

"Because they are interested in the general course as laid down in most of the schools," was the reply.

"In your opinion then, the schools are not offering what the children want. Is that it?"

"Yes," replied Chairman George West.

Serious Problem

"There was a tremendous increase in high school students in his municipality this year," Reeve Elmer Post, Huntingdon said. The transportation to Belleville is good and although it costs something parents thought the idea was well worth while. "This high school question is a serious one and this council should give it sincere consideration."

The situation in Marmora was bad, Reeve Neal of that village stated. "Our pupils are going to Stirling and other points because we have no facilities in the village." The question, he felt, will take a great deal of study. He realized that something would be done eventually and urged the support of all municipalities of the county.

Reeve Kirby, Deseronto felt that the new school system should take in all Hastings County and not be divided into the "north and south." "The north," he said, "was entitled to the same treatment, consideration and facilities as the south, and those people in Toronto should be told the fact."

Fine Improvement

There was a wonderful improvement in the northern section of the county since the new system came into being, Reeve Davis told council. "Over fifty per cent of the students now attending school, otherwise would not have had a secondary school education, if the new system had not been introduced. Bus service is good, and while some outlying places are not touched by the buses, the situation will improve as time goes on," he said.

Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford, wondered if "we in the south are to be guided by the Act as it applies in the north." He warned that when the system appears in South Hastings there will be a real battle. "The fur will more than fly."

The set-up appeared good to him, Deputy Reeve Harrison, Thurlow said. "North Hastings is an exception and it is the only school of its kind in the province. I feel that we are getting an excellent opportunity in South Hastings to give the younger generation a better chance to get educated."

Urges Special Classes

He urged that special classes and courses be included to suit the needs of the students. It will be a long drawn out process to educate the people to the idea, but the sooner it comes, the better.

The southern part of the county has population and assessment enough to carry on this type of education with not too large an area, Reeve S. A. McCarey, Tweed, felt. In centre Hastings there is an assessment of between 7 and 8 millions, but a ten million dollar assessment is needed to properly finance the venture.

He wondered if transporting children long distances to school, was not driving them away from their home responsibilities. The Board of Education says that it is trying to centralize education while in other spheres interests are trying to decentralize industry and spread it through the rural areas. If this is done, high schools may get enough pupils to warrant their construction in districts.

Council passed the first reading on by-laws calling for adjustment of salaries of the county clerk, county treasurer and the county engineer; to assume a road in Madoc; appointment of high school trustees; to delete a Marmora road from the county system and to close the registry office on Saturday afternoons.

Representing Canada during the inauguration - ceremonies of Miguel Aleman as president of Mexico was Hugh L. Keenleyside, shown here with his wife. The ceremonies were held in the Palace of Fine Arts, Mexico City.

SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

New York, Dec. 6. (AP)—Physicians attending Mike Jacobs, 66-year-old fight promoter today again termed his condition "slightly improved" although Dr. Vincent Nardiello said "he is not yet out of the woods."

Jacobs collapsed in a downtown office building Monday and was taken to hospital suffering from a cerebral hemorrhage. His body wa spartially paralyzed although yesterday he was able to take nourishment and recognize

NO PATIENTS

Hundreds of citizens volunteered assistance in fighting the fire, evacuating equipment and shouting encouragement to patients as they stood waiting to be transported to safer quarters.

Men formed a human chain in the upper part of the hospital to pass along beds, mattresses, chairs, tables, cupboards, radios and other equipment untouched by the flames which were roaring up the hospital's central ramp at the time.

Mass of Flames

Believed to have started in a basement storage room adjacent to the orderlies' quarters, the blaze swept through the basement into the central section of "A" ward, mostly office accommodation, and within a few minutes the front section of the building was a mass of flames.

Smoke and tongues of flame darted from the windows and the reflection cast a sweeping glare over the west end of the city.

Firemen were in constant danger as they poured streams of water against the flaming walls which eventually crumbled into a heap of ashes, showering the men with sparks. Volunteers carried one hose behind the front section to attack the basement inferno but terrific heat blasts forced them to retreat.

"There was just a phooof," said Orderly Anderson, "and then all hell broke loose." Anderson, who was reporting for duty earlier than usual lost his clothing and wallet which he left behind to sound the alarm.

Most of the patients' personal property was destroyed. Radios, books, handicrafts made after tedious hours of occupational therapy work, went up in flames along with pictures of mothers and sweethearts.

Bob Howes, a fish fancier, lost more than 25 valuable specimens. Looking into the flames he said: "Those fish were my greatest companions — I knew them all by name."

As the patients waited to be moved to more permanent quarters they joked about their orders to "bail out" as flames reflected on windows of the cafeteria.

reptitious drinking elsewhere? Common sense tells us this cannot be done."

The people were buying large quantities of spirits, as well as beer and wine—and spirits were bought to be consumed. "Since there is not to be prohibition, and since the public attitude is such that they do buy spirits, then it is the primary duty of the government . . . . to frame the law in such a way that it can be enforced, and that consumption is made possible under a system of licensing and control which will be accepted and supported by the public.

"The intention is not to increase consumption but rather to provide an honest and enforcible method of consumption under which the drinking habits of those people who do choose to drink may be improved by the pressure of an increasing demand for decent behaviour in public."

None Ready For Occupancy

Meantime there were no "cocktail bars" as such ready for immediate operation, so far as could be learned. George Wilson, president of the Hotel Association of Canada, said many Ontario Hotels lacked the necessary equipment, all of which will be under strict regulation. But hotels expect to be ready to serve liquor with meals in their dining rooms.

Ward Markle, president of the Toronto Hotel Association, said it would probably be at least six months before hotels can get necessary equipment to operate bars although many hotels will be able to institute drinking with meals immediately.

"There is not one hotel in Toronto so far as I know that is able to go into cocktail bar operation immediately," said Markle. "But I understand that a number of other operators will apply for license under special phases of the Act. It would have been better to introduce the Act gradually, allowing drinks with meals first, and thus give hotel operators a chance to get organized."

Premier Drew explained that the operation of the new Act and the regulations for sale of liquor will be outlined in detail next Thursday by Attorney-General Blackwell.

He also said: "Let me say with the utmost emphasis that anyone who says that I, or the government collectively, have been controlled or directed by the liquor or any other special interest, is a contemptible slanderer."

"It is my hope, and the hope of my colleagues, that this will actually reduce the consumption of spirits by bringing out into the open and under normal social restraints what now is being done elsewhere, under conditions which have led to abuses which go beyond the abuse of alcohol itself."

$25,000 Requested From Council For Bancroft Hospital

Several resolutions and recommendations presented for approval or rejection by councils of other counties were aired before the Hastings County body today.

A resolution of the Lanark County Council requesting the Dominion government to, through municipal financial assistance, give more attention to the destruction of wolves in the province met with the approval of the council while an Elgin County request that all nails be released for agricultural purposes and farmers in general also received the endorsation of the county body.

Council also concurred in a Frontenac County Council recommendation that inasmuch as members of parliament are tax exempt to $2,000 that the same ruling apply to all persons receiving this amount of money or less. If members of parliament are exempt to this amount, council felt that farmers and all wage earners receiving this amount of money should likewise be tax free.

Resolution Tabled.

A resolution of the Welland County Council petitioning the Ontario government to provide free distribution of school books and supplies to primary and secondary school students so that all pupils will have an equal chance of enjoying the benefits of the education to which they are entitled was tabled after some spirited discussion.

Reeve Kirby, Deseronto, was strongly against the "handing down of dirt-infested books" by big brothers to smaller children. He felt that the government should make sure that every child should have equal rights with the poor man's children getting the same opportunities as those of the rich man.

"Books should be delivered free to the little red school houses as well as to the modern institutions of the cities," he said.

Reeve Joseph Davis, Monteagle and Herschel, felt there was no point in the matter inasmuch as school books change every year. He was of the opinion that the government should first standardize books for at least three years, thus eliminating unnecessary expense incurred with the purchase of books each year.

Want $25,000 Grant.

A request of a delegation from Bancroft asking for a grant of $25,000 to be applied to the cost of the proposed new hospital amounting to $110,000 was referred to the Committee of the Whole on Ways and Means and will come up for discussion during the session.

The appointment of R. D. Arnott, K.C., as county solicitor was announced by County Clerk Eric Denyes.

Mayor Frank Follwell and Col. Roscoe Vanderwater waited on council with the request for county co-operation in the establishment of a district authority with regard to the survey of the Moira River watershed. Both men addressed council and pointed out the necessity of immediate action if anything is to be done regarding the survey next year.

The Agricultural Advisory Committee in its December report to council pointed out that grants had been recommended to the Belleville Fair Board for $200 and $100 to other county fairs. Grants of $200 to the British Empire Dairy Show and Cheese Exhibition and $250 for junior extension work in agriculture had also been recommended.

Many Trees Planted.

The committee, the report stated, following authorization granted it at the June session, had purchased land for reforestation purposes. It had later acquired a lot in Hungerford Township at a cost of $1,300, later obtaining a small building on the property for an additional cost of $350. Later on, nine acres adjoining this property were purchased. 23,000 white and red pine trees had been planted under the supervision of H. L. Fair, County Agricultural representative and Mr. Edwards, zone forester, by junior farmers.

The committee has been authorized, the report pointed out, to purchase another parcel of land in North Hastings which would be suitable for reforestation purposes but up to the present this had not been done.

Orders for several thousand seedling trees have been placed with forestry representatives.

KICKING PUCK

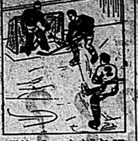
Rule 65

Kicking the puck shall be permitted in all zones, but a goal may not be scored by the kick of an attacking player except if an attacking player kicks the puck and it is deflected into the net by any player of the defending side, except the goalkeeper.

Player Without Stick

Rule 71

A minor penalty shall be imposed on any player, except the goalkeeper, who, having lost possession of his stick, participates in the play of the game.



Kicking the puck shall be permitted in all zones except in the case where a player has lost possession of his stick and continues to participate in the game by kicking the puck.

FINE TOP SCORERS

Toronto, Dec. 6. (CP)—Toronto St. Michael's College majors reflecting their position far out in front of the standings in the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior "A" Division, had the top five scorers in the loop in official statistics released today.

Fiery Fleming Mackell topped the league with 20 goals and 11 assists for 31 scoring points, five more than team-mate Rudy Migay, Ed Sandford was third, another two points back.

Phil Samis, defenceman for Oshawa Generals who handed the Irish their first defeat Wednesday night was the League bad man with 44 minutes in penalties. Mackell was second with 39 minutes.

OMAHA KNIGHTS PUSH MILLERS OUT OF FIRST PLACE

Now Have One - Point Margin Over Minneapolis Squad

(By The Canadian Press)

Omaha Knights finally pushed Minneapolis Millers out of first place in the Northern Division of the United States Hockey League.

Needing only two points to make them divisional leaders, the Knights missed their opportunity Sunday by losing to St. Paul Saints. But they came back last night in a home game to crush the Millers 7-1. Victory gave Omaha a one-point margin over Minneapolis.

Bernie Strongham scored three times for the Knights— twice on assists from coach Mud Bruneteau. George Homenuke brought home two more Knight's tallies. Winky Smith and Larry Kennedy th en made it seven for the one team. Leo Gasparini pushed across the lone Miller's count.

In third place, St. Paul Saints defeated the cellar-dwelling Kansas City Pla-Mors, 6-4. Joe Shack and Mitch Pechet, scoring within 32 seconds of each other put the home team Saints ahead 4-3 as the third frame opened. Gus Schwartz and Hal Brown then added the final St. Paul counts. Vic Myles and Bob Dill gave the Saints their initial tallies. For Kansas City Gopher Ashworth and Wingy Johnston counted in the opening frame, and Larry Silvestri and Ralph Nattrass in the third.

In the Southern Division Houston skippers cellar-team rebelled sending the division-leading Fort Worth Rangers down to a 3-1 defeat.

The skippers led all the way on two counts by Paul Mundrick and Arley Carlson. Russ Kopak was the only Fort Worth scorer.

GEO. TRAUTMAN NEW BOSS OF MINOR LEAGUES

Elected to Succeed Judge W. G. Bramham at Salary of $25,000 a Year

By TED SMITS

Los Angeles, Dec. 6. (AP)—Minor Leaguers' restment against their big brothers disappeared today under the genial influence of George Trautman, new boss of all baseball outside the National and American Leagues.

Elected unanimously to succeed 72-year-old Judge W. G. Bramham as president of the National Association at $25,000 yearly, Trautman was described by President Frank Shaughnessy of the International League as "a man who has the confidence of independents and others."

Reflecting this harmonious trend the minors were called back into session, after a "final" adjournment yesterday, to thresh out differences of opinion over the major-minor league working agreement developing behind closed conference doors.

Trautman, 55-year-old executive vice president of the Detroit Tigers, said after he had accepted the presidency that "I have every reason to believe there will be a fine spirit of co-operation between the major and minor leagues."

The majors, after announcing a general 1947 opening date of April 15, and a closing date of Sept. 28, thereby fixing the season again at 154 games, took up minor league proposals for revision of existing rules. The proposal for 168 games in 1947 had developed strong opposition, chiefly because it would upset all records.

The present major-minor working agreement expires Jan. 12, 1947, and unless a new one is adopted the old one will be automatically renewed.

Trautman said he would move the Association headquarters from Durham, N.C., to Columbus, O., and said he expected to take office in January. Trautman was given a five-year contract.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

"The biggest event in Belleville sporting history," is what Walter Gerow calls his feature grappling match here Saturday night. The big attraction of course is the coming of El Primo Carnera, the only wrestler to ever win the heavyweight boxing championship of the world.

• • •

Carnera has agreed to meet Vic Christie who won over Karl Krippler Davis the other night in two straight falls and who owns the most peerless elbow-smash ever seen here or anywhere else.

• • •

To sign up the Italian Colossus Gerow had to "lay it on the line" for the biggest guarantee any wrestler has ever received from a city of Belleville's size. "But it's going to be worth it" says the usually wary Walter. "I feel," he added, "that bringing Carnera here when he is in tremendous demand all over North America, is one of the finest things we have ever been able to accomplish for Belleville wrestling and boxing fans, and the expense is well worth it."

• • •

To match the importance of the gala event, two of the finest supporting bouts ever arranged have been signed. They are a semi-final between Strangler Bob Wagner and the great Red Vagnone the Columbus Rocket, and a third bout between Karl Krippler Davis and Walter Sirois.

• • •

With the band-shell taken down for greater visibility the arena management has also decided to move the wrestling ring up towards the middle of the floor so that everyone will be able to see.

• • •

Two of the toughest contact sports played today are football and hockey. In order to go very far in either of these great sports an athlete must not only be in top condition but he must be rugged and able to take it.

• • •

Through the very fierceness of play in a hard-fought hockey game it is only natural that there should be occasional injuries. However, when you consider the hundreds of times that players go sliding across the ice to crash headlong into the boards it is amazing how few serious casualties result.

• • •

The type of injuries suffered in hockey and football are vastly different. Hockey fans are accustomed to seeing blood spilled on the ice. A player who has been "nicked" for stitches is usually back in action in short order and suffers no ill effects in later life. On the other hand the football player who is helped from the field with a twisted knee (a common injury in the gridiron game) may come limping into your office ten years later to sell you some bonds or insurance.

• • •

It is remarkable that in the forty year history of professional hockey only one accident has resulted in a fatality. That happened some 20 years ago when two Niagara Falls (Ont.) players collided. Eddie Baker, forward with the Niagara Falls team (which was a member of the Canadian Professional League), collided with a teammate and fell. His head struck the ice heavily, and although he walked from the arena to his hotel he collapsed shortly after. Examination disclosed he had suffered a fracture. An outstanding brain surgeon operated but was unable to save him.

Every precaution is taken in modern hockey to avoid such accidents, and hockey is justifiably proud of the fact that although it is perhaps the world's roughest game, serious accidents are comparatively few.

Introducing—
REFEREE GEORGE HAYES

George William Hayes, latest addition to National Hockey League officiating ranks comes to hockey's major loop with a highly impressive refereeing background.

• • •

Hayes refereed a total of 105 amateur hockey games last season, which might be some sort of a record for number of games worked by one referee in a single season. George handled 101 games in the Ontario Hockey Association; two in the Toronto Major Commercial League and two of the Memorial Cup finals between Winnipeg Monarchs and Toronto St. Michaels.

• • •

The well-built arbiter was born in Montreal on June 28, 1917, and lived in the Canadian metropolis until 1924 when he moved to Ingersoll, Ont., where he now makes his home. Before taking up hockey refereeing in 1940 he participated in such sports as hockey, baseball and football.

• • •

Hayes began his officiating career in the Ontario Minor Hockey Association and Ontario Rural Hockey Association during the season of 1940-41. He spent the next two seasons, 1941-42 and 1942-43 refereeing in the O.H.A. During the season of 1943-44 and 1944-45 Hayes was a referee in the American Hockey League and along with "Rabbit" McVeigh refereed the American League finals between Cleveland and Buffalo in 1944.

• • •

A highlight in Hayes' career as a referee took place last spring when he worked the seventh and final game in the Memorial Cup Series in Toronto on April 27th when the all-time record crowd to witness an amateur hockey game in Canada, 15,803 fans jammed their way into Maple Leaf Gardens. He also refereed the Galt-St. Mikes Junior game on January 28, 1946 when the all-time Ontario Hockey Association attendance record was broken with 15,863 fans attending.

• • •

During hockey's off-season Hayes umpires baseball and softball. He is single and his hobby is collecting sports items such as pictures, clippings etc.

He made his debut as a NHL referee on November 27th in Boston when he handled the Boston Bruins-New York Rangers game.

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Remember "Da Preem?"

Well, the biggest thing ever to climb into the boxing ring and win the world's heavyweight boxing crown will probably wind up a monied man after all, now that he's taken up wrestling.

It's in the wrestling ring you find Primo Carnera now, the same amiable Alp he always was but this time with a little more grasp on the dollars he makes. As a box fighter Carnera's earnings were split 50 ways from Sunday by the time the smart guys got through with him.

But as a grappler the gigantic Italian will grapple only if he gets 40 per cent of the gate, which is what his take will be here next Thursday, when he wrestles in Maple Leaf Gardens.

"He gets that wherever he wrestles," said Frank Tunney, promoter.

As a boxer, it was always said, Carnera would make a good wrestler. Now he's proving it. And in some 80-odd mat matches he has yet to lose so it's common talk that he may become the first man to win first the world fight title and then the world wrestling crown (the value of the latter, of course, being open to much debate).

Another Big Fellow:

The sudden departure of six-foot-five Ed Sadowski from his player-coaching job with Toronto's professional basketballing Huskies may not be so much of $10,000, which formed a goodly chunk of the Huskies' payroll. Now if manager Lew Hayman can trade him off he should be able to pick up two or more players for that kind of money and they'd do the Huskies considerable good.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

British film interest in the rest of the Commonwealth, which started with "The 49th Parallel" in Canada, and produced "Men of Two Worlds" (Tanganyika) and "The Overlanders" (Australia), has branched out. The Crown Film Unit, the documentary organization attached to the Ministry of Information which has already turned out "Western Approaches," has sent a crew to East Africa for work lasting two to three years. The advance party of a new unit has gone to Australia to lay the groundwork for another Australian film.

James Mason, who arrived in New York a few days ago, really meant what he said about coming to the United States for a holiday. . . He and Mrs. Mason will see some bright lights and then take off for their new house in Bermuda where the British actor will take a good, long rest. After that, according to rumor, he'll go to Hollywood to talk business.

Raymond Massey, one of Canada's finest exports who has just finished an important role supporting Joan Crawford and Van Heflin in "Possessed," has been signed by Warner Brothers to a nine-year acting contract . . . Martha Scott has been signed for the new George Abbott play, "It Takes Two," on Broadway. She recently returned from England where she starred in J. Arthur Rank's screen version of James Hilton's "So Well Remembered."

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
Difference in British and American censorship have ended the chances of two of J. Arthur Rank's films being seen on United States screens — this time it isn't something the Americans are objecting to as they did in "The Wicked Lady," which could be re-shot. The two, "Men of Two Worlds" and "Adventures for Two" came up against hostile American prejudices.

"Men of Two Worlds," laid in Tanganyika, got the cold shoulder after a special screening for Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. They decided the picture would be objectionable to Negroes since the scientifically-trained Negro doctor, who tries to win over the natives to modern medicine, returns to voodooism himself at the end. It was also thought Southern whites would have been hostile to the spectacle of a Negro doctor as a crusader. The picture stars Phyllis Calvert and Eric Portman.

"Adventure for Two," the story of a Russian airplane technician played by Laurence Olivier, who visits England during the war is slanted most favorably toward the Russians and United States authorities decided the public South of the Border would be hostile to it in view of their strong anti-Russian prejudice.

Joan Crawford, on her way through New York to an undisclosed holiday spot in Canada, stopped off long enough to confer on her next picture, "White Nights."

AT THE BELLE — Diana Lynn and Gail Russell as Emily and Cornelia in Paramount's rollicking comedy "Our Hearts Were Growing Up" The new adventures of the two charmers are said to be even funnier and gayer than the ones they had in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," their earlier hit. Brian Donlevy, Billy DeWolfe and William Demarest are importantly featured in the fun-fest.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You have heard bridge players argue plain points into a blind alley. Or seriously prove nothing in blissful ingnorance. They could have learned good bridge in less time.

An easy bridge rule to learn is the one about a jump bid. It is simply a signal. It admits holding tricks enough to help make a game. A trick is a high card (ace or king or queen) or a short card.

Until a trump suit is decided, a jump admits discovery of 11 tricks in the pair. If partner shows five, you need six. If he shows seven you need four. If he shows three, you need eight.

It matters not whether you discover the 11 tricks on the first round or a later round. Nor does it make any difference whether the jump is by the opening bidder or his partner.

♠ A K Q 4
♥ A
♦ K Q J 8 2
♣ 9 8 4

Suppose partner responds with a bid of two clubs. A responder should pass unless he has more than two tricks. So, you have just learned that your partner has at least three tricks.

Your hand contains eight tricks; two aces, two kings, two queens, tow short cards in hearts. With the three tricks shown by partner, you now see 11 tricks. This calls for a jump.

With a biddable spade suit not yet announced, your next bid will be in that suit. You will jump to show you see enough tricks for a game in something. Your bid is now three spades.

Will partner have any doubts as to what your jump shows? The trump suit has not been decided. Your jump admits seeing 11 tricks. He has shown only three. He knows you must have eight.

Try this out with any pair of hands you deal. You will quickly see its unmatched accuracy. But it will dull some of the glamour. This method works too easy to look brilliant.

Chapter 15

"And her husband too?"

"Probe on, child, probe on," Montgomery said. "Yes, even as you have divided. Sandy will be here. My mother'll be here; she's here at the Castonbury Hotel for a few days. Garrett Philpotts, the man you met the other night when you came in for a minute; his wife Mary, who writes the sonnets——"

"Writes sonnets!" Jennifer gasped.

"Certainly. Why not?"

"But I never thought I would meet a poet!"

"Well, she's a very real poet. And their son Harvey."

"But she isn't Mary Harvey Philpotts!"

"She certainly is. They're here because Harvey is in Stanford, and they have to come up from Phoenix to see him now and then. Garrett's had a lung setback and they live on the desert."

"Then she wrote—she wrote—that little poem you asked me to memorize?"

"She did."

"Mary Harvey Philpotts," Jennifer mused, entranced. "I won't have to talk to her?" she asked in sudden alarm.

"Now please don't start that again. You'll talk to them all. You'll say whatever comes into your head, and they'll think you are a charming little girl because you are a charming little girl," Monty said.

"How can you feed so many people? We have—you have plates enough . . ."

"Leave it the way it was," the man said as she paused. "I like the plural."

"There are plates enough," Jennifer amended it, "but knives and forks—one of them match. What'll we do about them?"

"We'll pull out this long table," he said, "and put everything we have got on it, all our spoons and knives. We'll have a ham up that end and a couple of roast chickens down this end. Mrs. Carteret will make a salad—we'll have all the fixings in the bowl—and we'll get some buns. You'll make coffee for them that desire it, and I'll run the drinks."

"But you couldn't roast a chicken in that shaky box oven," Jennifer reminded him, "much less a ham!"

"They come from the club. You can beat the buns in that thing?"

"Oh yes. And dessert, Monty?"

"Little Filomena O'Farrell will bring a cake. Midge Hawkes will bring a cake too."

"Who's she?"

"She's Harry Hawkes' sister, a big rawboned moose of a woman. She's done away with two of his wives already; now he wants to marry again, and she'll go through the same performance."

"Not murdered them?"

"No; just driven them crazy. Now I'll tell you, Jinny. You come around Friday night and we'll pull out the table and see about chairs. We can always borrow chairs from the auction rooms, of course. We'll fix things up."

"Oh, I'll love to" The dark roofs did not matter and her dingy room and monotonus job did not matter while she could cross the lighted terrace and feel herself privileged to enter the studio ,to mutter a little "tut-tut-tut" at disorder, to wait for the moment when Monty should turn from his easel and smile at her, ready for her own smile and the hesitant questions that followed her long, contented, silences.

"I'm Sara Crewe, Monty," she told him. "Remember her climbing out of the attic window and going over to see the 'Indian Gentleman'?"

"I do vaguely remember Sara Crewe. Wasn't there a monkey?"

"A darling monkey". Jennifer fell silent. "I think of this place all day," she said.

"I do too."

"But you could be here all day if you wanted to, couldn't you, Monty?"

"Not if I wanted an occasional meal."

"You could sell pictures."

"Oh, could I? I thank you. As a matter of fact," Monty said thoughtfully after a moment, "I do sell quite a number of pictures. Almost every week I sell a picture of an Indian on horseback with his horse's head down and the wind blowing the horse's mane forward. 'The End of the Trail'. Also I sell pictures of puppies in silk hats ,and one of a man and woman bending over a cradle. That one's called 'Ours'."

She was looking at him in bewilderment. "How do you mean?"

'How did you think I made a living, Jinny?"

Well, I—well, you go to an office, don't you?".

"I go to a store. An art and stationery store out on Mission Street. I own it. My father left it to me eleven years ago," Monty went on as Jennifer made no comment. "I was drifting about in Europe then, painting as I wandered; I was doing an old bridge in Avignon, as a matter of fact, when the cable came. I came home and found the shop in a mess, my mother nursing a smashed knee. My father had been killed in an accident, and there was no money anywhere. I went out to look over the field, put things in order with the idea of selling everything, found there was a good living in post cards and a lending library, pencils and playing cards and drawing paper, and there I've been ever since. My mother gets her two hundred a month—she's all right—and six months ago I sold the old house in Howard Street and she moved to Oakland, which she's always wanted to do, and I unpacked all my European loot and moved in here. And there," he finished, "you have my simple history."

"But then, haven't you been painting all these years?"

"Oh yes. I painted in Sandy Carteret's studio. They had a place out here, an old barn he'd made into a studio. He used to come int omy place for drawing paper and crayons, and I showed him some things. We'd been in Paris at the same time, finally remembered each other. And that way I met Mrs. Carteret—Julie. And the kind of course, Poppy. Her name is Elizabeth, but they call her Poppy."

"A baby?"

"Nope. About eight."

"Is she pretty, Monty?"

She will be. Rather rangy now, but of course Julie adores her. They both do. They live across the bay, we don't see each other as much as we did."

There was a silence. Then Jennifer asked a little timidly: "Is she redheaded?"

"Mrs. Careteret? Reddish gold. Like the pictures."

"I meant the little girl."

"No. Poppy's dark. You'll meet Mrs. Carteret Saturday night."

"Yes, I know."

"You'll also meet a nephew of hers, Gerry Barker, an extremely nice kid. He'll probably fall for you like a ton of abode bricks."

Jennifer was sitting on the floor, her arms locked about her knees, her eyes on the round iron stove that shone transparent pink from interior flames. The man saw a faint frown cloud her forehead.

"That sort of thing interests you no whit?" he asked. "Come now, Jinny, you're nineteen; it's time you were taking notice!"

There must be a thousand light, silly things she could say; she could think of none of them. Her color rose suddenly, drained away again, leaving the serious young oval of her face unwontedly pale.

"Don't want me to fool about it" Monty said quietly, and was silent. "You gave me a hint once that a man had hurt you—killed himself because you couldn't be nice to him—was that it?"

"No, not quite," she answered hurriedly, distressedly. "We think he killed himself, his father and I—no one else knows. They all think it was an accident."

"And you couldn't love him?"

"No, that wasn't it. I did like him terribly. He would have waited longer; he would have hoped that I....I'm not even sure that he was in love with me," Jennifer said confusedly. "It was all mixed up. Eugene—the one who died, you know—was so good; he wanted everyone to be perfect. He said that all the troubles of the world would be cured if we were all just perfect."

"He was a born reporter," Monty said dryly as she paused.

"And he—he said he wasn't in love with me," Jennifer stumbled on, " but he said that he ought to marry me to protect me, that the world was so wicked .. and then..then.." Suddenly she began to sob violently; she tried to talk above the emotion that was gaining on her. "Then when he found out that I wasn't so perfect," she said thickly, "he was stunned. He was disappointed in me...."

It was no use. She could go no further. She put her face down on her knees and cried, her bright hair falling in confusion over her arms, still locked about her knees. After a moment she rose blindly to her feet.

"I think, if you don't mind, I'll go home. I don't know what's the matter with me. . ."

Monty had left his easel and come over to her. He pushed her gently into a chair.

"Don't go home and cry all night," he said dispassionately, going back to his work. "Cry it out here. I rather suspected something like this. What'd you do, Jinny, fall in love with the office boss, who was unhappily married?"

"No," she answered, gulping, getting control of herself with an effort. "He—he wasn't married. He liked me; we liked each other so much! I was so happy! And then—he just stopped. He had never meant....I thought he meant...."

She was still, mopping her eyes and blowing her nose, staring at the fire with tear-swollen eyes. For a long time there was silence in the room except for the crackling of wood in the stove, the sound of an evening breeze teasing at the skylight, the creak of Monty's shoes as he moved back and forth at his easel.

"That was a mistake," he said presently in a reflective voice.

"I know," Jennifer answered in a small tired voice. "I always knew. But I was in love; I guess it's a sort of craziness. But afterward....and all this time .... if I could only forget it, have it not have happened!"

"Oh well, we all feel that," Monty said consolingly. "Lord, the things you'd like not to have done! I knew one feller who graduated from college with honors because he found out where the blue books for the finals were stored and had a couple of weeks to work on them. A year afterward he went to the dean and told him; he had to. The dean said, 'It didn't do me any harm to graduate you; you're the one that'll have to pay for it.'"

"And what did they do to him?"

"Nothing, of course. He's quite a well-known man today, is asked to speak at fraternity dinners. I had flunked out two years earlier; I didn't know for years how he managed to graduate. I'll tell you something," Monty went on suddenly, "I'll tell you the thing I wish I could blot out. I had a mighty good father. I didn't think so much of him because he was a quiet old fellow in an aplaca coat, browsing about his little shop. His dream was to have a secondhand bookstore."

"A secondhand bookstore?" She forgot her reddened eyes and wet cheeks in her surprise.

"That was his dream. Well, I inherited a little money, and I was all for travel, for painting in Paris—rive gauche—all that. I could have set the old man up in his little old bookshop; it never occurred to me. I could have been enthusiastic about it, helped him arrange the windows. He came down to the boat with me when I started on my trip around the world, went over the ship with me. 'I surely congratulase you, Monty,' he said. 'I've always had an idea I'd like to be on a freighter when she went out the Golden Gate. You'll see strange things.' I hung over the rail; he went back to his stationery store. I dawdled around in Manila and Tokyo and Singapore; we'd reached Trieste when I got a cable from him: "Mama anxious, please write, Papa.' I hadn't written; I wrote a letter then. I found it in some papers after he was dead. He was a dear old fellow—not exciting, you know, but—well, I guess having a son was the great adventure of his life. Nothing was too good for me. I wish now—well, there you are!"

"But, Monty, boys are like that," Jennifer argued eagerly; "you didn't do anything wrong. You were just careless and busy with your own plans, the way kids are. He understood that!"

"I hope he did, Jinny. Maybe none of it was wrong, like forging somebody's name or putting poison in somebody's tea. But you don't forget."

"No," she agreed sadly, looking into space with young tragic eyes. "You don't forget."

"I've thought a thousand times in the last few years," Monty said "of that afternoon when I first sailed. I saw my father after that; I was home again, of course. He was immensely proud when I won a scholarship and a painting of mine was published in the paper. He had that. But he knew I didn't belong to him any more. It was that first afternoon when I missed my chance. My chance to say, 'Here's where you get fooled, Pop. You and I are buying that little bookshop on Sutter Street and we've got to get busy classfying and cleaning up ten thousand books.' He had all the bookstores sized up; so many thousand at fifty cents flat, and so many other thousand at fifteen cents flat."

BROKEN SLEEP?

SLUGGISH KIDNEYS CAN CAUSE THIS MISERY

If your sleep is disturbed—if you have to get up time and again at night—chances are your kidneys are to blame. When the kidneys are out of gear, toxic acids may linger in your system, causing irritation, sore back, stiff joints. You can't expect to feel right or be right until you give your kidneys the help they may need.

THIS HELP IS AS NEAR AS YOUR NEAREST DRUG STORE

Help that has been proved for more than 40 years—quick relief from the miseries caused by kidney ailments—it's waiting for you in Gin Pills. Proof? Victims of kidney trouble from coast to coast acclaim this remedy, testify to the results secured.

"I suffered for years from kidney ailments without getting relief until I tried Gin Pills. After taking one box I got much relief and after taking three I felt a whole lot better."—Mrs. V.L., Sydney.

Money back if not satisfied! The best proof of Gin Pills' merit is the fact that druggists everywhere sell them on a satisfaction or money-back basis!

How Gin Pills help—The toxic wastes in your system are eliminated through millions of tiny tubes in your kidneys. Congested kidneys interfere with elimination of waste matter, causing broken rest, back ache, lumbago and other distress. Gin Pills are compounded to help the kidneys do their work thoroughly.

BREAD AND BACON

ported from Canada which "had been delayed but not diminished by transport difficulties."

It is hoped to purchase substantial quantities of the Argentine crop which is harvested in the new year, he added.

"The main events affecting our overseas supplies have been a series of labor disputes," the food minister said. "Unfortunately, the largest of them still is in progress — namely the strike in the soft coal industry of the United States.

"This strike, if continued, will profoundly disturb the entire American economy including the transportation system.

"A really protracted strike might in time affect the movement of supplies in Canada. Thus we are faced with the possibility of developments in North America which may have grave consequences for this country and for all other countries which must rely upon North American supplies."

Lose Seven Weeks

Mr. Strachey also said that because of the recent meat packing strike in Argentina "we have lost nearly seven weeks' shipments of meat, a loss which it is almost impossible to make up."

"No criticism," he said, "is implied or intended of the great transAtlantic exporting countries. I know they are fully conscious of the difficulties which may be experienced abroad as a result of their own domestic troubles."

The food minister said Britain's wheat stocks are little more than half what they were at this time last year. He added:

"It is necessary for us to obtain additional supplies of wheat for this country during the next three or four months, over those which we have already purchased. I have asked the U.S. government for shipments of wheat and flour in the near future.

"If the U.S. government is unable to agree to our request, or if circumstances develop which made it impossible for these quantities to be moved to the American seaboard for loading on ships in the first few months of next year, then far from it being possible to deration bread it would almost certainly be necessary t odecrease the ration."

The recently announced grain surplus in the U.S., Strachey said, gives rise to the hope that "one day, and perhaps it may be sooner rather than later" Britain will be able to import all it needs.

"When that time comes," he said, "we shall not forget those exporting countries which despite their present difficulties have stood by us during the period of scarcity."

Obituary

CAPTAIN JAMES HUNTER

Captain James Hunter died at his home, 101 Cedar Street, early Friday morning, after an illness of two weeks' duration.

Born at Amherst Island the late Captain Hunter was in his 91st year, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hunter. For 65 years he resided in this locality and for many years he was Captain on Government tugs in the Great Lakes. He was a member of St. Michael's Church.

Surviving him are five daughters, Mrs. P. R. Barker, Bewdley; Mrs. [illegible] Gerow, Belleville; Mrs. John Baker, Toronto; Mrs. A. Lloyd, Belleville, and Mrs. W. Barriage, Rochester, N.Y.; one son, James Hunter, Belleville; seven grandchildren and one great grandchild. His wife, the former Nancy Blackburn, died some years ago.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

MRS. PHOEBE E. DAY

Mrs. Phoebe Eliza Day, widow of Robert H. Day, died early Friday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ernest Cockell, 143 Burnham Street, after a lengthy illness.

The late Mrs. Day, who was in her 86th year, was born at Kaladar and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Durius Storring. All her life was passed in this district. In religion she was a member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Ralph Lorimer, and Mrs. Ernest Cockell, both of Belleville; one brother, Durius Storring, Prince Edward County.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, until Friday evening, then at the home of her daughter, 143 Burnham Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

MRS. ROSE BRADY
(Marmora)

Marmora, Dec. 6 (Special)— A well-known and highly respected resident of Marmora died at her home on Tuesday in the person of Mrs. Rose Brady, widow of James Brady. Deceased, who was in her seventy-eighth year, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hector Auger of Marmora township and all her life was spent in Marmora and Deloro.

Her husband predeceased her four years ago.

Of a kindly disposition Mrs. Brady was always ready to help those in need, and she had a large circle of friends who sincerely regret her death. She was a devout member of Sacred Heart Church and an active member of the Catholic Women's League, Altar Society and League of the Sacred Heart.

She is survived by four sons and one daughter: Eugene, Charles and Hugh, all of Marmora; Jack of Sudbury, and Mary at home. She is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Kate Price of Toronto and one brother, George Auger of Trenton.

The funeral was held from her on Thursday morning to Sacred Heart Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. H. J. Farrell.

Interment took place in Sacred Heart Cemetery.

Local Firm Agent For Munro Boats

With the acquiring of the agency of the Munro line of boats by The Big "A" Company Ltd. of Belleville, pleasure craft for the first time are now being displayed in this city. Although but one style of Munro boats are now being displayed at the company's showroom on Pinnacle Street, before the next boating season all four lines will be on display.

Differentiating from the practice followed in the construction of small boats for outboard motor use during the past thirty years Munro pleasure craft are built of moulded plywood, bonded and impregnated with phenolic glue. This type of construction is considered the greatest advancement in small boat construction. Previously small boats built of light cedar and rib construction had a tendency to waterlog.

The worth of waterproof plywood has been proven in the Mosquito Bomber and various naval boats of all types. This material has the structural strength of steel, combined with a lightness in weight and resistance to heat, cold and moisture, makes it ideal for small boat construction.

Four sizes of Munro boats, built at London, Ontario, range from 12 to 15 feet in length and up to 58 inches beam. For the largest size which weighs 250 pounds, any size motor is recommended.

For the present Munro boats only will be handled but it is expected by Big "A" officials that other lines will be added in the future.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—Grade A, dressed, bacon-hogs, were unchanged at Barrie $20.60 delivered; unchanged at Stratford, to farmers $20.40, to truckers $20.55, delivered in markets reporting early today.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Industrial stocks were down .35 at mid-day on Toronto Stock Exchange and other groups showed insignificant losses. Volume for the first three hours was down to 374,000 shares.

The food, textile and miscellaneous industrials displayed moderate weakness and other industrial groups were firm generally.

Price adjustments were narrow in the gold group. Wright-Hargreaves, Duquesne, Senator and Osisko were up slightly.

In the base metals Steep Rock and Normetal gained 3 to 5 cents. Western Oils held steady.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 6 —(AP)— Faint hopes for a coal truce, with nothing outstanding to substantiate them, gave the stock market a selective recovery tinge today after an early general stumble. While dealings were relatively quiet throughout, gains of as much as a point or so predominated near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues were irregularly lower at mid-day. Hiram Walker slipped ¼ and Canadian Pacific ⅛. Dome Mines was unchanged and Distillers Seagram gained ⅛.

ARCHITECT'S DRAWING OF INCINERATOR ON DISPLAY IN WINDOW

An architect's drawing of the proposed incinerator which the city has planned for construction on Zwick's Island is on display in the window of the Public Utilities Commission on Front Street. The drawing is by, the consulting engineers, Messrs. Meadows, Critoph and Co. who have been retained by the city to make an estimate of the cost of construction.

The drawing shows the incinerator as a clean-cut and modern structure with weigh scales office, covered unloading ramp and incinerator chimney, with a general view of the city to the east.

MEMBERS TRAIN CREW EXONERATED IN CHILD'S DEATH

Patricia Newell, Killed by Accident, When Struck by Train Says Jury

A coroner's jury probing the circumstances surrounding the death of thirteen-year-old Patricia Newell, 90 East Moira St., killed in a railway accident on Nov. 29th, returned a verdict of accidental death and exonerated the members of the train crew from all blame in connection with the tragedy.

The jury recommended that manual signalling or crossing gates be used on all railway crossings in the city of Belleville and that the recommendation be brought to the attention of the Board of Railway Commissioners.

The probe was held on Thursday night in the city police station with Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson presiding and Assistant Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson conducting the investigation. Police Inspector Clare Hayes was the coroner's constable.

Engineer Testifies.

Engineer R. Muirhead, driver of the crack "No. 14" passenger train on the day of the tragedy, told the jury that he had had no intimation of an accident until he saw the body of the girl go from the front of the engine to the south embankment. He was driving his train between 30-35 miles an hour and was slowing down for the Belleville station.

"It was snowing at the time and we were heading into the storm. Steam was coming back from the engine making visibility very poor."

He was blowing the locomotive's whistle when he saw the body of the dead girl hurled to the embankment. He immediately brought the twelve-car train to a stop within its own length. Muirhead told the crown that he had no idea where the girl came from.

Automatic Signals.

John Laney, train fireman, testified that there were automatic bell signals on nearly all city crossings with whistle posts nearby. On the day of the accident he had been watching the Belleville station for signals from the cab of the locomotive. He had not seen the girl and did not know anything was wrong until the engineer applied the brakes and said, "I believe we have hit someone."

"Weather conditions were bad," he said. The train whistle had been blowing almost continuously since the train entered the city limits.

Brakeman W. A. Bertram, of Brockville, told the story of walking back the track after the train had stopped and saw a pair of shoes on the track. He then noticed the body of the girl lying on the south side of the track.

The body of the dead girl lay thirty feet from the south track and approximately ninety feet east of the St. Charles Street crossing, C.N.R. Policeman Robert Highan testified.

In Good Order.

Albert Young, railway signals supervisor, stated that the signals on city crossings were in good order and working. The St. Charles Street crossing signal had been inspected at 7:30 the morning of the tragedy and he had tested it personally about one o'clock after the accident had occurred, and found the signal in good working order. The signal was a crossing bell with lights, and in his opinion the bell signal is the best for pedestrian traffic.

Ernest Ward, an eyewitness to the tragedy, told the jury he was on his way home from lunch and had stopped at the Moira Street crossing in his car. He heard the train whistle and bell as it approached the crossing. Looking down the track he saw the girl between the two tracks a short distance east of the St. Charles Street Crossing. She was proceeding easterly and held her hands over her ears as if to keep the wind and snow out of her face. Then the train came between the girl and the witness and she disappeared from view. The train was slowing down for the station, the witness said, and was blowing its whistle continuously.

A Dangerous Crossing.

Mr. Jack Newell, father of the dead girl, stated that the St. Charles Street crossing is a dangerous one especially at this time of the year. Approximately 200 children use the crossing between 12 and 12.15 and exclusive of the bell there is nothing to warn them a train is coming.

The average speed of the trains when they come through is excessive, he said, and this is a detriment to the children.

Throughout the summer months, when the railway is on standard time, the children are in school when the trains go through. He said the engineer of the train had his vision obscured by the curve west of the crossing, and the driver of the train could not do a thing if his own child was on the tracks and he was driving at 30 miles an hour.

His daughter was coming from school, he said, adding that on some Saturdays she used the crossing five or six times. Sometimes she went home by the overhead bridge. Her hearing was good, but she had to wear glasses.

The jury deliberated ten minutes before bringing in its verdict. It included Messrs. Bert Houston, Charles Bishop, William Harrison, Harry Gourley and Jack Snodden.

Strong Appeal To Raise Rate For Indigent Patients

A strong appeal to increase the county per diem rate for indigent hospital patients from $2.25 to $3.75 was made to Hastings County Council on Thursday by Gordon Friesen, former administrator of the Belleville General Hospital who leaves for his new post at Kitchener, Ont., on Saturday.

Previous to his brief address, Mr. Friesen formally introduced his successor, Mr. Walter Engelstad, of Niagara Falls, Ont., to Warden James A. Nickle and members of the council.

Tried to Build Up

"We have tried to build the hospital organization up," Mr. Friesen said, "and although it has slipped a bit during the past year or so, everything is now under control."

Terming the hospital as "your institution," Mr. Friesen felt that the council should be proud of the organization. Belleville's hospital, he said, has been termed by governmental medical and hospital authorities as one of the best for its size of its kind in Canada. As far as modern facilities, equipment etc., are concerned, in his belief, the local hospital is one of the best of its kind in the country.

During the war and since, Mr. Friesen pointed out, prices of commodities have soared. At the hospital, the monthly payroll has been increased by $2,000. Up to the end of the month, the actual cost of operation will be $40,000 in excess of the same period a year ago.

He stated that in the Kitchener-Waterloo General Hospital, its per diem rate for indigent patients of Waterloo county, had been substantially increased by the Waterloo County Council.

Not Getting Cost

"We are allowed by government statutes", he went on, "the amount of $2.25 per day for these patients. The actual cost today to hospitals of 200-400 beds is $4.00 per day. That means that we have been rendering a service to your patients at a distinct loss.

"We are not asking for grants," he said, "merely that you pay your way. We and you, are indeed fortunate, that your hospital was built when it was and not in these days of tremendous material costs."

Kitchener has raised $1,800,000 for a new hospital, but that amount is far from being sufficient to pay for the proposed new building.

Belleville's hospital debt has been steadily decreased and it will be fully paid off in the future.

Hospital Solvent

"We are solvent," Mr. Friesen said, "and can and will carry on. All we ask as I said before is for you to pay your way.

Up to the end of the year there will be approximately 4,000 hospital days for indigent patients. On the basis of $3.75 per day, "if you raise your allowance to that, we can barely break even."

Mr. Friesen urged council to give the matter of increased rates its serious consideration. "Please try and see if you can pay the actual amount of $3.75. This with the government grant will enable the hospital to come out even financially with this type of patient."

Voices Appreciation

He voiced his appreciation of the assistance given him during his tenure of office as hospital administrator here by all reeves and officials of the county. "I appreciate what you have done for the hospital and for the personal cooperation given me," he concluded.

Warden Nickle assured Mr. Friesen that earnest consideration would be given the request. He wished him success in his new position in Kitchener.

Other Appeals Made

Messrs. Joe Shortt and Norman Edwards addressed council regarding a grant for the Community Service Campaign, pointing out that the Y.M.C.A. Children's Aid Society and Victorian Order of Nurses, operated on a cost basis. City canvass has been completed but the objective of $12,000 is $2,300 short.

D. L. Storey, representing the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association, told council of the work being done by his organization. Within the next two years, he expected to have every resident in Hastings given free x-ray examination. The cost is approximately 50 cents per person and he hoped to be able to be in a position to purchase a camera for the hospital here. He asked for a grant of $800 to assist in the association's work. Mr. Harry Rollins also spoke to council on the matter, pointing out the outstanding work being done by the Belleville District Shrine Club.

SURPRISE PARTY

Gore, Dec. 6.—On Wednesday evening a large number of Centre neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Giles to honor their son Ronald and his bride (nee Hester Cook).

A surprise party was also held the same evening at the same home for Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Coulter who have recently moved to their new home in Rednersville.

Rev. E. W. Todd was master of ceremonies with Miss Barbara Redner at the piano. Community singing was enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Coulter were then asked to take seats of honor and an address was read by Rev. E. W. Todd and Donald Spencer presented them with a beautiful table lamp and pair of bath towels from Centre community. Mr. and Mrs. Coulter graciously replied thanking everyone.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Giles were then asked to take seats of honor and an address was read by Alfred Cairns which was followed by Master Allan Vancleaf and Rodger Redner drawing a very prettily decorated express wagon loaded with gifts into the room. Mr. and Mrs. Giles very graciously replied thanking their friends for the lovely gifts and invited everyone to visit them.

Refreshments were served by the ladies and a social time was spent.

Farm Forum.

Centre and Victoria Farm Forum met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brickman Monday evening with a goodly number in attendance. Following the usual Monday evening radio broadcast and discussion, the remainder of the evening was spent in games of euchre with six tables in play, prizes for high score going to Mrs. Gordon Waterhouse and Mr. Sarles. Consolation prizes were won by Arthur Adams and Rita MacIntyre.

Mrs. Brickman served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed. Next meeting is to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green.

Personals.

Those who attended the Rednersville W.I. at the home of Mrs. Hugh Weese on Thursday evening were Mrs. Lorne Brickman, Miss Audra Brickman, Mrs. Roy Brickman, Mrs. Kenneth Green, Mrs. Earl Fox and Mrs. Ray Fox.

Centre W.A. held a very successful bazaar on Belleville Market on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brickman, Carl and Margaret spent Sunday as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris, Fourth Sidney.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Anderson of Belleville called Friday evening on Mrs. Julia Fox and Mr. and Mrs. Will Fox.

Mr. and Mrs. John Black were Sunday guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fox.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brooks and Glen were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Green and family on Friday. Master Glen Brooks remained overnight and Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Redner and family called on Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brooks and Mae recently. Master Glen Brooks returned home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Fox and boys were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Fox and Mrs. Julia Fox.

Look to Truman For Next Move To End Strike

Murray Urges Unions Stand Together Against "Attack"

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

Washington, Dec. 7. (AP) — With John L. Lewis' contempt conviction already in the hands of the Supreme Court, the United States Government turned to President Truman today for the next move to crush the 17-day old coal strike.

White House aides hinted broadly that when the President goes on the radio Sunday night, he will make it clear that—in the words of one of his cabinet officers—"There will be no turning back in this fight."

On the Union side, President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen pledged participation in a united-front conference of Labor leaders urged by C.I.O. President Philip Murray to resist the legal drive on the United Mine Workers (A.F.L.).

Mr. Murray has called on the Unions to stand together against "the ferocious attack now being made upon them."

The Supreme Court scheduled for discussion and possible decision today whether it will take immediate jurisdiction in Mr. Lewis' appeal from the contempt conviction.

If the high tribunal accepts the case and by-passes the U. S. Court of Appeals, it could announce this Monday and possibly set arguments for later in the week.

Claim Irreparable Damage

The Government, in a petition filed a few hours after the U.M.W appealed the conviction to the intermediate court yesterday, based its application for speedy Supreme Court action on the contention that the strike is causing "irreparable damage".

While the legal fight went on, there were indications of breaks in the Union's resistance to a resumption of coal digging.

Jesse V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal Association, said Union miners were trickling back to the pits at scattered diggings although they risked expulsion from the U.M.W.

There were reports of small truck mines manned by Union miners reopening in Eastern Kentucky. At Durango, Colo., 40 Union men reopened six small mines Thursday.

No Semblance of Break

But there was no other semblance of a break in the miners' stand pat policy and the government found it necessary to put even tighter restrictions on utility coal reserves.

At the same time steps were taken to put the power and light dimout on a virtually country-wide basis beginning on Monday.

Effects of Strike

Pittsburgh — Industry in the United States today braced itself for further unemployment inroads from the coal strike amid reports the tiny trickle of fuel coming from the pits was increasing slightly in West Virginia and in Pennsylvania—the two biggest bituminous coal states.

With more than 290,000 workers affected, in addition to 400,000 miners, new and sharper setbacks were predicted on every hand as a result of the added freight ban. Total strike idle of 5,000,000 was forecast by year's end if the shutdown lasts that long.

In West Virginia, where 102,900 soft coal diggers normally work, Jesse V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal Association, declared "daily increasingly defiant" miners have returned to work at scattered operations, "seemingly fearless" of possible union retaliation.

The Navy Coal Mines Administration said 441 mines were operating in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, employing more than 13,000 union and non-union miners and producing an estimated 185,000 tons. That output represents 15 per cent of the area's normal production. In the immediate Pittsburgh vicinity the Solid Fuels Administration said 44,000 tons were now being dug daily by 3,000 miners in 96 strip mines after the recent increases.

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 7 (CP)—Striking United States soft coal miners earned an average of $61 a week during September, the last full month for which the Bureau of Labor Statistics received figures.

That month the miners worked an average of 41.4 hours a week out of a possible 54 hours a week which would have boosted weekly earnings t $75.25, according to the bureau's figures.

The wage-and-hour phase of the soft coal miners' contract is complicated and easily lends itself to differing interpretations.

This was evident when John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers' Union ledaer told the Federal District Court Tuesday that "our miners work at the operators' option nine hours per day, six days per week."

Here in brief is the working agreement on hours and wages, under which the soft coal miners have been operated, with government control, since the strike of last May, obtained from labor and interior department sources:

The basic rate of pay is $1.18 1-3 cents an hour for seven hours a day of the first five working days of the week. But the mine operates nine hours a day and the miners get time and a half or $1.77 3-4 cents an hour for the extra two hours.

The seven hours a day is for work at the actual scene of the coal digging or normal place of work within the mine. The extra two hours allows for and includes travel time from portal to place of work ando back to the portal.

Pay For Travel Time

Miners working on piece work on tonnage basis, receive 1-9th of their daily earnings as extra payment to compensate them for travel time between portal and place of work.

As a wartime measure the mines were operated, generally, six days a week and the coal miner could work on the sixth day or not as he chose.

If he worked he would be paid time and a half of $1.77 3-4 an hour basic wage. That provision remains in effect.

The mine operator may or may not provide work on the sixth day and the miner may work or not as he chooses. It is optional both ways.

Thus the miner is required to work a nine hour day, five days a week, for which he receives a minimum of $59.25. If work is available and he chooses to work the sixth day he makes an additional $16.00 bringing his total possible minimum earnings to $75.25.

VOTE ON COCKTAIL BARS RESTRAINED BY INJUNCTION

Property Owners Assoc. Against Spending Any Money on Plebiscite For New Legislation

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP).—Members of the City Board of Control today were divided as to what course they should follow, now that an injunction has been issued against the city's proposed plebiscite on the so-called "cocktail bars".

The injunction was granted by Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder in chambers at Osgoode Hall, on application by R. M. Willes Chitty, counsel for Joseph S. Stauffer, a director of the Toronto Property Owners' Association. It is returnable Dec. 12.

The injunction restrains the city from spending any money to take a vote on the cocktail bars and lounge licences provided for in the new Ontario Liquor Act. The restraining order may continue beyond Dec. 12 if a motion for permanent injunction cannot be heard on that date.

If, on Dec. 12, the judge grants continuation of the injunction until the issue is brought to trial, it would automatically prevent the city from holding the proposed plebiscite on New Year's Day, Toronto's civic election date.

The plebiscite in any event would have no legal effect on the provincial liquor legislation which Premier Drew announced Thursday has been proclaimed to come into effect Jan. 1. That legislation provides for sale of liquor by the glass in lounges—already known as "cocktail bars"—and with hotel restaurant meals, but only in Ontario's five largest cities. There are Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, London and Windsor.

Liquor-by-the-glass could be introduced in smaller communities only on an affirmative vote of a three-fifths majority.

This distinction between the large and small communities figured in council's decision recently to place before Toronto voters the question whether they were in favor of the cocktail bars.

Now the civic legislative heads have the whole thing up again for decision. Mayor R. H. Saunders himself was non-committal last night concerning whether the city should take further legal steps to ensure placing the question before the civic electors.

Other members of the Board of Control however said they would press for a placing of the question before the voters Jan. 1.

Controller Stewart Smith, for one, said he thought the question should still be put before the people.

Controller H. E. McCallum said that "if city council at its next meeting decides that the plebiscite should be held, then I suppose it should be held."

Canada May Lose British Bacon Market Unless Production Increased

By GEORGE KITCHENER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP) — The little pig that trotted merrily off to market in the peak year of 1944 is fast becoming just a shadow of his former self, much to the concern of the Canadian farmer.

The top men of Canadian agriculture held a three-day get-together here this week and let it be known that they were really worried about the welfare of the Canadian hog up to the point where the hog goes into the slaughter house and then the concern becomes a dollar-and-cents matter of whether or not Canada can continue to hold her place in the foreign bacon market.

Put down in statistics, the worry over the hog situation arises from the fact the estimated hog production in Canada this year will be 26 per cent lower than it was last year — from 5,861,505 hogs down to 4,350,000. These figures compare with the 1943-45 average which showed hog production then at 7,291,264 a year.

To the average Canadian, this means, though it doesn't affect his pocket book directly, a chance that Canada will lose the British bacon market.

That also is proved by the record. In 1943-44, for example, Canadians consumed 322,392,000 pounds of bacon and pork yearly. In 1945 alone, they ate only 272,068,000 pounds and by the end of this year the total will have dropped to 243,979,000 pounds.

Again in 1943-45 Canada shipped an average of 616,742,000 lbs. of bacon and pork overseas each year while in 1945 they shipped 457,224,000 pounds and this year the amount will be 295,500,000.

The agriculture men, attending the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference, recommended that Canadian hog production be boosted in 1947 to 5,175,000 head, which should provide 269,304,000 pounds for domestic consumption and 365,000,000 pounds for export.

The reason for the decline in hog production goes back to the decrease in the output of feed grains, with which the hogs are fed and grown. Lower feed supplies, incidentally also are the cause of the shortages in supplies of dairy products such as butter and cheese.

The conference decided to ask the government to make a payment of $5 to Western, Canada farmers for every acre they sow to barley, whether or not the land produces a crop. If this is done, many prairie farmers are expected to turn from the growing of wheat to barley, with a resultant increase in feed supplies.

Big Four to Open Talks on Fate Fallen Germany

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Tackling at last the central issue in restoring peace to Europe, the Big-Four foreign ministers gathered today to begin debating the fate of beaten Germany.

State Secretary Byrnes intended also to urge at this or some imminent session at a start on a peace settlement for Austria, which Foreign Minister Molotov thus far has refused to discuss. Foreign Secretary Bevin was reported ready to support the Byrnes move.

British and American officials were especially hopeful that the attitude of compromise which has characterized M. Molotov's recent approach to disputes over the satellite treaties would continue into the work on Germany.

SON IS CHARGED WITH MURDER OF HIS MOTHER

Body of Mrs. G. G. Jewitt, Leamington, Found in Home With Hammer Claw in Skull

Leamington, Dec. 7 — (CP) — William (Bill) Jewitt, 17-year-old Leamington high school student today was charged with murder in connection with the slaying of his mother whose body was found late last night lying face down in a pool of blood in the kitchen of her home, the claw of a hammer buried in her skull.

He appeared before Magistrate J. A. Hanrahan in Windsor and was remanded until Thursday. Jewitt was not represented by counsel.

Mrs. Jewitt, about 50, wife of G. G. Jewitt, a dentist, returned home from a choir practice a few minutes before she was slain. Her son had been to a theatre, police said.

Bill Jewitt's twin brother, Jack discovered his mother's body about 11 p.m. Less than an hour later Bill walked into the home of Percy Burger, a mile west of Leamington. He is reported to have told Burger: "You'd better call police."

A few minutes later Provincial Constables Charles Elford and Stuart Hutchinson arrested young Jewitt. Today Chief Constable A. T. White charged the boy with murder.

Struck from Behind

Police said Mrs. Jewitt, apparently walking into an empty house, had not taken off her coat when she was struck from behind. The claw of the hammer was stuck deep in the left side of her skull.

Police said the half-inch thick inlaid linoleum on the kitchen floor bore marks believed made by the head of the hammer.

Jack, horrified by what he found, said only: "Bill went to see a movie and I went to a football game. When I came back, I found my mother."

Dr. Jewitt was away from the house at the time. When his wife's death became known, neighbors informed him and he went immediately to the house but did not go inside for some time.

Bill Jewitt, hatless and wearing only a light tan windbreaker over school clothes, was lodged in the police station here before being taken to Windsor.

Student At University

The other member of the family Bil"s sister, Jewel, left Toronto by train as soon as she was informed of her mother's death. She is a student at University of Toronto.

The accused boy left home about six weeks ago and was missing for four days before provincial police found him in Belle River, about 18 miles north of here.

To persons who helped find Bill, Mrs. Jewitt said at that time: "We've never had any trouble whatever with the boy. He lives pretty much to himself at times but why he should go away I don't know." She said he was an exemplary boy and had never had a date with a girl.

DESERONTO MAIL COLLECTOR RETIRES

Deseronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— After serving in rain and shine for 55 years, Councillor H. Howard resigned Friday as Deseronto's mail collector. He also carried mail to and from Napanee, 10 miles away, for 38 years.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR 23 TRAPPED IN SUBMARINE

French Underseas Boat Believed to Have Been Sunk by a Floating Mine off Toulon

Toulon, France, Dec. 7 (AP)—Hope was abandoned today for 23 men trapped in the 250-ton French submarine 2326, believed sunk by a floating mine off Toulon, a spokesman for the Ministry of Armies said

French naval authorities said three high-ranking officers were aboard the craft, but names were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

A storm last night halted rescue efforts but attempts to locate the submarine, two days overdue at Toulon, were resumed at dawn by naval and air craft. The submarine formerly belonged to the German navy.

CLAIM SHOOTINGS CONNECTED WITH 'GAMBLING WAR'

Police Think Major Gamblers Putting "Squeeze" on a Newcomer

London, Ont., Dec. 7 (CP). — Sources close to the district underworld claimed today that the two shootings in East London suburban areas Wednesday are definitely linked in a plot of major gambling operators to put the "squeeze" on a newcomer who "muscled in" and made a small cleanup in the last few months.

The same sources said it is strictly a local feud and that police suggestions of an "outside gang" as reportedly made to one operator was incorrect.

What few comments police have made to date have discounted the theory of a "gambling war" here, but since the flareup several persons identified with heavy poker and dice games have been interviewed by provincial officers.

"Nothing so far—we are still working on it," was today's statement from veteran Provincial Police Inspector Alex McLeod of Toronto who entered the probe on Thursday when Crown Attorney Claude Savage telephoned government officials for assistance.

All known gambling spots in Middlesex County areas on the fringe of London remain closed. The operators are spending some of their spare time in a downtown rendezvous almost a stone's throw from the provincial police office conjecturing how long they can keep out of the spotlight.

Police are not believed to have obtained much information of value from James Robert, 32, victim of the first of the two shootings who was felled by a bullet as he went to the front door of his apartment in Knollwood Park. In fact, Robert's important connection with any gambling "war" is now said to be held in doubt. His condition is not serious.

In the second flareup in the southeast section three miles away, Albert Evans, 35, was allegedly fired upon by a masked gunman in the yard of the home of Thomas (Spike) Murphy where Evans is employed as caretaker.

Picton Veteran Escaped Fire

Picton, Dec. 9. —Fred Greatrix was one of the war veterans who escaped from the hospital, at Peterborough, which was destroyed by fire Friday. He telephoned his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Greatrix, here, that he had been removed from the building without suffering injury. Fred served overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and later contracted T.B. Earlier, he had been in hospital in Hamilton.

MINK SHIPPED TO DENMARK

New York, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Among the passengers that sailed for Sweden yesterday aboard the liner Gripsholm were 243 rare Canadian mink valued at $60,000. The animals including 10 foxes are being imported by the Danish Fur Breeders Association of Copenhagen and will be fed canned chicken en route.

Many Leap to Their Deaths As Flames Sweep Famous Hostelry in Atlanta, Ga.

Emergency Morgues Set Up In Various Parts of City

Atlanta, Dec. 7 —(AP)— A pre-dawn fire which started mysteriously in the upper floors of the downtown Winecoff Hotel today turned the 15-storey building into a flaming torch and estimates of dead ranged as high as 100.

An Associated Press count of the dead in city mortuaries at 9:30 a.m. E.S.T. showed 74 dead.

Many of the 285 guests in the 194-room hotel located on Atlanta's famed Peachtree Street leaped to their deaths from the flaming structure. Others were burned fatally or suffocated.

City Detective J. E. Helms who inspected the upper structure shortly before the flames were brought under control at 7 a.m., E.S.T., estimated the death toll might reach 100. A city fireman, who declined to be identified, made a similar estimate.

Another fireman told of finding 16 bodies on one upper floor. The rooms in which they were found were undamaged by the flames and all apparently had died of suffocation. In one room were the bodies of five young girls, in another a woman and three children.

Emergency Morgues.

Emergency morgues were set up in various parts of the city, and a count of the dead was difficult. The municipal morgue reported it had 34 bodies and could take no more.

With the flames under control, firemen kept up a steady procession bringing the dead and injured from the building. Bodies from the upper floors were removed across a bridge which was built over an alleyway to an adjoining building.

The Red Cross set up a special headquarters for identification of the dead, but an official said obtaining names would be difficult because most of the bodies were in night clothes and many were burned or mutilated beyond recognition.

Police Chief M. A. Hornsby said "at least 25 or 30 persons were killed by leaping from windows."

Started On Fifth Floor

The fire apparently started between the fourth and sixth floors of the concrete and brick structure about 3.15 a.m. Police Captain L. J. Carroll said he reached the hotel shortly after that hour and upon entering the building found all elevators stalled.

With his partner, N. W. Smith, he said he fought his way by the stairs as far as the seventh floor, kicking out doors and arousing guests. On the seventh floor they found a negro maid badly burned.

Smith told of breaking into one room and finding it ablaze.

"There was a woman inside," he said. "I dragged her out."

From the /guests came other stories of the stark terror that swept them when the flames and smoke engulfed the building.

F. A. Herring, the hotel auditor, said he awoke in his room on the third floor at about 3:30 a.m.

"I never say anything life it," he said. "Bodies were hurtling down past my window. My wife and I covered our heads with blankets and turned on the fans."

Herring said he believed the blaze originated on the fourth or

Red Cross workers set an emergency first aid station near the hotel entrance on famous Peachtree Street where guests were treated for minor shock and injuries. The more seriously injured were rushed to hospitals throughout the city.

The Red Cross made a radio appeal for blood plasma.

One fireman was killed when a woman, leaping from a high window, crashed upon him as he was ascending an aerial ladder.

One fireman in a rescue crew said that many bodies were strewn in the upper floors and that in one room on the top floor he found a woman's body and the bodies of five children.

A police lieutenant said he could see, from a window of an adjacent building, the hands and feet of several victims on window ledges. The remainder of these bodies were not visible, the officer said.

Police said they had been unable to make an accurate check of guests remaining in the burning building, but had encountered no bodies in the corridors.

The origin of the fire was not immediately known, firemen said.

At 5:15 a.m., E.S.T., about 20 guests could still be seen through the flames as they crouched along ledgers at the 10th, 11th and 12th floors of the stone and brick structure. With several floors beneath them, a raging, billowing mass of flames, their position appeared hopeless to firemen except for those who might leap to safety into firemen's nets.

There was no way immediately to fix the death count. Every available ambulance in the city was doing shuttle service removing the dead and terror-stricken injured.

Guests Leap From Hotel.

Hopelessly trapped, the guests leaped from all sides of the burning structure. About 25 or 30 escaped by descending fire ladders to an adjacent roof.

An Associated Press reporter at the fire said he reached there in time to see four women leap, one of whom apparently was killed instantly as her body crashed through the marquee.

E. B. Brooks, Atlanta detective, who was directing traffic at the scene, said one woman had escaped by making her way down a rope three floors to the fourth storey where she clambered aboard an extension ladder and descended to the street.

E. J. Hosch, an Associated Press reported said it "was all flame and no smoke — all red flames simply eating out the interior of the hotel." He said that of nine women he saw leap from the hotel's upper storeys, six were caught in nets by firemen. Three, however, missed the net and crashed to the pavement.

At 4:40 a.m., E.S.T., guests were still grouped in windows of the hotel's upper rooms and were screaming and pleading for rescue.

Ambulances rushed the injured to city hospitals.

Veterans Safely Removed to Malton

Ottawa, Dec. 7 — (CP) — All patients at the Veterans Affairs Department hospital at Peterboro have been safely removed to Malton, Walter S. Woods, D.V.A. deputy minister, said last night.

A total of 228 patients escaped from the blaze which destroyed the tubercular hospital.

Mr. Woods said a district fire marshal and two officers of the Veterans' Department will leave for Peterboro early today to investigate the fire and ascertain if any court of inquiry should be set up.

However, the department is not considering rebuilding the hospital, which was a temporary one. It is believed the department's present facilities will be able to handle extra patients, the deputy minister stated.

Canadian-Made Toys Will Make Christmas "Just Like Old Times"

BY KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 7. (CP)—This Santa Claus may not have a white beard and seven reindeer—but he does know a lot about toys.

"Why the whole world has gone toy-minded," he said in an interview in his office—which by the way isn't up at the North Pole but in a certain room in one of the Parliament buildings. "Three months ago—that was four months before Christmas, mind you—I had people stopping me on the street and asking what kind of toys were going to be around this year."

Santa Claus—to you he's P. G. Jones of the Export Division, Foreign Trade Service—predicts that Christmas this year will be "just like old times".

"Customers can afford to walk into toyland and be choosy this season for there's plenty of variety," he said. "They can take their time and look everything over without grabbing the first thing they come across as was often the case during the war."

One favor at least the war did for Canada—it turned this country into one of the leading toy manufacturing countries of the world. When Saint Nick slips down the chimney this month he will be carrying Canadian-made toys into practically every home in the Dominion, and into at least 54 other countries, as well, from South Africa to Jamaica.

When the war sliced Canada's toy import trade down to a minimum, manufacturers here saw their opportunity. Today there are more than 250 top industries in Canada, compared with 50 in 1939. Last year toy production here was worth more than $18,000,000, and exports now are running between seven and eight per cent of production.

"The industry would be well advised to build it up next year to 15 per cent," said Mr. Jones.

South Africa heads the list of large importers of Canadian toys. Other importers are Newfoundland, Sweden, Uruguay, the United States, and the United Kingdom.

What is believed to be the biggest doll factory in the British Empire now is operating in Toronto. Other toys are being produced in London, Windsor, and Kitchener. Montreal is in the centre of several toy industries.

A firm in Saint John, N.B., is turning out jig-saw puzzles and from Annapolis Royal, N.S., have come those sets of wooden blocks, dear to the hearts of the five-year-olds.

Toys made from plywood are being produced in British Columbia, and in Vancouver a new factory, started by a couple of Second Great War Veterans, is manufacturing many of this season's popular aluminium toys.

Shugar Acquitted

Ottawa, Dec. 7. (CP)—Dr. David Shugar, former naval anti-submarine expert, was aquitted today by Judge A. G. McDougall of a charge of conspiracy to communicate secret and confidential information to the Soviet Union.

Trial of Shugar, stocky, 31-year-old native of Poland, had concluded a week ago before Judge A. G. McDougall of Carleton County Court.

He was 13th defendant to go on trial as the result of Canada's Espionage Investigation.

By-law to Buy Industrial Site Discussed at Length At Meeting of Ratepayers

Aspirants to Office Claim Money Should be Spent to Secure Homes for Veterans

"Belleville is bursting at the seams. Industry is not looking for one acre, two acres or ten acres these days. It wants anywhere from 25 to 50 acres," Mayor Frank Follwell said to a packed City Council Chamber last night in opening the discussion on the city by-law which calls for authority to spent $25,000 on industrial sites.

The by-law, with another giving the city permission to instal an incinerator, was ably thrashed out by a large attendance of aldermanic and other condidates and a number of ratepayers at the meeting which lasted into the small hours of the morning.

The Mayor in his opening remarks defended the City Industrial Commission stating that that body had done a fine job the past two years in trying and succeeding in bringing industry to the city. "We have excellent prospects for future industries," he said, "regretting the fact that the Commission was unable to tell the public all that had been going on.

Urged to Vote Yes

"The proposed $25,000 would be earmarked to buy industrial sites," he said, adding there is not a site in the city over eight acres. He stated that Belleville had not lost the Canadian General Electric Company, because "we never had them. We had the opportunity to bring the Johns Manville Company here and showed them sites to the east, west and north as we did the C.G.E. But the sites were not suitable. If we want the city to grow we must provide sites for industry. I urge you to vote 'yes' on the question."

Alderman Lorne McDougall, member of the Commission, stated that it had been handicapped through lack of sites. There were no shortage of industrial prospects only they wanted from 15 to 550 acres. One firm demanded 75 acres. "It is impossible to say what sites we want to purchase as prices would go sky-high. We have many plans in view and are working with the railway. If people vote for this expenditure we shall be able to produce a nice industrial scheme."

Wanted Fifty Acres

Johns-Manville wanted a minimum of 25 up to 50 acres. "We did not have a thing to show them," he said. We have got one industry which employs 150 people. The Bata Shoe are coming and will employ 300, and many small industries. The Dominion Rubber Company wanted to locate here but they heard that the Lindsay Arsenal had closed down releasing 2,000 girls and as they wanted 800 they took the plant there. During the past week a large firm has closed an option on a site here."

Alderman McDougall, answering the criticism of Alderman Woodley, stated that he had served two years on the Industrial Commission and he was at liberty at any time to bring industries here.

"Industry first asked about sites, churches, schools and recreation," ex-Mayor Harry Rollins, member of the Commission, said. There was not much recreation here and he commended the council on its purchase of the Hume Arena, although that body had criticised the Parks Board $40,000 debenture for the Fair Grounds. He urged all to be ambassadors of goodwill and use their influence to get the two by-laws passed for they were sound and sane administration.

Question Asked

"Doesn't industry mention housing at all?" asked Angus Duffy, war veteran aldermanic candidate. "What right or priorities has modern industry on housing?"

The housing situation is bad everywhere, Alderman McDougall replied. "We have never had industry turn us down because of the housing shortage. I believe something should be done about it and we should embark on some sort of a housing scheme."

"Which is best for this city at the present?" demanded Duffy, "to set aside $25,000 for industry or for veterans' houses?"

Ex-Mayor George Reid injected a question at this point. "Isn't it true that the city has bought 60-80 acres adjacent to its limits?"

"Not that I know of," answered Alderman H. J. Clarke.

"Isn't it true that the city has bought land for an airport?" ex-Mayor Reid persisted.

Will Give Report

"We have not bought it. A committee will hand in a full report to council next week," Alderman Clarke said.

"The position of industry is the backbone of every city," Alderman Harold Woodley said. "Any criticism I have given the Industrial Commission was done strictly in a way I thought would result in bringing industries to this city. I have no desire to belittle any member of the commission for I am behind that body 100 per cent."

He mentioned an industrial firm that has an option here that will be taken up in the second or third week in January, but he was not in a position to name it. It will employ 800 people. His criticism, he repeated, was done in a way to help the commission for "I have every respect for it."

"I think you're going off the deep end insofar as the C.G.E. was concerned," said Thomas Jeffery, aldermanic aspirant. "You're putting the cart before the horse. The C.G.E. plastic division of Peterborough wanted to come here and demanded so many acres. The County Council turned them down because they figured they would get more money growing beets and turnips for the House of Refuge than to see an industry locate here, or sell the property. The plant moved to Cobourg.

Outlets of Plant

The Johns-Manville and Dominion Rubber Company were great outlet of Stewart-Warner-Alemite here, he said. "Don't you suppose they wanted to locate here so they could reduce transportation costs." The only way for veterans to get houses, he said was to form delegations go to Ottawa, ask for curtailment of unessential building, get a "C" form come back to Belleville and get what you want."

A voice: "Where do you get that stuff. I'm a veteran and I know you're not right."

"I can prove it," retorted Jeffery.

"It's a lot of tripe to say you can go to Ottawa and get a priority," charged Mr. Duffy. The responsibility of securing these lies with the community. I am not against industry but it is a matter of opinion whether we shall have industry. By all means spend $25,000 on industrial sites, but spend five times that amount for homes."

William Harrison said it was not the community's job to get priorities but that of the government. If it curtailed unessential building then everyone would have a chance."

"Last year the city spent $100,000 and I am not offering criticism," James Lazenby, another war veteran aldermanic aspirant said. "If you find a $25,000 by-law necessary to cover industrial acreage, why not one for $25,000 for veterans' homes. There are sites in Belleville where veterans have plowed and dug cellars. If you only want $25,000 for industrial sites what held you back from getting a residential section for veterans where they could assimilate with other residents of Belleville?"

Sold To Civilians

"When I appeared before you for the veterans," he charged, "though you gave veterans lots for one dollar, you sold lots to civilians which had all the services paid for. These civilians who don't know what it is to shed blood or fight got a priority and not with a "C" form. If you lose faith with the veteran and give civilians priorities and sell the soldier a lousy 2 x 4 home, you're breaking faith with them. You told them years ago you would stand back of them. I am not throwing this up to the council but to the civilian population. Give the veteran a chance to live and don't charge him $50 for two rooms or $40 for a shack. That's all he asks."

"You spent money like a woman at the market," Lazenby went on. "Had you spent this money on the veteran and not on Wartime Housing you would have got your money back. He would have paid you five, six or seven per cent and been glad of the opportunity."

The mayor in conclusion said that if its residents wanted Belleville to grow, they must be prepared to accept their responsibilities as citizens. "It is up to the taxpayers to exercise their franchise to promote the expansion of the city and vote "yes" on this by-law, unless they feel the city is big enough as it is."

Dr. Carefoot Testifies in Own Defence; Long List Witnesses Called by Defence Counsel

The Carefoot trial extended into its sixth day today as the long list of witnesses being called by the defence drew near its end. At the close of Friday's proceedings, Dr. Carefoot was on the stand, with one more defence witness expected to be called.

Court officials talked of completing the case some time today with preparations being made for sitting on Saturday evening, if necessary, to bring the case to a close. Dr. Carefoot is on trial on a charge of false pretences involving medical practice.

Going to the stand in his own defence, the 57-year-old former medical practitioner told of attaining his M.D. degree at Queen's University told of practising in Saskatchewan starting in 1914 and then of going to England for post-graduate work at Edinburgh and at London. He stated he was registered at the Colonial Medical Council of Great Britain in 1916.

The time interval of Dr. Carefoot's going into practice in Saskatchewan until 1944 was skipped by defence counsel Malcolm Robb who referred almost directly to the charge on which the witness was being tried.

Tells of McAninch Case

Dr. Carefoot stated that he had first seen John McAninch in 1944 when he had brought his wife for diagnosis and treatment. Then Mr. McAninch's daughter had come seeking treatment, but she had been found to be of a neurotic type and Dr. Carefoot stated he could do nothing for her.

The witness declared as false the testimony given by Mr. McAninch when he had stated that he had never telephoned the Carefoot home with the view of getting an appointment for diagnosis of his own ills.

"Mr. McAninch certainly did telephone my home," declared Dr. Carefoot. "Over the telephone I urged him to get an independent diagnosis and I told him the same thing when he later came to the house. I did not want to treat him."

Dr. Carefoot testified that Mr. McAninch had later come back after going to Toronto and he had diagnosed his illness as being ulcers. He had then given Mr. McAninch treatments.

Denies Bargaining

To a question by defence counsel Robb the witness declared that never at any time had Mr. McAninch bargained with him regarding cost of treatment.

"Then when Mr. McAninch says he bargained for $125 he is not telling the truth?" questioned counsel.

"No", was the reply.

Dr. Carefoot also declared as wrong Mr. McAninch's evidence when this witness had stated that he could hear a Westinghouse motor in the cabinet of the machine by which he had been treated. There was no motor in the cabinet. The motor was in the basement, said the witness. He stated the motor had been fixed in the basement by his son through a desire to correct oscillation variation.

"Constable Keays has stated that he saw the name Richard E. Callaghan on the machine by which he was treated, is that true?" asked counsel. "Constable Keays has a good imagination," returned the witness. The name on the machine was scratched off."

To further questioning Dr. Carefoot stated that he had used the Abrams method of treatment but had never used the Abrams machine. Neither had he used in Belleville the machine by which Constable Keays had sworn he had been treated on.

Paid for Treatments

Returning to the McAninch treatment the witness declared that after a few treatments the patient came along fine. Near the end of the treatment, Mr. McAninch had stated "I owe you about $125." The money had been paid but not in advance, said the witness.

Continuing Dr. Carefoot stated that Mr. McAninch had gone back to his job on the railroad but officials had put him off because he had no health certificate. Following a return visit by Mr. McAninch the $125 had been returned with Mrs. McAninch signing a receipt for the money.

The accused also denied telling Constable Keays that he had cancer. "I give myself more credit than that," he said. The constable was suffering from gastritis or acute inflammation of the stomach lining, and took about ten treatments. "Then he quit and never came back. He never said goodbye, or anything. Later I met him, he asked me how much I owed him and I told him to forget about it."

Treated for Growth

Commencing the afternoon session Oscar Taylor of Eldorado told of doctoring with Dr. Stobie for an ulcerated stomach passage and of having an operation in 1942. Later he had suffered gas pains and had suffered hemorrhage for which he had doctored with Dr. Beattie at Madoc.

Then in 1945 he had gone to Dr. Carefoot and had been told he had a growth in the bowel. He had taken 27 treatments on an electrical machine with result that a severe pain in his side had disappeared.

Mrs. Bessie McCoy, Front St., told of her small daughter doctoring for a diabetic condition and of later going to Dr. Carefoot. There had been no talk of money but she had given the doctor $5, she said.

James Cowan, Belleville merchant also told of taking treatments from Dr. Carefoot and at the time of taking treatments stated he had seen Mr. McAninch. In conversation with Mr. McAninch, the latter had told him that he had felt much better than before taking treatments.

Had Lost Weight

John McCann of Malone told of having falled from 210 pounds down to 155 pounds and of being treated for what he had been told was a rheumatic condition which had affected his legs. He had gone to Dr. Carefoot and after the usual blood test had been told he had a growth in the lower bowel. He took treatments and his condition gradually improved until eventually his leg condition completely cleared up. He was now doctoring with Dr. Beattie of Madoc for a lung condition, silicosis, he said.

Mrs. Blanche Brown, of Madoc, told of having a major operation in 1934 by Dr. Stobie but still had not been well afterward. She had suffered a pain in the side and when going to Dr. Carefoot had been told she had a growth. After taking 26 treatments she was now better than for ten years.

Ed Gartley of Belleville also told of not being well for 20 years and of suffering from hemorrhages before going to Dr. Carefoot. Dr. Carefoot had not told him what his trouble had been but after taking treatments he now felt fine and was working every day. Treatment had been by machine, he said.

James Ray of Sidney Township testified as to his wife's condition before she went to see Dr. Carefoot and of the improvement noted following treatment.

Wife Benefited

J. M. Wood of Belleville told the court he had paid out "considerable" money with very little results as result of his wife's illness which had commenced following the birth of their first child in 1920. Mrs. Wood had testified in court previously to her husband.

Continuing Mr. Wood stated that he had been skeptical of taking Mrs. Wood to Dr. Carefoot as he had the highest faith in orthodox medical treatment. But he had seen improvement in a friend as result of treatment by Dr. Carefoot and had persuaded his wife to go.

"My wife is now a new woman and in better health than for the past fifteen years," he said.

Called to the stand in the defence of his father, Stanley Carefoot denied that he had directed Constable Keays to the basement at the time of his father's arrest last spring. He also stated that a certain machine identified in court by Constable Keays had not been found in a packing case in the basement but that it had been on the floor near a work bench. On instructions from his mother he had taken the machine out of the packing box some days before. The machine in question had never been used by his father for treating patients at Belleville, he said.

Under cross examination by Grown Prosecutor Davis the witness was called upon to differentiate between the machine identified by Constable Keays and the machine which it was claimed by a previous defence witness, had been used by Dr. Carefoot for treatment.

Denies Statement

Witness admitted conversing with Constable Keays in the basement of his father's home but denied that to a question as to whether he thought his father was sincere he had replied, "There's a sucker born every minute."

"I do not recall that," he said.

Mrs. Ethel Carefoot told the court she was a graduate of Queen's University where she had met her husband. She had gone with her husband to Europe when he took post-graduate work and on their return to Canada stated he had started a practice at Milestone, Sask.

Following the death of Mr. Carefoot's mother the witness stated that her husband had become interested in cancer treatment and had gone to California in 1923 for a course at Abram's clinic and on his return to Saskatchewan had set up a clinic in Regina.

Her husband had never held himself out in Ontario as a dully qualified physician, she said.

Mrs. Carefoot told of Mr. McAninch calling the Carefoot home on the telephone and stated Mr. McAninch was wrong when he said he had never telephoned her husband.

Identifies Panel

The witness identified a panel of a dismantled machine and stated that one with the name "Callaghan" scratched out had been the one used on the machine with which her husband gave treatment. She had seen her son building the machine into the cabinet.

Mrs. Carefoot also claimed that the machine identified by Constable Keays as the one on which he had received treatment had never been out of the packing box until it was taken out some days previous to the police raid.

She recalled Constable Keays came to her husband for treatment and under cross examination stated that the machine had not been used by her husband from 1933 until 1942 or 1943 when her son Jack Carefoot had set the machine up in Belleville.

Morning Session of Court

Eight witnesses were called by the defence at the morning session at the beginning of which Crown Prosecutor Davis voiced his objection to witnesses relating in court what former doctors had told them regarding their illness. This was agreed to by Judge W. S. Lane, and also by Defence Counsel Malcolm Robb.

Mrs. Eva Murphy, of Belleville, as the first witness called stated that she had visited Dr. Carefoot but following examination he had expressed himself as not being desirous of taking on her case. She had been troubled with a rash, she told the court.

Second witness called was Mrs. J. M. Wood, also of Belleville. She told of having numerous operations at Winnipeg, in the United States and also at Belleville for female disorder. However, with recurrent illness she had gone to Dr. Carefoot against her own wishes, but on the recommendation of her husband.

"I went to Dr. Carefoot reluctantly," she said, "because I felt there was no cure.

She stated Dr. Carefoot had told her she had trouble in two places but did not definitely state it was cancer. She had taken treatments consisting of drops on the tongue and by machine and in six months had felt herself completely cured. She had not done anything for 19 years, but now was able to do all her own housework, she said.

Had Treated for Anemia

Mrs. W. H. Nobes of Belleville, told of having felt weak and of Dr. Cronk treating for anemic disorder. Later her trouble had been diagnosed as either tuberculosis or pneumonia, and still later as gall bladder trouble. When her doctor had told her that the symptoms pointed to gall bladder trouble she had not believed him, she said. She had visited Dr. Stobie regarding a growth in her neck.

On going to Dr. Carefoot, Mrs. Nobes stated he had diagnosed her trouble as cancer in the abdomen and in the neck. She had taken 28 treatments and progressively got better and was now in good health. On cross examination Mrs. Nobes admitted that Dr. Carefoot had questioned her as to "what it would be worth to be cured." At suggestion that tongue drops which constituted part of the treatment were alcohol, the witness made no comment.

Lawrence Hubble, Sidney township farmer, told of having suffered with a distressed stomach and of having a sciatic condition in his shoulder. He had spit streaks of blood and despite treatment his condition gradually got weaker. He had feared cancer as both his mother and sister had died following deep X-ray and therapy treatments.

Going to Dr. Carefoot he had been told that his stomach condition resulted from a chronic appendix and was asked if he had ever suffered lung trouble. Witness admitted under cross examination that Dr. Carefoot had told him he had cancer of the lung. He had taken 30 treatments consisting of drops on the tongue, rubbing on of liquid, and application of electrical plates. He had told Dr. Carefoot that if he could cure him he would make it worth his while.

Corroborates Husband's Testimony.

Mrs. Hubble corroborated her husband's testimony as to his present condition and stated that she also had doctored with Dr. Carefoot. Previously she had undergone an operation for gall bladder trouble but still suffered pains. Dr. Carefoot had told her she had no cancer, but that her trouble was an ovarian cyst. She had taken treatments for a growth in her side.

SPREADING DISSENSION

London, Dec. 7 (AP)—The Moscow radio, quoting the "Iranian newspaper 'Sagar'" said last night "large numbers of Greek troops" had arrived in the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company's southern Iran oil fields and were "spying on the workers and spreading dissension among them." The report lacked confirmation from other sources.

Report of Industrial Commission for 1946

At a meeting of the City Council on Thursday night, Mr. Robt. Pringle, chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission, submitted a report of the commission's activities for this year. The text of report follows:

To His Worship, the Mayor, and members of the City Council.

It has been customary for this Commission to submit to the City Council a report of the year's activities to the newly elected Council, that is about February of each year. This year it was thought the report should be submitted to the Council who appointed the Commission rather than the new Council. That is why this report is being submitted at this joint meeting tonight.

Your Commission has, I am pleased to report, received good support from the Council of 1946, but unfortunately, not unanimous support. However, complete unanimity in the City Council is probably too much to expect. The budget of one thousand dollars plus the funds necessary to complete the Industrial booklet was placed at our disposal, and has, I believe, been spent to the best advantage. In the present election campaign the Commission has been criticized from some candidate for spending too much money travelling to interview industries, and by many others for not travelling sufficiently, but from the point of view of the Commission, unfortunately, sufficient travelling has not been done, due to lack of time on the part of the Commission members, as personal contact is, without a doubt, the best way of persuading industries to consider Belleville, and it is hoped in the near future great American industrial market will be thoroughly canvassed.

Secretary Engaged

Due to the number of inquiries that were being received by the Commission, and the general pressure of work, it was decided during the year to retain the services of Mr. Badgley, and he was employed by the Commission in co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce and is performing the duties of Secretary of the Commission, and has been of great assistance.

Among the notable visitors to Belleville during the year was Mr. H. H. S. Kingscote, Industrial Commissioner for the Canadian Pacific Railway for London, England. Mr. Kingscote visited Belleville in July, and spent two days in the city. He was shown all the city industrial sites and surrounding districts, and carried away with him a clear impression of Belleville as a prospective home for future industries, and arrangements are being made with him to distribute our booklet throughout Great Britain. Mr. M. W. Maxwell, Chief of Development for the Canadian National Railways, Mr. F. W. Collins, Industrial manager for the Canadian Pacific Railways, Mr. S. J. Raymond, Industrial Representative of the Canadian National Railways for the Ontario district, also visited Belleville during the year and were very interested in the industrial prospects in the city.

Year of Achievement

In the way of achievement during the year, publication of the Industrial booklet was, no doubt, the most notable. This was the result of three years of labor and reached the Commission at a time when it could be best used for industrial advertising. These booklets have won very high praise from industrial managers of the banks and railways and many manufacturers to whom they have been distributed. Arrangements are being made to distribute them in the British Empire and the Canadian National Railways have furnished us with an extensive list of American prospects, and over five hundred copies have been ordered by the Industrial Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway for distribution direct by themselves. The following new industries have located in Belleville since the cessation of hostilities, and the Commission bids them a warm welcome:

Avon Jewellery Limited, costume jewellery.

Bata Shoe Company of Canada, Ltd., shoes.

L. E. Kingston, inner liners for automobile tires.

Mason & Parker (Canada) Ltd., furniture, step-ladders and toys.

Shurly-Dietrich-Atkins Co., Ltd., saws.

Gordon Young Limited, stock foods.

Employment figures

There are approximately 6000 people employed in Belleville today, being one thousand less than last year. Actually there are only 230 people unemployed and about 60 of these are married women and about 75 men over the age of 60 who are unable to do hard work because of their age and are not capable of doing other work. Thus it would seem there are only about 100 people out of work today, but the fact that there is about 1000 less people employed than this time last year emphasizes the importance of industrial development work.

The housing situation in Belleville is still acute, but it is felt it will gradually improve, and private initiative has already built 150 houses this year.

As to the various housing schemes, such as Wartime Housing Limited and Housing Enterprise Limited, the Commission feel that there is so much involved in a municipality entering into one of these schemes, that the responsibility for this should be on the City Council, and accordingly, no recommendation was sent forward to the Council, but the Commission did interview the authorities in Ottawa and passed the result of these interviews to the Council for whatever action they saw fit to take, and the Council can count on the Commission to support them in any action they may wish to take along this line.

Industrial Sites Needed

It is not an idle boast to say that Belleville has received its fair share of post-war industries. Besides these industries mentioned above, the Corbin Lock Company has almost completed a million dollar expansion, which is, of course, tantamount to a new industry, and two very large industries have optioned land in the vicinity of Belleville and the Commission fully expects to make an announcement about them in the near future, but at the present time their names are confidential. With reference to the purchase of land for industrial purposes adjoining the city, and industrial expansion point of view would be a misfortune if this is not done. At the present time in order to obtain new industries, Belleville needs an industrial site, that is a site served by railway and other utilities, and the Industrial Development Department of the Railways have presented to the Commission a very neat plan that can be realized if suitable land is acquired.

As pointed out on other occasions, the function of the Industrial Commission is two-fold. Firstly, to encourage new industries and secondly, to assist presently established industries in whatever manner the Commission can. I suppose the reason the Commission is subject to so much criticism and sometimes abuse is that their work is confidential and the Commission knows how to keep confidence even in the face of ill-warranted and ill-advised criticisms. The Commission is always willing to receive advice as to how its work can be improved and will welcome all suggestions and will not enter into newspaper or political arguments to justify its existence.

We make no claim for being solely responsible for bringing into Belleville or locating in Belleville any industry. We are in competition with no one and so long as the city makes steady, industrial progress as it has in the past, we are well satisfied, and do not care particularly who claims the credit, and in fact our observation is, that all progress and industrial establishment is the result of co-operation of all civic boards, officials and citizens.

Thanks Associates

In conclusion, may I thank all the members of the Commission for the efforts they have exerted the past year, and particularly Mayor Follwell and Alderman Mc Dougall, who have really done most of the work of the Commission. These two have called on many prospects and handled a volume of correspondence, and have each taken many days from their business to show prospects the city and deserve a special vote of appreciation. On his trip to the west, the Mayor took time out to [illegible] industrial calls for the Commission, and we have received letters from western industrial representatives saying how pleased they were to be visited by the Chief Magistrate of Belleville.

I am sure that with the full support of the Council both morally and financially, that this time next year the Commission will be able to report even greater progress and prosperity in 1947 than in 1946.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Robt. Pringle, Chairman.

Obituary

JOSEPH JOWETT
(Madoc)

Madoc, Dec. 7 (Special)—Joseph Jowett died at his home here on Wednesday, Dec. 4th., after an illness extending over a period of ten years.

Born in England 58 years ago the late Mr. Jowett was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Jowett. For the past twenty five years he resided here and was in the employ of the Canada Talc Company. He was a member of the Church of England. He was a veteran of the First Great War and went overseas with the 155th Battalion.

Surviving him are his wife the former Nellie Reynolds; two sons, Wilfrid of Belleville, and Alfred at home. Both sons served overseas in the last Great War. He is also survived by a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Storring, Madoc.

The funeral was held here on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 7th., from the home of his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Storring. The service there and at Lakeview Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. L. Hutchinson, Rector of St. John's Anglican Church.

LATE MRS. JAMES BRADY

Marmora, Dec. 7 (Special)—The funeral of Mrs. James Brady was held from her late residence at 10 a.m. on Thursday to Sacred Heart Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. H. J. Farrell.

The pall bearers were P. Murphy, Roy Price, James Price, L. P. Hughes, Ernest Auger and Harold Auger. Interment took place in Sacred Heart cemetery.

Relatives and friends from out of town attending the funeral were Mrs. D. Murphy, Mr. Roy Price, Mr. James Price, Miss Marguerite Price, Toronto; Mr. Ernest Auger, Mr. and Mrs. E. Brahoney, Mrs. T. Forestell, Mrs. J. Benor, Campbellford.

Stalin Rumored 'Seriously Ill'

Paris, Dec. 7 (AP)—The London correspondent of the Rightist French newspaper L'Epoque reported Friday that "sources in London" had "confirmed" rumors from Turkey that Russian Prime Minister Stalin was seriously ill.

The dispatch followed a London columnists' report that "Stalin's illness" is the subject of daily bulletins from the Kremlin.

The London Star carried Wednesday in the column "Star Man's Diary" the following item:

"Russians in London today were as anxious as everybody else to hear more about reports from Turkey that Stalin's illness has now taken a dangerous course.

"Embassy officials found it rather difficult to stick to the old formula about Stalin being in the best of health. It is now generally accepted, even there, that the 68-year-old leader, prematurely old through the strain of the last few years, is all but an invalid. It is significant that, for the benefit of embassy staffs, the Kremlin now issues bulletins about Stalin's health. Only a few people in London have been told the full content of them."

Boy and Matches Cause Baby's Death

Sudbury, Dec. 7 —(CP)— A three-year-old boy's baby sister died in hospital yesterday, the aftermath of his striking matches while his mother was away.

Tommy Broulette of Sudbury found a box of matches in his home yesterday and struck one. Frightened by its flare, he threw it from him.

It slipped down his sisters back as she was playing in a canvas infant swing.

Mrs. Broulette, who had taken some packages to a neighbors house, returned to find her baby a living torch.

When the boy discovered what had happened he ran across the road screaming for his mother. Flames had demolished the swing by the time they returned The girl's body was more than two thirds seared by third degree burns.

Mrs. Broulette wrapped her baby in a blanket and tried to smother the flames. Then she took her to St. Joseph's hospital, but despite emergency treatment blood transfusions and the efforts of Dr. J. H. Stanton, the child died today.

THINKS HITLER STILL ALIVE

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— A new theory on the present whereabouts of Adolf Hitler was produced last night by Capt. Harry Sperder, a United States Army translator at the Nuernberg trials. Speaking before Upper Canada Lodge of B'nai B'rith, Capt. Sperder expressed the personal opinion that Hitler is alive and directing atomic bomb experiments in Argentina.

Capt. Sperder said his belief resulted from a "piecing together" of reports of Fascist activities in Argentina. He thought Eva Braun actually died in the Chancellery bunker—beside a Hitler "double" —because the body identified as hers wore red shoes, and she was know to have "a crazy yen for red pumps."

Halifax Explosion 29 Years Ago Is Recalled

Halifax, Dec. 7—(CP) — Up to that time it was the most engulfing, man-made, split-second holocaust in history.

A ship's eight-ton anchor arched into the air and buried itself in a hillside three miles away. One third of a city was wiped out. A mammoth tidal wave flung ships high onto the shore. Bayonets of glass tore through flesh and matter alike. More than 1,600 persons died violently.

That was 29 years ago, and Friday in Halifax, on the anniversary of the catastrophe that hurled itself upon the city Dec. 6, 1917, brief memorial services were held for those who perished by blast and fire.

It was a mild day as dawn broke, Dec. 6, 1917. As Halifax citizens hurried to work the French freighter Mont Blanc, carrying 3,000 tons of trinitrotoluene in her hold and benzol on her decks, moved up the harbor toward Bedford Basin through the Narrows.

At the same time the Imo, a Norwegian freighter in the Belgian relief service, started out of the Basin, through the same Narrows.

Too late the vessels saw that their paths would cross, and disaster rushed toward its appointed time.

The ships hit and sheered away. Wisps of smoke rose from the Mont Blanc and still persons on the shore were unaware of what impended — the Mont Blanc bore a secret cargo.

Fire raced into the guts of the Mont Blanc's hold and when the T.N.T. no longer could withstand the heat it erupted in one gigantic flash of flame and thunder that shook the earth 60 miles away, flattened the north end of the city like a house of cards and sucked the waters of the harbor up in a towering tidal wave.

It was a disaster the like of which Canada had never known before or since. Hundreds met death in a single instant and the bodies of 400 were never found.

Bomb Wrapped As Gift Explodes In Dutch Home

The Hague, Dec. 7 —(AP)— A bomb wrapped as a Christmas gift exploded in the living room of a Hague family Thursday night killing 48-year-old Frans Boer and seriously injuring his wife. Three other persons were slightly hurt. Police said they had no definite clues upon which to work.

Economic Merger of Zones

The Anglo-American Zones economic merger agreement is seen as constituting a substantial advance towards creating a new non-aggressive Germany established on a sound economic basis.

The agreement gives practical effect to the policy of the United Kingdom Government, of which Mr. Bevin has been a powerful advocate, that the British zone must be made a working success. The U.S.A. Government's offer of economic fusion, which followed Mr. Bevin's declaration at the Council of Foreign Ministers meeting in Paris that the British zone must be organized so as no longer to place a burden upon the United Kingdom taxpayer, afforded the opportunity to press forward in this direction.

Both the United Kingdom and U.S.A. Governments still hope that the Russian and French Governments will join them in rebuilding the German economy on lines which they are convinced will be for the good of Europe as a whole. The Anglo-American agreement specifically in its article 12 keeps the door wide open to the treatment of Germany by all four Occupying Powers as an economic unit.

In revitalizing German industry the object of the agreement is to ensure that Germany should have sufficient raw materials and capital equipment in working order to enable her to produce exports to pay for her own essential imports.

The scheme does not aim at rebuilding German foreign trade and industry in such a way that Germany could directly or indirectly become a menace to her neighbors.

By introducing a common and rising standard of living, including food rations, for the Germans in both zones, by stimulating a revival of peaceful German industry and finding work for Germans now barely subsisting in enforced idleness, the Agreement offers a means whereby the British and American zones can pay their own way and later pay back their debt to Britain and the U.S.A. for imports, with German morale improving and Germans able to resume their economic and political life.

The broad aim is to convert Germany from a dangerous and costly plague-spot into a healthy self-supporting and useful section of occupation economy. Pending the adoption by all four Occupying Powers of a common constructive economic policy appropriate to the exigencies of the situation which has developed in Germany, the United Kingdom and U.S.A. Governments consider that they can best contribute to that end by progressively restoring economic stability in the two western zones. That is what the Anglo-American Agreement is designed to achieve.

Horse's Future Assured

Live horsepower will continue, say the Mounties who oppose the view that the noble animal is to disappear. He will continue to serve in the R.C.M.P. where he "reigns supreme in some phases of police work" and "a final blow to live horsepower never will be struck." The Mounties Quarterly sees the noble animal "must take over on back concessions on those not infrequent occasions when nature holds the polished machine helpless in her grip."

The horse, one of the animals which have helped to bear civilization from the days of barbarism to those of culture and which still fills a role, will carry on. It would be one of the regrets of all civilized man were the horse to pass out of the picture of life. The beauty and symmetry of this animal, his intelligence, good nature and readiness to bear the burden of progress on his back, his patience, and his response to human kindness will still be manifest in the world.

This assurance will delight mankind which has been familiar with the horse in the role of burden-bearer as the associate of man in carrying the burden of progress. Ancient monuments prove the horse's place in olden times as a bearer of loads and companion of man in battle and in the field. In the Middle Ages the war horse, known as a charger, wore trappings or accoutrements and even armor and bore his master into conflict. Many a hard-fought field, famed in history, was won through his speed and courage. The weight of the charger counted in battle in those far off ages. It was only in the last war that the horse yielded to mechanical transport and even then the Russians used cavalry for scouting and for sudden swoops upon the Huns.

The horse has earned his place in civilization for carrying the load of humanity and for companionship with man's progress. Of the other domesticated animals, the dog and cat as companions of men and women and children are not in danger of their future. Cattle are doubly assured of an endless association with civilization for the milk and meat they provide. Sheep and swine, other domesticated animals, are likewise assured of their place in the world because they are used for food. The slow mule too still carries on and the goat too.

Just as there is a place for man in labor today and in the future, so it is the view of horse lovers that there will be a place for the horse in the coming era. There are still burdens which he can best bear. There is besides the other appeal of the horse for in spite of planes and motorcars, the horse holds his place on the race track. There he is seen in his roles of speed and performance at fall fairs everywhere. His popularity with the crowds conclusively proves the time will not come when the horse will have to bow his way out of man's world.

Trieste At Last

Take all the times the Big Four have reportedly reached an agreement about Trieste. Lay them end to end—the "agreements," not the Big Four—and you still have a very sidewise progress toward that Italian Treaty we are all waiting for, says Christian Science Monitor.

But this time the Trieste package looks ready to wrap up. In commenting on this, we are inclined to leave only the string untied now. It is just possible Mr. Molotov might have another afterthought. Or somebody may have been listening to himself instead of the other fellow when a slippery point was being settled.

The last big question to be solved concerned the time when American and British troops should leave the international area around Trieste. That time is to be determined by the Governor of the area, instead of being fixed by a date in the treaty as Mr. Molotov had proposed. The last step to this agreement was therefore a Russian concession.

Previous to that, the Russians had made another important concession when they agreed to make the Governor responsible to the United Nations instead of to the Big Four. They made yet another when they agreed to give him decisive police powers under the U. N.

The Russians fought hard for the desires of their satellite, Yugoslavia. But the provisions which they have now agreed to are in line with United Nations interests. We are glad to note that as between a course indicated by spheres-of-influence politics and one called for by United Nations logic the Russians finally chose, with their western allies, the better way.

Money In Butterflies

There are all sorts of ways of earning a living, but few people think of butterfly farming. In the BBC's Overseas Service recently, L. Hugh Newman talked about his butterfly farm in England. He breeds butterflies and caterpillars for collectors, biology teachers and scientific research institutes. There is quite a large and steady demand. His smooth-skinned caterpillars are bred specially for cancer research, and thousands of common Cabbage Whites are regularly taken by manufacturers of insect sprays and washes who want to test their new products on them. The rarer specimens are disposed of in special auction sales every month, and sometimes fetch high prices, as much as £110 for a pair. Each year there are "fashions" in collecting certain species of butterfly. The more delicate kinds of butterfly are bred in large greenhouses and given special food. The more common kinds are produced out-of-doors on trees covered by enormous envelopes of mosquito netting. What seems to mark out the job as a good one, however, is that every now and then wealthy collectors commission Newman to travel or cruise far afield in search of rare specimens for their private collections.

DECEMBER SEVEN

This is enough, I think, to say,
  Remembering the tragic past:
For arrogance, the final day;
  For evil cunning, this the last!

For smiles that vicious plotting hide,
  For false betrayal of a friend,
This day forever, and world-wide,
  In history will mark the end.

This day stripped cruelty of pride;
  Saw infamy's concluding score;
And every free-born boy who died
  May sleep in peace forevermore.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 7TH., 1926.

In the municipal elections yesterday Eardley Wilmot was elected mayor in a three cornered contest. His opponents were Ex. Mayor George Bennett and Ex. Ald. Harry Greenleaf. The contest was the closest between Mr. Wilmot and Mr. Greenleaf, the former winning by a majority of 286. The result of the voting was Wilmot 1296; Greenleaf 1012, and Bennett 605. The following were elected aldermen in order given: Morley P. Duff 1547; A. B. Collins 1418; E. T. Cherry 1413; Russell Wotten 1412; G. R. Sinclair 1408; J. L. R. Gorman 1342; Robert Goudy 1340; Clifford C. Walker 1305; Dr. Proctor 1302; George O. Tice 994; William Donahue 893. The by-law to raise the term of office for aldermen to three years was defeated by 675 votes, the vote being 1011 for the by-law and 1686 against it.

Rare Finds Are Made in Africa

Legless amphibians that bear young, edible orchids and gigantic flowers that reminded observers of "a past age" were among rare specimens found on an expedition into Nyasaland in Central Africa, officials of the New York Botanical Garden and the American museum of Natural History have disclosed, according to The New York Times.

Although some botanical material arrived here a month ago, most of this and the mammal specimens—the first ever brought to this country from that remote African territory—are awaiting shipment from Beira, Portuguese East Africa. They were found by a recent expedition led by Arthur S. Vernay, who is now in the Bahamas.

Livingstone's Country

From May 20 to October 12, the group undertook the first large-scale expedition to this area since Dr. David Livingstone's exploration in 1859. Dr. William J. Robbins, director of the garden, pointed out that the Nyasaland region contained rich and varied flora as well as new and interesting specimens of interest to scientists in the field of mammalogy.

The orchids, according to Mr. Brass, are a staple food for natives of the grassy uplands. Resembling small Irish potatoes they have a crisp texture when raw and taste "gooey." Natives dig them out of the high plateau, wash them in preparation for boiling, then mix them with dried fungus or bean soup. At times it is prepared as a relish or dressing for corn meal. The whole is washed down with a palm wine that tastes, it was said, like "cider or champagne."

Like High Areas.

The plant is believed to be of the Disa group of terrestrial orchids, which grow 5,000 to 7,000 feet above sea level. This and others will be grown in the conservatories here.

Unlike our hybrid orchids, the edible tubers are not as colorful, although they come in almost any color. Also, natives are less impressed with their decorativeness than outsiders. Food experts here may find the tuber more popular, Mr. Brass explained.

The amphibians, though previously known to science and found measuring five feet in length and three-quarters of an inch thick in South America, are extremely rare and difficult to capture. Three of the African species, each about one foot long, have been sent here. Members of the same group (Caecilian) as salamanders, toads and frogs, they live under rocks and logs and prefer moist places. They are pinkish in color, relatively hard and muscular, have tiny mouths, and their eyes are almost completely hidden. Their ancestry dates back through the ages. Beneath their smooth, earthly exterior are fish-like scales deeply imbedded in the skin.

May Have Reverted.

A highly complex group, according to Dr. Charles Bogert, chairman of the department of reptiles and amphibians at the museum, they possess teeth and feed on insects. He and Dr. Anthony agree it is quite possible that the amphibian provides an example of a living form which has lost some of the more highly developed characteristics of the amphibian group and has reverted to a lower level. Another alternative is that this species never developed appendages.

Studies will be carried on here, it was announced, to determine whether they provide an example of "evolution in reverse."

An interesting botanical find was the giant Lobelia, growing on boggy ground about 7,500 feet on Nyika Plateau. Ten feet high, the plant is infrequently found in the high mountains of South America, according to Mr. Brass, and its spikes or flowers are a reminder of bygone ages.

3,500 Specimens.

The expedition collected 3,500 individual specimens of mammals, reptiles, amphibians, fish, moths and butterflies.

Concentrating in mountainous areas rather than the lowlands, the group captured buffalo, rhinoceros, lions and leopards, and even the tiny shrew.

Dr. Anthony, who is curator of the museum's department of mamalogy, said it was probable that new species had been uncovered.

Effects of the recent war were noticed even in the almost inaccessible reaches of Nayasaland, he reported. A number of the natives on the expedition had been members of the King's African rifles. The territory is a British protectorate.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The Incinerator By-law And Your Livelihood

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Suppose you got word that your boss was about to fire you. Would you take 30 minutes to plead for another chance?

Suppose you put your house on sale and the first prospective buyer offered to take it off your hands at a loss to you of a thousand dollars. Would it be worth 30 minutes of your time to dig up a better offer?

Suppose you saw your business heading for the rocks. Would you spend 30 minutes trying to figure out a way to turn loss into profit?

The security of your job, the value of your house, the success of your business may depend upon whether you take 30 minutes — maybe less— to go to the polls next Monday and vote for the incinerator by-law.

If the by-law fails you won't lose your business, your house or your job today. But you may lose them tomorrow. If you don't lose them tomorrow you may lose them the day after tomorrow. For someday the city of Belleville will stop being just plain lucky. Someday it will suffer the disaster that is invited by civic improvidence.

What would happen if the city should be swept by an epidemic —by an epidemic nurtured on the open filth that lies on our garbage dump? What would happen to the tourist business? The tourist business would go elsewhere. What would happen if the odors from the raw garbage became a steady unbearable stench? What would happen if the "Friendly City" became known as the "Smelly City?" What would happen if the waters here, through seepage from our garbage dump, become so lethal to fish and so obnoxious to boatmen that the commercial fishing industry and the yachting trade vanished overnight? What would happen if some of our industries sickened by our lethargy moved to other centres? What would happen if new industries passed us by for the same reason?

If untreated garbage should someday be the cause of this, it would mean red ink, probably bankruptcy, for hotels, apartment houses, restaurants, laundries, shops, filling stations, bus companies and movie houses. It would mean loss of jobs for hundreds of Bellevillians employed in these industries. It would mean wage cuts for others.

In other words, it might wreck your business; it might cost you your job. It would bring a tremendous decline in property values. It would knock the bottom out of the real estate market.

Unless the incinerator by-law passes next Monday — every property owner and every job holder in Belleville will be sitting on a keg of dynamite.

Is it worth 30 minutes of your time next Monday to cast a vote that will put vitality into your business, security into your job, and value into your home?

Jack Marshall,
Chairman of The Local Board of Health.

VOTE ON COCKTAIL

Controller D. A. Balfour was noncommittal, but said he was opposed to cocktail bars.

Embarrassment to Govt.

Mr. Chitty said his client took the action because such a vote was "illegal" and a waste of the taxpayers' money. He said the vote "could only cause embarrassment to the government and to the city and could do no possible good."

Incidentally, an official of the city clerk's department estimated cost of printing the ballot at between $100 and $150, and advertising costs at about $150.

Provincial government officials meanwhile pointed out that the mechanics of the act prevent any possibility of sale of liquor by the glass in lounges as early as Jan. 1. The regulations for premises will not be announced until next Thursday, and must be studied before prospective licensees can file applications

Then a minimum of three weeks is required to cover the advertising stipulations respecting applications. All applications must be advertised in newspapers twice, at least a week apart, and the second such advertisements must appear at least two weeks before the sitting of the Liquor License Board which will deal with them.

Sources close to government circles estimated altogether it would be February at the earliest before cocktail lounges would be in operation anywhere in the province.

BLUE EYED BABIES IN EVERY FAMILY

I read in your column some time ago, says a correspondent who has just lost a bet, that all babies are born with brown eyes and.... your confirmation of this will bring me ten dollars, just like that....

(G.C.)

Of course I can't confirm, affirm or deny what you may have read in my column. Sometimes I am abashed at what I read in it myself. But for your discomfiture and the assurance of many other readers I shall repeat what I have said here many times before, to wot: All babies are blue eyed at birth, and permanent pigmentation of the irises (color rings around central dark pupils) appears after four to six weeks.

The term "blue eyed" or "blue eyes" is not scientifically correct for as a matter of fact all human eyes, of whatever race, sex, age or complexion you examine, are brown—that is, all except the eyes of albinos. Albinos have no pigment in their irises.

It is merely the variable amount of pigment in the iris of the eye that makes different eyes seem "blue," "gray", "brown' or "black". The pigment itself is always brown, and so the eyes are always brown, no matter whether they have the least pigment and hence look "blue", or the most pigment and hence seem "black."

Parents with lighter colored eyes("blue" or grey") have children with lighter colored eyes ("brown" or "black") have children with dark eyes, as a rule although this is by no means invariable. The pigment of the irises, like the pigment of the hair and the pigment of the skin, may be light in some children of darker parents or dark in some children of lighter parents.

Another popular notion about the eyes is equally unscientific—the notion that this one has "big" or "large" eyes and that one has "little" or "small" eyes. Actual measurement of the size of the eyes of any two individuals of the same body size shows no significent difference, even if the one's eyes look "large" and the other's eyes look "small." The angle of the palpebral tissue, as we scientific fellers call it—the width of opening of the eyelids—largely determines the "large" or "small" appearance of the eyes.

Then I infer from many letters that there is a common impression that eyes can be "transplanted" now. Of course that is fantastic. What is transplantable is the cornea—the clear membrane or front window of fthe eyeball —to replace corneal covering which has been scared or damaged by injury, ulcer etc. and is no longer transparent. This is similar to skin grafting. If the quarter-inch or half-inch clear corneal tissue "takes" then the blurred sight of the patient may be restored to more useful vision than could possibly be obtained otherwise.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What does "Arms" in hotel names signify?

"Arms" in this connection is short for "coat-of-arms," a heraldic device of a family.

Inns, taverns and public houses in England were formerly known by the various devices on their signs; as, the Boar's Head Tavern and the Mermaid Inn. Often the inn sign was taken from the coat-of-arms of a nobleman or other person of distinction who lived in the vicinity. Hence there were inns bearing the sign and name of the Oxford Arms, the Salisbury Arms, and the Courtenay Arms. Sometimes inn-keepers adopted the coat-of-arms of the King or Queen after they had visited or patronized the inn; hence the common names "the King's Arms" and "the Queen's Arms."

The practice of giving hotels, apartment houses and other buildings such high-sounding names as the Chester Arms and the Colton Arms was copied after this old English practice. The Beekman Arms at Rhinebeck, New York, built about 1700 and operated as a hotel continuously ever since, is said to be the oldest hotel in the United States.

Is pure water good to drink?

Absolutely pure water would be injurious to the human body and all other delicate living things.

All drinking water contains mineral elements. Whether water is injurious or conductive to health depends on the presence or absence of disease-producing foreign matter or the proportion of minerals. It is impossible to prepare any substance of such purity chemically that it is completely free of all foreign matter whatever. There is no such thing as absolutely pure water. As defined by the Pharmacopoeia, there may be ten parts a million or about one-half a grain a gallon dissolved solids in "distilled water." No animal or vegetable life could exist in such water and a fish would immediately "drown" in it. "Water," wrote Henry Fabre, "is always water, whether it comes from the stagnant pool or the clear stream, from a poisonous liquid or a heeling infusion; and it possesses the same properties, when it is rid of its impurities by distillation."

LONG HORSEBACK JOURNEY

Calgary, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Despite the fact there are two railway lines, an air route and a bus service from Calgary to Montreal — a distance of about 2,250 miles — William G. Hunderson of Calgary prefers to make the trip on horseback.

Hunderson, hoping to start his saddle marathon in about a week or 10 days, plans on travelling an average of 45 miles a day and possibly exceeding 50 if conditions are favorable

His route will take him along Canadian roads as far as Winnipeg where he will turn south and travel through Minnesota, returning to Canada at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

TOPPLING COAL TRUCK KILLS TORONTO MAN

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— A toppling coal truck yesterday crushed 49-year-old Arthur Bates of Toronto to death at 10 a.m. in a freak accident at King and Jordan streets in the heart of downtown Toronto.

A member of an office buildings' maintenance staff, Bates was directing the movements of a coal truck making delivery of coal to the building. The right rear wheel of the truck broke through a glass fanlight in the sidewalk. The heavy vehicle toppled over and crushed Bates against the building.

URGES GAME CONSERVATION

Guelph, Dec. 7 —(CP)— If a check isn't soon put on the rate at which hunters are depleting Ontario of its stock of wild life the province will be barren of game within 20 years, warned Gordon C. Mathews, game and fishing overseer of the Department of Lands and Forests, today.

Mathews was commenting on a report that officals of the Waterloo Fish and Game Protective Association had decided to back the current voluntary survey sponsored by the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

Aldermanic and School Trustee Candidates Given Splendid Hearing at General Meeting

Issues Vital to the City as a Whole Discussed at Great Length

In one of the best attended public meetings held prior to a civic election in years a crowded City Council Chamber heard several aldermanic and school trustee candidates air their various platforms last night.

The candidates spoke following an interesting discussion on the two by-laws on which the electorate will be asked to vote on Monday, namely, the installation of a city incinerator and to raise the sum of $25,000 for the purchase of industrial sites.

Mayor Frank Follwell acted as chairman for the meeting which was marked by some serious as well as humorous argument. Speakers were allotted five minutes for their addresses although some overshot the mark and others did not utilize the full time.

Alderman Harold Armstrong, the first speaker, referred to the courage and determination of the pioneers of the district who built the urban and rural sites. Competition was much keener now than it was twenty years ago and every community should be ready to hold up its end. Each has a problem of its own and he believed that community pressure was necessary, especially in housing. Seventy-five lots in the city had been sold to war veterans for one dollar which had not been completed. "If we can get the same priority given to Wartime Housing to the individual he would be a better citizen and this a better community. We should give the same consideration to individuals as to organizations, who want to come here and build a lot of houses we don't want."

Alderman H. J. Clarke—"Your financial status here is sound and one of the best in the province". He reviewed the financial position in the last seven years. "I am in accord with the incinerator by-law because I brought it in."

The city wants the money for industrial sites if and when an industry comes here to secure a site and not for any special acreage, he said. Referring to Parks Board debenture of $40,000, Alderman Clarke said $10,000 had been spent on horse barns at the Fair Grounds, and they have $30,000 yet to spend."

Alderman E. E. Follwell—"I am in favor of both by-laws and last year was in favor of sewage disposal plant. After the incinerator is erected, we should go before the electors and get this disposal plant. It may be obligatory soon.

As publicity chairman, Alderman Follwell pointed out that Belleville had received more publicity this year than ever before "especially on the Pacific coast". Referring to housing, "I don't know the answer, but I do know we need housing of some kind."

He noted that several houses in the city which were not completed, "and maybe some of the veterans can explain that."

Everett Liddle, D.V.A.—"Regarding these houses they are now for sale at attractive prices."

George Brown said he tried to be a "good neighbor". I've heard a lot of arguments about these issues. I haven't got my house finished yet. The disposal plant is a pense but your health."
vital necessity as it is not an ex-

He felt that housing was a vital thing. "The situation," he said, "had brought about the greatest number of divorces in years. I don't care how you get them but for humanity's sake let's try and get houses."

"If Wartime Housing can put us over the hill to get a family together, then I'm for it, although I am not in favor of it," he said.

He urged all to get behind the council elected. "I'm for any council who will make this a progressive city and it's up to you to back them up."

Angus Duffy said he hoped that Belleville will not make the mistake the rest of Canada is making. "The veteran can buy his own house. Don't fool yourselves — what we want is the right to get the priorities for we are being outbid by civilians who stayed home and made money."

He was all for industry, he said, and if elected would do what he thought was right for the city and residents.

Harry Hill, "I am vitally interested in city, the veterans, the by-laws and industries."

"We are losing three of the best aldermen we ever had in Thompson, Trudeau and McDougall. I am a free man, lots of time experience and will give all to the best of my ability."

Thomas "Derby" Jeffery, "I am heartily in favor of the incinerator and think all should vote for it.

"We have recreation grounds at Stewart-Warner with floodlights, why not cancel the debentures on the Fair Grounds.

Referred to the D.V.A. prices on veterans' homes. "Will you see that they get priority to finish them?"

"They're already built," answered Mr. Liddle.

He had been in council for three years and out four. "I was a young whippersnapper before, but I think it's an education. I'm behind the mayor 100 per cent and am not riding two horses in this race."

Arthur Keegan felt there were three major things on the agenda. He was proud he started the subject on the incinerator. "I come from Foster Ward where the smell is terrible. The incinerator is money well spent. I want to see this condition cleared up as yesterday the stench was blowing in direction of the hospital. Is that good for health?"

He agreed with sending fire equipment to rural areas. "We should co-operate with the county," he said.

James Lazenby said he belonged to no political party and believed in free thinking and free speech within their limits. He had fought overseas in the First Great War and worked for everything he owned.

"These veterans fought for you and if all contributions from the City of Belleville were tabulated, you would find it far exceeded anything you have been asked today.

"We don't want to see veterans on the street asking for dimes. When a veteran is offered $15 a week he got more in Flanders where he didn't have to worry about his family. They were taken care of. Give the veteran a break. Give them the right to live by giving right to pay six per cent so in 15 years they can own a home."

The incinerator on Zwick's Island will be just as much a disgrace as the city dump. He was in favor of an incinerator or any improvement that is good.

Clare Ridley felt the veterans deserved first consideration with respect to homes. Housing and industrial expansion go hand in hand, but there is unemployment here with about 200 collecting unemployment insurance.

If industry is to come to Belleville then the first thing to get is homes. He deplored the fact that there was nothing in sight for the young unemployed men a lot of whom haven't got homes.

Lindsay, he said, had nine new industries and 138 new homes, even if they are Wartime Housing. "Let's face the facts, and Wartime Housing is the only agency which can produce homes here."

Belleville should have had the incinerator years ago. He was in favor of it and would use his influence to see that the by-law was passed.

The large number of people present at the meeting was a pleasant surprise and was an incentive to the council.

William Finkle, Board of Education candidate, did not think it necessary to bring up importance of education. As chairman of the 1946 Board, he said they worked as a unit and not for personal publicity.

"We have an exceptionally good slate from which the electors can choose. It gives me great pleasure to be able to do something for a city that has done so much for me," he said.

Arthur L. Burke has been vitally interested in progress of Belleville he said. "As a candidate I would appreciate any support and if elected would do my best to provide an education for your boys and girls to teach them to live more abundantly."

Frank Creeggan felt that vocational and guidance courses could be expanded. He hoped that the city could expect the best teachers to come to Belleville and would work to that end. He knew what it was to face the world without the education he would have liked to have had. If elected he would do his best to see that the boys and girls got the best education possible or a vocation.

The mayor stated it was the best combined meeting of its kind held in his tenure of municipal life. Belleville is a 15 million dollar business and when there is criticism on small amounts spent to publicize the city, it is small business.

The mayor reviewed his stewardship. Council had appointed committees to look after some homeless families. It had received assurance Belleville would get first priority on any housing scheme in which the city might engage. This city was the first place government officials met to study the housing situation. He paid tribute to former mayors and aldermen and appreciated their assistance in contributing to his success during the past two years.

"We tried to introduce a health unit but it did not materialize, but this matter has not dropped. It will be revived." He paid tribute to the Board of Health and the work it had done.

He had received the utmost cooperation from county officials during the past two years, on roads and other things, also from the local members of parliament.

"Those who criticized expenditure of money on travelling, do not realize what loss I incurred in time from my business. They do not know what that means."

He recalled the Hon. George Dunbar promised an industrial farm near here and felt this was due to the fine feeling and cooperation that exists between Belleville and the Department of Municipal Affairs. He also recalled that the first municipal school will be held here next week.

He urged all to vote yes on both by-laws and suggested that all support the City Parks Board and their efforts.

"Belleville must not recede. If you wan't progressive action, elect men who will give it to you. I will do my best to serve you as well as I have in the past."

Member of Engineering Firm Explains Incinerator Project Which Will Cost $87,000

C. A. Meadows Discusses By-Law and Answers Questions of Residents at Meeting

The estimated cost of the city incinerator, the installation of which the city electorate will vote on Monday is $87,000, payable at $6,000 over a spread of 20 years and with an operating cost of some $3,000 per year, Mr. C. A. Meadows, of the firm of Meadows and Critoph, Toronto, told a crowded City Council chamber on Friday night.

Mr. Meadows spoke at the special public meeting called by Mayor Frank Follwell which discussed the incinerator by-law and also that requesting the ratepayers authority to spend $25,000 for the purchase of industrial sites in and about the city.

The speaker based his estimate of operating costs on the incinerator at Sherbrooke Quebec, which were $6006 annually but he said, this incinerator was one of the hand-operator type while the one recommended for Belleville was automatic and would cost approximately half that amount to operate.

Mr. Meadows outlined the various methods of garbage disposal of which there are three: a dump quarry; the trench system, and burning. He recommended the latter idea for a city like Belleville.

Explained Burning

He explained that the burning of garbage required two main characteristics: 1st, a building and plant to receive the garbage, burn plant to receive garbage, burn it and turn it into clinker and ash for fill purposes, and second, to have a stack high enough and so designed that a minimum of fly ash and fumes would be distributed over a wide area in a large volume of air so there would be no detrimental effects to residents.

Mr. Meadows stated that he had surveyed possible sites for the plant which of necessity must have a distance between the dumping floor and the floor where trucks received their loads of ash of 18 feet. He had looked for a site with a natural difference in level in order to minimize costs, and had found one located on Zwick's Island. The difference in height there is twelve feet but this would be better than building on the dead level.

Produce 32 Tons Daily.

A survey of industries, and surrounding and various cities had been conducted to arrive at a safe figure of garbage tonnage upon which the design of the incinerator could be based, the speaker said. He had estimated that Belleville produced 32 tons of street industrial and domestic refuse per day. The greatest demand would be in September when the estimate reached 49 tons daily due to canning factories, etc.

He had based his recommendation on equipment and a building which would handle safely 40 tons per eight hours which could be increased in peak time to 120 tons.

Mr. Meadows described the two types of incinerators. The first was the hand-operated type which was not satisfactory since it took so many man-hours and was dirty.

In the second type, a circular furnace has an upper floor with a feed hole 3 feet in diameter. The main burning chamber is equipped with a conical casting, perforated with two arms diametrically located which revolves at a slow rate so the garbage is stirred up. Four or five time a day as the clinker and ash are pushed to the outside, the furnace grates in the outer ring are dumped and the ashes and clinker falls into a large hopper at the bottom of the incinerator. The ash is quenched by radial jets of water which eliminate all dust and fire hazard.

Not Touched by Operator.

From the time the garbage is dumped until the time it is formed into smoke and ashes, it is not touched by the operator. The plant at North Tonawanda near Buffalo, the same as is recommended for Belleville, is as clean as a personal home with the exception at times of a slight accumulation of dirt near the dumping hole. The walls are bright, and between loads the operators clean the plant. It is perfectly sanitary and spotlessly clean and a stranger would not know what the plant was unless he saw a load of garbage or ash.

The grounds may be landscaped, the speaker said, and be a creditable piece of work to any city. There is no fear of smells, unsanitary conditions or unsightliness. He recommends that the entrance be lined with trees or shrubbery so that a garbage truck disappeared from view when it turned off the highway to the plant.

"The Belleville plant," he said, "could be operated by two men but in the peak it might be necessary to add a third. As far as he could see, the whole could be taken care of in an eight-hour shift or in the peak this could be increased to ten, twelve or fourteen as the situation warranted.

Asked For Questions.

At this point Mr. Meadows invited queries from the meeting and many questions were asked. In answer to one he stated that the ashes are collected separately from combustible garbage. It was necessary to keep out of this material such things as ashes, pieces of iron or other heavy metals but tin cans could be burned. They form a neat clinker and are a distinct asset to the incinerator.

He had no hesitation in recommending the Zwick's Island site as an ideal spot for the incinerator. "By having it there," he said, "it would be conducive to keeping the plant in first class condition for it would be so conspicuous, residents would know immediately if city officials were letting it run down."

Will Be No Odor

Told that prevailing winds here were westerly, Mr. Meadows said that there would be no odor and practically no ash because the space in the channel which conveys the hot gases to the chimney is built with baffles which slow down the draft and precipitates the ash outside. Later in answer to another query, Mr. Meadows stated that the chimney would be 125 feet in height which with high temperature, combustion and height will dispose of the gases over such an area that no odor is apparent.

The smoke from the incinerator, if operated properly, is barely perceptible. The burning temperature runs between 1,500 and 2,000 degrees. Everything is consumed but there are some flue gases containing little organic fumes which are disposed of in the air.

The incinerator was designed to take care of growth of population. If Belleville grew to a city of 50 per cent more than at present the incinerator would take care of its needs for the next 50 years.

Asked about delivery of the plant Mr. Meadows stated it would take 13 weeks, and a month to prepare the plans. If tenders were called for in January, the plant would be in operation by midsummer.

He recommended that the discharge from the plant be dumped in the marshy area on the west side of the Picton highway near Zwick's Island. A solid road could be made for a power shovel to run on, then the shovel could be used to excavate the black muck to dump back on the ash fill. Then this could be landscaped and the new cavity used for more fill, and so on, so that in years the entire marsh would be filled in. He estimated that 1 1-2 acres could be filled in each year. In addition to ashes and clinkers other city refuse could be dumped there too.

Could Use For Industry

Mr. Meadows felt that the land after it is filled in and covered with the black muck could be used as industrial sites. He quoted the situation in Holland along these lines, where land reclaimed from the sea was now part of the country.

He warned against any municipality utilizing too much of its waterfront for industrial purposes. "This should be left and developed for the enjoyment and recreation of its citizens," he said.

Asked about the life of the unit, Mr. Meadows told the meeting that the furnace would need re-lining every five or six years, but the remainder of the plant would last indefinitely possibly 100 years.

No Auxiliary Fuel Needed.

In answer to a query about the quantity of fuel required to operate the plant, the speaker said that the Tonawanda plant put in five tons of coal last spring and by August it had used less than half of this amount. There is practically no auxiliary fuel needed because the building is heated by hot gases on week days. On Sunday an auxiliary oil heater under automatic control would be used. Only in the fall when wet garbage such as comes from canning factories, would auxiliary fuel be required.

There were thirty incinerators operating at present in Canada and all are functioning well and city officials are well satisfied.

As far as operators go, Mr. Meadows stated he had made arrangements with the superintendent of the Tonawanda plant to have the man selected here to visit him for a few days for instruction purposes. Labor costs about $1.10 per man hour, and the chief operator need be a good grade intelligent man and not an engineer. Items of expense would be two or three men, electrical power, cleaning materials, renewal of certain parts, etc.

Supported by Board.

Later Dr. Jack Marshall, chairman of the Board of Health, said that for the past four years the city had received the report of the Board and the first item was the incinerator. "The Board," he said, "asks you to get out and vote for it and so clean up one of the worst messes in Belleville. We have been lucky in that the city's health has been good — but we can't be lucky always."

Mayor Follwell expressed his appreciation and that of the meeting to Mr. Meadows for his fine address.

C.N.R. Employees Honor Associate

Retiring after 46 years of service with the Canadian National Railways, Frank Giffin of Brockville was presented with a billfold and a sum of money at a dinner held in Kingston early this week. Approximately 104 company employees attended the dinner. He was presented with an address from employees and officials in which their appreciation was expressed for his long years of service, ability and excellent contribution to the progress of the company. The address was presented by N. Thompson, superintendent's chief clerk at Belleville.

Congratulations to Mr. Giffin were extended by W. G. Doherty, superintendent at Belleville; Mr. Thomson, assistant chief engineer at Toronto; Ernest Pharand, engineer's department, Toronto; E. L. Kiwanis Ladies' Auxiliary Holds Social Evening

The December meeting of the Kiwanis Auxiliary was held at the Centre on Thursday evening, with an attendance of sixty and President Ethel Stiver in the chair.

"O Canada", was sung and the minutes read, then each one introduced the member sitting at her right.

The chairman of the various committees, reporting on their years' activities, showed gratifying results. Chris Logan, chairman of the Welfare Work, stated that 301 articles had been made. The sum of $811.75 was raised on the Hope Chest, under the Chairmanship of Flossie Smith and $554.50 was realized from the Tag Day, with Nancy Fozard as chairman.

Altogether the Auxiliary has enjoyed a most sucessful year, and President Ethel Stiver congratulated everyone for their wonderful co-operation during her term in office and stated that the past year had been a very happy experience for her. She hoped for the same splendid c-operation for the new president whom she announced would be Flossie Smith. After her introduction and welcome, Flossie expressed her thanks for the honor conferred upon her and stated that she too hoped for the same co-ordination, which had made the past year such a successful one. At the conclusion of President Ethel's remarks ,"For She is a Jolly Good Fellow" was sung and the meetinge was dismissed.

Bridge Conducted

Bridge and euchre followed and the prizes were given for hidden scores, which added interest to the games. Those attaining the lucky scores were as follows—Bridge, Jessie White, May Hinchey, Bessie Marsh, and Julia Tice. For euchre, Doreen Stovin, Mary Wallbridge, Erma Reid.

Delicious refreshments were served by Pearl White and her committee.

On behalf of the Auxiliary a vote of thanks and appreciation to Vi Kuntze, chairman of Entertainment and to Pearl White, chairman of Refreshments and to all others who assisted in making the social hours after the business meetings so enjoyable, was ably expressed by Jessie White.

The Experts Say

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP) — Just about now mother is watching the family savings of ration coupons dwindle before her eyes as she puts every extra bit of butter and sugar she can lay her hands on into the special goodies which go to brighten that Christmas season just around the corner.

Plum puddings, mincemeat, and Christmas cake, probably already are underway as they must be given at least a month to "ripen." Good housekeepers claim ripening brings out the rich flavaro of the spices, raisins, peel, nuts, brown sugar and molasses.

Some of those precious cake ingredients may be still in short supply this year, but for the most part many that haven't been seen since early in the war will reappeal. For instance a few choice walnuts from Manchuria will show on grocery shelves for the first time since 1939.

This year such Christmas baking "musts" as spices, peel, dates, and so on have been removed from under the price ceiling, in accordance with the Prices Board policy of gradual decontrol where goods are in fair or plentiful supply.

Lucky this season is the mother with a family of non-butter-eaters. It means so much more of that rationed ingredient may be put to holiday use—such as into the making of that favorite festive shortbread.

Shortbread Ingredients: — ½ pound butter; 1/3 cup icing sugar; ½ teaspoon vanilla; 2½ cups pastry flour.

Roll out thin and cut with small cutter. The recipe makes approximately six dozen cookies.

Whether your holiday menu announces turkey or chicken this year, nevertheless with cranberries in such plentiful supply there still will be plenty of sauce on the side.

For a new cranberry sauce recipe try: four cups cranberries (one pound); two cups water; two cups sugar. Boil sugar and water five minutes and then add berries which first have been washed and examined. Boil 5 minutes without stirring and then boil five minutes longer, stirring slightly.

On the dessert side here is a well-tried recipesfor Carrot Pudding guaranteed to top off your Christmas dinner on a high note.

Carrot Pudding: 1½ cups flour; 2 cups grated carrots; 1 cup currants; 1 cup suet; 2 cups grated carrots; 1 cup potatoes; 1 teaspoon soda; ½ cup milk.

Carrots, potatoes and suet should be well ground. The pudding must be allowed to steam two or three hours.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S A BIG SEASON for the small fur coat, so nice over a suit or a warm wool skirt and blouse—or with slacks in the country. For casual wear there is a pea-jacket done in Alaska seal, or, for budgets, in mouton lamb. Nice big gilt buttons in double-breasted array give interest and charm.

NOWADAYS it would seem that a whole wardrobe of handbags is necessary for the accessory-conscious. To carry with formal, after-five clothes or with a dinner dress, one designer has done a big drawstring bag in black satin decorated all over with hand-beaded jet bowknots.

IT'S NICE to see fresh-looking, flattering pink hats stop dark brown or black clothes. Small, head-hugging hats of pink felt, with feather fancies in black or brown, are frequently used both for day and evening wear.

W.M.S. CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Tweed — The December meeting of St. John's United Church Women's Missionary Society was held on Wednesday evening in the church parlor and included the Evening Auxiliary, Mission Band and Baby Band. There was a large attendance and the room was beautifully arranged with a large Christmas tree and other decorations. Mrs. Lincoln Elliott president of the W.M.S. had charge of the first part of the meeting using the Christmas program outlined in the Missionary Monthly; a "Christmas Candle Light Service" on India and Canada. Those taking part of India were Mrs A. Montgomery, Mrs. Wilber Bateman, Mrs. A. McTaggart and Miss M. Frost; those of Canada, Mrs. H. Loyst, Mrs. Connor, Mrs. Ernest Blakely and Mrs. McCoy. Mrs. George Gordon read the scripture lesson, followed by a Christms carol sung by Mrs. M. G. Dales. The offering was received and dedicated by Mrs C. Barnett. Several carols were sung during this service.

Following this was a very fine play called "The Night Before Christmas" was presented by the Mission Band and Baby Band under the capable leadership of Mrs. C. Alton assisted by several ladies of the Evening Auxiliary, with Carol Ann Connor and Shirley Way taking the leading parts. Several little boys and girls were dressed in costumes of the different countries; as well as the three wise men; a solo by Lola Benny "O Little Town of Bethlehem" and a piano solo by Laird Meiklejohn, "Jingle Bells," were added features of the program. Colored pictures of India were shown on the screen (explained by Mrs. Elliott in the absence of Mrs. Moffatt) followed with a piano solo by Martha Elliott.

This brought a very enjoyable evening to a close. Refreshments were served.

CARMEL COMRADE CLUB

Carmel.—The Carmel Comrade Group met in the Schoolhouse on Thursday night, under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barlow. A very inspiring worship service was presented by the school children.

Mr. Carman Dafoe led in the song service which was followed with a reading by Mrs. Percy Reynolds; a guitar solo by Mrs. Raymond Lawrenson and a reading by Mrs. Carman Dafoe. Mrs. Clarence Barlow then introduced the guest of the evening, Mr. R. H. Macklem, Belleville, who spoke on "Rural Education". Mrs. Merle Robinson expressed appreciation to Mr. Macklem for his very fine address.

Readings were given by Mrs. Clarence Barlow and Mr. Clare Horton. The National Anthem closed the meeting. Refreshments were served by the ladies.

ST. ANDREW'S W. A.

Marmora.—The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Association was held in the Church Hall on Tuesday afternoon. Members of the Association had gathered at 12:30 p.m. for a pot luck dinner which was heartily enjoyed. At 2.30 pm. the president, Mrs. Thomas Cousins took the chair for the business session. The devotional period was conducted by Mrs. E. C. Prentice following which a short business period was held. The pastor, Rev. E. M. Cadigan, then conducted the election of officers for the coming year. The following were elected:

President, Mrs. T. Cousins (re-elected)

Vice President, Mrs. P. Gordon

Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. R. E. Neal (re-elected)

Financial Secretary, Mrs. H. Vanstone

Treasurer, Mrs. F. R. Wells (re-elected)

Pianist, Mrs. L. R. Green (re-elected)

Auditors—Miss M. Brown and Mrs. D. Thomson.

The various committees were selected as follows:

Kitchen—Mrs. F. Grant, Mrs. T. Hannah and Mrs. F. Sweet.

Parsonage—Mesdames H. W. Sabine, H. C. Barlow, G. Jarvis, H. R. Haacke and W. J. Pack.

Flowers—Mrs. E. C. Prentice

Communion— Mrs. E. C. Prentice and Mrs. F. Sweet.

Arrangements were made to serve the supper for the Sunday School scholars on the evening of December 20, in the Church Hall.

The three local circles of the Association will be responsible for the food and serving.

The meeting closed with The Lord's Prayer in unison.

REDNERSVILLE W.A. MEETS

November meeting of Rednersville W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Thos. Thompson with a good attendance. Meeting opened with a hymn followed by the theme song and a Scripture Lesson read by Mrs. A. Irish.

A letter was read from Mrs. Hough, Toronto, expressing thanks for a quilt sent to her recently. Plans were made for a market sale to dispose of goods remaining from the bazaar, and it was decided to make aprons to augment the amount of merchandise, also that gifts be sent to four members who have left the community to live elsewhere.

Letters were read from Mr. Ross Roblin and Mrs. A. E. Phillips in gratitude for flowers and fruit sent them during their illness.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Hennessey. Readings were given by Thos. Thompson, Mrs. Hugh McLean, Mrs. Harold Ward and Miss Gertrude Webster. Mrs. Hennessey and Mrs. Harry Adams contributed a duet. The meeting closed with a hymn and prayer.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her committee.

W.M.S. CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

Wooler. (Special.) — The Christmas meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of the President, Mrs. S. L. Terrill with a large attendance. Mrs. Terrill presided.

Several Christmas carols were sung after which the Mission Band gave a fine program, including the Christmas Story by Mrs. Waite, illustrated by means of flannelcraft. At the conclusion of this part of the program a treat of popcorn, apples and candy was passed. Eight members of the Auxiliary presented a short pageant. The four representing India were Mrs. R. Redcliffe, Mrs. Orvis, Mrs. Ada Boneham and Mrs. Gooding and those representing Canada were Mrs. C. D. Cole, Mrs. W. Delve, Mrs. J. J. Way and Mrs. W. A. McColl.

Rev. W. Delve presided over the election of officers. Mrs. P. Gooding read the report of the Nominating Committee which was accepted.

WALLBRIDGE W. I.

The November meeting of Wallbridge W.I., was held Nov. 27, at the home of Mrs. K. Kingston with a large crowd present. The meeting opened as usual by singing the Club Ode followed by repeating The Lord's Prayer in unison.

During the business period Farm Radio Forum literature was distributed and the Health Bulletin was read, also cards from the recently ill and bereaved.

The Blue Cross Hospital Plan leader has reached her required number of subscribers and subscribers are now listed under the insurance plan.

A committee of Mrs. P. Westover, Mrs. L. J. Ketcheson, Mrs. H. Ketcheson, Mrs. Will Sine and Mrs. H. Gay was chosen to work on the L. T. Scrap Book.

It was decided to carry on with the educational trip to Peterborough taking the girls who are registered for the cereal course this Winter.

A very interesting paper on "How Confederation Came to Canada" was presented by Mrs. Will Sine, standing in for Mrs. C. Smith.

Proceeds from sale of the soap were reported.

A vote of thanks was tendered the hostess by Mrs. L.J. Ketcheson and Mrs. Hamann. The meeting closed by singing God Save The King, followed by the serving of refreshments.

Recently Married Couple Honored By Community

On Friday evening about 75 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arch Cook, Massassaga, to do honor to their daughter, Hester and her husband, Mr. Ronald Giles and to offer congratulations on their recent marriage.

Mr. Gerald Snider acted as chairman for the following program, a duet by June Gray and Jean Vader; readings by Mrs. G. Bisdee and by Mrs. A. Hillman, a solo by Mrs. M. Davidson, following which an address was read by Jean Vader on behalf of the community and a presentation of miscellaneous gifts was made.

Hester and Ronald graciously replied and thanked everyone for their kindness and invited all to visit them in their home. Refreshments were served and a pleasant evening spent.

V.O.N. News

A Victorian Order nursing service that is becoming very well-known among young mothers and keenly appreciated by those who have taken advantage of its benefits is the "demonstration bath" through which a mother is taught the proper way of bathing the new baby. However, the service involves a much wider instruction than this.

For instance, the way in which it works out to best advantage is to have the mother contact the V.O.N. so that the first day she is home from the hospital with the new member of the family, a nurse will arrange to be present for the first morning when the baby is to be looked after in its own home.

The nurse will arrive at the most convenient hour and carefully demonstrate the best method of giving the baby its daily bath. She will also prepare the day's feedings and leave them all ready for the mother. Any problems which the mother wishes to talk over with the nurse can be discussed. When the mother feels that she is able to, and has had sufficient instruction, she will take over the routine herself. A telephone call to the V.O.N. headquarters in the Kiwanis Centre will make it possible for the service to be obtained, at a small fee, by any mother.

Woman's Club Holds Bazaar

All streets of Belleville led, eventually, to the Lounge Room of the Y.M.C.A., on Campbell Street, Friday afternoon, when the ladies of the Belleville-Prince Edward Woman's Club sponsored an afternoon tea and sale of useful articles.

The room was made festive with festoons of red and green, wreaths of evergreen, and lighted candles in harmony with the Christmas season. Mrs. M. B. Weese, president, and Mrs. G. F. Lent welcomed the guests. Mrs. C. Ackerman and Mrs. G. Goraline convened the tea room where pure white baby 'mums and dark red carnations in a cut glass comport centred the tea table covered with a cream colored lace cloth, and further adorned with tall red tapers in crystal holders.

Ladies presiding over the silver tea services were Mrs. W. Thomas with Mrs. A. Palmer for the first hour; Mrs. Ida Goodmurphy with Mrs. M. Trumpour for the second hour, and those assisting by serving the guests were Mesdames C. Earl, W. Barber, I. Nightingale, H. Roblin, for the first hour; Mesdames C. Calnan, Rorabeck, N. Montgomery and Miss Cora Anderson for the second hour. Replenishing the plates and teapots were, Mesdames G. Spencer, Wardner, J. Tice, R. Garbutt, A. Zufelt, H. Button, H. Cunningham and D. Young.

Owing to lack of floor space the merchandise for sale could not be displayed to advantage, but that did not in the least detract from the quality and quantity of same. The home-products table presented a large choice of cakes, cookies, buns and doughnuts, as well as baskets of fine apples, home canned fruits and vegetables, and things hard-to-get, featuring soaps of both laundry and toilet varieties.

The novelty table next door held a large collection of aprons, towels, and other useful articles, as well as knitted garments for the "young fry", crocheted centres and quilts in different sizes, all of which were in great demand. These tables were in charge of Mesdames W. Osborne, F. Cory and S. Anderson.

Treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. L. R. Wannamaker, and Mrs. P. C. Parliament, who confirm the report that the afternoon's venture was a decided success and the results most gratifying to the ladies sponsoring it.

CURFEW CLAMPED

Detroit, Dec. 7 — (AP) — A 10 p.m. curfew was clamped on liquor sales yesterday as Governor Harry F. Kelly, faced by the mounting crisis of the soft coal shortage proclaimed a state of emergency in Michigan. The executive order came as A.F.L. leaders went ahead with plans for a one-day general work stoppage in Detroit in support of the United Mine Workers.

City and County Will Co-operate In Tourist Promotion Effort

The county of Hastings in conjunction with the city of Belleville will launch an extensive publicity program in 1947 in an effort to bring holiday and tourist attractions before a great number of potential summer visitors, Reeve S. A. McCarey, Tweed, chairman of the county publicity committee told council in his report on Friday morning.

The program includes the preparation and publishing of 10,000 pamphlets at a joint cost to the county and city of $1,500. Upwards of 5,000 of these pamphlets over and above the 10,000 mentioned will be distributed free to tourist resorts operators and others who have given advertising to the publication.

The City of Belleville Publicity Committee through Alderman E. E. Follwell announced at noon yesterday that the city was willing to bear its share of the expense. Chairman McCarey recommended that the county council bear its share of the cost.

Result of Tourist Survey

The program was an aftermath of a survey of tourist accommodation in the county made by the Tourist Committee for the purpose of securing up-to-date information, pictures and selling of advertising to resort operators for use in tourist pamphlets.

The survey was conducted by Lindley Calnan, publisher of the Picton Gazette, who listed the various types of accommodation, took many photographs and sold advertising. The job has now been completed, the report stated and it complimented Mr. Calnan on the work done.

Mr. Calnan proposed to the committee that he print 5,000 copies to be distributed free to advertisers and suggested the purchase of the additional 10,000 He is also preparing an indexed file giving all data on each tourist accommodation. This will be turned over to the Chamber of Commerce here so when any information is desired by tourists it will be immediately available This service goes with the booklet publication and should prove of great assistance to Chamber of Commerce officials, Reeve McCarey said.

$300 Spent

The chairman pointed out that out of the $1,000 appropiation given his committee this year, only $300 had been spent. He recommened that the same amount be allotted for this purpose next year so that the committee with the 1946 surplus would have a good working capital.

Last spring, he said, it was decided to publish a new booklet advertising the attraction of Hastings County and accordingly the committee advertised for material. In May the booklet was completed and the city and county divided the cost, the county's share being $200.07. Advertising was also carried in Toronto newspapers at a county cost of $80.

The estimated cost of $1,500 for the new booklet which will be filled with new information and pictures will include mailing and postage which was formerly borne by the Chamber of Commerce here, the chairman said. The booklet will be a 64-page affair.

Reeve George West, Madoc, complimented the Publicity committee on the fine job done this year. "What it has done and has recommended is something that has been needed here a long time I feel that Hastings County has not been advertised the way it should be and this committee has gone the right way about putting the county on the map. This scheme is well worth while as the tourist industry is one of our biggest assets."

Committee Complimented

Warden James Nickle also complimented the committee on its year's work. "I was proud to hear someone say that we have the best fishing in many counties and I feel that when the tourist arrangements are completed here Hastings will have the best to offer in the province." He suggested that the government should be asked to do something to link up the Madoc township road with that of Tudor township. It would do much for the tourist trade, he thought.

Reeve McCarey in closing his report suggested that Hastings County form an over-all tourist organization similar to those now in vogue in counties to the east and west.

"These tourist associations," he pointed out "bring resolutions to the bureau for governmental advice and assistance, and since Hastings County accommodation will be licenced as "A. B. C. and D." I feel that an over-all organization is necessary here to work in conjunction with other bodies of a similar nature, for the rights of the various counties."

600 Chinese Start Journey Back to China

Vancouver, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Long-held dreams of a return to the wartorn land of their birth became a reality today for more than 600 Chinese residents of Canada as they embarked on the first leg of their long journey, many to seek families scattered by long years of strife, others going home to die.

They came from far-flung regions of the Dominion west of Montreal to join this biggest exodus since 1939 when war restrictions put a clamp on travel. Most were men and most were aged, going home to stay. But about 40 per cent will return when their business in China is done.

As they boarded a train here for San Francisco, immigration authorities saw in the movement possibilities of a definite decrease in Canada's Chinese population. One official saw a drop of as much as 50 per cent in a 10-year period if the movement continues, for more than 800 others are on reservation lists awaiting passage and still other hundreds are waiting to get on the lists, now closed because of a shortage of trans-Pacific shipping.

Even while the 600 entrained for 'Frisco from where they sail Dec. 9 aboard the transport General Gordon, movements were afoot in Victoria and Ottawa for repeal of the 1932 Chinese Immigration Act.

The Hoysun Ningyung Benevolent Association wired Prime Minister King and the House of Commons Speaker Gaspard Fauteaux urging that Chinese be admitted to Canada under the general quota system. At Ottawa a delegation of citizens, interviewing Resources Minister Glen, described as "archaic" the Act placing limitations on Chinese allowed to enter Canada. They urged its repeal at the next session of Parliament.

Frank S. Mah, Chinese steamship passenger expert here who organized this latest movement of 600 — the fifth since the end of the First Great War — said an urge to see families they left years ago influenced most to return. They are taking this first opportunity since the end of the Second Great War.

Formerly Served As Personal Aid To Thos. A. Edison

Toronto, Dec. 7 — (CP) — New controller of the Dominion Meteorological Service, Andrew Thomson, 52, of Toronto, once served as personal aide to the late Thomas A. Edison, inventor of the electric light.

Mr. Thomson's appointment was announced Thursday night in Ottawa. He succeeds Dr. John Patterson, whose retirement as chief of the weather services was announced some time ago.

Born at Dobbington, Ont., near Owen Sound, he attended University of Toronto and went to Harvard on the Townsend Scholarship, then to the Carnegie Institute in Washington. From there, he was on loan to Mr. Edison.

He was a physicist on an expedition to Brazil to study a solar eclipse in 1912. In 1922 he went on a world cruise to study magnetics.

After that he went to a Samoa observatory where he became director and originated a storm-warning service in the South Pacific. He also held important weather posts in New Zealand.

Conservation of Power in Every Way Possible Asked by Hydro

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP).—Every conservation method possible was today urged on municipalities, industry, stores and homes by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission as the province moved kilowatts closer to one of the most critical power shortages in history.

Cities, towns and villages were asked to ban daytime billboard and sign illumination and store window display lighting. Citizens have been asked to place a blackout on Christmas tree decorations before Dec. 21 and after New Year's Day.

Toronto's Mayor R. R. Saunders proposed a return to wartime 'fast time'.

Mayor Saunders told The Canadian Press that he thought the Federal Government should take emergency action under powers it still holds through the War Measures Act to proclaim daylight saving.

Mayor Sam Lawrence of Hamilton, regarded the shortage as "serious but not alarming" but said Hamilton might revert to daylight saving time as a conservation measure.

E. M. Ashworth, general manager of the Toronto Hydro System said the situation was due to low streamflow in the Ottawa and Madawaska rivers and a depletion of storage (water contained in dams). Shortage of men and materials hampered expansion projects.

Attorney - General Blackwell said the Ontario Government had not considered the question of daylight saving for the province.

In support of his proposal Mayor Saunders said: "Engineers tell me putting the clocks ahead again would save 8 per cent of the power now used in Toronto area."

Dr. Hogg said the Commission would welcome every step to save power but he felt daylight saving time alone would not solve the problem. As further means of economy, he urged reduction of the hours during which streets are lighted and restrictions on electric signs.

The provincial power commission should give the general public "tangible evidence" on power scarcity, George W. Gordon of Kitchener, vice-chairman of the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association, said today.

"I wonder what is behind all this sudden alarm about power scarcity," he said. "Are they expecting the people of Ontario to plead with them to buy power from Quebec rather than stick to the old Sir Adam Beck policy of development?"

Who Are These People, the Arabs?

(By R. H. Markham in the Christian Science Monitor)

One of the main elements in the Palestine question is the conflict between Jews and Arabs. The Western World is fairly well acquainted with the Jews but knows less about the Arabs, although they are among the world's most interesting peoples.

Strictly speaking, they are the 8,000,000 Bedouins or half-Bedouins inhabiting the deserts and half-deserts of the vast Arabian Peninsula.

In a wider sense, they are the 50,000,000 Arabic-speaking people extending from the Atlantic Ocean along Africa's north coast through Egypt and Arabia, through Syria and Palestine to Persia.

Ethnologically, they are not identical, they speak differing dialects and have little political unity. Neither does the daily routine of the Cairo rug merchant resemble that of the transjordanian shepherd in his black tent.

But they all have a fairly common culture, outlook, tradition, and way of life, including religion.

• • •

Arabs are a relic of past grandeur. They are as a faded picture of decaying splendor, but they are also a present force slowly awakening. They had an empire far vaster thani Rome at Rome's greatest. For centuries their world enormously exceeded the Christian world in extent, wealth and number of inhabitants, and also in education. They built luxurious cities, sang captivating songs, wrote beautiful poetry, and developed a language that has few equals in richness and felicity of expression.

They have seldom been equaled in repartee, proverbs, sharpness of wit, charm of expression. They are courteous, dignified in bearing, have respect for the individual, and a sense of patriarchal democracy

Being Semites, they are cousins of the Jews. Most are dark eyed and black haired. Many are tall, slender, and graceful. In spite of squalor and misery, one finds delightful children, handsome men, and beautiful women throughout the whole Arab world.

• • •

The Arabs seem to me simple, narrow, inexorable in their attitudes. They tend to live by slogans and short, imperative creeds. Their loyalties are flaming, their antipathies consuming. They like "Thou shalt" and "Thou shall not." They are capable of much individual devotion and great mass power.

For more than half a millennium they have been badly organized politically.

Rarely have they had good governments.

For centuries they were deprived of elemental freedom.

Their social organization leaves much to be desired.

They are both lethargic and furiously dynamic.

They have extraordinary power of survival, sit astride the highways of Empire, guard springs of world power, and probably will play an important world role.

Italian Homes Split At Prewar Rate

(By JOHN P. LEACACOS in the Cleveland Plain Dealer)

Rome — in Catholic Italy there is no divorce. Ill-mated couples can obtain only a separation. In Rome today there are twice as many separations as before the war. It is an aftermath of war that speaks for itself.

In the prewar 1930s there was an average of 500 separations a year in Rome, this proportion holding good for Italy as a whole. In 1944 there were 642 separations. Last year there were 1,093. And this year, with November and December still to go, there have been 1,071.

Over and above these legal separations which are officially recorded, authorities estimate that there are three to four times as many de facto separations in which the sundered couples do not bother to notify the courts but go their separate ways quietly to avoid publicity.

This break-up of family ties occasioned by the convulsions of the war and the vast movements of refugees has brought to public debate for the first time in Italy the desirability of permitting divorce.

Question Aired Everywhere.

The question of divorce is aired everywhere, although with a certain air of constraint in this capital of the Catholic Church. The Communists use it politically to make the Christian Democrats nervous.

It was a major decision the other day when a subcommittee of the constituent assembly, framing Italy's new constitution, neatly dodged any reference to divorce and upheld the sanctity of the family.

Actually, separations are very easy to obtain. In Rome, it costs the physical expenditure of mounting 256 steps in the monumental Palace of Justice, walking down an interminable corridor and paying out a total of 35 lire or about 35 cents for legal folio and filing costs.

If the separation is by mutual consent—30 per cent are — and an attempt at reconciliation fails, the process takes a month. If one party demurs, a hearing is held. This may take a year.

Men Now Demanding More

Most complainants have been women but lately, with the return home of thousands of Italian prisoners of war from abroad, the men have taken the lead in demanding separations.

Separations, however, do not give the same freedom as divorce. The decree specifically states that the separated man and wife must continue to bear respect and be technically faithful to one another.

For the purposes of helping keep an eye on the latter requirement, as well as obtaining evidence for separations, there have mushroomed in Rome this year flocks of detective agencies who will report anyone's least movement.

In certain aristocratic salons this is being deprecated as an unconscionable nuisance, since it has always been a tacit prerogative of upper class Italian couples to indulge in extra-marital escapades as long as there was no scandal about it.

Three Months in Jail

It might be added that should evidence of either party's infidelity be satisfactorily adduced before a police magistrate, the wife or husband may have to pay for being found out by spending three months in the cooler.

The war heads the list of causes of separations. Wives left behind by their soldier-husbands often found themselves with but one resource to earn a living for their children. Nazi and Allied soldiers alike were named correspondents in scores of cases. Lately artists, singers and actors have been showing up for separations in large numbers.

But infidelity and incompatability, still advanced as the chief legal reasons for requesting a loosening of the ties, appear often to be only excuses for the strain of the war years. One deponent put it this way in her petition:

"I am tired of sacrificing myself. I want to break the ties of the past and all its illusions. I want to enjoy myself and make up for lost time."

Decision Upheld By Appeal Court

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP).—The Ontario Court of Appeal has upheld the decision of Mr. Justice W. F. Schroeder in dismissing an action brought by Rev. C. W. Bosanquet-Scaife as not being maintainable because it was frivolous and vexatious.

Mr. Bosanquet-Scaife, rector of the Church of St. Nathaniel, Toronto, appealed to have the decision set aside.

In the action the plaintiff claimed damages of $10,000 from the first synod in the Dominion of Canada of the Reformed Episcopal Church because of the loss of his position as chairman of the standing committee of the church.

His statement of claim said that certain delegates, one from Ottawa and the other from Belleville, were not duly elected to appear at a synod meeting in Toronto in June, 1945.

As a result of this meeting, it was claimed, the plaintiff lost prestige in his congregation because he was no longer on the standing committee. He claimed a falling off in the congregation and a resultant loss in collection money had occurred.

WHO'S WHO OF CIVIC CANDIDATES SEEKING ELECTION MONDAY

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER PRESENTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF ITS READERS THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION ON THE CANDIDATES FOR THE VARIOUS ELECTIVE OFFICES:

For Mayor

FRANK S. FOLLWELL

The present Mayor of the city might claim Belleville as his native city because he came here when a very young child and has resided continuously in the community. He was educated in the Public and High Schools of this city and entered Queens to study medicine but changed his mind and entered the employ of the Canadian National Railways as a trainman and stayed with the company for three years. Leaving the railway he entered the employment of the St. Charles-Moton Supply Company and some years ago purchased the business and became a merchant in the city. He has always had the progress of his community at heart and six years ago offered himself for Alderman and served for four years on that Board and then ran for Mayor a position he has held for the past two years. He has served on many chairmanships of the council and at present is a Regional Director of the Dominion Mayors' Association and an executive member of the Ontario Mayors' Association. Fraternally he is a member and officer of the A.F. & A.M. and the Royal Arch Masons. He is a member of Christ Church and the Kiwanis Club.

HAROLD G. "TWIG" WOODLEY

Ald. Harold Woodley has served four years in the City Council and is seeking the highest gift in the offer of the municipality in running for Mayor this year. He was born in Montreal and came to Belleville when he was seven years of age and has continuously resided here since that time. He attended the Public and High School and then entered the Woodley Furriers and at the present time is the head cutter in the establishment. "Twig" as he is known to many has been vitally interested in sport and at the present time is a member of the committee handling the arena for the Council. He took a keen interest in baseball, coached many junior and intermediate teams and then entered the C.O.B.L. as an umpire. He is a married man with three children and resides on the West Hill. Active in service work he is a member of the Kinsmen Club. He is a member of Christ Church.

For Aldermen

HAROLD J. ARMSTRONG

Ald. Harold Armstrong is one of the oldest members of the City Council in point of service but his service has not been continuous and he is again seeking re-election on Monday. He came to Belleville 36 years ago and entered the employment of the Canadian National Railways as a clerk in the freight office. He was born in Prince Edward County and was educated in Picton schools and High School and then attended the Belleville Business College. At the present time Ald. Armstrong is supervisor of the clerical staff in the Transportation Department of the railway. During his term as Alderman, Mr. Armstrong has served as chairman of practically every committee of council and is well versed in municipal procedure. This past year he served as Chairman of Regional Planning and devoted much of his time to the Riverside Drive. A member of Christ Church, he is also fraternally connected with the Masonic Order.

GEORGE C. BROWN

A native of Belleville, George Brown is seeking election to the City Council for the second time. After attending the local school and Collegiate Institute he entered the employment of the Ontario Hydro Power Commission and has been with that organization for the past 23 years and holds the position of load supervisor. He is much interested in children and has taken a keen interest in the Scout movement. George is married with two children and resides at 288 Dufferin Avenue.

ALD. H. J. CLARKE

Ald. Harry J. Clarke has served as Chairman of Finance since entering the council seven years ago with the exception of one year. Educated in Belleville schools, the city in which he was born, he taught High School work for 15 years and in the County for four years, and then was appointed School Inspector, a position he held for 32 years and retired in 1934. He has been Treasurer of the Library Board for longer than he cares to remember and a member of the Board for over 40 years. He is an Elder of Bridge Street United Church, a past District Grand Master of the A.F. & A.M., a past Grand Superintendent of the Royal Arch Masons and a member of the Forresters for a good many years. He has had a long and interesting career in the life of this community and is seeking re-election to the Aldermanic Board.

ANGUS B. DUFFY

A veteran of the past war, Angus B. Duffy, former Regimental Sergeant Major of the famed Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, is seeking election to the Council for the first time. After returning from overseas Angus purchased the leaseship of the Cities Service station on South Front Street and has made many friends. He is much interested in the veterans and has been elected President of the Canadian Legion for the ensuing year. Angus has taken a keen interest in civic affairs also and wishes to give some effort to make this world a better place for all to dwell.

ALD. E. "TED" FOLLWELL

Ald. Ted Follwell has been a member of the City Council for the past two years having previously served as a member of the Board of Education for the same length of time. A native of the city and after passing through the various schools, went to the C. N. R. but later switched to law and was articled with a local firm and then attended Osgoode Hall and upon returning to the city entered a legal firm and started up in business for himself on the day he was first elected to Council. He served as court stenographer and knows the city well. Ted takes a great interest in Sunday School work being superintendent of Christ Church Sunday School. He was always interested in sport and played on hockey and football teams during his school years.

HARRY HILL

An Ex.-Mayor and Ex-Alderman of the city Harry Hill, now retired, is again offering his services as Alderman for the city. Harry is well known having been in business in Belleville for many years. He knows the needs of the city and has kept up with the times although away from civic administration for some years. He is a member of the Masonic Order and a member of Bridge Street United Church.

THOMAS "DERBY" JEFFERY

A former Alderman of the city Thomas "Derby" Jeffery is again seeking re-election to the Aldermanic Board. Derby has resided in Belleville all his life and has taken a keen interest in sport. For many years he tended goal for junior and intermediate O. H. A. teams in this city and was not the worst around these parts. For some years he was connected with the United Cigar Store as manager but of late years has been purchasing agent for the Stewart-Warner-Alemimte Corporation of America. He is a member of the Kinsmen Club and very interested in welfare work especially among the underprivileged children.

ARTHUR KEEGAN

Resident of Foster Ward, Arthur Keegan is trying his luck for the first time in the municipal field. He was born in Belleville and has resided all his life here. He is a close student of civic matters and has been given a fine reception at all meetings he has attended. A member of the St. Michael's Parish, he is out after more improvements for the banner ward and the city in general.

BRUCE LATTIMER

Well known in his city, where he was born and raised, Bruce Lattimer, druggist, is seeking election for the first time. After completing his schooling in this city he entered his father's service as a drug apprentice and then went to pharmacy, where he graduated in 1935. On the death of his father he took over the business and has successfully operated the same. Bruce has taken a keen interest in all matters pertaining to the city and has interested himself in service work and the work of the Chamber of Commerce. He is a past president of the Kiwanis Club, a past president of the Retail Merchants' Association, executive of the Junior Board of Trade, a member of the Chamber of Commerce and a member of the Belleville Club. He is married and has two children and attends Bridge Street United Church.

JAMES H. LAZENBY

A veteran of the First Great War and one much interested in veterans' affairs, James Lazenby is again seeking election to the City Council. Jim was born in England and came to this country in 1912 and commenced employment with the Canadian National Railways in 1914. The following year he enlisted with the 80th Battalion and served overseas for the duration, returning to Canada in 1919 and then returned to the C.N.R. and has worked for that company 33 years. He is a past president of the Provincial Command of the Army and Navy Veterans and a past president and past secretary of the local branch. He is a member of the A.F. & A.M. and R.A.M. of Kingston and of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He is married and has five children, two sons serving in the Second Great War in the Air Force. He is a member of Christ Church.

CLARE "MIKE" RIDLEY

Mike Ridley is seeking election to the council for the second year and is well known in this city where he was born and raised. At the present time he is joint owner with his brother of the grocery store at the corner of William and Victoria Avenue but during the war years was employed with the Reliance Industries. He has always taken a keen interest in labor matters and served for some time at the head of the labor union. Fond of sport and especially figure skating, Mike has won several prizes for his artistry on the blades. He resides at 43 Bridge Street West.

TED E. SCHWAB

With a fine record of community service behind him, Ted Schwab is offering himself as a candidate for the City Council. He was born in Dublin, Ireland and came to this country as a young man. Eight years ago he arrived in Belleville and was manager of Lipson's, leaving that firm about one year ago to go into business for himself. Since coming to the city he has taken a prominent interest in sports and community work. A past president of the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association, past president of the Belleville Ladies' Softball Association, Past Secretary of the Men's Softball Association he has done a great deal for sport in the community. Ted has also taken part in many publicity campaigns, being a past director of the community chest fund. At present he is vice-president-elect of the Kiwanis Club, a director of the Junior Board of Trade and a member of the Chamber of Commerce. He is a member of the Jewish Synagogue.

MARK J. VANNER

Another veteran in the person of Mark J. Vanner is seeking election to the council on Monday. Mark was born in London, England, and came to Canada in 1913. In 1916 he enlisted and served overseas for the duration, returning to Toronto in 1919. He followed his employment as an accountant in Toronto, Hamilton and Weston and came to the Belleville Sargent Company, then the Belleville Hardware Company in 1922 and a few years latter was promoted to the post of secretary-treasurer. Interested in service work he joined the Kiwanis Club and this year served as president. He is also a member of the Belleville Bowling Club and for many years served on the executive and as secretary. He is a member of the Canadian Legion and the Cost Accountants' Association of Ontario. Mark is a member of Christ Church and has served both as the Rector's and People's Warden.

For Board of Education

ARTHUR L. BURKE

Arthur L. Burke, one with considerable municipal experience is a candidate for the Board of Education. Since coming to the city from his home in Sidney Township, where he served as Reeve and Deputy Reeve and attended County Council, Mr. Burke has been a keen student of the progress of Belleville. He is a member of the Masonic Order, the Belleville Fair Board and other organizations.

MRS. VIOLET CAMKEN

Representation for the mothers in this city on the Board of Education is sought by Mrs. Violet Camken. During the war years Mrs. Camken was an earnest and hard working official of the Veterans' Auxiliary and was also interested in the comforts of the veterans who were returning home. A number of her family served in the Armed Forces and Mrs. Camken feels she will be able to offer something to the board from a woman's standpoint.

FRANK CREEGGAN

Before coming to this city as a district agent for a large life insurance company, Mr. Creeggan served on school boards in other places where he lived. Frank is very interested in education and community work and is a member of the Kiwanis Club. He is a married man and has raised a family and is offering himself as a school trustee that he can further serve his adopted city.

ENOS DAVID

A native of New Liskeard, Enos David came to Belleville more than six years ago and opened the David Radio and Electric Appliance Store on Front St. This is the second time he has run as a school trustee and has very definite views on education believing health to be one of the most important phases of youth training. He is a very enthusiastic member of the Rotary Club and last year was instrumental along with others of having the power boat races in this city. Enos is always ready to assist in any worthy cause. He is married and a member of Bridge St. United Church.

WILLIAM H. FINKLE

Chairman of the Board of Education this year Bill Finkle is known to a wide circle of friends and is seeking re-election to the Board. Mr. Finkle was born and raised in this city and as a young man was most interested in sports. He played for the Belleville Intermediates and was a tower of strength on many good teams that sported the Belleville colors. His education was extensive and for some years has been co-owner of the Bell Shirt Company. He is a member of the Rotary Club, a member of Bridge Street United Church, is married and has three children. Mr. Finkle was elected by acclamation to the Board two years ago.

E. A. GEEN

Col. E. A. Geen, Inspector of Customs and Excise at this port. "Peg" has been a member of the Board of Education for many years and has served as chairman of that body. Besides his educational pursuits, Mr. Geen served in the militia and when duty called answered the summons. On his arrival home Mr. Geen went through the various ranks and is a former Officer Commander of the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment. He is keenly interested in church work and is a member of St. Thomas' Church and has served as People's and Rector's Warden. A native of Belleville, Mr. Geen is seeking re-election to the Board on Monday.

R. W. "DICK" HART

Dick Hart is a newcomer to offer himself for municipal honors. Mr. Hart had a distinguished career in the Second Great War serving in the Canadian Navy and has taken up his residence in the city and feels he can be of service to his community. He is a member of the Belleville Club and takes an active interest in sport.

WHO'S WHO

ALEX. NATHAN

This is the second attempt of Alex. Nathan to gain a seat on the Trustee Board. He came to Belleville about fifteen years ago and was born in England, coming to Canada in 1927. He is service manager for Cliff Baragar and has taken a keen interest in the Home and School Club of Queen Mary School, being the vice-president at the present time of that organization. He is also interested in service work, being a member of the Rotary Club and secretary and director of that club. He is married and has three children and is a member of the United Church.

J. EDWARD SHORTT

At present he is a member of the Board of Education and was elected by acclamation two years ago. Vitally interested in Y.M.C.A. work, Ed. Shortt has been connected with the "Y" ever since coming to Belleville, except for a short time he was Personnel Director at the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Company. All his life he has been interested in athletics and the training of the youth and this has stood him in good stead while dealing with questions that face the board. He is married and is a member of Tabernacle United Church and a member of the choir.

DR. R. W. TENNENT

Dr. R. W. "Bob" Tennent has allowed his name to go before the electorate for election to the Trustee Board. He has practised his profession in Belleville for many years and through his meeting with the electorate has received a good insight into the needs for this community. He is a lover of horses and dogs and belongs to many organizations. A member of the Masonic Order and the local medical society. He is married and resides at the corner of Victoria Ave. and Church Street.

LEWIS WATSON

A resident for five years in this city, Lewis Watson, assistant manager of the Consolidated Optical Company, is willing to give up his valuable time to assist in directing the education of the youth of this district. He was born in Newark, England, and came to Canada 20 years ago and for some time resided at Port Hope before coming to this city. He is married and a member of Christ Church and fraternally is a past master of the Masonic Order.

GEORGE WISHART

George is seeking re-election to the Board of Education after receiving an acclamation to the Board of Education two years ago. Since going on the Board he has filled chairmanships, this year being chairman of the Collegiate Management Committee. He is married and has three children in school. Mr. Wishart is a member of the Entomological Bureau in this city and has always taken a keen interest in education, he having taught school before going with the Federal government.

REJECTS SUGGESTION TO BRING POWER FROM NORWAY

London, Dec. 7 —(Reuters)— Suggestion that electricity brought from Norway by submarine cable laid to northeast Scotland might relieve power shortages in Britain was turned down in the House of Commons by Fuel Minister Emanuel Shinwell.

C.A.S. Performs Much Cost-Free Work in Communities Council Told

The Children's Aid Society does a lot of work for communities that does not cost any municipality one cent. Superintendent Thomas Ruston told the Hastings County Council at its morning session on Friday. "We are not hogs," he said, "we merely try to keep within the limits and struggle hard to keep the per diem rate at its proper level."

Mr. Ruston related several cases within the county that have come to his notice and for which his society is doing good work. "We are trying to inculcate into the parents that it is their duty to care and provide for their children in an effort to keep the home together."

"It is not the purpose of the Children's Aid Society to break up homes, but rather to build them up so that children can live a decent wholesome life. The Society does not take any action unless it becomes an actual necessity for the sake of the child," he said.

Better Chance For Children

Many homes are showing improvement and through the Society's efforts a number of children are getting a better chance in life, the superintendent stated.

These cases that come up frequently are financed by voluntary contributions and the society is doing its best to make the homes and conditions better and see that the children get the proper care. Family allowances have proved a great boon in a large number of cases, and while in some places the allowances are bing abused, finding their way into beverage rooms, generally speaking the money is being spent for the welfare of the child or children.

"We are trying to render the County of Hastings the best service we can by seeing that these children are properly maintained and cared for so they will grow up to be useful citizens."

He had perfected a new auditing system, Mr. Ruston told the council so that members will be able to tell at a glance the exact cost to the county for each child under its care.

The superintendent pointed out that the society spends a large amount of its voluntary funds for transporation to court cases in many parts of the county. "If children in these cases are not made wards then it does not cost the county one nickle. The cost comes out of the society's fund."

"However," he pointed out, "every cent of money paid for maintenance in Hastings County goes back into the pockets of county residents."

No Action Rate Increase

Council voted to take no action on the request of Belleville General Hospital that the per diem rates for indigent patients be increased from $3.25 to $3.75. members felt that the goverment is anticipating taking some action along this line and decided to table the request. There was little or no discussion on the matter.

Several accounts were ordered paid and the committee of the whole on Ways and Means in a brief session ordered grants of $75 each be paid to the municipalities of Dungannon, Wollaston Carlow, Mayo, Limerick and Tudor and Cashel, for snow removal purposes, each municipality to produce payrolls to the effect that the money was spent for the purpose granted.

Picton

Picton (Special) — Describing his experience with the Canadian Army in Italy and Sicily, Lt.-Col. P. A. Scott, M.D., was the speaker at the meeting of the Tennyson Club, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Calnan. Associate hostesses were Mrs. C. A. Maris, Mrs. A. E. Calnan, Mrs. H. L. Whiteman, Mrs. W. S. Lane and Miss M. Leask. A. K. Leonard showed two films, and Christmas carols were sung.

Pigtail Club

For young girls, a new organization has just been formed, to be known as the "Pigtail Club." Meeting at the home of Janet Williams, the following officers were elected: president, Betty Reid; vice president, Janet Williams; secretary, Florence Chapman; recording secretary, Elaine Brown; treasurer, Barbara King; play directors, Lorraine Armstrong, Sheila Cole, Nancy Wright, Patsy Farmer; food committee, Elaine Brown, Janet Williams, F. Chapman. Blue crests with blue and pink ribbons will be worn by members.

Mrs. May Collier has tendered her resignation as caretaker of the rest room to the town.

HOCKEY RULES

By BILL GRIM

INTERFERENCE

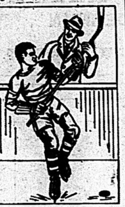
Rule 62

(a) A minor penalty shall be imposed on a player who interferes with or impedes the progress of an opponent who is not in possession of the puck, or who deliberately knocks a stick out of an opponent's hand, or prevents a player who has dropped his stick from regaining possession of it, or who, while not in possession of his own stick, interferes with or attempts to interfere with an opponent.

(Note) The last player to touch the puck—other than a goalkeeper—shall be considered the player in possession.

(b) Unless the puck is in the goal crease area, a player of the attacking side not in possession may not stand on the goal crease line or in the goal crease or hold his stick in the goal crease area, and if the puck should enter the net while such condition prevails a goal shall not be allowed.

)e) If a player of an attacking side has been deliberately pushed into or is deliberately held in the goal crease by an opponent and the puck should enter the net while the player so pushed or held is still within the goal crease a "goal" shall be allowed.



Interference by Spectator

Rule 63

(a) In the event of a player being held or interfered with by a spectator. The Referee or Linesman shall blow the whistle and play shall be stopped, and the puck shall be faced at the nearest spot to which the incident took place.

(b) In the event that objects are thrown on the ice which interferes with the progress of the game, the referee or linesman shall blow the whistle and play be stopped, and the puck shall be faced at the nearest spot to where play is stopped.

While most boxing and wrestling fans in Belleville and vicinity are agog to see the world famous Primo Carnera in action here tonight Da Preem's opponent hnadsome Victor Christie has a word to say about the eventual outcome of the clash.

"You can tell those Belleville fans not to "sell me short" on Saturday's match for I am to be the first American wrestler to beat this big Italian since he landed here three months gao. And the Belleville Arena is going to become famous as the place where it happened," he said.

Thus Christie served notice that the colossal size and strength of the former World Boxing champion has no terrors for him. Vic is a young man who has absolute confidence in his destiny in the wrestling game. "I'm going to the top" he told Toronto sportswriters recently "and my elbow-smashes are going to take me there."

HAMILTON TIGERS WIN IN OVERTIME FROM STRATFORD

Crafty Dinning Capitalizes on Break When Goalie Loses Rubber

(By The Canadian Press)

A somewhat tainted overtime goal by defenceman Bill Dinning, his second of the night, gave Hamilton Tigers a 3-2 victory over the scrappy Stratford Indians last night to preserve the Eastern Canada champions' nine-game winning streak and leave them a little farther in front of the five-team O.H.A. senior A loop.

Meanwhile Owen Sound Mohawks produced their best game of the season to hand Toronto Staffords their fourth setback in five starts. The 4-1 victory boosted the Mohawks into a fourth-place tie with the Indians.

The crafty Dinning capitalized on the big break of the Stratford game. Indian defenceman Pat Powers stopped a Tiger shot with his skates and momentarily lost sight of the puck. Dinning whipped it past Fred Sparks before the Stratford goaltender could make a move.

Dinning rapped home the first Hamilton counter in the early minutes of the second period but Walsh got it back less than five minutes later.

Johnny Conick, the league's leading goal-scorer, finished off a play with linemates Clarry Shillington and Dillon Brady to put the Tigers a goal up, but Nick Phillips tied it up again shortly after the start of the third period.

Woodall Outstanding

In Owen Sound, the sparkling play of Keith Woodall in the Mohawk nets was the outstanding feature of their victory.

Boddy and Smith put Mohawks two goals up before Johnny Blute, playing his first game in Stafford's livery, put the Mohawks on the scoresheet in the second period. Smith and Gillespie clinched it with third-period goals as Woodall kicked out Stafford's best efforts to make it close.

In the only junior A game played, Stratford Kroehlers came from behind with two third-period goals to edge Barrie Flyers 4-3, their second victory in three days over the scrappy Flyers and their first of the season on Barrie ice. The win left Kroehlers in undisputed possession of second place in the 10-team loop, two points ahead of Galt Red Wings and Oshawa Generals.

Robertson Scores Two

George Robertson, who played for last year's Memorial Cup-winning Monarchs, scored both the tying and the winning goals, the last with 10 seconds of play remaining. Mousseau, with two goals within 20 seconds in the first period and an assist on Meger's second-period counter was the outstanding Barrie performer. Dunc Daniels and Sam Sasanato got the other Stratford goals.

Eight teams swing into action today in the junior loop. In Toronto the league-leading St. Michael's Majors meet Toronto Marlboros and Oshawa tackle Young Rangers in two four-point contests. Windsor Spitfires play at Galt and Hamilton Szabos play the Falcons at St. Catharines.

"Y" Basketball

Two close games featured the play in the Girls' Basketball House League at the "Y" Thursday night. The first game brought together two teams who had been so far undefeated, Jo Lepore's Royals and Arlie Gilbert's Aces. The game started off at a fast pace and it looked as though the Aces would win handily during the first quarter when they ran in 12 points to take a 5-point lead. By half time the Royals had taken the lead by one point. The third quarter saw the teams battle on an even footing, each getting six points. In the final quarter, however, the Royals managed to score an extra basket, giving them a lead of three at the final whistle. During the second half the Royals managed to hold Arlie Gilbert scoreless, and that accounted for the Aces' downfall. In the second game the Jokers and the Queens met. Both these teams had previously lost two and won none, and they put on a ding dong, close checking battle which produced an even first quarter, a lead of two points at the half for Queens, a third quarter in which the Jokers outscored their rivals by four points to take a lead going into the final stanza, and a last period rally by the Queens that gave them the game by a single point margin. While the game was close the checking was so tight that it made a game which was not particularly interesting to watch, as it was almost impossible to get under way with any passing plays. No sooner did a player get her hands on the ball than she was forced into a held ball situation.

No further games in this league will be played until after Christmas due to school examinations for some of the players, and Christmas trade causing stores to remain open for others.

Royals	3	0
Aces	2	1
Queens	1	2
Jokers	0	3

The teams:

Royals—J. Lepore 2, Marinoff 8, Bunnett 4, Roblin 5, Burkholder 6, Tomaso 2, total 27.

Aces—Gilbert 8, A. Lepore 6, Matthews 4, Bishop, Kikes, Zebedee 4, Ketcheson, total 24.

Queens—J. Wright 5, Davidson 2, Grant, A. Wright 2, Holway 6, Oliphant, Armstrong, total 17.

Jokers — Cooke 6, Pappas 4, Flindall 2, Newman 2, Mansfield 2, McKeown, Baines, total 16.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Johnny Metras, coach of the Intercollegiate football champions, the doughty Mustangs from the University of Western Ontario, is an optimist to say the least. Johnny, who piloted his galloping bangtails to the title for two years in a row thinks his squad could have beaten either the Toronto Argos or the Winnipeg Blue Bombers. "I think we could have won by two touchdowns," mused John.

* * *

He thought the Argos line had been over-rated and also was of the opinion his Mustangs could have put up a better defence against peerless "King" Krol than did the Bombers.

* * *

But according to Johnny, he expects to have a passer next year who will equal, with the proper grooming, the brilliant Krol. The name is Parry (remember?), fleetfooted backfielder who once wore the Tricolor of Queen's. Parry will undergo extensive training early next season unless the Intercollegiate Union can find another excuse why he should not wear a Mustangs football saddle next year.

* * *

Commenting on the situation, Jack Parks, London scribe says: "Parry in the opinion of many is a better broken field runner than Krol. Right now, Joe is the better passer. Both are centre fielders in baseball, a job which calls for a strong accurate throwing arm. If Parry can match the Krol passing skill next season perhaps the Intercollegiate can be persuaded to let their champs contest the Dominion title and regain some of the grid prestige they lost a decade ago."

Primo Carnera (and some seven managers with him) is due in Belleville this afternoon to fulfill his contract to meet Vic Christie in the arena ring Saturday night. The amazing ex-world champion boxer, now reverted to his first love of wrestling, will be given a huge banquet dinner in Toronto on Saturday noon and afterwards the Carnera party will motor here.

* * *

Carnera has been dined and feted to a considerable extent in every city of his North American tour but the big Italian athlete is wise enough to eat sparingly and carefully on the day of a bout. When he heaves his gigantic frame and size 18 boots in the Arena ring here he will need plenty of condition to match the lithe and lightning-like lunges of Christie. Vic is nobody's fool on the mat and his ranking is only a little short of championship.

* * *

Since this will be Carnera's debut in Canada, a goodly number of Torontonians and others from Hamilton, Peterborough, etc. will be journeying thisaway tonight for their first glimpse of the Ambling Alp. Another name the enormous Latin has had hung on him by sports writers is "Satchel Feet", but the good-natured big fellow doesn't seem to mind. "Before when I veeseet 'Merica'," says Primo, "I make lotsa money but don't get mooch. Disa time I makea da mon and disa time I keepa de mon."

* * *

If Carnera beats Vic Christie he will keep his marvellous three months winning streak intact and hopes to go on for a chance to win the wrestling championship. If he does he will be the first man in history to ever win both boxing and wrestling heavyweight titles. A wrestler, Paul Berlanbach accomplished that super-human feat in the light-heavy division but it has never happened in the dreadnought class. Bob Wagner meets "Red" Vagnone and Walter Sirois wrestles Karl "Krippler" Davis in the other bouts on Saturday.

* * *

This morning the Ontario Hockey Association went into annual conclave at the Royal York Hotel with at least the job of election of major officers over and done with. Prexy George Panter will again head the class by virtue of an acclamation, while other officers who stayed in power by the nod of the head include J. J. McFadyen, Galt, first vice-president; J. M. Roxburgh, Simcoe, second vice-president; George Dudley, Midland, treasurer, and W. A. Hewitt, Toronto, secretary.

* * *

Nominated for the executive are our own S. R. "Sandy" Burrows; Fred Bain, Alvinston; Frank Buckland, Peterborough; Tory Gregg, Wingham; J. C. Mercer, Owen Sound; "Stew" McTavish, Oshawa, and Roy Reynolds, Chatham. Four will be elected and the smoke of election battle has probably wafted away by the time you read this.

* * *

The Peterborough Fish and Game Association made a move in the right direction the other day when they requested its County Council to petition the Department of Lands and Forests to retain the 30-inch maskinonge law introduced early in 1946. Council looked with favor on the proposal and will recommend that this be done.

* * *

A representative of the F. and G. body stated that the law had resulted from a recommendation from his association and while some were opposed to it all district guides and many fishermen were in favor of the legislation. He pointed out that under the old law a muskie, 24 inches long could be taken. Best biological information indicated that muskies do not spawn until they were between 25 and 28 inches long, thus every muskie taken meant the lakes were robbed of at least one year's hatch. Under the new law the fish could not be taken until they had spawned at least once.

* * *

There is a decided Belleville flavor in the ranks of the Kingston Senior Hockey Loop. Performing for the Gananoque entry are Vern Goyer, brother Leo and "Speedy" St. Louis, while patrolling the left boards for the Lions squad is Walt Gerow, Jr. Walt got himself a goal and two assists in a recent game against Brockville while Leo Goyer scored the only goal his team got in a 5-1 defeat by the Kingston Vics.

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— In these days when the jolly old Empire is so short of worthy heavyweight boxers the hunt for a new "white hope" has begun again. There is an open invitation to "untried heavies" to try their luck in a tournament here Jan. 13.

The sponsors are Sam Keller and Fred Nobert who have no aversion to turning a dollar or two now and then, of course, so their tourney plans are not altogether for "improvement of the breed," as they say on the race track.

The tournament winner will receive $500.

Such a show is nothing new for Keller. He promoted one in February, 1936, but produced little in the way of exciting fighting.

On that show Fred Mathews, a 22-year-old miner from Arntfield, Que., a native of Gilbert Plains, Man., climbed into the ring with another unknown named Pat Flanagan and even though seven-ounce gloves were used, suffered a blow that stiffened him. He died in hospital from brain injuries. No blame was attached to anybody. It was just one of those unusual and unfortunate things that can happen in the ring.

THE "ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY"

One of the outstanding veterans of the cast in Laurence Olivier's Technicolor production of Shakespeare's HENRY V is Felix Aylmer whose performance as the Archbishop of Canterbury has been the subject of much favorable comment. This venerable character actor has more than a 100 roles to his credit and began his Shakespearean career with the late Sir Herbert Tree.

Henry V will be seen at the McCarthy Theatre next week. A United Artist release.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Gullible Gus believes in the adage: Unlucky at cards, lucky in love. He makes it come true by ignoring the best bridge rules. Now, his friends love to play against him instead of with him.

Tell him the facts about a jump bid. Advise him that it is a signal for saying the bidding should not stop short of game. Explain that the jumper sees tricks enough to help make a game.

Gus will listen attentively. He will agree enthusiastically. He will exclaim admiringly at the logic and purpose. Then, he will refuse to obey the signal because of an exception he invented.

♠A K J 7 5 3
♥Q 6
♦7
♣K Q 7 4

His partner in north responded with two clubs. South then rebid with a jump to three spades. North studied for a moment and passed. A cinch game could have been made at four spades.

They asked me if south should have assisted clubs instead of the rebid in spades. The answer is no. A takeout comes before an assist. And a second mention of a rebiddable suit is still a takeout.

They also ask me if a jump rebid in the same (unassisted) suit is forcing. The answer is yes. It certainly is. Any jump is forcing until at least a game contract is reached.

A noted expert once showed an isolated jump rebid that was not forcing. It was as helpful as a hotfoot. Palookas started passing all jump rebids. Experts stuck in hop rebids without enough tricks.

Wrong basics must be in a system that fails to force only when the jump is a rebid in the same suit. The jump shows tricks enough to make game. Rebidding the same suit shows the suit is stronger.

Merely because your trump suit is longer and stronger would you consider your hand less able to take tricks? Does such a claim seem reasonable? Sounds screwy to me.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN

Palestine has completed its first feature film, "My Father's House" the story of a Jewish child who becomes so obsessed with his search for his parents he becomes demented. It stars Ronny Cohen, a 13-year-old Jerusalem schoolboy who had had no previous acting experience.

Production of the film, which was started last February, took about twice as long as had been expected because of the curfew and delays in training volunteer actors and actresses. Scenes were shot in more than 15 Jewish villages to get a background of a typical community.

Britain's reaction to the sexily-advertised "The Outlaw" is about as mixed as any other nation's with some praising it as an attempt to break through "American prudery," and others angrily criticizing the hokum designed to sell it to the cash customers. The Kinematograph Weekly, British movie trade paper, described planted news stories and advertising which included phrases like "Keeping Abreast of the Times" and "Bosom Companions" as "sophomoric."

Pat O'Brien arrived back in Hollywood after his jaunt to England for the Royal film command performance, and Rome for an audience with the Pope, to announce "there's only one Paris and it's in New York." Consensus among the stars who made the trip was that living on the other side was grim, but the continent, with its black markets, has an edge over austere Britain.

The Ray Millands are the last members of the group to leave Europe and are on their way back to Hollywood after buying a house on the Riviera. Mr. Milland plans to make a picture a year in France.

Jose Iturbi, who first skyrocketted to fame as a pianist and then added to his laurels by playing himself in "Anchors Aweigh" and "Holiday in Mexico", has abandoned plans for a North American concert tour with his own orchestra in order to make "The Birds and the Bees," in which he is co-starred with Jeanette Macdonald.

In Manhattan

(By FRED KERNER)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 7 —(CP)— There have been historic nights at the famed Provincetown Playhouse in Greenwich Village and last Saturday was one of them.

It is there the Light Opera Theatre does Gilbert and Sullivan in repertory season after season. A strictly co-operative company, one of its most co-operative features is its perennial audience — people who can't stay away from G. and S.

There has been a joke around the Provincetown to the effect that if the company ever ran out of players, somebody in the audience would be able to stand up and sing. It's no longer a joke because it actually happened before our eyes last week.

An hour before curtain time — we learned later — the soprano who was to sing Patience came down with a bad cold. The company decided it could not do Patience without a leading lady, so the director asked if anyone knew the part.

Willowy brunette Ray Arlen, a contralto — and an engineer in her spare time — said she'd try. That left the role of Lady Angela unfilled, a part essential to telling the plot of the rival poets, Bunthorne and Grosvenor. Curtain time was fast approaching and so Director Alexander Maissel tried the audience.

There sat Ruth Ladd, a soprano, who had come to see the performance. She had never done Angela before and besides it was a contralto part — but anything is possible at the Provincetown. The girl barely had time to read through the score, the director explained the situation to the audience, the curtain went up to an almost flawless performance.

In three years 26 alumni of the company have moved to the Times Square theatre area. Commercial theatre is a powerful lure.

Curtain Calls: 'A Family Affair" lasted just five days. A supposed-comedy of family morals, the affair was not well received by either critics or audience.

Moss Heart's latest, "Christopher Blake," is still running and probably will for a couple of months. Utilizing five revolving stages and a cast of 50, the play is a gloomy piece about divorce seen through the eyes of a 12-year-old boy caught in a quandry as to which of his parents will be his post-marital custodian.

"No Exit" is pessimism personified. Written in the style of the new French existentialist philosophy, it concerns three sinful characters — a Lesbian who dies in a double suicide after luring a wife away from her husband, a young lady who can't stand her infant born out of wedlock and kills it, and a French collaborator executed by a firing squad who also was guilty of such sins as adultery and trying to drive his wife crazy.

Oh yes, there's a fourth character — a sort of stygian bellhop who sees that the other three end up in the right place—Hell.

CHAPTER 16

Painting away busily, he began to whistle softly.

"We have to wash that sort of thing out, Jinny, except for being stronger for it. We have to start over. Wiser."

A great breath of strength and courage seemed to be blown into her.

"Oh, if we could!"

"But that's the history of the strongest people in the world, you poor little idiot. Not the ones who have nothing to regret. The ones who are stung by shame and remorse and general self-despisingness into rising above the past. 'Men may rise on steppingstones of their dead selves.' That's St. Augustine. You can't fool him."

Jennifer laughed suddenly, smiled at him with her eyelashes stuck into dark points and her face flushed like that of a tearful baby.

"You still love this man, eh?" Monty asked, not looking at her.

"Oh no. I hate him. I don't know. When he came to see me I suddenly seemed to hate him," Jennifer said, beginning in a rush, quieting down to doubt and puzzlement. "I told him to go away, not to talk to me. I don't know how I did it. I seemed—on fire all of a sudden, though I'd been waiting, longing to see him."

"That was how long ago? And you've not seen him since?"

"That was—oh, more than three months ago. No, I've not seen him since."

"And would you like to see him, Jinny?"

"I keep thinking about it," she said simply. "I keep thinking that I would like to see him just once. Not ever to be friends again, I don't mean that. But to have him see me. . . ."

"Rich and happy and with lots of admirers about you," he supplied as she hesitated.

"Yes, I think that's what I mean," she admitted, still hesitant, speaking much more to her own thoughts than to him. Monty's tone had been so sensible, so matter-of-fact, that she could answer him almost without self-consciousness. "To let him see that if he can be happy—not remembering anything, not sorry for anything —why, so can I be too. But no,' Jennifer ended with a change of tone, "I never want to see him again. I am sure of it."

"I hope you never do. I would like to meet him,' Monty said quietly, "and have a little talk with him. I would like to let him know what I think of him. But let that pass. It's nine o'clock and you are supposed to be on your way over the rooftops. Want my flashlight?"

"Oh, no. It's bright moonlight. And I'll be here at half past six on Saturday, Monty, to help you set the table."

"I'll count on you."

He came to the roof-terrace door with her; there was an awning there now, and two or three old garden chairs. Jennifer stepped up to the adjoining roof, waved at him, was on her way across the dark levels. There was indeed a moon, but the sky was strewn with fluffy, soft tufts of cloud. The air was cold and soft and pure; the man stood breathing deeply, looking up at the dark vault overhead. Once or twice he turned to follow with his eyes Jennifer's figure as it slipped into deeper and deeper darkness. When she reached the trap door that admitted her to her own apartment she whistled seven notes from Louise, and Monty completed the phrase. He was especially fond of the opera, and Jennifer, fussing about the studio with dishwashing or straightening had grown familiar with it. It had come to be their signal of her coming or going.

"Someday when you're in a great opera house," he had once said to her, "in Milan or Berlin or New York, you'll hear that and it'll thrill you to your bones."

"Oh, Monty, do you know, they had it on a radio program the other night and I recognized it right away! Talk about culture! But I'm afraid," Jennifer had said sadly, "that I'll never be in a big opera house. I'll never get that far! It's too great a—a gap—a chasm. From our twenty-two-dollar flat to grand opera, it's too far! The clothes, Monty, and—and the sort of people—"

"As for the sort of people, all sorts go. Shabby people, to climb up all the stair and get more out of the music than all the others put together. Real music lovers with scores, who get a downstairs seat by saving all year for it, and follow every note—though they're more for the symphonies than the opera. And the Social Register of course. The God-given chance to wear new clothes and furs and orchids. Of course you'll go to the opera! If it comes and they play Louise I'll take you," Monty said; "We'll sit in the second balcony."

"I can't believe I ever could go to the opera," she had murmured. But he had known she was not speaking to him but to her own thoughts.

A mixed group came to Monty's party. Jennifer was there first of all and immediately assumed the position of assistant cook and waitress, so that by the time the others arrived she was too busy to feel shy and not expected to help with the conversational end of the affair.

Their costumes, as he had told her, were varied. Mary Harvey Philpotts, the poetess, was a stocky little practical person in black lace; Midge Hawkes, large and masculine, wore a sweater, blue glass beads, and slacks that appeared to be made of sacking. Gerry Barker, a great bearded creature who was a sculptor, wore corduroy slacks and an old painting jacket. Mary Hollet, a pretty, gypsyish young wife, was in flowered pajamas and handsome houri coat. Eliza Pettigrew, who did pastels of children, and had been for forty years just successful enough to keep her in a flutter of uncertainty, pride, and professional fervor, wore a somewhat worn claret velvet with a pleated yoke of muslin upon which she had sewed various medallions of gold lace, coral beads, ruffles. Over this was a gold-embroidered bolero; a head scarf neatly bound about her brows was of gay oriental silk.

Julie was thirty, tall but well rounded, her red hair braided in heavy plaits about her head and cut short in ffont to allow a babyish fluff on her forehead. Her skin was of the solid cream that goes with red hair, her eyes—not large eyes, but prettily set—were brown. She had quick, slender, beautiful hands and a deep, delicious voice with a laugh always ready behind it.

There was nothing sensational about her manner or appearance; she wore a dark silk gown that touched the floor and that was ornamented only by a rich line of pearl and crystal embroidery at the rounded neck. A line of round crystal beads made a coronet against her braided hair, and her earrings were triple rounded crystal globes to match.

But the warmth of her, the responsiveness and swiftness and friendliness, were irresisible. She brought into the room with her something vital and heartening; everyone felt it, everything quickened. She tied an apron about her when she under took to dress the salad, laughed, had a word for them all as she manipulated the garlin, scallions, lettuce, eggs.

Later at the table, listening, commenting in her own quick, earnest manner, leading the games, Jennifer wondered if she knew how lovely her face was in candlelight, under the aureole of flaming hair and twinkling crystal. If she did, Julie gave no sign of it. It was a part of her beauty that she was as natural, as simple and unaffected as a three-year-old child.

They played pencil games at dinner, and after dinner one wild whirlwind of a game that fascinated, frightened, and bewildered Jennifer. She suddenly found herself with the words "corcodile tears" to act out with gestures only; the tears she could stimulate easily, and by inspiration she gave the third syllable of the first word by turning imaginary radio dials. One of the men immediately guessed the other two syllables, and Jennifer could sit down, her forehead wet and her hands cold, and watch the others perform.

Julie, surprisingly, was not a good actress; her serious husband on the other hand, performed with great spirit and, to convey the words "Mary had a little lamb," used only twenty-seven seconds of his allotted three minutes. Jennifer watched Julie's anxious proud face while he was on the carpet and his concerned fond expression when she was struggling to make herself understood, and wondered with a little pang of unconscious envy what the love between two such splendid creatures could be.

After the games they settled in an irregular circle, Jennifer wedged in at the end of the couch where she could feel blessedly small and inconspicuous. Monty and a young man who had come with his nephew consulted over victrola records, shifting them and bringing them to the light for closer reading.

"What'll you have, girls?" asked Monty.

"Why not 'The Pines of Rome'?" Julie said lazily from her deep chair.

"With the nightingale!" Jennifer Richie added. She looked for approval to Monty, but he was busy with the black disks. Music began to pour through the room; the lights were lowered now, and everyone was silent. Jennifer thought that she could sit there forever, listening to the sounds that transported her soul to regions far beyond the reach of her everyday dreams. But when the nightingale had piped bravely through the clashing needles of the pines and the bells of the sunken cathedral had clanged, Jennifer, with a nod to the company, slipped through the terrace doors and ran home over the rooftops with heart and head in a whirl of joy and excitement. She and Betty, in solemn conclave, had decided that he must be the first to leave.

"You're only a girl, Jennifer and they're all older people, and they might want to talk about things that wouldn't interest you," Betty had said.

"They're were two boys there, Monty's nephew, Gerry Barker, and another boy',' Jennifer said, reporting the next evening. "I could have stayed."

"Little boys?"

"Oh no. About twenty-three or four."

"But my goodness, you're only nineteen!"

"I know. But they seemed like young boys to me." Jennifer's eyes, staring into space, grew dark and she sighed. But Betty noticed nothing amiss.

"It's awfully lucky for you that you met Mr. Smith, Jen. Those people—that sort—are kind your father used to know," Betty told her one day.

"You mean artists, people who had studios?" Jennifer asked eagerly.

"No not exactly that but people who worked in laboratories; men who liked to come and talk. There was one fellow had a violin," Betty remembered. "We had a piano then. I sold it afterward, and his books too. And I burned all the papers; they were no good."

"How old were you when you married my father, Betty?"

"Nearly eighteen."

"That's what I thought. But he—how old was he?"

"I've told you a thousand times he was fifty-four.'

"Yes I know. But as you get older and begin to compare things, people's ages and the people they marry," Jennifer said dreamily, "it all seems so different. Did you love him, Betty?"

"I didn't go cuckoo over him the way I did about 'Clint," Betty said darkly. "I didn't make a fool of myself over him. I respected your father. My aunt used to cook for your mother; she was an independent, Aunt Min was. She got me to come over and tend you afternoons after school. Well, it was long vacation when your mother died and I was down in Cloverdale. But when I came back to Nevada City I went to see your father, and everything was in a mess. Aunt Min had married, and he was trying to run things. So I settled right down and gave you your supper and fixed up the house. . . ."

"You would," Jennifer put in affectionately as Betty paused.

"So then Ma came over and raised hell," Betty went on simply, "and she said for a girl my age to live with a man was something terrible, and the next morning your father asked me if I would marry him, and I said yes, mostly to spite Ma."

JAIL TERM FOR THEFT

Peterborough, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Harold Van Allen, of Peterborough, was sentenced to six months in Ontario Reformatory yesterday by Judge S. L. Smoke. Van Allen was convicted this week by a jury at the general sessions of the peace of stealing copper from the Canadian General Electric Company.

What to do about
Colds
Prevent Check
Relieve Don't Neglect
In these days when so much is to be done and so few to do it, the loss of time caused by colds becomes more serious than ever. Isn't it about time we considered colds seriously and did something about them?
Here are some timely suggestions which, we believe, will help you to escape having colds or to check them and save valuable time.
1. The cold germ gets you when your general health is under par or when you are tired out by overwork or worry. You can largely avoid this condition and often escape colds by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help build up your health to high water mark. Rich red blood is the greatest of germicides and Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies the food minerals and Vitamin B-1 which make the blood rich and nourishing.
2. If you do feel a cold coming on, act quickly and you may check it entirely or at least shorten its course. Try this. Take Dr. Chase's Paradol, a good drink of hot lemonade or ginger tea, and rest in bed. Repeat this treament if necessary. Paradol does not disappoint.
3. Should you be so unfortunate as to have a cold in its later stages, with coughing and irritation of the throat and bronchial tubes, use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. This treatment has been a great favourite in many thousands of homes for over half a century. It is pleasant to take and remarkably effective in helping to relieve coughs, colds, croup and bronchitis.
Instead of neglecting colds, plan ahead by having these medicines in your home. Some one is sure to need them. The wise course is to prevent colds by keeping the health at high water mark. Let Dr. Chase's Nerve Food help you to do this.

Ivanhoe

Ivanhoe (Special) — Mrs. William Ferguson, formerly of Scotland, who has been the distinguished guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Vandome for the past ten days and who spent two and one-half years as hostess in a Canadian Legion at Halifax, returned to Halifax on Wednesday. Mrs. Ferguson expects to sail for England early in January.

Mr. Arthur Broadworth, who spent the harvest months in Saskatchewan and who since that time has visited friends in Vancouver is the guest of his brother, Mr. Ernest Broadworth.

Mrs. Clarence Reid was severely bitten by a dog on Wednesday as she was delivering a telephone message to a neighbor. The canine was destroyed.

The children and Young People of White Lake are busy practising for their Christmas entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carter and two children of Wallbridge spent a day recently with his brother and Mrs. Carter.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sarles, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mumby, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Prest were dinner guests recently at the parsonage.

The many friends of Mrs. Wallace Fleming will be sorry to learn that she is confined to her bed with an attack of pneumonia and wish her a speedy recovery.

Mr. Arthur Wood, president and Mr. Frank Palmer, cheese maker at Ivanhoe attended the annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association being held in the Hotel Quinte in Belleville on Tuesday.

N.H.L. Clubs Find Weekend Battles More Pressing Than Threat of Curtailed Schedule

Teams Will Have to Use Canadian Rinks if Strike Continues

By JACK MITCHELL,
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Tabled for future consideration today was the possibility of disrupted and curtained schedules as the National Hockey's League's six clubs forgot the United States coal strike and turned full attention to improving their positions in weekend games

It may yet turn out, as N.H.L. President Clarence Campbell said last night, that U.S. teams will borrow rinks in such centres as St. Catharines and Quebec City for home games. But, still quoting Campbell, that depends on "if and when" the U.S. government considers it necessary to ban public assemblies.

Of more immediate concern to the teams themselves is a four-game weekend card that may bring a shake-up in the standings.

In the early game tonight, the same two teams that battled to a 2-2 draw in Boston Wednesday night square off again in Toronto when the Bruins visit the Maple Leafs. By taking this one, the Leafs can regain first place from Montreal Canadiens. On the other hand, the third-place Bruins can tighten up the fight for the top with a win.

Both the Bruins and the Leafs will leave Toronto hurriedly after the game to fill engagements in a Sunday night program that brings all six clubs into action.

Bruins Return Home

The Bruins return home to meet the fifth-place New York Rangers while Leafs go on to Detroit, where the Red Wings will be seeking to strengthen their hold on fourth position. The third game brings together two extremes, with the leading Montreal Canadiens at Chicago against the cellar-dwelling Black Hawks.

The weekend may bring a few aches and pains not altogether attributable to ice collisions. Since the coal strike cut down sleepers on United States trains, most of the players have considered themselves lucky if able to get even an upper berth.

With all sleepers to be taken off U.S. trains after Dec. 8, it looks like all-night rummy games during the longer hops.

A Different Matter

Despite other sharp cuts in railway services, Campbell thinks that all games will go on as scheduled.

A ban on public assembles, rumored as impending in the U.S., would be a different matter again.

Taking a long-range view, Campbell said such an eventuality could possibly be met by United States teams playing home games in Ottawa, Windsor, Galt, St. Catharines, Quebec, Verdun or other Canadian cities. An alternative would be to cut the schedule by five games each team and play all home games in the Montreal and Toronto arenas.

Manager Conn Smythe and Frank Selke of the respective teams perhaps with an eye to business, said that this arrangement would suit them fine.

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 7 —(CP)—The boys along the banks of the Gowanus, that narrow stretch of murky, odorous Brooklyn water where the true Dodger fan flourishes, are saddened today because their beloved brothers by adoption, coaches John (Red) Corriden and Charles (Chuck) Dressen no longer are members of that great baseball institution — Dem Bums . . . The Flatbush faithful, who live for only one thing — to see the Bums win a world series — have never forgiven Larry MacPhail, the Yankees' impresario, for dangling a $15,000-a-year contract in front of Dressen . . . For when Charlie decided to change his surroundings from the Gowanas to the Harlem River and the Yankee Stadium he also took with him a minimum of seven games, which, with Dressen around, were as good as "in the bag." . . . Last season Dressen, one of the most astute sign-stealers in the game, robbed the opposing pitchers and coaches blind when the sign for "a hit-and-run" play or a "fast one down the middle" was passed on. . . .

Brains Trust Dissolves.

But the pain of losing the colorful Dressen had hardly eased when along came the announcement that Old Red had turned in his uniform without giving reason . . . During his six-year stay with the Dodgers Corriden had almost earned his Brooklyn "citizenship" . . . Now Leo (Lippy) Durocher is confronted with the loss of three-quarters of his "brains" with no adequate replacements in sight . . . Well, Leo, the other quarter will have to function overtime to keep Dem Bums up at the National League top in 1947 . . . Of course, Leo will find some solace in the $70,000 salary and bonus Branch Rickey is laying out to keep the Dodger boss in the place where he says "he hopes to die."

Hockey Simmerings.

Unless a prolonged soft coal strike reaches the stage where meetings in public places will be banned to conserve fuel, the curtailment of railroad transportation will not affect the teams in the United States hockey league . . . Most of the league's eight clubs either ride on buses or travel by air . . . Fred Lionel Hitchman, the Boston Bruins' great, is back in the coaching limelight . . . Hitchman, who is in the hotel business in Berlin, N.H., has agreed to coach one of the two amateur hockey clubs that will be sponsored by a group of Berlin business men . . . The teams plan to fill their schedules with opponents from Maine and other New Hampshire communities . . . After Hitchman hung up his famous No. 3 jersey, which then was retired forever, he coached the Boston and Springfield clubs in the old Canadian-American hockey league.

Success of Community Depends On Happy Industrial Relations Says Millard, National Director of U.S.W.

The vital importance of satisfactory industrial relations to the success of the community was stressed to members of the Belleville and District Trades and Labor Council and to other citizens of the city by Charles H. Millard, national director of the United Steel Workers of America who Friday evening spoke at the Collegiate auditorium.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Belleville and District Trades and Labor Council with the local chairman, Thomas Reese, acting as chairman for the evening. Organizational background of the local labor council was outlined by George Elliott, head of the local carpenters' union, who stated that the council intended to take action on matters which they felt were wrong. They are now taking action in bringing in speakers to assist with their problems, he stated.

Completely outlining the aims of labor and as to what labor is seeking through union, Mr. Millard as national director of 50,000 Canadian steel workers, told his listeners that the standards set up by labor have a direct effect upon the nation's economy.

Based on Mutual Needs.

"The basic needs of labor are the basic needs of all humanity," declared Mr. Millard, "and labor has now come to the realization that their interests cannot be apart."

"We must create decency standards for every last person on earth, whether in China, India or other foreign countries and we cannot cease until we have accomplished this."

The speaker declared there were three objectives of labor unions. These were to unite labor for a common purpose, regardless of race, creed or color; to establish decent conditions of labor and decent standards of labor through collective bargaining, and to take political action, if necessary, to guarantee social welfare.

Mr. Millard declared there was a widespread ignorance throughout the country as to the real meaning of collective bargaining, and, because of this ignorance there was a fear of it.

Defines Collective Bargaining

"Collective bargaining means the selling of labor power collectively—yes, it means more than that, it means better working and living conditions and in the final analysis going into partnership with the employer. It means that human lives are invested in industry the same as dollars."

To illustrate his point the speaker went on to tell of the Steel Company of Canada being incorporated in 1910 with a capitalization of approximately 18 millions. By 1946 this corporation had paid back in dividends total of 47 1-2 millions, or 260 per cent of shareholders' original investment. But also by 1946 Steel Company shares had increased in value to 116 millions.

"Who owns the Steel Company?" asked Mr. Millard. "Legally it is the shareholders. But what about the workers who have invested their lives. The shareholders can cash their share and invest elsewhere but the workers cannot reel back their lives."

Wages Scales Compared

Continuing the speaker went on to draw a comparison between the wage scale of the Canadian steel worker and that of the American steel worker. In the United States when steel went up $5 per ton, wages went up 16 1-2 cents per hour. When Canadian made steel went up $5 per ton the workers in effect were told they would have to bargain with their employers.

"And yet the Steel Company of Canada last year showed a net profit of 4 1-2 millions. Yes, labor has a right to share in the profits."

Uniformity of wage rates throughout Canada was also urged by the speaker who claimed that the old story of a lower cost of living existing in certain district was not borne out by fact. Employers who exploit labor because of geographical divisions are not working for the national interest, according to Mr. Millard.

In Political Fields

Turning to the political problems of the day the speaker declared that labor must be prepared to send men to municipal, provincial and federal government fields in an effort to see that the rights of workers and veterans are protected. Veterans were promised freedom from want and fear. The labor unions are doing what they can, but governments must do their part.

Here the speaker directed a verbal shaft at the provincial government for its "cocktail" government. The government is not dealing with fundamentals when it is dealing with cocktail bars," he said. "They might better be dealing with housing and other problems of provincial and national importance."

"Canada today is at the crossroads," he concluded. "The decisions made as a community today will decide whether or not we will have another depression and whether or not we will have another war. If we cannot show a democracy in Canada, how can we expect it in other countries of the world?"

In closing Mr. Millard urged that citizens exercise their franchise as he feared that the present day apathy would work for the gradual destruction of democracy.

In a question period following the main address Mr. Millard answered questions on the possibility of increasing wages without increase in consumer prices which in turn would lead to what was termed as the "inflationary spiral" and also as to union action with regard to the dilatory worker.

Testimonial Given Ex-postmaster J.V.C. Truaisch

Former postmaster at Belleville, Mr. J. V. C. Truaisch, was recalled to the post office on Friday to receive a testimonial card from the Postmaster General as an expression of appreciation of the department for his faithful and meritorious services rendered during a period of 46 years.

Postmaster J. C. Waddell, Assistant Postmaster C. M. Stork and Senior Letter Carrier W. J. Holland and the entire postal and letter carrier staffs were present at the presentation.

Accompanying the testimonial was a personal letter from Mr. Ernest Bertrand, Postmaster General, expressing his own appreciation to Mr. Truaisch with the hope that the former Belleville postmaster might continue in good health and enjoy to the full his retirement.

My City

My city is the place where my home is founded, where my vote is cast, where my neighbors dwell, and where my life is chiefly lived. It supports me and I support it not only with taxes but with loyal participation in all moves to make it better.

My city needs my citizenship, not my partisanship; my friendliness, not my dissension; my sympathy, and intelligent support, not my indifference or knocks.

My city supplies me with friends, education, schools, trade, churches, entertainment, recreation and the right to free moral citizenship. It has some things that are better than others. The best things I will seek to make better; and the worse things I will help to suppress. It is my city and as such is entitled to the best there is in me.—(Contributed).

WANTS MORE NEWSMEN IN POLAND FOR ELECTION

London, Dec. 6 — (Reuters) — Britain is anxious to see an increased number of British newspapermen in Poland before and during the elections set for Jan. 19 next, State Minister Hector McNeil told the House of Commons.

DR. CAREFOOT

Harry Harrison, Thurlow township, told of having suffered with pains around his heart and at times fainting away. He had doctored with Dr. Empson at Roslin and with Dr. Robertson at Belleville but with no relief. On going to Dr. Carefoot he had been told he had a growth on his bowel under his rib and had taken treatment consisting of drops on his tongue and rubbing on his chest and abdomen. The growth had been indicated as being of a cancerous nature. "I got results from Dr. Carefoot," he said, "but not from the other two doctors."

Mrs. Fred McCoy, age 75, of Madoc, told of having stomach trouble for the past 25 years which had gradually grown worse despite treatment by a Madoc doctor. At the time of coming to Dr. Carefoot in 1945 she could neither eat nor sleep but after the first week of treatments by electrical machine she felt better.

Mrs. Samuel Elliott of Shannonville stated she had gone to Dr. Carefoot and had been told she had two cancers. After treatments her trouble had cleared up and she was now enjoying the best of health. Dr. Carefoot had not wanted to take her case on, she said.

Last witness called during the morning session was Mrs. Lottie Smith of Belleville who told of suffering from what her doctor trouble. On going to Dr. Carefoot her trouble had been diagnosed as a growth on the bowel. After treatment she said her condition had greatly improved and she was now in the best of health. Treatments given by Dr. Carefoot were had diagnosed as gall bladder not by machine, Mrs. Smith stated at the time of cross examination.

Pearl Harbor Outrage Five Years Ago

Honolulu, Dec. 7 (AP)—Five years ago today, the Japanese navy immobilized a major portion of the United States Pacific fleet with its sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Today, the army remembered with a formal ceremony re-raising the battle-scarred flag that flew over Hickam Field that day.

The United States navy, however, virtual [illegible] ored the day.

County Council Endorses Grant Of $26,500 for Proposed Red Cross Hospital at Bancroft

By a standing vote of 17-11, Hastings County Council at its closing session in Shire Hall Friday evening sanctioned a grant of $26,500 to the building fund of the new Bancroft Red Cross 20-bed Hospital, the amount to be spread over three years in annual payments of $8,383.34.

Two amendments to the original motion were defeated, the first calling for a grant of $18,000 spread over three years, and the second for $12,000 over the same period of time. Former motions giving respective grants of $2,500 and $5,000 were repealed.

The over-all cost of the proposed institution is $120,000 with the government giving a grant of $40,000; the Ontario Division of the Red Cross the same amount and the other third to be raised by the municipality.

Reeve W. J. Davis, Bangor, Wicklow and McClure, moved the original motion, supported by Reeve Peter Kellar of Bancroft but the move precipitated the longest discussion of the current session with opinion being clear on the question of the grant but divided on the amount.

Amendment for $18,000

Reeve George MacDonald, Thurlow, county chairman of finance after lengthy debate across the chamber moved an amendment that a grant of $18,000 be given the new hospital. His motion was seconded by Reeve George West of Madoc.

Huntingdon's reeve, Elmer Post, agreed with the amendment but thought the amount was still too high and accordingly moved another amendment giving a grant of $12,000 in three payments of $4,000 annually. There was no seconder to this amendment and it was eventually disregarded.

Reeve Davis in presenting his motion told council that the hospital is badly needed in the north country where two doctors cover 2,000 square miles to care for a population of 9,000. The government is putting up $40,000; the Red Cross $40,000 and it seems the county is losing something worthwhile if it misses this opportunity.

To Sell Old Hospital

Stating that Bancroft and the north would raise $13,500 Reeve Peter Kellar of that village told council that if the remaining $26,500 was not forthcoming or could be shown, the project would fall through and the government recall its grant. Northern municipalities will raise by levy the sum of $8 500 and the old Bancroft hospital can be disposed of for $5,000 making a total of $13,500.

Reeve P. J. Kirby predicted that if the 20-bed hospital was built it would not be long before the cry came for help to extend it to a 40-bed affair. He brought up the question of the County Health Unit, turned down by council at its June session and spoke strongly in its favor as compared to two hospitals, one in the north and the other in the southern part of the county.

Lengthy discussion centred about this subject. Reeve Post was of the opinion that the hospital idea was all right but the method of raising funds was wrong. He felt that the county property owners should not be made to bear the burden through taxation but rather the two governments should do something about it. "We have got to hold things down and get other methods of raising funds than through the taxpayer's nose," he said.

Reeve Ken Vivian, Tyendinaga was in accord with the grant but felt council should not go the full limit. "There will likely be contributions from other organizations before the building is completed, and these would reduce the amount of the grant demanded of the county."

"Don't forget that Trenton is building a hospital too and I fully expect to see a delegation here asking for a grant," Reeve Sam Nicolson, Sidney, remarked. "The building of its hospital should go a long way towards relieving congestion in all hospitals of the district."

He had a great deal of sympathy for a hospital in Bancroft, Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford, said. "One has to but live in the rugged north country to appreciate the need of the people there for proper medical treatment. Trenton and Belleville have good roads and transportation is easy. He was in favor of the grant, but agreed with Reeve MacDonald's figures.

Reeve William West, Stirling, felt that the amount asked for the hospital was on the conservative side. The hospital is badly needed and he was of the opinion that the Red Cross was not asking for too elaborate an institution. Under the circumstances, County Coun-

Outlined Plans.

"I have reason to believe that the Belleville hospital will ask for another grant in view of the increased cost in construction," Reeve MacDonald said. He outlined the story of the proposed convalescent institution proposed to be built by the Belleville W.C.A., adding that unless the money was in sight, the government would take back its grant of $100,000.

The Belleville hospital was not run by the municipality but by the Women's Christian Association, Reeve Charles Buskard, Deloro, pointed out. "This organization borrowed money some time ago to build a new wing and it can borrow at any time. I appreciate the fact that there is a heavy demand on the property owner, but I hate to see this project stalled because we will not grant sufficient funds."

The northern municipalities feel they have gone as far as they can towards raising finances, Deputy Reeve Harrison, Thurlow, said. "It is now a question of whether the project goes on or stops. This hospital is badly needed and this council will be lax in its duties if the idea is turned down."

Other Grants.

Council granted the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association the sum of $800 to assist in its work of tuberculosis prevention in the county. Consensus of the reeves was that the association was doing a noble work in providing free X-ray clinics for county residents and went on record as being in thorough accord with the idea.

There was some discussion when the grant to the Community Service Campaign came up. The majority of members felt that the percentage of distribution between the Y.M.C.A., the V.O.N. and the Children's Aid Society was not equitable. The "Y" and the V.O.N. did not contribute much to the county's needs and were more or less city organizations. On motion, council granted the sum of $600 with 50% of this amount to go to the Children's Aid Society and 25% each to the other organizations.

By-laws

Council passed by-laws adjusting the salaries of the county clerk and treasurer so they will receive pay cheques every month instead of every quarter as heretofore, effective January 1, 1947; to increase the salary of the county engineer to $3,200 annually to be retroactive to July 1, 1946, subject to the approval of the Minister of Highways; to assume the Eldorado-Remington road in Madoc township; to delete from the county system Forsythe Street in the Village of Marmora; to close the Registry Office on Saturday afternoons from 1 p.m., effective January 1st., to appoint Garret Morton, Tweed, as county auditor at a salary of $350 the first year and $400 for each succeeding year; and to appoint as high school trustees in their various communities, Madoc, Dr. Eggleson; Deseronto, Brooks Allen; Trenton, W. A. Reed; Stirling, J. P. Belshaw; Tweed, Dr. W. A. Paul; Marmora, John Robertson and Bancroft, John L. Churcher.

Council also endorsed a motion that the offices of the county clerk, treasurer and registrar be closed from 12 noon December 24 to 9 a.m., December 30," as a gesture of appreciation of services rendered during the year."

Warden Thanked

Prior to adjournment Reeve Charles Rush paid tribute to the "efficiency, courtesy, and kindness shown by Warden James Nickle to his council in 1946. We hope you will cherish in the years to come the high esteem in which this council, holds you, sir," he said, addressing the chair.

"I have every respect for the council and county officials, and I sometimes wonder if I have done a good job," the warden replied. "I am very pleased with the way the work was carried out and when I retire from municipal life within the next few days I shall carry with me the highest regards for the council. I want to thank you for the kindness and co-operation you have shown me and also the high honor you bestowed on me at the beginning of the year, I have also enjoyed the work, friendship and sociability of all the committees."

Reeve William West paid tribute to the efficiency of the county officials and their staffs and council adjourned till January.

Govt. Awaits Next Round With Lewis; Miners Back to Pits

Emergency Orders Invoked To Save Coal Are Removed

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH

Washington, Dec. 9 —(AP)— The United States government, triumphant in its bitter fight to smash the coal strike, counted on a nod from the Supreme Court today signalling the next grim round with John L. Lewis.

Jubilant over the weekend surrender of Mr. Lewis which ended the 17-day economy-wrecking walkout, officials expressed confidence the top court of the land would take jurisdiction for an early settlement.

These officials as well as union aides said they expect that with the strike over the court probably will put the case of the United Mine Workers' appeal from contempt fines totalling $3,510,000 on its regular calendar, rather than docket it ahead of other matters. This might put off a decision until February.

In the wake of Mr. Lewis' sudden and dramatic capitulation Saturday, the country hustled to get industrial wheels turning full speed again.

There was every sign that the miners were heeding the order of their shaggy-browed leader. Mr. Lewis told them there should "be no hesitation" about getting back to the pits.

In cancelling the strike after indicating time and again that he planned a fight to the finish, Mr. Lewis gave these reasons:

1. The Supreme Court, in considering the contempt conviction and possibly whether the miners had a right to void their contract with the government should be "free from public pressure super-induced by the hysteria and frenzy of an economic crisis."

2. "Public necessity requires the quantitative production of coal during such period."

No Comment by President.

Mr. Lewis beat his unexpected retreat even as President Truman was at work on a radio speech which he had planned to deliver last night. Mr. Truman cancelled the talk but made no comment.

Swiftly the government stripped away most of the series of emergency orders which had been invoked to save coal.

The Solid Fuels Administration is continuing for a while its controls over soft coal shipments, but conditions under which supplies are doled out to essential users have been eased.

Mr. Lewis said coal production would continue until April 1, but this does not necessarily mean another strike at that time.

Before the strike Mr. Lewis turned down a government proposal for a 60-day truce while he negotiated with the operators on his far-reaching wage demands. He allegedly sought 54 hours pay for 40 hours work.

The mines have been in government possession since last May when they were seizd during the 59-day Spring strike.

One high government official told a reporter that the government will return the pits to private owners "just as soon as a contract has been negotiated and coal production is satisfactory." But he added there has been no indication since the end of the strike that Mr. Lewis and the operators are ready to get together.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 9 (AP). — The soft coal miners trooped back to their jobs today and resumed production of desperately needed fuel ending a 17-day work stoppage that crippled United States' economy.

Spear-heading the back-to-work movement by the 400,000 United Mine Workers were the diggers in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, which have about one-half of the soft coal miners. Early reports from these fields showed miners generally obeyed John L. Lewis' order to return to work, although full production may not be reached before Tuesday or Wednesday.

In the coal-rich Pittsburgh area only a couple large mines were reported idle and union members explained work would be resumed at these as soon as the official work notice had been received from the union.

Among the mines re-opening were captive pits of such steel corporations as U.S. Steel, Jones and Laughlin and Republic Steel.

Fuel was sorely needed by industry and to warm homes and schools across the country.

The back-to-work movement, which came after nearly 300,000 other workers had been idle and complete economic paralysis was threatened, started yesterday at three small Ohio pits.

Clean-up crews and shifts of "cat-eye" cutters worked through the night at many mines to ready them for the 6 a.m. shift today—the first operations in 18 days.

President John P. Basarello of U.M.W. district 5 embracing Pittsburgh, said 92 per cent of his 26,000 miners voted to return.

"They're plenty sore over the raw deal we got from the government," Busarello said, "but they are going back because Lewis requested them to go back."

William Hynes, U.M.W. chief in the Uniontown, Pa., coal fields, said all pits there are expected back in operation within two days "because the union and miners still are squarely behind Lewis and always will be."

West Virginia's vast coal industry was not expected to reach full production until mid-week because maintenance work had been discontinued in some sections during the long shutdown.

The miners generally were calm and quiet as they prepared to go back to work.

Calling off the walkout, dramatically announced by Mr. Lewis at a news conference Saturday, halted a rising tide of unemployment and ended drastic dim-outs over more than a score of states.

Railroads, steel and other coal dependent industries prepared for a quick recovery from the almost disastrous effects of the walkout of 400,000 miners.

The Ford Motor Company in Detroit, after laying off 20,000 workers late last week, said efforts would be made to resume full production schedules tomorrow.

Robert Rolfe New Coach Of Toronto Huskies

Toronto, Dec. 9 —(CP)—Robert (Red) Rolfe, former New York Yankees third baseman and Yale University basketball coach, has accepted terms to coach Toronto Huskies of the Basketball Association of America professional circuit, manager Lew Hayman announced today.

Rolfe, interviewed by Hayman in New York last week, will join the team here Wednesday replacing big Ed Sadowski who disappeared mysteriously from Toronto, leaving the Huskies coachless. The new coach will drill the club here Wednesday in preparation for their home stand against Pittsburgh next Friday night.

Mrs. Dick Given Stay of Execution

Toronto, Dec. 9 —(CP)— Chief Justice R. S. Robertson of Ontario today announced a stay of execution until Feb. 7 for Mrs. Evelyn MacLean Dick, 26, of Hamilton, convicted of the torso murder of her tram-driver husband, 40-year-old John Dick, and sentenced to be hanged Jan. 7.

The stay of execution will permit hearing of Mrs. Dick's appeal from her conviction.

The attractive Hamilton woman was arrested last March after school children on a Saturday morning hike found the headless, limbless torso of her husband near a scenic lovers' lane drive on the brow of Hamilton Mountain.

Also charged with the murder were Mrs. Dick's father, Donald MacLean, 68, and her friend, 27-year-old William Bohozuk. Their trial was adjourned after Mrs. Dick, convicted and under sentence of death, refused to testify against them.

Mrs. Dick and Bohozuk also face charges of murdering an infant whose body, encased in cement, was found in Mrs. Dick's home.

FORMER EUROPA, NOW LA LIBERTE, IS FAST IN MUD

Ship Snaps Moorings In Tidal Wave, Cuts Side Upon Le Havre Harbor Wreckage

Le Harve, France, Dec. 9 (AP) —The German-built liner Europa, renamed the Liberte by the French, snapped her moorings in a gale-driven tidal wave today, gashed her side against harbor wreckage and sank into the mud on a shallow side of the Le Havre Basin.

The 49,746-ton vessel, assigned to France as war reparations, settled with a heavy list upon recession of the tidal wave, which had caused the sea to rise three feet above normal. However, a rising tide later righter her, indicating she had retained some buoyancy.

One official said there was no danger that she would be a total loss. Divers stood about, ready to check on the extent of the damage when the weather moderates. The liner was fast in hte mud with a five-degree list this afternoon.

Hopes of Refloating

French line officials expressed hope that the Liberte, dogged by bad luck since she was launched at Hamburg as a North German Lloyd liner in August, 1928, could be refloated.

The sea and wind tore the vessel from the French line docks and shoved her across the basin, with anchors dragging, in less than three minutes. Wreckage staved in the Liberte's side at the level of the machine room and water flooded through the gaping hole.

However, there was no loss of life. All aboard were taken ashore at 8 a.m. Fire fighting companies stood by.

The storm harassed other vessels along the waterfront.

A united States naval launch broke her moorings near the citadel and sank. The French liner Palmyre snapped her lines and drifted, but was brought under control without damage.

J.C. Anderson, Named Hastings County Judge

Oshawa, Dec. 9 — J. C. Anderson, K.C., well known Oshawa barrister and prominent figure in the civic affairs of the city, has been appointed judge for the County of Hastings, it was announced today. He succeeds Judge Charles A. Cameron, who was named recently to the Exchequer Court of Canada. The appointment is to be effective early in the new year.

Mr. Anderson has been associated with W. E. N. Sinclair, K.C., M.P., since his graduation from Osgoode Hall in 1926 and has had considerable experience in the legal field. He was special Crown counsel at the Barrie assizes in 1937 and the following year was named King's Counsellor. He was also counsel for the Department of Education in the Runnymede School Inquiry in 1943. He is president this year of the Ontario County Law Association.

Mayor of Oshawa.

He entered municipal affairs here in 1930 when he was elected to the Board of Education, on which he served for six years. He was a member of the city council from 1937-39 and was mayor of the city for two terms, 1940 and 1941. In 1944 he was chairman of the Oshawa Public Utilities Commission and also president of the Oshawa Chamber of Commerce. He has been chairman of the Oshawa Town Planning Commission for the past three years and has been chairman of the Oshawa Community Chest Campaign of the past two years, he has also been second in command of the 11th (R) Armored Regiment with the rank of major.

Born in Bancroft.

Mr. Anderson, who is the son of Rev. T. H. P. and Mrs. Anderson, was born in Bancroft, Ont., on January 11, 1902, and graduated in honor economies from the University of Toronto in 1923. He graduated from Osgoode Hall as barrister-at-law in 1926 and in 1929 obtained the degree of LLB. from the University of Toronto. He has resided in Oshawa for the past 10 years. He is a member of the Board of Governors of Albert College, Belleville, a member of the Institute of International affairs and a member of the Canadian Bar Association.

RussiaRefusesProposal For U.N. Inventory Of Armed Troops at Home

By JOHN A. PARRIS

Lake Success, N. Y., Dec. 9— (AP)—Russia unexpectedly refused early today to accept a proposal for a United Nations inventory of armed troops at home.

In a surprise move, a foreign Minister Molotov demanded deletion of a home troop census from a resolution already approved by the powerful 54-member U.N. political committee

His action, taken at an Assembly plenary session, threatened to reopen the whole question of troop dispositions.

Previously, at the committee stage, M. Molotov had agreed to taking census of both domestic forces and those on foreign soil.

M. Molotov tossed today's bombshell into the assembly a few seconds after Sir Hartley Shawcross of Great Britain asked the world peace-keeping body to establish an international inspection board to verify figures submitted by member nations in the troop inventory.

Delegates who had come to the session prepared to debate the British plan were so surprised and unprepared for Mr. Molotov's action that the plenary session was recessed until tomorrow.

Five-hour Session

The Russian action highlighted a five-hour plenary session last night. Just before midnight the assembly had in effect, censured South Africa for racial discrimination of Indians in the Union after rejecting a South African demand that the issue be turned over to the international court of justice for an advisory opinion.

This assembly action was considered significant by many delegates, particularly those who had argued that such a decision constituted U.N. interference in purely domestic affairs of a memberstate.

The resolution recognized India's contention regarding treatment of Indians in South Africa, declaring that because of that treatment, friendly relations between the two member states have been impaired, and unless a satisfactory settlement is reached these relations are likely to be further impaired."

Will Report Back

The assembly called upon the two countries to try to settle their differences and report back to next year's session.

When M. Molotov climbed to the rostrum at the opening of the troop census debate delegates expected him to confine his remarks to the British proposal for verification of figures to be submitted by all members by Jan. 1. Instead he began with a declaration of the importance of an inventory of troops abroad, particularly those on member states' soil, and then argued any counting of home troops would only "complicate the question of troops on foreign soil."

Mr. Molotev demanded that the assembly delete the entire paragraph of the committee-approved resolution calling for a troop inventory at home and abroad.

FULL EQUALITY C.C.F. KEYNOTE ONTARIO SECTION

President Claims Incidents of Racialism Shown in the Dominion

Hamilton, Dec 9 (CP)—George Grube, Ontario President of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, addressing the opening meeting today of the C.C.F. Ontario section's 1946 convention, said the most important article of any democratic code is the assertion of full equality of all men, regardless of color, race or creed.

"There have been too many shameful and distressing incidents of late to show that racialism of various kinds is flourishing in this country," he said, "a Negro is refused as participant in a Toronto bridge club; Negroes are expected to sit in a special part of a Halifax theatre. In spite of recent legislation in Ontario, the words "restricted patronage" can still be seen in all their shameful indecency in some places. I am told the words may be too ambiguous to be illegal, but their meaning is disgustingly clear."

"No socialist party is worthy of the name that does not take its assertion of equality without regard to race, color or creed with a solemn determination to carry it out. We do so in the C.C.F., I hope without exception."

Referring to Canada's other political parties, he said, "by and large, there is in Canada little difference between our two old

GOVT. CONSIDERS RETENTION OF POW FOR LABOR

Canadian Cabinet Has Not Reached Decision Says High Official

Ottawa, Dec. 9 —(CP)—Retention of German prisoners of war in Canada to bolster the Dominion's labor supply has been under consideration by the federal cabinet, it was learned today, but it was not disclosed whether a decision has been reached.

One source indicated to the Canadian Press that plans were going ahead on the understanding that some of the remaining 2,200 prisoners in the country were to stay in Canada, but another high officials said cabinet had not yet made up its mind finally.

Expectation was that any persons retained would be employed in farm work. It was known the government had been under considerable pressure to keep as possible of the prisoners in the Dominion to augment the scarce supply of farm labor, a problem which was underscored here at last week's meeting of the Dominion-provincial farm labor conference.

Shortage of Loggers

A sharp shortage of loggers in the Canadian woods also has been evident following the removal of about 10,000 of the prisoners from this industry to re-

Animals Play Prominent Part In Unusual Accidents for 1946

Chicago, Dec. 9 (AP).—It used to be news when a man bit a dog. But in 1946, a dog shot a woman, a kangaroo blasted a man, a rabbit wounded a sportsman and a deer disarmed a hunter.

And a salmon wrecked an automobile with a sneeze.

The National Safety Council listed these oddities in its annual roundup of unusual accidents:

Mrs. Ruth Patterson was enjoying a bath in her Baltimore home when her police pup, Toby, spied a gun on the washstand. It put its paw on the trigger. Mrs. Patterson was shot in the hand.

Arthur Crosbie, an Australian hunter, shot a kangaroo through the hind legs. He reloaded his rifle and put the butt on the animal's neck to pin it down. The kangaroo twined a forepaw around the trigger and shot Crosbie through the arm.

Near Louisville, Ky., a rabbit took exception to the activities of William Humphrey, 16-year-old hunter. It reached out from his game bag, pulled the trigger of his gun and shot him in the foot.

A buck deer staged a rescue act to save another buck deer from Del Halstead. Hunting near Buckhorn Station, Calif., Halstead had just trained his sights on a deer when the second one bounded out of a thicket behind him, struck him in the back and sent him sprawling.

Humans, too, caused their share of odd accidents. Forty-two years ago, Pete Bird, Shelbyville, Ky., was chopping a log when a chip struck him in the eye, causing a cataract and blindness. Mr. Bird chopped wood again this year and a chip hit him in the same eye, tore the cataract loose and restored his sight.

DEATH TOLL 117 IN WINECOFF HOTEL FIRE AT ATLANTA

City, County, Federal Probes Ordered In Most Deadly Hotel Fire in United States

Atlanta, Dec. 9 —(AP)—The Winecoff hotel disaster came up for multiple investigations today amid a futile search for the origin of the fire that killed at least 117 persons.

City, county and federal probes were ordered.

Solicitor General E. E. Andrews arranged conferences with the city fire marshal, firemen, fire underwriters and grand jury foreman Henry Chandler. He said a grand jury would study Saturday's pre-dawn fire to determine if there had been any criminal negligences. The jury will meet tomorrow.

Mayor William B. Hartsfield called an afternoon meeting of the city council's fire committee to question officials about the most deadly hotel fire in the United States.

The city's Grady Hospital was asked by Mayor Hartsfield for a report on the burns and gas poisoning among the casualities in an effort to determine the fire's origin. The speed with which the blaze spread also has baffled officials, although one said open stairwells were a major contributing factor.

City Fire Chief C.C. Styron, A. C. Huton, assistant chief engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and other officials studied the blackened wreckage on busy Peachtree Street yesterday.

A state law requiring all Georgia hotels to install automatic sprinkler systems was asked by Taylor T. Carstarphen, chairman of the Macon, Georgia City Council's Fire Committee. The Winecoff had neither sprinklers nor fire escapes. The hotel passed a city fire inspection only recently.

Governor Ellis Arnall criticized the hotel's rating as "fire resistant" and asked legislation against such a claim.

The Red Cross casualty list carried the names of 112 unidentified dead. Five blackened bodies had been unclaimed. Five were listed as missing. The Red Cross said it was possible that the unidentified were the five missing.

The Salvation Army tabulated a dead list of 117 names. Its tabulation also listed four unidentified bodies.

Two Young Thugs Linked to Two Violent Crimes

London, Ont., Dec. 9. (CP)— Police today linked two young thugs with two violent crimes in the district Friday night—the attack on Duncan McKellar in his farm home at nearby Caradoc and theft of a radio and his auto; and the assault and robbery of Chinese laundrymen brothers, Young Ling, 73, and Leong 70 in London in which $160 was stolen.

Robbery of the Chinese at their East London shop was not reported to city police until late Saturday Provincial Officers did not reveal the McKellar raid until Sunday.

In another suspected holdup, James Smith engineer at the London Pure Milk Co., Plant, said a man with a polka dot handkerchief over his wace accosted him at the plant Saturday night but that he gave battle and the stranger fled.

Meanwhile, Sergeant Alex Craik of the Provincial Police here said today there are still no developments in last Wednesday night's two mystery shootings in suburban East London which sent one man to hospital. Inspector Alex McLeod of Toronto who is aiding the investigation, reportedly connected with a gamblers' feud, was still in the district but could not be reached.

TREES WENT BEGGING

Niagara Falls, Dec. 9 — (CP)— Christmas trees went begging on the city market Saturday, while the temperature was high enough for a day in May. Selling for $1 each it was the first appearance of Christmas trees on the market this season.

Gas Stove Explodes In Restaurant On Hotel's Main Floor

18 Admitted to Hospital With Burns, Other Injuries

Saskatoon, Dec. 9—(CP)—Coroner W. Oliver of Saskatoon today launched an investigation into the death of 11 persons in the Barry Hotel fire here early yesterday. Six jurymen viewed the bodies visited the scene of the blaze and then adjourned sine die to await the inquest hearings.

As the hotel interior continued to smoulder, both police and fire departments began to prepare reports of the worst hotel fire in Saskatchewan's history, however, it was not expected they would be completed for several days.

From city hospitals where 18 persons injured in the fire were recovering, came word that all the patients were improving.

Only one, Albert Scheider of Saskatoon, was listed as in serious condition. Mrs. Scheider also is in hospital but her injuries are not considered severe.

The fire, worst in Canada since the Queen's Hotel fire in Halifax March 5, 1939, which claimed 28 lives, followed by only 24 hours the Winecoff Hotel fire at Atlanta Ga., in which 114 persons were killed. It marked a weekend of costly blazes in many parts of the continent. In the Dominion alone the total damage from weekend fires was estimated in the neighborhood of $1,000,000, although only here was there loss of life.

Reported to have started early Sunday from the explosion of a gas stove in a restaurant on the hotel's main floor, the fire spread so rapidly through the three-storey brick building that firemen were ordered by Acting Capt. E. Clark to "forget the building. There are lives to be saved."

Identification of the victims was hampered through loss of the hotel register. One body still remained unidentified today.

The known dead were:

William Munro, Mary Agnita Wall, Nels Peterson and a Mr. Marson all of Saskatoon;

R. McNeil, believed to be from Hamilton, Ont.;

Charles Robert Lyons, of Tisdale, Sask.;

Ronald Proctor, of Sovereign, Sask.;

Stanley Currie, believed to be from Yellowknife N.W.T.;

Yee Lum, of Alsask, Sask.; and

Don Wing, believed to be from Melfort, Sask.

Some of the victims had died of suffocation, but the bodies of others had been charred horribly by the flames.

So rapidly had the flames spread through the building that fire-fighting equipment proved of little avail. First alarm was turned in at 4:41 a.m., E.S.T.

Fred Fries, a waiter in the restaurant in which the blaze originated was called to the kitchen by the cook, he said. There he found the gas range blazing and a can of gasoline on the floor shooting flames eight feet high.

Fries grabbed the gasoline can, and tried to run out on the street with it. But a frightened customer bumped into him. The can fell and rolled into the hotel lobby. Another man then tried to kick it out through the door, but the draft from a heavy electric fan was believed to have sent the flames spiralling inward.

Building an Inferno

"All hell then broke loose," Fries said. The flames shot higher than a doorway, and within a minute the building was an inferno.

Firemen toiled in the smoke and heat to save as many as possible of the 120 persons registered. Some guests, panicked by the sight of the rapidly-spreading flames, jumped from second and third storey windows in scanty attire. Others tied sheets and blankets into ropes with which to make their escape.

Ambulances carried the more seriously injured to hospital one, Walter Gnuts, of Regina, a Canadian Pacific Airways employee, was operated on and also given plasma. His condition was reported serious.

Cared for by Neighbors

Others, with lesser hurts or burns, were cared for by neighbors.

One of the most fortunate residents of the hotel was Eddie Malouf, resident there for 14 years. Although he and Harry Ludgate, a Saskatoon lawyer made their way to safety down the fire escape clad only in pajamas, Malouf was first able to retrieve $450 he had left in his coat pocket.

Marjorie Way, 13, Fatally Injured When Hit by Car

Struck by a car while proceeding along Cannifton Road shortly after six o'clock Saturday night, Marjorie Way, thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Way, 181 College Street, was fatally injured and died on the way to the Belleville General Hospital.

According to Investigating Provincial Police Constable W. Gould, the girl was delivering newspapers on her route when she was hit by the vehicle driven by M. H. Card, of Tweed, Ont. It is alleged that the bicycle she was riding carried no reflector on its rear wheel.

The girl was rushed to hospital immediately following the accident but expired en route.

The preliminary inquest was held at eight o'clock Saturday night with Coroner Dr. Russell Scott presiding and adjourned until Thursday of this week.

She was born 13 years ago in this city and was in the 6th grade at Queen Victoria School. The family attend Emmanuel Church.

Surviving besides the parents are four sisters, Georgina, Mary, Anna and Kathleen; two brothers, William and John, all at home.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP).—Synopsis: Temperatures over Southwestern Ontario continue unseasonably mild. Record high temperatures for this date are expected over that region today. The area of rain and fog which blanketed Central and Northern Ontario during the past 24 hours is moving northeastward out of the province. Slightly cooler cloudy weather is replacing it. Colder weather was moved into the Prairies from Northwestern Canada and will move into Northwestern Ontario today. No sharp drop in temperature is seen for Southern Ontario before Wednesday, but slightly cooler weather is expected Tuesday.

THREE SISTER SOWS HAVE 33 PIGS

George Goodfellow, Roslin farmer, needs no prompting to believe in the old adage that "birds of a feather flock together", even if the examples in his case were not feathered.

Recently Mr. Goodfellow had 3 sows all from the same litter which had been penned together in the same small pen. Came farrowing time the three sows gave birth to 33 young pigs and all within a period of three hours.

JUNIOR FARMERS TO BUILD RINK

Members of the Melrose Junior Farmers will build an outdoor skating rink this winter, it was decided at their annual meeting held last week. The club will also get up a play this winter as a means of raising funds.

Earl Badgley was elected as president of the club for the next year with Charles Brennan as vice president. Secretary treasurer is William English with the recreation committee being composed of Kenneth McMechan, Charles Bates and Malcolm Lazier.

HOMEMAKERS' CLUB VISITS PETERBOROUGH

Approximately 140 homemaking club girls of Hastings county made a trip to Peterboro Monday (today) where they visited the Quaker Oats Company, Canada Packers and the Peterboro radio station. It was the first time that homemaking club girls in Hastings have made such a trip.

Members of the following clubs and their leaders who made the trip to Peterboro were: Rylestone—Marie Meiklejohn, Dorothy Spencer; Marmora—Mrs. E.C. Prentice and Mrs. Kouri; Cooper-Remington—Miss Fay Rollins and Miss Edeline McCoy; Eldorado—Mrs. Douglas Pigden and Mrs. H. Pigden; Queensboro—Mrs. Arthur Holmes and Mrs. Ed. Obituary

FRED JOHN BURKE

After an illness of five days' duration Fred John Burke, 14 Highland Avenue, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening, Dec. 8th.

The late Mr. Burke was in his 59th. year and was born in this city, his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke. All his life was passed here. He was well known and to many friends his death has brought much regret.

During the First Great War Fred Burke enlisted as a bandsman with the 21st. Battalion and served overseas with that unit. He was a member of the Army and Navy Veterans. In religion he was a member of the Church of England and was a parishioner of Christ Church.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Adelaide Vallance; three daughters, Mrs. J. K. Crosby, Guelph; Mrs. Harold Hendricks, Belleville, and Mrs. T. L. Storey, Weston; three sons, John Lorne, of Belleville; James Frederick, of Renfrew and Thomas R., at home; one sister, Mrs. Florence Dunne, Newton, Mass.; one brother, Richard Burke, Belleville.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

LATE CHARLES RODGERS
(Toronto-Belleville)

The funeral of Charles Rodgers, a former resident of this city, who died in Toronto recently, was held from the Canadian National Railways station shortly after noon of Saturday to Belleville cemetery where interment took place. The committal prayers were said by the Rev. J. Grant Sparling, Rector of Christ Church.

FRANK BARNUM

Frank Barnum died at his home, 71 South Front Street, on Sunday after an illness of two years' duration.

Born at Cannifton the late Mr. Barnum was in his 55th. year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Barnum. For the past ten years he made his home in this city. In the First Great War Frank Barnum served overseas and was in the forces for four years and eight months. During the last war he served in the Veterans' Guard for four years and seven months. He was a member of the United Church.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Annie Horn; two daughters, Miss Shirley Barnum at home, and Mrs. John Gray, Belleville.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, until late Monday afternoon, then at his late residence; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

MRS. AMANDA DUETTA
(Picton)

Mrs. Amanda Duetta, widow of David Duetta, died at her home in Picton on Sunday evening after an illness of one week's duration.

The late Mrs. Duetta who was in her 78th. year, was born at Big Island, Prince Edward County, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Bovay. For some years she resided at Crofton and for the past twenty five years she made her home in Picton and was a member of the United Church. She was the last of her family.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

MRS. ELLA MOUNTENAY
(Gardenville)

Mrs. Ella Mountenay of Gardenville, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday evening. She was 73 years of age and a patient in the hospital since Dec. 7th.

JAMES AUSTIN HANNAH
(Belleville—Sidney)

James Austin Hannah, 80 South Foster Avenue, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning. He was in failing health for about one year.

Born in Madoc township 72 years ago the late Mr. Hannah was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hannah. For thirty-five years he was engaged in farming in Sidney township and five weeks ago he came to this city to make his home. He was a member of the Plymouth Brethren.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Ella Wannamaker; two daughters, Mrs. Morley Richardson, River Valley, near Stirling, and Mrs. Gladys Lott, Belleville; three sons, Hedley of Oak Lake; Kimley of Sidney township and Maury of Belleville; one brother, William of Bannockburn; two sisters, Mrs. Ernest Crippen of Belleville; Mrs. Catherine Poole of Belleville, and one half sister, Mrs. Archie Gilroy of Belleville; twenty-two grandchildren, and seven great grandchildren.

Wooler Man Found Hanging From Beam

Wooler—(Special)—Mr. Lorne Whitney, age 35, Wooler, was found hanging from a beam in his barn on Sunday afternoon by his wife and son.

Whitney had attended the morning church service and early in the afternoon went to the barn to look after a horse. On his failure to return to the house Mrs. Whitney and her son went to the barn to look for him and found him hanging from a beam in the stable. He is survived by his wife and son.

Jury Acquits Dr. Carefoot Of False Pretences Charge

Following deliberation of one hour and fifteen minutes a verdict of "not guilty" was returned by the jury late Saturday as the Carefoot trial was brought to a close.

Thus 58-year-old Dr. E. M. Carefoot, 201 McDonald Ave., Thurlow Township, was acquitted on the charge that he had obtained by false pretences the sum of $135 from John McAninch of Belleville by reason of claiming that he had a machine which could diagnose and cure illness.

As the last of a long list of defence witnesses, the former Saskatchewan medical practitioner went to the stand in his own defence late Friday afternoon and was still in the witness box following the Saturday noon recess. Then followed rebuttal witnesses for the Crown, with counsel for both the defence and the Crown addressing the jury just prior to the evening recess.

Jurymen were kept in seclusion until the resumption of court at eight o'clock when the charge was given to the jury by Judge Lane.

At the opening of the Saturday morning session defence counsel Malcolm Robb asked protection for his client under the Canadian Evidence Act should further charges be brought by the Crown. This was granted by Judge Lane and on the approval of Special Crown Prosecutor Davis.

No Attempt to Defraud.

Testifying in his own defence Dr. Carefoot told the court that never at any time had he attempted to defraud Mr. McAninch and also that he had never claimed to have a machine which would diagnose or cure Mr. McAninch's trouble.

"I believe in the Callaghan machine implicitly," continued the witness. "I have had tremendous success with it — far beyond my expectations. However, I treat only 15 or 16 diseases and have had disappointments."

Although he claimed not to have used the Abrams machine, he declared he had the utmost faith in the Abrams theory of diagnosis and treatment of disease. The only way which patients came to him was as the result of high recommendation from patients who had been cured through treatment, he said.

Dr. Carefoot went to some length to describe the electron theory which was the basis of treatment used by himself.

"The basis of all matter is the electron. All material is the same except for the different electronic structure and all matter emanates its own type of energy. Disease also emanates its own kind of energy which is a very low-power wave."

The doctor then went on to explain that when the wave length of a certain disease was determined, if waves of a like nature were directed to it, the disease would be destroyed or annulled. This was where the Callaghan machine entered into the treatment given by Dr. Carefoot.

However, as the result of research it was claimed that the machine could be dispensed with as certain types of drugs had been found which would emanate the particular rays necessary to annul cancer, ulcers and certain other diseases.

Witness declared he had been interested in cancer research since the death of his mother as the result of cancer back in 1910. He had gone to California where he studied the Abrams theory, but now, although still claiming to believe implicitly in the Abrams theory he did not care with what he treated as long as he got results.

Believes Cancer Hereditary.

Now after years of research his opinion was that cancer was hereditary and except by the use of the Abrams theory there was no possible way to detect an early cancer. Cancer may or may not be painful dependent upon whether there was some nerve affected, or whether it caused pressure.

Under cross examination by special prosecutor Davis, Dr. Carefoot admitted having his doctor's licence suspended in Saskatchewan following conviction on a charge of using unorthodox treatment which according to the charge had been the Abrams machine. Dr. Carefoot denied, however, that he had ever used the Abrams machine.

In rebuttal of the above statement the Crown introduced a letter written by Dr. Carefoot to Saskatchewan medical authorities admitting the use of the Abrams machine asking for reinstatement and promising not to use the machine again.

"That letter was sent by the way of a feeler, but it was rejected" returned the witness.

He had last practised as a licenced physician in December, 1933, according to the witness.

Dr. Carefoot admitted making application to the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Toronto for re-instatement as a licenced doctor and also admitted as stating to Dr. R. T. Noble, registrar, that he would practise using orthodox methods if the present charges against him were dropped. "I was tired of all this persecution" he said "and felt like giving up all this effort. I am now feeling fine and have no such desire."

Asked if he had kept records of his research work, the witness stated he had but depended largely upon memory. Some of his records had been destroyed, he said.

"So all this great research work for the benefit of suffering humanity has been destroyed?" asked the Crown.

"No it's all here", returned Dr. Carefoot pointing to his head.

Formula Requested

Producing a memorandum bearing a patient's name and some measure of the treatment given, the paper being claimed to have been seized at the Carefoot home, the Crown asked the defendant to describe the formulae of which snakeroot had been the base. "Is snakeroot one of your secret treatments?" asked the Crown.

"The secret is in the way which it is prepared," was the reply. "I am not using that now. I have found something better."

However, Dr. Carefoot refused to describe the formula for mixing the snakeroot, claiming that he would do so "when the proper committee was appointed to investigate."

Asked how he could tell where two cancers existed in different places in the same patient, the witness replied that this would also be divulged at the proper time.

Description by Dr. Carefoot of the manner of diagnosis he used took up a great deal of the afternoon's proceedings and the doctor did not go into this matter until so directed by Judge Lane.

Before doing so the doctor was asked if he had ever had the opportunity of placing his manner of treatment before the cancer commission and he replied that he had offered to demonstrate the method by treating their patients, but this had been refused.

"My manner of diagnosis and treatment is so fantastic that when an attempt is made to describe it without demonstration you get called a "crack-pot", stated the witness when the Crown referred to the use of a "re-agent" and the utilization of this person's sub-conscious mind and dual personality.

When the Crown began to read the report of the Cancer Commission interview with Dr. Carefoot, there was strong objection from defence counsel who claimed that this was a secret matter and that there was extreme danger in treating it in a "tid-bit" fashion.

It was finally decided that to assist the jury in arriving at a decision the witness should outline his method of diagnosis of disease.

Outlines Method.

According to the witness approximately one dozen drops of blood are taken from the patient's ear, this being placed on blotting paper and into a dynamizer which in turn was connected with reflexophones. These in turn were connected with the "re-agent" by use of a headgear on that person's head. Known wavelengths of the suspected disease were tuned and if there was reaction in the body of the "sub-agent" then it was known in what part of the body the patient suffered pain or was otherwise troubled. If there was no reaction then wavelengths of other diseases were tuned until the correct one was found.

"There is no need for the patient to tell me the symptoms," concluded Dr. Carefoot. "If there is cancer, ulcers or gall stones, then I can tell and also tell the patient where the trouble is."

At the conclusion of cross examination defence counsel brought out that Dr. Carefoot had made several unsuccessful attempts to place his theory before the public. He had gone to Minister of Health Kirby and asked the opportunity to demonstrate. Mr. Kirby's reply had been, "What can I do?" counsel stated.

Kingston Doctor Testifies.

Dr. Berry, of Kingston, was the first witness called in rebuttal by the Crown, he giving diagnosis results of former patients who had later gone to Dr. Carefoot for treatments and who had appeared in the witness box as defence witnesses.

In the case of Mr. Strebe the Kingston doctor stated diagnosis had shown a simple enlargement of the prostrate gland for which there had been an operation performed following which there had been good health. In the case of Mrs. Joslin it was stated that her original cancer condition had had adequate treatment and she was given a 70 per cent chance of complete recovery. There had been no suggestion of operation for cancer, he said.

Dr. Cronk was also called to the stand to testify as to the diagnosis and treatment which he had given former patients who at the trial had testified for the defence.

Wanted Charge Dropped.

Dr. G. G. Brearley of the local chest clinic and Mr. G. Williams of Belleville General Hospital showed chest X-ray plates taken of Mr. George Bassett, while Dr. Noble, registrar at the Medical College, testified that Dr. Carefoot had asked that present charges against him be dropped if he promised not to again practise illegally. Witness stated Dr. Carefoot had been told that the Medical College could do nothing about dropping the charges as they had been laid by the Provincial Police.

Constable Keays was recalled to the stand to testify and read from his diary by way of proving that he could not have taken treatment from Dr. Carefoot at the time stated by Mrs. Carefoot.

Constable Charles Siple, one of the officers who had helped search the Carefoot residence at the time of the accused's arrest, testified he had listened to a conversation between Constable Keays and Stanley Carefoot during which he had heard the Carefoot youth say in reference to his father's practice "There's a sucker born every minute."

Asked if he knew the reputation for truth and veracity of Constable Keays in his own community, the witness declared that it was "very good," in fact, "excellent."

Certain Hereditary Tendencies.

Other rebuttal witness called by the Crown included Reynolds Elson, physicist, and Dr. R. F. Farquharson, cancer research expert at the University of Toronto.

Dr. Farquharson when asked as to the heredity of cancer replied that there was a slight tendency for cancer to run in certain families but that hereditary chances were "very small". It was improbable that the sister or brother of a person having cancer would also have the disease, but it was not impossible.

The witness also testified that it was a point of honor with the medical profession that when a new treatment was discovered and found to be better than existent treatment, it was published immediately. Quoted as examples were insulin, toxoids, sulpha drugs and penicillin. However, it was the responsibility of each physician to determine that the treatment discovered was harmless to the patient and that it was beneficial.

Ask Evidence Be Discredited.

In his address to the jury defence counsel Robb asked that the testimony given by Constable Keays and John McAninch be discredited as part of their evidence was termed as "complete fiction". He also held that little recognition should be given the evidence of Dr. Storms who had admitted in the witness box that he had looked into the Abrams theory in 1920 but had decided it was no good and had not bothered with it since.

"We realize that we have not a perfect machine and Dr. Carefoot would like nothing better than to see it an exact science. There is always room for advancement," he said.

Defence counsel claimed that Dr. Farquharson was of a dynamic nature and also had his mind closed to the advance of science. In closing he asked the jury for acquittal of his client and also for them to bring in a recommendation for a commission composed of physicians and laymen to be appointed to investigate the diagnosis and treatment of Dr. Carefoot.

"You as members of this jury have an opportunity never before presented to assist suffering humanity," he said.

Admits Psychological Factor

In his address to the jury Special Crown Prosecutor Davis suggested that it was not within their province as trial jurymen to bring in a recommendation.

He admitted the psychological factor in all cures of diseases whether the cures were orthodox or otherwise and defended Dr. Farquharson as a man of highest ability in his profession.

Turning to the evidence of Dr. Carefoot, the Crown Prosecutor asked why if the doctor had been convinced of the value of the Abrams theory had he expressed the willingness to quit it when he asked for re-instatement. "This thing of Dr. Carefoot's is worse now than ever before in public esteem even after 25 years in existence," he said.

He referred to the evidence given by rebuttal witnesses wherein it was shown where there had been orthodox analysis of patients' diseases, these patients had either died, or were now shown not to have cancer. He asked how the jury could accept Dr. Carefoot's evidence on the basis of the fact that he had stated tuberculosis was not a contagious disease.

Method Ridiculed

Dr. Carefoot's method of diagnosis and treatment of disease was ridiculed by the Crown prosecutor who held it an "absurdity" and to be compared with tying one's self to the magneto of a Model T Ford and being cured of 15 diseases and if that did not work to throw in some snakeroot oil.

Judge Lane in his charge to the jury asked its members to bear in mind that Dr. Carefoot was being tried only on the McAninch charge although much evidence of similar acts had been brought into the proceedings. He reminded jurors that Dr. Carefoot had been charged with obtaining $135 by false pretences with the doctor claiming he had a machine by which he could diagnose and treat illness, more particularly the illness of John McAninch. He also pointed out that before there could be a conviction it must be proved that there was "intent" to defraud. The jury should disabuse their minds entirely of the fact that Dr. Carefoot had not been qualified to practise.

The Judge reviewed the evidence of what he termed the key witnesses, pointing out that some of the best doctors in the country had testified, while there had been many defence witnesses who had claimed cures through Dr. Carefoot.

Jurymen were told that they must decide to what degree there were absolute cures and how much was psychological and that they must also decide whether or not Dr. Carefoot believed in what he was doing or whether he was trying to make it a profitable racket.

Junior Woman's Assoc. Holds Tea and Sale In Christmas Atmosphere

Trenton (Special)—A typically Christmas atmosphere greeted the scores of appreciative guests who attended the Christmas tea and sale, sponsored by the Junior Woman's Association of King St. United Church, held on Wednesday afternoon, December 4th., from three to six o'clock, with Mrs. Ralph Weaver as convener assisted by Mrs. Arthur Blakely.

Mrs. Larry McClintock, president of the Association, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. (Rev.) J. D. Martin.

The decorations in charge of Mrs Jack Richmond, Mrs. Roscoe Newton and Mrs. Herman Chambers were carried out in the Christmas theme by the use of evergreen boughs and colored bells, while the glow of Christmas lights fell indiscriminately over all.

Soft candlelight from six red candles in a centre candelabra illuminated the attractive main tea table with its white cloth and gleaming silver. Sprays of evergreen were effectively used and Mrs. Larry McClintock and Mrs. Jack Richmond were responsible for the lovely arrangement.

Mrs. Bud Cook was tea hostess and presiding at the silver tea services were Mrs. Frank Sherbert, Miss McKibbon, Mrs. Fred Crews and Mrs. Clarence Saylor.

Guests enjoyed the delectable sandwiches dainties and the "cup that cheers" which were passed by Mrs. Alex. Hill, Mrs. Jack Richmond, Mrs. Gerald Weaver, Mrs. Clinton Sales, Mrs. Glen Rawson, Mrs. Ford Gainsforth, Mrs. Gordon Little, Mrs. Gordon Bristol Mrs. Chloris Wychoff and Mrs. Bill Nelson.

The ever popular home cooking table was the mecca for all guests. Gaily wrapped jellies and puddings vied with the other products of the housewife's art which included pies, tarts, cakes, cookies with various other foods added for good measure. Miss Vera Green, the convener, and her assistants, Mrs. Mary Jones, Miss Ada Green Miss Dorothy Berry and Mrs. Harold Newton were kept very busy while the food lasted.

The "Tard to Get" table was in charge of Mrs. Bob Smithrim, Mrs. Allan Vandewater and Mrs. Alex Reddick.

Miss Kay Patterson presided at the white elephant table while at the knitted goods booth, Mrs. Herman Chambers and Miss Shirley Cobley sold a lovely collection of knitted garments to fit children of many ages.

The apron table in charge of Mrs. Fraser Fairman and Mrs. Les Henson was gay with many colored aprons of all sizes and styles. The novelty table was under the supervision of Mrs. Gerald Clegg, Mrs. Harold Dowden and Mrs. Margaret Succee.

The "Fish Pond" which was the admiration of all the children was presided at by Mrs. Gilbert Clegg.

In the "Nursery Room" where chocolate milk and cookies were served to the children were Mrs. Thorn Spear, Mrs. Bruce Graham and Miss Georgina Long.

The kitchen conveners were Mrs. Arthur Blakely and Mrs. Duncan Johnson.

Miss Edna Finkle was in charge of tickets.

The results of this most successful tea were very gratifying to the ladies of the Association.

Disaster at Atlanta

Fire sweeping the Winecoff Hotel in Atlanta, Georgia, early on Saturday, was one of the worst conflagrations or holocausts in American history, more than one hundred lives having been lost by being burned to death, suffocated or dying as a result of plunging from the windows to escape being burned. Descriptions of the scene were pictures of the horror that such a fire creates when humans are helpless to save themselves. More than a score lost their lives by jumping to avoid the flames, and on one floor sixteen persons were found unburned, the floor itself not having been destroyed, the guests having become suffocated by smoke.

In such a scene of terror and horror many persons were able to save their lives. One woman guest placed wet bedding or towels about the door of her room to keep out the smoke. In another instance a man and his wife placed blankets over their heads and turned on a fan to blow out the smoke from their room. Firemen as ever in such times as called for heroism performed deeds of bravery, rescuing people from ledges and floors. They ran grave risks as guests plunged headlong from the windows of their rooms into the nets carrying the nets in many instances against the pavement. One fireman lost his life on an aerial ladder as a woman guest came hurtling down, striking the ladder. Some persons used bed sheets as ropes to escape from their rooms to other rooms.

Man's instinctive dread of fire makes a calamity like this impress itself deeply upon the mind for fire, if it gets beyond control, is one of the worst enemies of life. Human sympathy goes out to the unfortunates who were caught by the flames, to the sufferers and their families. Man's saving agencies were at work with the Red Cross, the doctors, the hospitals and the firemen and police.

A sense of profound pity and human helplessness is felt that such a tragedy should take place.

Handling of Disabled

A further instance of Britain's rehabilitation of the disabled comes from the Ministry of Pensions who are tackling the problem of paraplegia—paralysis from the waist down. The Ministry's Spinal Centre at Stoke Mandeville, Bucks, provides training in occupations ranging from banking and accountancy to boot-repairing and clock-making. In addition, the British Legion have opened a house near the Centre where the patients, before discharge from hospital, can live for a month or two with their wives or mothers who are trained in attending them in home conditions. Looking ahead, the Ministry is planning courses of employment for paraplegics who may be housed in hostels from which they can go out to local employment or in colonies where they will work under sheltered conditions. A home industries scheme is also in operation for patients, able to live at home but unable to go out to work.

No Panic

There was a profound sense of relief when it was learned the other morning on news of the fire which destroyed the Veterans' Hospital at Peterborough that every veteran patient had been removed safely within five minutes' time. That is a record of which the management and staff and patients of the hospital can be proud and something that gives them the utmost satisfaction. Fortunately the fire was discovered in time to make a complete evacuation in record order, the orderlies rushing to "action stations" on the alarm. There was no panic among the veterans who filed out to escape doors at the rear of the hospital, the orderlies directing the men awaiting orders to leave the building. Not one was injured. The highest praise has been given the staff and patients by those in charge.

Sugar Ration

Canadians may receive additional sugar early next year. In the United States it is expected that "barring unpredictable" events Americans will get an extra sugar ration of five pounds by April 1st. If so Canadians will be getting the same increase as both nations secure their supplies from the world pool. At the present time Canadians individually are getting about 33 pounds a year. Sugar is one of the commodities which plays a large role in the preparation of food. Its shortage since early in World War II has caused demands for maple syrup and maple sugar, corn syrup and honey. It has had an effect upon the amount of preserving of fruits and vegetables this past season.

Viscount Alexander, KG.

Canadians generally will have "warm congratulations for Lord Alexander, their Governor General, on his appointment by the King to the Order of the Garter, oldest and most illustrious of our orders of chivalry. No greater honor could come to him, and none could be more deserving of it than Lord Alexander and the other great war leaders similarly honored.

Lord Alexander came to this country a few months ago with a record as a distinguished soldier, a very outstanding leader of armies, the conqueror of North Africa and Italy. Already he has shown that he is much more than a distinguished military man—he has demonstrated tact and diplomacy, a very considerable understanding of our conditions and problems and a desire to learn more about them. That applies also to Her Excellency. They have made friends wherever they have travelled and in whatever circles they have moved.

And while His Excellency is discovering Canada we in turn profit from the example he sets us of complete devotion to the duty of the moment, and from shrewd observations in his public addresses. It is something to have among us one of the two or three foremost leaders the Allied Armies produced, a man who knew defeats before he knew victories and triumph and learned from all. Already Lord Alexander has given at least one address based on his military experience, and we may trust there will be many others. Let us hope also that he is writing his memoirs.

Operation High Jump

Summer is beginning in Antarctica, but the Byrd expedition, which sailed southward yesterday is heading into the coldest and most killing weather in the world. Cold is what guards the secrets of this hidden land. The Navy expedition does not hope to conquer the continent or open it up to civilization. It does, however, expect to establish a respectful understanding of its possibilities in relation to the rest of the globe, to survey its strategic value, its mineral deposits, the mighty air and ocean currents which swirl around it and, perhaps, whether or not organized life can be maintained on its fringes.

The Navy appropriately calls this expedition Operation High Jump. In the full fleet are seaplane tenders, destroyers, a submarine, cargo ships, an oiler and an airplane carrier. Aboard are every conceivable means of polar exploration, from dog teams to power sleds and bulldozers. The plane carrier Philippines can send aloft six Douglas transports fitted with jet take-off boosters, each larger and more powerful than the plane in which Admiral Byrd flew over the Pole. Yet, all in all, it seems a puny force with which to attack the vast, barren waste it is bound for.

This country is not alone in its enterprise. The British already have an expedition near Little America, where the last Byrd explorers spent two lonely years. The Russians are said to have sent a fleet. Argentina, Chile and Norway have [illegible] up claims.

JUST FOLKS

THE MILK PROBLEM

Well, I suppose 'twas so with me,
  Long years ago when I was small,
At table mother's constant plea
  Was: "Son, your milk. Come, drink it all."

At mealtimes it was so with us,
  The coaxing constantly went on.
"Come, drink your milk without a fuss!
  No pie until your milk is gone."

The two of them would sit and stare
  In childhood's curious, pensive way,
As if no glass of milk were there;
  As if no further word we'd say.

The mother sighed, and wondered then
  Were other parents troubled so
By saying time and time again:
  "Come drink your milk before you go."

Now, two grandchildren sit and gaze;
  And when with them a meal I share,
I live again the happier days
  When ours were small . . . and she was there.

And in the old familiar way
  I hear repeated, soft and low,
What she so often used to say:
  "Come, drink your milk before you go."

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 9 — (CP)—Widespread changes in Canada's Old Age Pension legislation are being forecast in parliamentary circles, but Federal authorities are not yet prepared to say just what alterations will be made.

For instance, Health Minister Claxton said today the question of a $5 wartime bonus to pensioners would be made statutory was a matter of government policy which would be announced in due course.

The $5 increase—boosting pensions from $20 to $25 a month — was authorized under wartime legislation which expires next March 31. The increase was granted to help pensioners meet increased living costs.

Forecasts are that the government will make the increase permanent. In recent sessions of parliament there have been widespread demands from opposition members and government supporters for more generous treatment of pensioners.

Changes are also due in the administrative regulations of old age pensions legislation. At a four-day meeting here last week, the Dominion and the provinces drew up recommendations for the changes.

The possibility of Canada adopting a contributory Old Age Pensions plan was understood not to have been discussed by the meeting. Inauguration of such a plan would hinge mainly on the signing of new taxation agreements with all the provinces.

Court: The Supreme Court of Canada judgment on the validity of the Saskatchewan Farm Security Act will not be delivered before Dec. 20 at least.

Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, now is on a tour of France.

Judgment on the validity of the Act has been pending since early October, when the Federal government and the Dominion Mortgage and Investments Association contested a section of the legislation passed by the C.C.F. Saskatchewan government in 1944.

The contested section provides that in any year in which a farmer's crop yield is less than $6 per acre, the principal owing on all mortgages or bills of sale shall be reduced by the amount of interest due. At the same time the date for the final payment of principal would be postponed a year.

The validity of the section was challenged on the grounds that it conflicted with matters of interest, bankruptcy and insolvency which fell under federal jurisdiction.

The Saskatchewan government supported by Alberta, argued that the legislation did not conflict with federal acts. The Act made it clear that interest rates were not to be interfered with. The rate of interest was to be used as the yardstick by which the principal was to be reduced in a year of crop failures.

GIVES WARNING

H. D. Burns, president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, who has warned that Canada is not ready for complete decontrol of prices. Immediate removal of price control would produce economic and social disturbances, he stated.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

YOU'RE TELLING ME

I wish now I had not listened to the Reviewing Stand because one of the professors, in an attempt to show how sound his argument was (I can't remember just what he was trying to put over), took for example a homely thing, to wit, the common cold. The professor held forth for a few minutes on what we know and what we don't know about the common cold, prevention, treatment, etc., and having thus established beyond question.... I'm sorry, too, for up to that moment I had had a lot of confidence in the views participants in that program expressed.

Maybe I am a little rough on the professor—for all I know some savant there at Northwestern may have discovered the cause of the common cold just before the Reviewing Stand went on the air. Somebody discovers the germ, virus or whatnot every year—though usually the discovery is announced in the spring.

Frankly I don't know the first thing about it myself, but who does? If anybody knows what the common cold is, what causes it, how to prevent it or what remedy one should apply, the world is waiting for the news. But don't give us the old stuff, please. If we are to understand what you are talking about you must first define the common cold in terms we ordinary folk can understand. Nobody has done so to date. Nobody who is responsible, that is. No physician, no health authority, no scientific investigator even attempts to define the common cold.

The fact that an individual or any number of individuals exposed to the severest cold weather for weeks and months suffers no illness in consequence (other than frostbite or freezing) does not prove that an individual who is not accustomed to exposure to cold or dampness will not catch "cold" and be ill in consequence of wet feet, change of weather, insufficient clothing or being caught in a draft, I grant you. On the other hand, the fact that you or any other individual may have an illness such as flu, grip, pneumonia, coryza, measles, bronchitis or sore throat shortly after such trifling "exposure" hardly proves anything either.

Whatever vague concepts prompt the old timers to warn the public against exposure to cold, dampness, chilling and going out hatless, coatless or otherwise indaquately clothed, few or none of them still dare to argue that any of the clearly defined respiratory infections — such as measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria or cerebro-spinal meningitis—is caused by such exposure.

My purpose is to make as many people cri-conscious as possible. That is, I hope that every reader will get firmly fixed in mind the communicability of all respiratory infections, whether they masquerade in the earlier stage as "colds" or not.

Further I hope every reader will remember that it is in the earlier stage, the stage of onset, before you or even the doctor can tell just what you may be coming down with, that respiratory infection is most communicable.

Teachers or instructors are just as likely to spread their alleged "colds" indiscriminately as are doctors or dentists as likely to pass their alleged "colds" along to patients as are patients to pepper doctor or dentist with whatever they happen to have. Employers, executives or managers are just as likely to infect operators, clerks or laborers as employees are to give the boss, say, meningitis or whooping-cough. Salesmen and saleswomen, barbers, hair-dressers, opticians, manicurists, dressmakers are as likely to give customers whatever they happen to have as are customers to infect those who must come within mouth spray range to serve them.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Does radio affect the weather?

The notion that radio broadcasting affects the weather and produces drouths, floods and stroms is common. On the assumption that radio waves "dry up the atmosphere" and prevent normal rainfall some people have gone so far as to advocate closing down broadcasting stations to relieve drouth-stricken areas. Oddly enough, others believe that the activity of radio causes abnormal rainfall and floods. That "radio ruined the climate of Mexico" is a common notion.

A possible connection between radio and drouths was suggested as early as 1910, when broadcasting was still in its infancy. It is not surprising that many persons, prone to imagine mysterious relationships between phenomena they do not understand, should readily accept the suggestion that radio waves promote or hinder the fall of rain, snow and hail.

Since radio waves interfere with one another and since radio transmission and reception are affected by sunspot activity, the phases of the moon, electrical storms, the northern and southern lights and atmospheric conditions it was natural to suppose that the reverse might be true.

But up to the present time meteorologists and weather experts have been unanimous in the opinion that radio has no affect whatever on the weather. By no stretch of the imagination, they say, can anyone familiar with the principles of both radio and rainfall infer that the former affects the latter. So far as known radio waves affect none of the processes involved in producing rain and they do not either increase or decrease precipitation.

Even if radio waves so affect weather in some unknown way, it is improbable that the effect is appreciable. The amount of energy broadcast by radio stations is minute compared to that produced by natural electrical phenomena such as thunderstorms.

Many people misunderstand the difference between radio and sound waves. Radio waves are believed to travel with the speed of light—about 186,227 miles a second. The speed of sound waves varies with the medium. In a general way the speed of sound through air is 1,000 or 1,100 feet a second, although it is affected by the moisture content and temperaature of the atmosphere.

Ordinary sound waves are converted into radio waves at the sending station and these radio waves in turn are reconverted into ordinary sound waves by the receiving set. Radio transmission is not instantaneous. Radio waves require time but they travel so rapidly that we ordinarily do not think of the time required. The time required for the voice of a speaker on the radio to reach the listener in the total of the time taken for sound waves to the microphone, the time for the radio waves to travel from the sending station to the receiving set, —and the time for sound waves to travel from the receiving set to the listener.

DOCK IMPROVEMENTS

Brisbane, Australia (CP) —A large Australia wharf construction program planned by the South Australian Harbors Board will cost £586,000 ($1,875,000). It includes reconstruction in concrete of four berths, erection of a new electric power station at Osborne, building of three cargo sheds, and additions to large cement works and plants of two local oil companies.

Longest Bridge In Europe Will Span Severn

The longest suspension bridge in Europe is to be erected over the River Severn, Britain's longest river in the West of England. It will serve road traffic, and the scheme of which it is the main feature is estimated to cost about £7,500,000, L. E. Sessel writes from London, Eng., in The Halifax Herald.

The project, which will particularly serve South Wales, hitherto rather isolated by the Severn, is the kingpin in Britain's road proposals for the future, declares the Chief Engineer of the Ministry of Transport, at whose instance it is being undertaken.

Drawings Completed.

Drawings of the new structure have been published, together with a general description of the works.

The centre span will be 3,000 feet—the longest in Europe tho' it is exceeded by the 4,200 feet of the Golden Gate suspension bridge at San Francisco and the 3,500 feet of the George Washington, also in the United States.

The suspension type was selected for the Severn bridge, in order to allow for the large centre span required for the passage of shipping. The bridge has been designed to carry a maximum load of 150 tons.

Two Side Spans

In addition to the central span there will be two side spans of about 1,000 feet each. The vertical clearance provided for shipping will be about 120 feet above high water in the centre and 110 feet near the towers. These towers, which support the main cables, will be of steel and will rest on concrete piers. They will rise to a height of 450 feet above high water.

There will be two carriageways each 22 feet wide, two cycle tracks each of 9 feet, and two footpaths each 6 feet wide.

The total length of the bridge and of the approach roads on both sides of the river on its way to the Bristol Channel, together with a bridge of about 1,500 feet over the river Wye, which flows into the Severn, will be about 8 miles. The new approach roads will go over or under existing roads so as not to interfere with local traffic.

Simple in Design.

It is anticipated that the bridge will be open for traffic in from 4½ to 5 years. Both bridges will rely for their effect on simplicity of design and good proportions, and final designs are to be submitted to the Fine Arts Commission for approval.

Incidentally the arms of Wales will be picked out in bright colors on a panel on the English side of the bridge and the arms of England on the Welsh side.

The new bridge has been spoken of as a necessity in communications between England and South Wales for years, though railway traffic has been served by the Severn Tunnel which was finished 60 years ago after many difficulties through flooding had been encountered during its 13 years' construction. The tunnel is nearly 4½ miles long, of which 2¼ miles are under the river.

Hitherto all road traffic for South Wales has had to travel through the city of Gloucester, the lowest point at which vehicular traffic could cross the river, and this fact has had a serious effect on the development of South Wales, particularly on the lighter and secondary industries which are now being encouraged.

Montreal Police Smash Fake Ticket Ring—Jubilant police officers are shown in a Montreal print shop after a raid that resulted in the arrest of five persons and the seizure of 1,000,000 fake tramcar tickets with a potential value of $66,000. Huge stacks of tickets were ready to be put into circulation when police struck their blow.

South Wales provides one of Britain's important coalfields, also iron ore, but in recent years has suffered severely from depressed economic conditions.

Two Busy Ports.

The two busy ports of Swansea and Cardiff in South Wales will be brought in closer contact with Bristol, the most important port in the West of England, by the bridge.

No less than 50 miles will be cut off the road distance between Bristol and the South Wales industrial towns. The distance from London will also be reduced by some miles.

The scheme is a major undertaking and, as the Ministry of Transport's Chief Engineer says, will give British engineers an opportunity to show the world what they can do. They would take second place to no engineers in the world, he added.

Post-war Bread In U.K. Darker

London, Dec. 9 (CP) — Britain will never again have flour of pre-war whiteness, Sir Jack Drummond, former scientific adviser to the ministry of food, told the Food Education Society.

Highest nutritional value came from 85 per cent extraction, but Britain would probably adopt the present 80 per cent rate as a permanent standard "because the color of the flour is more acceptable."

Psychological objections militated against any higher rate because "darker flour is associated with the hardship of war."

Sir Jack Drummond was one of the British feeding teams which went through the lines of the 1st. Canadian Corps toward the end of the war and, with permission of the Germans, conducted a rapid preliminary food survey of the Netherlands enabling adequate relief measures to be taken before the country's liberation was complete.

KITCHEN FALLS INTO SEA

Robin Hood's Bay, Yorkshire, England (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Skelton watched the kitchen of their home fall into the sea when 600 tons of cliff collapsed because of erosion during a storm.

Security, Humor Make Glad Home

London, Dec. 9 (Reuters) — Security and a sense of humor are prescribed by Mrs. Geoffrey Fisher, wife of the Archbishop of Canterbury, as esesntial foundations of a happy home. Mother of six sons, Mrs. Fisher spoke in a radio broadcast.

"Home-making is not an easy job," she said. "Besides hardwork and sacrifice, it needs self-control and patience, but perhaps a sense of humor is the most important quality needed for family life."

Children needed a feeling of absolute security, founded on trust in their parents.

"There is no more tragic figure than that of a child who has discovered for the first time that his father or mother has let him down. At first he will make all sorts of excuses for his parents, but if it continues he becomes callous and cynical.

"Many homes are breaking up because of a lack of truth, faithfulness and love in their family relationships. Children from these broken homes become problems because the security needed for their development was taken from them."

The family is the best training ground for life, Mrs. Fisher said, because it represents the community in miniature; and the intimate family circle is the best testing place of character.

WALES NEEDS NURSES

Cardiff, Wales (CP) — Shortage of nursing staffs in Welsh tuberculosis hospitals is so acute that 500 beds—one-fifth of those normally available — are unoccupied.

This Man Bought a Town

(Ralph Gibbs in This Wek Magazine)

When water from the Grand Coulee Dam turns the ghost town of Mesa, Wash., into the centre of fertile wheatlands, it will be a river of gold for Manton Poe.

For Poe and his family are landlords and only residents of Mesa. They bought the deserted town for the price of unpaid taxes.

Some day soon, some of the 151 miles of Columbia River water held back by the dam will be gushing over Poe's 4,800 acres. Wheat will be waving in the fields, power lines will be bringing cheap electricity to Mesa, and some 350,000 people will pour into the basin area. Poe, the landlord, will be a wealthy man.

This is the story of a dream that came true—a story of faith in a town.

If you had driven down Main Street in Mesa a few months ago, chances are you would have shuddered at the sight of sway-backed, paint-hungry frame buildings, the empty 16-room hotel, the cobwebby post office, the quiet smithy.

But when Poe stood at the edge of his town he saw not bouncing tumbleweed but rows of parked cars, hurrying pedestrians, glass store fronts and maybe some fancy electric signs.

Today, as Poe and his small family replace the hotel's oil lamps and stoves with electric fixtures, he recalls the bleak years of his faith in Mesa.

His mother brought him to this virgin territory in the southeastern quarter of Washington about 60 years ago and told him: "Your pa always said that if the sage is higher than your head, the soil is all right. I figure if we work hard enough we'll always have some bread in the oven."

With the help of a few other settlers, Mrs. Poe cleared 100 acres. She planted wheat —and waited. The summer sun brought the promise of a good harvest, and the promise was kept. The land yielded 45 bushels an acre and new farms sprang up around the Poe homestead.

For seven years the harvests were heavy. The town of Mesa popped up and grew like the wheat. It was a lively town, with two hotels, two saloons, a couple of grocery stores, lumber yards—and real estate offices to spare. It even had a newspaper the Mesa "News."

Then, like the Biblical prophecy, came seven lean years. The earth yielded its last drop of moisture. There was no more rain.

The hot winds that rolled the dust and tumbleweeds across the plains took the settlers and the town of Mesa with it—all except the Poes.

Even when the dust blew so hard that Manton had to depend on his horses to find their way back, the Poes stuck it out. At night, Manton would walk the deserted streets of Mesa and admire the way the moonlight played on the windows. When a rotted building had to be torn down, he felt as if he had lost a friend.

Somehow—he isn't sure how—Poe came through the lean years. On his farm at the edge of the town, he gambled with cattle, then poultry. He coaxed a little wheat out of the land. Anything to make a living. Now and then he picked up some of the dirt-cheap land until he had accumulated 4,800 acres. Manton Poe owned the town of Mesa.

Sometimes he knitted his shaggy grey eyebrows and wondered if he could be making a fool out of himself, if perhaps he would become a desert derelict like the town he owned. Then he would draw himself up to his full five feet ten inches and whisper to himself, "If you stick by a town, it will stick by you."

He wasn't quite sure what he meant by this piece of self-assurance. He had never heard it accepted as a natural law. But that's the way he felt about it.

Poe had the crazy idea that Mesa would some day come to life. For a long time, he carried the idea by himself—this faith in a town. But now he doesn't carry it by himself. The United States government believes it, too.

Experts of the Bureau of Reclamation say it won't be long before Mesa—about 25 miles north of Pasco—becomes one of the most fertile wheat areas in the country.

Of course, Mesa may not get water for another five or ten years. But that isn't worrying Poe. He's getting things ready.

"It may take me a year or two," he says. "These past years have done the town a lot of harm. Then there will have to be a lot of conversion. I'm going to turn the smithy into a first class garage. Right now I have only my wife and son. He just came out of the services May have to get some more help.

"Only the other day I had to turn down business for the hotel because it wasn't ready yet. The foreman of a construction crew over on the main highway to Spokane wanted me to feed and house seventy-five men."

The West Virginia Home has top priority in Poe's rebuilding program. America has gone through a depression and a war since guests last called for their mail at the hotel desk. But the beams are sound.

The oil lamps that the drummers used to read by still provide the light for Poe's night construction. Beside them hang more modern fixtures, for the hotel is now completely wired, awaiting only the arrival of the power line which is already creeping across the plain. Even the hotel heating system will be electric.

When the West Virginia Home is complete, Poe will turn to the other buildings still standing. He plans to sell or rent to new businessmen.

"Oh, they'll come all right," he says. "Mesa is a good town. I'm going to put up a sign. It won't be original, but it'll be fitting. 'Watch Mesa Grow', it's going to say.

Again that broad grin.

"Why, as soon as one family moves in, the population will increase one hundred per cent!"

THE MOURNER — Sadly Larry Price watches flames consume his motor car on Highway 27 cut-off near the Queen Elizabeth cloverleaf last night. A veteran who served overseas with the Toronto Scottish, Price was returning from Hamilton to his home in Toronto when flames shot up through the floorboard, causing him and three friends to get out in a hurry. "And no insurance, either," mourned Price.

Death Rate Falls Birth Rate Rises

London, Dec. 9 (CP) — An increase in the birth-rate and a fall in the death-rate are generally looked upon as a favorable sign of social progress.

The United Kingdom statistics show that, in the first quarter of 1946, no less than 181,445 births were registered in Britain which represent a birth rate of 17.2 per 1,000 population. From 1940 to 1944, the average for the first quarter was 15.7.

Against this satisfactory figure, deaths totalled 155,153 or a rate of 14.8 per 1,000 population, whilst in the five years period mentioned above the average of 15.7 was recorded.

In the second quarter of 1946, about 40,000 more children were born, but the final figure has not yet been released. A greater increase is expected for the third quarter of the current year.

MINES RE-OPENED

Stawell, Australia, (CP) — Australian gold mining revival includes re-opening of three valuable producers at this Victoria town. These are the Magdala, Sloane's and Scotchman's Creek mines, which produced a total of 600,000 ounces of gold and paid £1,270,000 ($4,064,000) in dividends before the last mine closed down in 1921.

LORD'S PANTOMIME HIT

London (CP) —Twenty-three-year-old Lord Foley, six feet five inches tall, has written the music for a song which promises to be the pantomime hit of the season. Its title: "One Night in Old Seville."

BAUER A PAPPA

Toronto, Dec. 9 (CP)—While Boston Bruins' Bobby Bauer was battling in a losing cause against Toronto Maple Leafs in Saturday night's National Hockey League tussle, the veteran right-winger became a father. He received a telegram after the game telling him of the birth of a son in a Boston hospital.

"What's holding up our family car?"...

You know how difficult it is to buy many of the things you need to run your home today. Then imagine the headaches we run into trying to keep up a steady supply of the materials and parts needed to build automobiles. More than 25,000 parts and pieces go into the building of one of our 1946 passenger cars. The lack of just one item can mean a hold-up in our production.

What are the facts? The present demand for cars has been building up for four whole years during which Ford of Canada did not produce a single passenger car for civilian use. And this year's "stop-and-go" production can obviously fill only a portion of that 4-year backlog of demand.

What are we doing about it? Expediters from Ford of Canada are covering thousands of miles every week trying to keep supplies coming our way. In spite of our best efforts we cannot secure enough materials to keep our assembly lines moving at anything approaching capacity. And that is the sort of thing which is holding up your family car.

Nothing would please us more than to be able to tell your dealer how many automobiles we will ship him next month, or even next week, so that he could tell you when to expect your car. But the situation right now is such that no one can give you an answer. For this reason, we suggest that it is wise to maintain your present car in good running order while you are waiting.

Of one thing you may be sure: Ford of Canada will build just as many cars and trucks as the supply of materials will permit. There's a long way to go yet—and we join our dealers in appreciating your understanding of an unusual and unwelcome situation.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Ethel Catherine, daughter of Mrs. Lee and the late Frederick C. Lee of Belleville, to Flight Lieutenant Reginald Bruce Fraser of Halifax, son of Mrs. Fraser and the late Duncan M. Fraser, of Pictou, N.S., the marriage to take place quietly December 28th in Belleville.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mrs. R. Babcock, 75 Grier St., wishes to announce the engagement of her youngest daughter, Joan Marie, to Harry Clinton, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip De Rushie, 50 Everett Street, the marriage to take place Jan. 31, 1947.

Dr. Grant Fraser, Madoc, is attending Fall ceremonial at Karnak Shrine Temple in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Doran, of Toronto, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doran, Grove Street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Coupal, of Sidley, Sask., are spending the winter with Mrs. James Grant, Church Street.

Mrs. E. Gilmour was successful in raising a considerable amount of money through the sale of handmade artificial flowers at the bazaar under the auspices of the Quintena Rebekah Lodge, last week.

In the report of the bazaar held last week in the Y.M.C.A. Lounge Room, the names of Mrs. J. Boyd and Mrs. M. Schryver were omitted from among the assistants in the tea room.

Mr. Jack Davis, of Hamilton, Bermuda, who recently spent six weeks in England and Scotland, visited his mother, Mrs. C. C. Davis, of Foxboro, and his sisters, Mrs. H. W. Rose, of Frankford and Mrs. "Bert" Martin, of Corbyville, before leaving for Bermuda on Saturday of last week.

Friday night was the occasion of a delightful birthday party in honor of Mrs. Joseph Thrasher at her home on Donald Street. Mrs. Thrasher was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts from those present who included Mr. and Mrs. Fred Denyes, Mr. and Mrs. Glad. Waite, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Denyes and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Denyes. A social evening was enjoyed by all at the end of which refreshments were served.

WEDDINGS

SCOTT—YOULE

A wedding of considerable local interest took place Nov. 30, in St. Stephen's Church, Toronto, when Rev. Canon Ward united in marriage Elsie Margaret, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Youle, of Toronto, with Walter Norman, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Scott, Moira Street West, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made an attractive appearance in a floor-length gown of white silk, fashioned with a long torso bodice, featuring a sweetheart neckline. Her veil was of embroidered tulle and she carried a cascade bouquet of red roses with streamers of white ribbon.

Miss Delores Youle was her sister's only attendant, wearing a floor-length gown of Dresden blue brocade, with matching headdress. She carried a bouquet of pink and white baby 'mums.

Mr. Gavin Scott attended his brother as groomsman.

Wedding music was furnished by the organist of the church.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at "Hadden Hall" with the bride's mother receiving the guests, assisted by the mother of the groom.

For travelling to Detroit, Mich., the bride chose a dress of cream wool, with gold-colored trimmings, and a brown fur coat.

After their return Mr. and Mrs. Scott will reside in Toronto.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Scott, Miss Muriel Scott, Mr. Gavin Scott and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Scott, of Belleville.

Fifty War Brides Return to Britain

Liverpool, Dec. 9 (CP Cable)—Fifty war-brides and their families returned to Britain from Canada late Sunday aboard the steamship Cavins which normally takes brides from Britain to Canada.

Many of the brides spoke of "high prices" in Canada and one said that apart from food which is "better than in Britain" other conditions such as housing and clothing were "worse."

Mrs. Ninette Bowen, 20, of Reading, Berkshire said that she left Canada after two months because she was "homesick for the sight of an English dance hall and an English pub." She added that her husband would follow her.

With two children, Pauline, three, and Ivor, one, Mrs. Margaret Fann, 26, said that she left her husband in Saskatchewan because she was dissatisfied with "the shack we lived in."

HARD TIME TO LOSE BANK

Hamilton, Dec. 9—(CP)—Three weeks before Christmas is an especially hard time to lose a piggy-bank, but it wasn't a child's bank. A thief entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Nerchenbauer here last night and stole the bank, containing between $15 and $20, together with some linen handkerchiefs.

Anniversary Party Held For Mt. View Couple

A most enjoyable family gathering was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, 58 Dundas Street West, last week, being the forty-fourth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Hamilton, of Mountain View, Prince Edward County. The marriage was performed in Eggleton Church Tuftsville, Sidney, by the pastor, Rev. W. V. Sexsmith.

The bride and groom were met at the entrance by their daughter Pearl, registered nurse in Christie Street Military Hospital, Toronto, which was a pleasant surprise to her parents. The invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Denyes, of Smithfield.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hamilton, of Napanee, John H. Cooke and wife, of Stirling, Charles Brentnell and wife of Corbyville, and Seymour their youngest son of Mountain View. At noon all sat down to a beautifully prepared wedding dinner. The table was lovely with roses and carnations, which were the flowers carried by the bride forty-four years ago. The bridal cake was lovely on a plate given to the knife inserted in the wedding had done justice to the repast the couple by their friends. After all kuife insterted in the wedding cake by the bride, which was attached with white ribbons and was then served by the Host, Walter Hamilton. A short time was spent in talking over "old times" by the guests.

An exact copy of Eggleton Church worked on a bedspread on a white ground with red and a Scripture text worked on each surrounding block, was given to Mrs. Hamilton by the L.A. many years ago and presented to her by her niece, Mrs. Harry Clarke, is greatly prized and admired by her many friends.

Letters of congratulations were received from their daughter, Mrs. W. Drader, of Brandon, and Philip Frances of Peace River, their son and Mrs. Leslie Dodds, of Chilliwack, B.C. The gifts were lovely, including a beautiful bowl of hyacinths given by a daughter-in-law, Mrs. E. Hamilton, of Napanee. In the afternoon, Mrs. Hamilton, Seymour and Mr. and Mrs. John Cooke drove to the hospital to visit J. Mason Clarke who is a patient in that institution.

Presto Music Club Presents Fine Program

A musical treat was heard by a large audience in Bridge Street Church on Friday evening, presented by the Presto Music Club under the auspices of the W.A. group convened by Mrs. W. J. Price and Mrs. K. Bird.

Part One of the program began with Leona Riggs and Alec Gordon playing with expert technique a beautifully blended duo "Rhapsody For Organ and Piano" by Demarest. A violin solo by Dr. Arthur Locke, "Romance from 2nd Concerto" by Wieniawski, was performed with finely controlled pure tone. It was gratifying to hear Mr. V. P. Hunt in a spirited playing of "Jubilato Deo". A reading by Mrs. Ralph Morden, the assistant artist, reached the hearts of the audience with the timely Christmas message and her beautiful delivery of "Anniversary" by Margaret Sangster. William Connor played brilliantly the piano solo, 'Rhapsody No. 15, Rakorzy March" by Liszt. Helen Cook delighted the audience with the bell-like quality of her voice in three numbers, "Ave Marie" by Gounod; "I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby" by Cley; and "Time, You Old Gypsy Man" by Besley. A piano duet by Elizabeth Hubbs and Myrtle Houston with Wm. Connor playing an organ obligato "War March of the Priests" was an appropriately stirring finale.

Part Two consisted of the Cantata "Bethlehem" by Paul Bliss, directed by Alec Gordon with the Presto ladies' chorus of 24 voices assisted by Mrs. Ralph Morden giving Biblical readings. With the soloists Evelyn Bird, contralto, Doris Burgoyne, mezzo-soprano and Myrtle Houston, soprano, the chorus transported the listeners with truly glorious music.

Fashions in Music

By ALICE ALDEN

Glowing on the musical horizon is a new star, teen-age Patricia Travers, brilliant American violinist. She has decided views on clothes, and favors a nice balance between stark simplicity and over-dressed frills. She is addicted to suits and wears this one as typical of her wardrobe. It is of beige woolen plaided in dark blue and light red stripes. The cardigan jacket is nipped in at the waist and has diagnoal pockets. A white crepe, round-necked blouse with scalloped detail, completes the neat, typically American-girl outfit.

Mrs. W.H. Finkle Pres. Bridge St. Church W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church was held in the ladies' parlor, Friday afternoon. Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson was in the chair.

The C.G.I.T. group extended an invitation to the ladies to attend the annual Christmas Vesper Service at the Baptist Church, Sunday.

After discussion, it was decided to hold the January meeting on the 10th of the month instead of the 3rd.

Mrs. Baker, the 1st vice president, took the chair and received the report of the nominating committee.

The program of the afternoon was in charge of Mrs. Pearsall, Mrs. Farnsworth and their group.

Mrs. Pearsall read a poem of Rupert Brookes. Mrs. Wight gave the Scripture reading. Christmas carols were sung.

Mrs. Pearsall spoke on the women in India at Christmas and the Light That Shines on India.

In a beautiful candle-lighting ceremony, the following ladies took part—Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Bennett, Mrs. Francis, Miss Browne, Mrs. Curry, Mrs. W. LaRue, Mrs. Dixon.

Mrs. Davidson thanked the group for their program and pronounced the benediction.

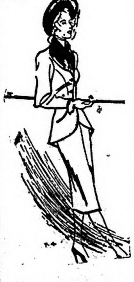
GUILD HOLDS MEETING

Marmora— The annual meeting of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild was held in the Parish Hall on Thursday evening with the retiring President, Mrs. W. D. Lavender, in the chair. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. J. M. Brownlie. The treasurer's report was presented by Miss M. Savage, giving the statement of the general fund and the Church Decoration Fund separately, and disclosing finances to be in excellent condition. The election of officers resulted in the presidency being retained by Mrs. W. D. Lavender. Mrs. J. W. Hickey was elected vice president. Mrs. Don Robertson was returned to the office of secretary. Mrs. Don McInroy was elected treasurer in succession to Miss M. Savage. Mesdames G. Kerr, C. Nichol, and E. Hewitt were elected as visiting committee, and Mrs. E. Hewitt was also re-elected as convener of the Flower Fund. The next meeting at which the financial reports will be presented will be held on January 9th. At the close of the session refreshments were served by the committee in charge.

Fur Trimmed Suit



Attractive Outfit For Town

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

A WARM tan shade of suede-surfaced woolen is used for this attractive town suit. The jacket is snugly fitted through the torso flaring ever so slightly at the hemline. The back has a gentle ripple. The skirt is straight with a seam down the centre front and centre back. The jacket has a soft rolled collar of nutria which is complemented by a nutria hat.

The seaming on the jacket terminates in curved slit pockets.

CHRISTMAS WMS. PROGRAM

Foxboro—The December meeting of the W.M.S. was held on Thursday evening in the S.S. rooms with a large attendance. A Christmas hymn was played as quiet music. Members of the Mission Band under the leadership of Mrs. C. Finkle and Mrs. Ewart Sills, rendered a most appropriate worship service, and the President, Mrs. W. Simmons, took charge of the business period when satisfactory reports were given by the different secretaries. A welcome was also extended to Mrs. Campbell and C.G.I.T. girls of Holloway St., Belleville, to the Mission Band members and the Foxboro C.G.I.T. under the leadership of Miss Marjorie Tummon and Mrs. S. Hayton. A most impressive affiliation service was conducted by Mrs. A. Shorten assisted by Mrs. W. Simmons when the two C.G.I.T. groups were affiliated with the W.M.S. Mrs. Campbell and C.G.I.T. girls gave an account of their work and explained the object of their organization which was most interesting. Dainty refreshments were served from small tables, while tea was poured from a large prettily decorated table at the front of the room.

MARSH HILL W.M.S.

The December meeting of the Marsh Hill W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. E. B. Finkle.

The President opened the meeting by reading a Christmas poem "Open the Doors". This was followed with the singing of Christmas carols. Mrs. Bleecker group leader, introduced the program with the singing of an Indian Christmas carol. Miss May Currie rendered the solo "Come Thou Long Expected Jesus".

Mrs. E. B. Finkle read the Scripture lesson followed by a Christmas reading by Mrs. Leslie Finkle.

Mesdames Mitts, Frederick and Hollinger took the parts of the Indian women in the candle-lighting service, while Mrs. E. B. Finkle, Mrs. F. Finkle, Mrs. Lindenfield and Mrs. F. Campbell took the parts of the Canadian Women. Mrs. F. Finkle read "The Celebration of Christmas" to close the program.

Dignified Dinner Dress

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THE CHARMING dinner dress depicted is the sort of frock prepared to do right by almost any figure type, whether tall or short, slim or mature. It has a high round neckline and short flared cap sleeves. The skirt has side-swept drapery that cascades down one side rising over the centre slit at the hemline. Sequin and jet embroidery describe a leaf motif originating at one shoulder and crossing the bodice of the black crepe dress to the waist.

Tulle for Evening Glamour

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Gauzy allure is a definite trend for evening hat fashions, and the hat above is a good example of its use. This model combines a black velvet pillbox with a swathed band and long streamers tie of champagne tinted tulle which is a color which flatters the complexion of redhead, brunette and blonde, alike.

W.I. MEETING

Stirling.—The Stirling Women's Institute held their December meeting on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wm. West. In the absence of the President, Mrs. H. Cooke, the 1st vice president, occupied the chair. The meeting opened with the Institute Ode and The Lord's Prayer. The treasurer's report and the correspondence were read by Mrs. West. It was decided not to hold a work day in December due to the exigencies of the Christmas season. A discussion followed and plans were made to hold a dance in January and also to make arrangements for sending Christmas boxes to the sick. There was a short program of Christmas carols, readings and musical numbers. It was decided to hold the January meeting at the home of Mrs. B. Woodbeck with Mrs. H. Rodgers as convener of the program.

Washtub Woolens

By ALICE ALDEN

LANASET IS a new word to add to fashion's bright lexicon. It is the remarkable new resin process developed to control the shrinkage of wool. Wooltreated with this process goes blithely into the tub and emerges with shape and dimensions intact. Young and lovely, yet simple in line to facilitate ironing is the dress shown here. In spanking white woolen, the frock has three bustle bows in back and wing sleeves with push-up cuffs. There are blouses too, of this post-war miracle woolen.

BEAUTY

Flattening the Protuberant Abdomen

More waist, less speed," says the Cynic's Calendar. Yea, yea! But that is not the worst of it. It's bad enough to line up with slow-going traffic, to amble heavily instead of tripping along with fairy footsteps, but oh! that reflection in the mirror! Especially when one is putting a new frock on the old figure. What has become of that svelte, youthful shape? Gone with the birthdays. If one had only been mindful of slenderizing eating habits! If one had only done the daily dozen!

Fullness south of the waistline is often caused by relaxed Muscles

Fullness south of the waitsline is more often caused by relaxed muscles than by an accumulation of fat cells. Many women who are otherwise slender have paunches. These fibers should not be allowed to loaf. They have work to do. The musculatory network of the abdomen should, through deep breathing, produce active pressure on the viscera to massage the liver and stimulate the intestinal tract. Without this stimulation, sluggish digestive processes and constipation are likely to result.

Many a woman who suffers from depression and headache would find herself in a better state of health if she would breathe deeply, exercise and regain muscle tone.

Every woman in her forties should be aware of the fact that the mealbag figure can descend upon her, that it is a beauty curse. If she will keep up some form of daily exercise, she will avoid it. Once the fibres have lost elasticity, it is difficult to tinghten them.

Splendid posture and the practice of holding in the abdomen are often an insurance against the bay window of middle age. Trunk-bending, forward and back, from side to side, is an exercise that is recommended by instructors of physical education. Extend the arms out at the side on a line with the shoulders' swing them forward and black, pivoting at the waistline. While doing this, keep the chest lifted and the spinal column extended.

Hands on hips, lower the torso until the buttocks rest on the heels. Rise slowly. These movements are excellent for keeping hips and thighs normal and for reducing the waist measurement.

Should the bathroom scale report a gradual gain of weight, don't bear with the extra poundage. Do something, at once. The body's inclination to collect fat cells is likely to increase with the years.

Cut down on fats, sweets and starches—all builders of adipose tissue—when you are not sufficiently active to burn up the day's intake of calories. Take tea and coffee clear.

New Soapless VEL Keeps Woolens Softer

by Frances Thompson
noted homemaking authority

Yes it's a fact—the unusual mildness of soapless VEL makes it an ideal cleanser for all kinds of woolens. As you know, many soaps contain alkalis which can be very unkind to woolen fibres and tend to cause "matting". But soapless VEL is a neutral product containing no alkali—that's why it leaves wool soft and fluffy and helps give woolen garments longer life.

NEVER WRING WOOLENS

Woolens should always be washed with care—quick washing, gentle squeezing and lukewarm water are "musts". Never rub or twist woolens. VEL dissolves instantly in lukewarm water making it act as soft as rain water.

NO SUDS NEEDED

Using a slightly lesser amount than soap, try VEL for your favourite sweater, Dad's socks, or baby's blankets and woolens. Put the VEL into basin first then add lukewarm water. But remember—unlike soap VEL needs no suds! Its quick-forming suds don't last so don't be disappointed. There's no need to add more VEL as the lack of suds has no effect on the cleaning power of the almost sudless water. Because VEL is not a soap and doesn't act like a soap it leaves no soap film so rinsing is easier and quicker. So VEL's a time-saver too!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Should a Married Woman Have Platonic Friendship, With Men?

Has a husband any right to forbid his wife having a perfectly innocent friendship with another man? A friendship so casual and so uncomplicated by emotional aspects that the association between the two is limited to the rare occasions when the man happens to be in town and drops in at the wife's home for half an hour of friendly chat?

Oh, of course, some will be skeptical about the nature of this friendship, doubting if it can be as innocent and casual as the wife claims. But it just happens that I take her story at its face value, and can quite appreciate the embarrassment her husband is causing her in the matter.

The wife's friendship with this man began during a two-year period when she had legally separated from her husband because of his excessive drinking, and intended to divorce him.

"My husband was in service when I met this friend," she writes. "I was working and supporting myself and my two children. I went out with him, but it was not a romance. He was happily married but his wife had died, and he's one person who only loves once.

"After my husband was discharged, we were reconciled and I dropped divorce proceedings. I told him all about this friend, and he seemed to understand it. But he was jealous, with no reason. He had had all sorts of affairs overseas and was having one when we were reconciled which he was supposed to have dropped, but he kept on corresponding with the girl. He re-enlisted after six months and now is 2,000 miles away.

"In a year and a half, my old friend has seen me exactly twice, and for about half an hour each time. He lives in another state, but his folks live here, and he came in to see me when visiting them. My husband was here the first time he came, and my friend was pleased that we were together again and hoped we would be happy. The second time he came was about four months later. My husband was not at home, so of course I mentioned my friend's visit in my letters, as I've never kept anything from him.

"Well, he was wild, and he told me that unless I forbid this man to enter my house, or to see or speak to me, or even to speak to the children, he was through with me.

"But I can't humiliate myself by telling this friend anything so silly. He's never had any romantic feelings toward me and I couldn't about him. He's just not my type. He thinks I'm wonderful—sensible and a good pal. He often came to me with his problems and I've straightened him out so many times. Am I wrong or right in refusing to tell him he can't stop in here once every seven or eight months to say hello? After all, if we had wanted an affair we could have had it in the two years I was free. I think my husband is looking for a way out."

It is quite possible that this final sentence is the key to her husband's behavior, and that he does want an "out" so he can trump up an excuse for a divorce of his own. Of course there is the possibility, too, that his attitudes have become so thoroughly poisoned by his own infidelities that he can't imagine a wife remaining faithful to an absent husband.

In either case, I'm afraid the outlook for this marriage is far from bright, and I think this wife had better stand firmly on her rights, including the right to use her own judgment, which appears to be good, in the matter of seeing this man friend.

It seems to me, though, that it would be smart to talk the thing over with the friend and get his slant on it. She could do it in such a way that it would not necessarily be humiliating—after all, he brought his problems to her, and turn about is fair play—and it might be better to have him know exactly how the situation stands. This type of husband would be perfectly capable of trying to make capital out of it for his own purposes, and it is safer to be forewarned.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

To Go Or Not To Go To Her Ex-Beau's Wedding?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Bill and I were very good friends before he went overseas, and although we had vaguely considered becoming engaged, we didn't, and when he returned we were so doubtful about our real devotion to each other that we decided to part, at least for a while. During this separation I had heard that he was going about with another girl, a girl who has recently come to live in this medium-size town where he and I have always lived. And yesterday I received an invitation to their wedding! What shall I do, Mrs. Beeckman, about going? And what shall I do about sending a gift?

I don't think I'm spiteful or catty about his marrying some other girl, but on the other hand it would certainly make me chagrined to go to that wedding. I must add that he has always been cordial when we have met since we separated.

Peggy.

First, for your comfort, (I hope) I'd like to tell you that I've had this or similar question asked quite frequently during the last several months. I think it's much smarter for the girl not to duck the issue, thinking that this will save face for her, but rather to put up a good front by going to the wedding, extending cordial felicitations and best wishes at the reception, and a week or so before the wedding, sending a simple gift to the bride-to-be. Of course it is quite proper for you to regret the invitation, not to send a wedding present, and plan to be out-of-town or deep in busy-ness on that date. But this certainly could be interpreted as pique on your part, and you have no reason to be spiteful or chagrined, since you released the young man. Also, I hope you won't do anything impulsive, for you should give thought to the fact that, as I judge, you will undoubtedly be meeting this young man and his bride in the "medium size town in which you all live."

Introducing The Speaker

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been chosen to introduce a lady who is to give a book review at a meeting of our club. I haven't had the opportunity of hearing her give a review, and although I know her only slightly, I know that she is a very charming person. I will appreciate any pointers you will give me about my introduction to her.

H. A. L.

Since you are the one who has been chosen to introduce the speaker, I'm sure you have grace and a charming personality, are qualified to show and to express a cordial welcome. So that you will be at your best in making this introduction, assemble your facts and do some serious homework in rehearsing, preferably before a mirror. Although it may seem unnecessary to urge you to be sure you have the name correct, that you pronounce it as the speaker wishes it pronounced, this is a necesary warning, as sad experience often shows. Also, be sure to find out that what you are planning to say about her professional position and achievements is accurate. Make your introduction short, crisp, and as bright as you can. Try using "special" or "happiness" or both, in your first sentence..they are easy to say and easy to imbue with grace and enthusiasm.." I have a special happiness this afternoon in introducing Miss Mary Rowland, who—"

Good Posture is Important In the Beauty Picture

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT is a crying shame that, in this mad stampede for pulchritude, more women don't pull up their backbones, stand properly, walk beautifully, sit gracefully. They would appear more energized, have better lines, carry their clothes more smartly. Yes, my paper friend, this is our pet peeve. If you have perfect posture, you needn't read any further. You are one girl among many.

Your reporter has no sympathy for girls and women who bawl and blubber about figure defects that are largely of their own making. They don't need a complicated system of exercises or special dieting. They need a little ginger in their minds that will put ginger in their heels so they'll be stepping pretty. Good posture is the foe of fat cells. It is an insurance against the drooping shape that comes in the middle years.

Wrong posture weakens the entire musculature of the body. It has a bad effect upon the functions of the organs of digestion. Digestive troubles have a deplorable effect upon the complexion.

Deep breathing will help one to maintain good carriage. It develops the chest, pulls in the abdominal muscles, snugs in the waistline.

Fat cells are hanging around, just waiting to jump onto the woman who throws her shoulders forward, who lets the portion below the waistline assume an ugly bulge.

Make it a habit to keep the spinal column fully extended, the head balanced, chest lifted. Walk with spirit. Strolling is of no benefit. Stand facing a wall, lift up on your toes, raise the hands as high as you can, touching the wall. Down on your heels, relax, then up again. This exercise will give your backbone some needed stretches.

Fashion Flashes

READY for southbound baggage, or for wear at home, are charming print frocks. Beige crepe—with a clustered dot print in lime, blue and fuchsia — is smartly made with a bow-draped bustline. Draping shapes the hipline and eases fullness into the skirt front. Elbow-length sleeves.

CREEPING into the fashion picture is blue spiced with brown interpreted in fur-trimmed cloth coats and suits for winter, and in prints for Spring. Royal blue woolen is used for a double-breasted, full-length coat with collar, notched revers and flared pocket flaps of brown Alaska seal or nutria. Very new and fresh looking color scheme!

ONE WISE LASS of our acquaintance dressed up a smart, slim, but simple black wool suit. She carefully embroidered its little club collar with jet and added jet-encrusted velvet pocket flaps to simulate pockets, and give an additional touch of splendor and sparkle.

Installation Of Sewage Disposal System Begins

Picton, Dec. 9. —Installation of a sewerage system in Picton will begin on Monday, Council was informed yesterday. There has been some delay due to the fact that property releases from citizens in connection with right-of-ways had to be secured by W. A. Crawford, acting as agent for the town.

The contract for $450,000, was let to the H. J. McFarland Construction Co, of Picton. A mandatory order was received from the Ontario Department of Health by Town Council.

Truck loads of tile have arrived and huge machines are on the job ready to begin operations.

Marks 92nd Birthday

On Sunday, Mrs. C. B. Allison marked her 92nd birthday at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Lt.-Col. Gerald Allison, M.D., and Mrs. Allison. The event was quietly marked. Mrs. Allison is in good health and retains the use of all her faculties. She spent part of the Summer in Montreal with her daughter, Mrs. Joseph H. Bolton, returning here for the Winter.

Mrs. Allison was a charter member of Sir Thomas Picton Chapter I.O.D.E., and as Regent during the First World War, did magnificent work in that capacity.

Probe Break-in

Police are investigating a break-in at the Rorke Grocery store early yesterday. A sum of money, the amount not disclosed by police, was taken, along with cigarettes. Entrance was gained by breaking the glass in a side door. Fingerprints were secured.

Chief of Police Bert Biddle was assisted in investigating by Provincial Police from Belleville, P. C. Caldwell and County Constable James Lovelace.

ON LECTURE TOUR

The Rev. BOYS' SPORTS

Interforms:

The final upperschool game was played between XIG and XIIG in the last of a 2 out of 3 series. Some of the better known "authorities" said "it was the best game of the season." Milligan, Langman and Diamond were the outstanding players for XIIG. Bush and Bradshaw ran most of the end runs. Green and Preston ran the bucks. These two teams played decidedly different types of rugby. The XIIG players used their heavier weight to hammer down the XIG line while XIG used speed plays.

House-League:

George Miller, seconded by Jack Ethier, have their team all ready to try for the first position in the house-league series. This team beat Spafford's team out by 5 points in a two game series with total points to count. Their next game is played with Watkins' team in a two out of three series.

How many chin-ups can you do? How many sit-ups and push-ups? Drop into the boys' gym and see some of these peculiar exhibitions of manhood while they awkwardly do these exercises and get marks and backaches, oooh ! ! !

Don't forget your "High-News Paper" which is on sale every Friday, it's got interest for everybody.

ASSEMBLY

Roger White, 12C

Our hearts were gladdened by Barbara Joan Houston's rendition of "O Holy Night" which she sang today in Assembly. Her voice rang sweet and clear throughout the auditorium and made us forget, if only for a minute, the examinations that are approaching. B. J. H. modestly refused an encore, but it is hoped that she will consent to sing again for us soon. It is rather startling to discover that we have such amazing talent in our student body, but it certainly make a delightful contribution to our Assemblies.

Jack Kuntze, a well known man-about-collegiate, was found guilty at a mock trial today of monopolizing the free time of one Charlotte Finkle and escorting her to public places of entertainment on more than twenty-six occasions. This is a most serious offence against the social laws of B.C.I. and despite the brilliant work done by John O'Flynn in defending the accused, justice, right, and Boyd Upper (prosecuting attorney) won out. Kuntze was given the supreme penalty—being subject to three year's participation in chemistry periods. Upon hearing the verdict ,the misguided delinquent was led away blubbering.

GIRLS' SPORTS

This seems to be the slack time of the year for girls' sports as there were no scheduled games during this week. Could it be that the girls have become studious?

Tryouts for the senior girls' basketball team were held last Wednesday. Twelve girls were picked but only eight will be on the seniors. The other four will be placed on the junior basketball team which is holding their try-outs Thursday after four. The final results of both teams will be in next week's issue.

Last Thursday after 4 o'clock our girls played against O.S.D. girls in the girls' gym. (Basketball, that is!) The game was refereed by Doreen Stiver and Corinne Spring, the final score being 14-11 for us.

At noon on Thursday XIA girls played against their boys. It was a very exciting game with the girls actually winning all their points but (as usual) the boys beat the girls with the resulting score of 25-9 for the boys. Either the girls' rules are hard to follow or the boys are naturally (dumb?) but the referee had quite a time making the boys adhere to the line. They insisted on going over the three-quarter line.

Well kids, I hope to have more news for you next week, so until then "keep studying" — (you'll need it.)

L. R. M.

CUFF NOTES

Are you afraid to go steady? Take the same girl to various social functions at least twenty-six times a year? Speak up now, I must hear your reply.

If anyone is still in doubt as to that question after the trial last Wednesday, he should soak his head. For the benefit of the unenlightened the following is an account of Jack Kuntze's torture last Wednesday, December 4.

Sharp at 3.30 the student body assembled in the auditorium to see and hear the mock trial presented by the Debating Society as their first program. The song "Prisoner of Love" gave the trial its proper atmosphere. The newly formed B.C.I. quartet, with a snappy rendition of "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" laid the scene.

The curtain parted to reveal a stage, set in the exact order of a court. The sheriff, jury, court reporter, lawyers, witnesses, prisoner, and judge filed on in solemn dignity. The prosecuting and defending lawyers brought their witnesses to the stand for questioning and cross examination. The policeman was kept active by the continued disturbance of an inebriated gentleman who staggered in and out of court looking for Agatha.

With the pleas of both lawyers ringing in their ears the jury went out. In a stillness that was nothing short of miraculous (for the auditorium) the foreman of the jury declared the prisoner guilty of "going steady" but recommended that leniency be shown in passing sentence.

The judge thanked the jury and sentenced the prisoner to three years at hard labor in the Upper School Chemistry class. He was led away sobbing and mumbling about a preference for the "chair." His lawyer stated that the decision would be appealed.

This trial was a distinct success from an educational standpoint as well as one of entertainment. Those actively engaged in the production of the trial, value the experience most highly, while the audience expressed its approval by the thunderous applause given the participants at the trial's conclusion.

This undertaking was the first in a series of such activities sponsored by the Debating Society under the guidance of Mr. Bowden. It was possible only through the co-operation of all concerned and Jack Kuntze and Charlotte Finkle in particular. These two were the victims of the trial, who voluntarily bore the brunt of all the jests and pryings. They showed wonderful school spirit and good sportsmanship. The whole school thanks them.

THE POET

A poet, no matter where he goes
Is asked by followers of prose,
To write a poem for their pleasure,
(Since poems are a work of leisure.
They think that difficulties which are met
When they write, don't beset
The poet, who composes odes and ballads
Much as chefs do plates and salads)
And are shocked, when poets ask
That they in turn take up the task,
And write for them a simple story
Which is neither old nor sorry.
The artist on the other hand
Would never make the same demand.
Because he knows, deep in his heart,
That poetry, as such, is art,
And to write poems brief and quaint
Is as difficult as it is to paint.

BIG EDUCATION PLAN

The state government also is taking steps to induce young men to take up teaching.

25 Fatalities Across Canada Over Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

The hotel fire at Saskatoon in which 11 persons died topped a list of 25 fatalities across Canada over the weekend.

Six high-school basketball players were killed in a car-crash near Victoria. Six persons died in Ontario as a result of various mishaps, one in Quebec and one in New Brunswick.

Apart from the death-list the weekend was notable for a series of costly fires. The century-old Bonsecour Market in Montreal was gutted with loss of thousands of dollars worth of food and other stocks.

Damage was $275,000 or more in a fire that gutted the Toronto Hydro Commission's Maintenance Building on the downtown harbor-front. Loss was $50,000 in fires that wrecked a dance-hall and seed plant at London, Ont. A garage and carpenter shop were destroyed at Chicoutimi, Que., with loss of $10,000. And at St. Boniface, Man., fire wrecked two grain elevators with loss of grain estimated worth $500,000.

Two Shootings

The Ontario fatalities included two shootings. Henry Eves, 78, died in hospital at Kingston where he was taken after being found wounded in his home with a revolver nearby. At Toronto Pte. Bernard Pearson, 26, accidently killed himself while cleaning a souvenir Belgian pistol in his home.

Ernest Garlow was killed when a power-saw broke while he was cutting wood near Hagersville, 20 miles south of Brantford. L. G. Fotheringham died in hospital at Brampton from injuries received in a car accident a week ago.

The body of William Willis, 69, was recovered from the Mississippi River near Almonte in eastern Ontario, after he had been missing for a week. Michael Harrington, 69, was killed by a train at Kenora.

At Howick, Que., Mrs. Alfred Desgroseilliers, 84, was fatally injured when struck by a freight train. Leo Clark, 28, died in hospital at Woodstock, N.B., from injuries received in a car crash a week ago.

U. K. AMBASSADOR

O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, present undersecretary of the treasury, has been named U. S. ambassador to Great Britain. The London post has been vacant since W. Averall Harriman left it to become secretary of commerce.

EMERGENCY!
— SAVE ELECTRICITY!

A critical power shortage now exists in Southern Ontario. Savings in the use of electricity will be needed on the part of all citizens in order to avoid serious difficulties during the present winter period, and Hydro is asking all consumers to conserve electricity wherever possible in order to relieve this situation.

THE DAILY PERIOD DURING WHICH SAVINGS SHOULD BE EFFECTED IS BETWEEN 8 A.M. AND 8 P.M., AND CONDITIONS ARE PARTICULARLY ACUTE BETWEEN 4 P.M. AND 7 P.M.

Factories and industry are asked to switch from day to night operation, in whole or in part, wherever possible, and also to effect all power savings practicable. Street lighting should be reduced to the lowest level consistent with public safety.

THIS IS HOW YOU CAN HELP

- Eliminate the use of electricity for signs, billboards and store windows from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.
- Eliminate all Christmas decorative lighting until Saturday, December 21st, and again after January 1st.
- Turn off lights when not required.
- Use the minimum number of lights in the living-room, consistent with good vision.
- Do not use electric air heaters and grates.
- Use electrically heated water sparingly and check leaking hot water taps.
- Do not use range elements on "high" when a lower heat will serve, and turn off all elements as soon as possible.
- Cook oven meals as often as possible and avoid the unnecessary use of surface elements.
- Turn the radio on only for programs desired; if not listening, turn it off.
- Operate electric toasters and other small appliances only as needed.

The electric power shortage is a general condition following six years of war and arising from the fact that it was impossible to proceed with the development of sufficient new power sites during the war because of the requirements for war production. Since the war, the critical shortage of men and materials has seriously delayed the development of new sources of power.

The Commission has been reducing loads within its direct control, wherever possible. These reductions are not enough, and it is now necessary to appeal for assistance on the part of all consumers.

Hydro appreciated the splendid voluntary assistance on the part of its consumers during the war, and believes that similar co-operation will be forthcoming at this time.

Europe's Recovery In Post-War Year Is Spotty Record

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Brussels, Dec. 9 (CP) — In the first full year of peace, Europe has made only spotty recovery and massive economic difficulties plague practically every country.

Germany, in defeat and ruin at the heart of Europe, continues to create the most critical problems. Four-power control of the Reich has not been a notable success. The Potsdam agreement that Germany be treated as an economic whole has not been carried out. Britain and the United States, by an economic merger of their two zones, have sought to apply this principle of their own, but Russia and France will not co-operate for various reasons.

There have been differences over economic policy between the Soviet control authorities on one hand and the British and American on the other, on subjects ranging from the level of German production to removal of factories on reparations payment.

Only limited progress has been made in getting Germany's industries going and the situation in the Ruhr—on which many European countries depend for coal and steel—is desperate.

Adverse Effect

Confusion and instability in Germany has had an adverse effect on the whole continent.

In Austria, the other four-power occupied country, economic conditions are better than in Germany, but there are still plenty of problems both for the Vienna government and the control authority.

Italy made more progress toward recovery in 1946 than was generally anticipated, but has a long way to go before industry can absorb the large number of unemployed and trade is resumed on a profitable scale.

The economy of Greece is in a pitiable state and will depend for its comeback to a large extant on assistance in loans, credits and trade with western countries.

Within the Soviet sphere of influence in eastern Europe, Czechoslovakia has done the best job in industry, commerce and finance. Her nationalization scheme has progressed and production and trade are steadily increasing. Economic troubles are grave, however, for Poland, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Romania and Hungary.

In western Europe, France has tried stubbornly through the year to mend her economic fences and has made considerable progress; but distribution problems, the black market, currency instability and scarcities harry the nation. High hopes are being placed on new economic understanding with Britain.

Belgium has led all Europe in her economic revival and is almost as prosperous today as the bountiful neutrals — Switzerland and Sweden. But Brussels is concerned at the extremely high prices in the country, particularly as they affect export trade. To bolster export sales, currency devaluation may be used, but a desperate battle is being waged to keep the Belgian franc at its present level.

Holland is not far behind Belgium and these two countries, with tiny Luxembourg are gradually forming an economic and customs union — an alliance which must have a broad influence on Europe's economic life.

ROMANTIC NEWS

A story recently published in a Paris newspaper states that Prince Philippe of Greece will become a naturalized British subject so that he can marry Princess Elizabeth of England, with whom he is pictured here. The Prince, who served with the British navy during the war, is third in line to the Greek throne.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge. —Due to the cold weather the first part of the week, it was decided that the cheese factory be closed for the season.

Mrs. Ken Kingston entertained the ladies of the W.I. for their meeting last Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris entertained company last Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Bernice Moore is spending a few weeks with friends at Yarker.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Sine spent the tea hour and evening with Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Bushell and family, of Belleville, last Tuesday.

Mr. Grant Nicolson, who spent the Fall months in Western Canada and the Southern States, has returned home.

Mrs. M. Sine and sons, visited her parents and other friends in Oshawa, a few days last week.

W. A. Meeting

The December meeting of the Wallbridge W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. J. N. Chisholm and Mrs. Sam Chisholm with a good attendance. The opening exercises were in charge of the President, Mrs. Clare. A letter from Mrs. E. Lane was read, thanking the Society for cards and a plant which had been sent to her while she was in the hospital. The treasurer's report showed that a substantial amount had been raised during the year. It was decided to hold the Installation of Officers at the Sunday evening service, Dec. 8th. It was also decided to buy candles and candle holders for the candle-lighting service to be held the Sunday before Christmas. A vote of appreciation was tendered Mrs. Clare for her faithful work as President of the Society for the past two years. The meeting closed with a Christmas hymn and the benediction.

W. M. S. Meeting

The W.M.S. meeting followed in charge of Mrs. W. Sine and the opening exercises as given in the Missionary Monthly were followed. Reports were received from the different secretaries. Mrs. S. Nicolson gave a splendid reading on Christian Stewardship. It was decided that an effort would be made to have the mite boxes and thank-offering handed in very soon. A business discussion followed and the meeting was closed.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Chisholm and Mrs. Sam Chisholm for their hospitality.

Marmora

Marmora. (Special.)—St. Paul's Laymen's Association was re-organized at a meeting held in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening. The chair was occupied by the Rector, Rev. J. M. Brownlie, who, on behalf of the attendants, extended felicitations to one member, W. J. Cottrell, on his being chosen president of the Deanery for the ensuing year. The following officers were then elected: :

President, Donald Robertson
Vice President John Reynolds
Secretary-Treasurer, Cliff Watson.

The election of the program committee was referred until January. It was decided to hold meetings on the second Wednesday of each month, and membership fees were set at 50 cents annually. A temporary program committee was appointed to draw up the program for the next meeting. The rector expressed his pleasure at the interest shown in the re-organization and reminded the members of the decision reached at the recent annual meeting of the Hastings Deanery Laymen's Association, that a special service is to be held in each parish of the deanery on the third Sunday in Advent. At St. Paul's, Marmora, that will be held at 11 a.m. After other matters concerning the welfare of the Association had been satisfactorily discussed, the meeting adjourned.

Personals

Mr. Lewis Phillips returned home from Peterborough Civic Hospital on Thursday.

Mr. George Dostanko is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Reeves R. E. Neal, Marmora Village, J. A. Bell, Marmora and Lake, and C. H. Buskard, Deloro Village, are attending County Council meetings in Belleville this week.

Mrs. Thomas Bain and son, Robert, of Detroit, Mich., visited the former's mother, Mrs. W. McCallum and Mr. McCallum, over the weekend.

Rev. J. W. Houston, of Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, will be the preacher at St. Andrew's United Church next Sunday morning and at Deloro Hall in the evening.

Club Meeting

The meeting of the "Spicy Chatter" Cooking Club was held in the basement of the United Church on Tuesday evening. Miss Virginia Robertson, president, was in charge. Minutes were read by Mary McGregor. A name was drawn as to which girl would demonstrate the making of muffins. This lot fell to Marilyn Sproul, who gave a very capable demonstration. In the meanwhile, Mrs. W. G. Chrysler read an interesting article entitled "Let's Face the Facts About Flour". The club has been invited to go through Peterborough plants and to visit CHEX, but due to transportation difficulties uncertainty was expressed as to whether this would be possible. The next meeting will be held in January.

Carmel

Carmel.—Mrs. Geo. Elliot, of Bethel, has been visiting Mrs. J. Reynolds.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brintnell were dinner guests on Sunday, of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hamilton, Belleville, it being the forty-fourth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Hamilton of Mountain View.

AIKEN'S W.M.S. CONDUCTS CHURCH SERVICE

Third Sidney, Dec. 6. — Mrs. Percy MacMullen of Mount Pleasant Rawdon was guest speaker at the W.M.S. thank offering service held at Aiken's Church on Sunday morning. Her message, "The Glory of the Harvest" was based on the fourth section of the parable of the sower which speaks of the fruits of the harvest. Mrs. MacMullen's message was interesting and educational, covering the results of work in missionary fields in Asia, Africa, India, China and Canada, and gave to her listeners a challenge for funds needed to assist more missionaries in carrying the gospel to all lands.

A junior choir consisting of members of the Mission Band, assisted with the service. Their leader, Mrs. Perry Hamilton, was their accompanist. The Scripture Lesson was read by a Band member, Miss Betty Smith, and prayer was offered by Mrs. William Bush. The offering was received by the treasurer, Mrs. Cyril McMullen, and the Christian Stewardship Secretary, Mrs. Sam Marshall and was dedicated by Miss Joan Jeffrey.

The meeting was in charge of the Auxiliary president, Mrs. E. K. Hubble, and was well attended by members of the congregation. The thank offering amounted to more than twenty-eight dollars.

Personals.

Mrs. Andrew Langstaff has returned home from Wellington, where she has spent some time with her friend, Mrs. Anderson.

Mr. John Russell who has been in attendance at a C.P.R. Trainmen's convention in Florida, left for his home in Vancouver on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen were dinner guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hubble.

Mr. and Mrs. Selburn Westover spent Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Saylor and Mrs. Palmer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Denike, Eudora and Douglas spent Sunday with Mrs. Denike's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Farnham, at their home in Cannifton.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey and daughter, Miss Jewel Bailey, motored to Lindsay on Saturday where they were guests at the Nelson-Bailey wedding. Miss Jewel Bailey was one of the bridesmaids for her cousin's marriage which was performed by the bride's uncle, Rev. H. B. Neal.

Mr. Gordon Spafford, Second year engineering student at Queen's University, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Spafford, Second Line, who were celebrating their thirty-first wedding anniversary.

80th Birthday Celebrated.

Mr. Frank Benway has returned to his home at Hillier after a week's visit with his daughter, Mrs. C. W. May, and his grandson, Mr. Orval May. A family gathering was held at the home on Sunday, it being the 80th birthday of Mr. Benway and the fifth birthday of his great-granddaughter, little Miss Donna May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard May. Mr. Joe Ethier of Belleville was also celebrating a birthday and all were present on this happy occasion.

Canadian Nickel

brings you Perfumes from France

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE in the Cannes, Grasse and Nice regions of France earn their living in the growing and processing of orange flowers, jasmine, roses and other flowers for perfumes. Thousands of people in Canada earn their living directly or indirectly in the production of nickel.

A large part of the perfume produced in France is exported to other lands. Less than three per cent of the Nickel produced in Canada is consumed in Canada. The rest is exported, and the money received helps to pay for French perfumes and other products necessary to good living in Canada. Canada cannot keep on importing from other lands unless Canadian goods are exported.

Each increase in the export of Canadian Nickel means more workers employed in the Canadian Nickel industry. It also means jobs for the other thousands of Canadians who produce the power, steel, lumber, explosives, machinery and supplies used by the Canadian Nickel industry.

By constantly expanding the use of Nickel at home and abroad, the Canadian Nickel industry brings additional benefits to Canada and Canadians.

Toronto Maple Leafs Surge To Lead of N.H.L. by Scoring Two Victories Over Weekend

Team Defeats Boston 5-1 on Saturday and Detroit Wings 5-4 on Sunday

By HARRY ECCLES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The young, fighting Toronto Maple Leafs crashed their way to the National Hockey League leadership today on two smashing weekend victories, in one of which they came from behind a 4-1 deficit.

Leafs walloped Boston Bruins 5-1 Saturday night at Toronto, then scraped out a 5-4 victory over the Red Wings at Detroit on four goals in the last period. Canadiens beat Chicago 5-3, and New York Rangers gave the Bruins their second defeat by a 6-4 count in Boston.

The two Canadian teams were far in front of the pack. Montreal had a six-point lead on Boston Bruins. Another point back Detroit and New York were tied for Fourth. And Chicago Black Hawks were even deeper in the cellar—now six points back of Detroit and New York.

Dumart got that one back before the first period ended. In the second, Captain Syl Apps and Sailor Gaye Stewart made it 3-1 for Leafs, and in the last frame Stewart got his second goal and Lynn ended the scoring.

Ezinicki Get One Back

At Detroit Sunday the Wings whipped into a 2-0 lead on goals by Billy Taylor and Conacher, but wild Bill Ezinicki got one back as the period ended. In the second, Doran and Lindsay made it 4-1. Then the Leafs exploded like a bunch of firecrackers.

In the last period Bud Poile took Gaye Stewart's pass-out from the boards and beat Lumley cleanly. That was at 44 seconds of the period. There was no further scoring until the last five minutes were on the clock.

Harry Watson beat Lumley and made it 4-3. Kennedy then snared Boesch's pass to tie the score on an angle shot from 25 feet out.

The teams were tied 4-4 with 78 seconds of play left when Nick Metz collared Mortson's pass and blasted it into the net from 35 feet for the winner.

Gardner Scores Three

At Boston Garden Rangers took a 6-4 verdict over Bruins. Cal Gardner scored three goals in less than six minutes of the middle frame, to make it 4-2, at that point, after Hextall's prior score for Rangers and Bruin counters by Dumart and Carveth.

Hextall got his second goal in the last frame, and Carveth came right back with another. Then Russell rammed one in for the Rangers on Gardner's pass and it was 6-3. Bruins' final counter was by Schmidt at 11.28.

At Chicago, Hawks opened the second period with Nattrass's goal but Lach, Richard and Peters flashed the goal light in succession before Nattrass got his second. Lach and O'Connor made it 5-2 before Doug Bentley wound up the Chicago scoring, at 16:34. First period was scoreless.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By The Canadian Press)

Although garnering but a few points during the past two weeks, Billy (The Kid) Taylor of Detroit Red Wings still has enough on the ball to pace the National Hockey League scoring leaders with eight goals and 17 assists for 25 points. Taylor picked up a goal and an assist during the weekend to remain the pace-maker while Maurice Richard, Montreal, also slipped in a goal and an assist to hold second place with 13 goals and 10 assists for 23 points. Roy Conacher, Detroit, follows with 12 and 10 for 22 points and Ted (Teeter) Kennedy, Toronto, has fourth berth with 13 and eight for 21 points. Elmer Lach, Montreal, made a two week scoring spree pay off as he moved into a three-way tie with Milt Schmidt, Boston, and Syd Abel, Detroit, for fifth berth with 18 points apiece.

The Leaders	G.	A.	Pts.
Taylor, Detroit	8	17	25
Richard, Montreal	13	10	23
Conacher, Detroit	12	10	22
Kennedy, Toronto	13	8	21
Abel, Detroit	11	7	18
Schmidt, Boston	9	9	18
Lach, Montreal	11	7	18

WEEKEND STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Cal Gardner, New York, with three goals as Rangers defeated Boston Bruins 6-4.

Ralph Nattrass, Chicago, Black Hawk rookie who put in a pair of tallies as Montreal Canadiens won 5-3.

Elmer Lach, Montreal, who led Montreal with two goals.

OSHAWA GENS AND GALT TIED FOR 2ND PLACE

St. Catharines Start Climb That May Cause Other Teams Some Trouble

(By The Canadian Press)

Resurgence of the St. Catharines Falcons and a game but unsuccessful effort by Toronto Young Rangers to turn back the high-flying Oshawa Generals were the most notable features of a four-game O.H.A. Junior A schedule that saw leading teams improve their positions in the 10-team loop.

The league-leading St. Michael's Majors, Oshawa and Galt Red Wings made the most headway with four point victories which established them — temporarily at least — as the league's Big Three with the Wings and Generals tied for second place eight points back of the Irish. In fourth place, two points behind and probably wondering what hit them, were the idle Stratford Kroehlers who started the weekend in the second spot.

In a Saturday afternoon doubleheader at Toronto, St. Michael's had little difficulty disposing of Toronto Marlboros 4-1 while the Generals had to go all out for a 4-3 victory over the fighting Young Rangers.

Fleming Mackell fattened his league-leading total of scoring points with two goals and an assist. Les Costello and Bobby Paul also counted for the Irish while Bob Hassard scored for the losers.

Young Jim Maxwell, who graduated to the Falcons from juvenile ranks last week when Captain Eric Unger went away to play for Philadelphia American Hockey League Rockets, spearheaded the St. Catharines club to its first victory of the season with a three-goal performance that gave the home club a 6-3 margin over Hamilton Szabos.

Tom Buck, Bill Frick and Bob Twaddle fired home the other St. Catharines counters. Pierre Cadieux had two and Bain one for the visitors.

At Windsor the Galt Red Wings gave Terry Sawchuk his third shutout of the season by whitewashing the last-place Spitfires 5-0. Two goals by Fred Glover and singletons by Hnatuch, Unlac and Scott did the damage.

But the tid-bit of the day was the Oshawa-Young Rangers clash in which Leo Curik's third-period goal and some fine goaltending by Lou Crowdis in the final frame turturned back the hard-fighting Torontonians. Twice previously the homesters had caught the Generals, erasing a one-goal lead in the first frame and a two-goal margin in the second before they called it a day.

Don Bauer, Ray Ceresino and Eric Pogue were the other scorers for the victors. Valliere, Sullivan and Pidherny counted for Rangers.

The Generals take on the seventh-place Szabos in Hamilton in tonight's only junior game. In Toronto the seniors go into action as Owen Sound Mohawks try to make it two in a row against Toronto Staffords.

Fight Managers Offer Prayer For Jacobs' Recovery

By SID FEDER

New York, Dec. 9 —(P)— The Fight Managers' Guild — sometimes known to the artists of the malaprop as the Fight Managers' "Guilt" — held its annual beefsteak last night, and although more than 100 of the 33-per centers were on hand, no one was cut Aup except the steak.

To make the affair all the more gala, everything was on the cuff. The Guild treasury picked up the "tab."

There was serious moment in the festivities when all hands rose to offer a brief prayer for the recovery of boxing promoter Mike Jacobs, fighting for his life after being stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage and acute heart attack.

Some of the older citizens, like Prof. Billy McCarney, of the Gene Tunney managerial staff, and astute Alphonse Weill, the waltz king who piloted titleholders light lightweight Lew Ambers and welterweight Marty Servo, remarked that this was a remarkable tribute, because fistic pilots usually do not think kindly of fistic promoters. They are more often battling them for extra percentage for their meal tickets.

During the proceedings, the managers took a look ahead to the possibility "Uncle Mike" may give up active fight promoting and that the Madison Square Garden Corporation, itself, may take over the production of Garden ear-scrambling. In that case, the managers hinted, they may take some joint action against Ned Irish, the Garden's aggressive vice-president.

Last Friday, with Mike in the hospital, a large number of the managers claimed that because of Irish, they did not get tickets to Garden fights.

O.H.A. COMPLETES MOST SUCCESSFUL YEAR IN HISTORY

President George Panter Says Association Largest Hockey Family in World

Toronto, Dec. 7. (CP)— The Ontario Hockey Associatioin in 1946 completed its most successful year in its long life and the outlook for the future is brighter than ever, President George Panter of Gravenhurst, today told the 57th annual meeting of the O.H.A.

Mr. Panter said the Association was by far the largest hockey family in the world and "has probably given birth to more hockey players than all others combined."

"Already plans have been made and funds provided to double the number of artificial ice rinks in the O.H.A. as soon as the material is available," Mr. Panter said. "Our players are in demand everywhere, both here and in Europe, and of course we must make it our business to protect them in their inexperience, and protect our clubs as well."

The president said the executive propose to introduce a number of innovations for the good of the game and the player. The first is a series of schools for referees to be held in different centres for the benefit of those referees in the surrounding areas who were unable to attend the school held in Toronto Nov. 24. Locations and dates will be announced later.

A school for coaches and managers will be held at Toronto Dec. 16 because "the executive feels that coaches in the smaller centres of the province suffer from lack of opportunity to get together for sessions of mutual help."

Coaches and managers will be guests of the Association at an informal dinner and prominent O.H.A. coaches will talk on the modern game and styles of play. In the same way a number of experienced managers will discuss club management.

Mr. Panter said the meeting should help to improve both the quality of the game and the standard of management in all O.H.A. groups.

The executive also plans to have every club in the Junior "B" and "C" groups name its most valuable player. Those selected will be invited to come to Toronto for a three-day visit with all expenses paid.

Jackie Robinson May Get Chance To be a Dodger

Jackie Robinson, the flashy negro second-baseman, who was a standout with Montreal Royals of the International League last season, may get a chance to move up the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League and become the first Negro ball player in major league history. Branch Rickey, Dodgers president, surveying the baseball scene yesterday, said at Los Angeles Robinson would go south for Spring training with Montreal and might come north with Brooklyn.

"He'll play wherever his ability warrants," said the Dodgers' leader.

Described as "single, shapely and beautiful," 19 blonde gymnasts from Denmark arrived in Brooklyn yesterday to begin a good-will tour of Canada and the United States. Accompanied by 18 male counterparts, the girls will demonstrate Danish gymnastics.

The Newmarket, Eng. December sales ended yesterday with a record $8,000,000 having been spent for British bloodstock during the year.

Mrs. Roxy Atkins Andersen, one-time star of the Canadian Olympics hurdle team, was honeymooning at Berkeley, Cal., with her husband, Eugene E. Andersen. The Toronto-born bride was on the 1934 British Empire team which competed in London and a member of the 1936 Canadian Olympics team which took part in the games in Germany.

Officials of Winnipeg Monarchs, 1946 Canadian Junior Hockey champions, said last night they had decided "with regret" to decline an invitation from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to represent Canada at the European Hockey championships at Prague in February.

Montreal, Dec. 9 — (CP)—The St. Louis blues are taking on a new form. The good citizens of the show-me state are whooping it up for a major league hockey team, in other words a National Hockey League entry reports Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson.

George Carson, manager of the St. Louis Auditorium, thinks that St. Loo should try the big time again — the first effort was a sad one in 1934-35 with the remnants of the old Ottawa Senators—just as soon as the Flyers cop an American Hockey League title to boost their prestige. That's why Carson has been hounding Canadiens for talent.

"Every time I turn around," says coach Dick Irvin of Canucks, "there's Carson saying: 'Look Dick, we play to 10,000 people every game on the average even though we're last. How's about a couple of players to help us out?"

Carson thinks that when Flyers win an A.H.L. title, that will be the "psychological time" for the N.H.L. move. Well, could be.

Dick Irvin, scanning last Wednesday's two ties and a near-tie in the N.H.L., guesses the teams were all tightened up and playing for deadlock games. What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

The Canadian Amateur Athletic Association is still looking about for a hockey team to represent Canada at the Prague Olympics in February. After Winnipeg Monarchs, Canadian Junior Champions, rejected the invitation, St. Michael's College Majors were offered the trip. There has been no indication so far what their reaction will be.

Toronto Huskies came up with another win in the Basketball Association of America last night —a 68-59 victory over Providence Steam Rollers at Providence.

Sammy Snead, the Hot Springs, Va., "slammer" won the $2,000 first prize money Saturday in the $10,000 Miami open golf tournament with a 72-hole total of 267, 13 under par.

Plans were announced yesterday for construction of a $2,500,000 horse race track at Las Vegas, Nev.

Halfback Lynn Chewning, near-hero of the Nov. 30 Army-Navy football game, announced Saturday he had resigned from the United States Naval Academy. His brother said it was because Chewning was "disappointed" over his treatment at Annapolis.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

Get yourself in a mood to make correct responding bids. Except in a cumbersome system, there is not much to know. The few rules you need can be read in several minutes.

First stop to consider whether you pass or bid. With two tricks or less, always pass. With more than two tricks, inclusive of two high cards, bid something.

When you bid something, follow the order of preference in T-A-N. Takeout first; assist second, no-trump last. With no takeout or assist, bid no-trump.

To takeout, have a biddable suit. To assist, have adequate support in partner's suit. Adequate support is queen (or better) with two more, or any four cards, or better.

With enough tricks (inclusive of two sure), to help make a game one-jump at once. Without two sure tricks or enough game-help tricks, do not jump. Only a jump or a new suit takeout is forcing.

When a bid is forcing, partner must bid again. Even if he has nothing new to show. When a bid is not forcing, partner may pass. Unless he has new values to show.

There you have the whole story. It could be boiled down to fewer words. Even so, it would take many more words in a cumbersome system that would not be as accurate.

South opens with one club when north has this hand:

♠ A Q J 5
♥ 8 4
♦ K 7 6 4 2
♣ K J

Four high cards, a short in hearts, a short in clubs are six tricks; enough to help make a game. But with only one sure trick (the ace), it is not an immediate jump.

With two different length biddable suits, the longer should be mentioned first. This means the first north response is one diamond.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By George H. Carver, Sports Editor

Frank Butler and Rex Young of the Belleville Intermediates and Wally Berry of the Juniors entered their respective teams under the aegis of the Belleville Hockey Association. Our own "Sandy" Burrows was re-elected to the executive.

Some of the highlights of the conclave were that "any club entering Intermediate A, and B or junior B and C must have at least eight bona fide local players on the roster. "Every club in the junior B and C will be asked to name the most valuable player elected by the vote of his mates. This player will be taken to Toronto at the end of the season and be given the chance to play in games against East and West, a new O.H.A. wrinkle. The kids will see some of the playoffs and naturally will be under the scrutiny of professional and other scouts. They will be given new uniforms, railway fare and $12 per diem for expenses.

Don't forget that star boxing show at Mountain View Wednesday evening .The boys have arranged an all-star card and a big crowd is taking in the show from this village. Buses leave the four corners at 7.30 p.m. and it looks like a good evening's entertainment. More about that tomorrow.

In the meantime get out and vote.

Primo Carnera Defeats Christie Before 2,000 Fans in Main Bout At Hume Arena Saturday Night

"Who, you?" grunted the guttural Italian voice and big mountainous Primo Carnera playfully placed a hand the size of a ham over the sports writer's face and pushed, oh so gently. The scribe picked himself up from the corner of the dressing room, tried to think of a fancy Italian name, couldn't and beat a hasty retreat. Some minutes later the Ambling Alp from Goriza was back in the room with another victory tacked to his belt. He defeated streamlined Vic Christie in the main attraction at the Hume Arena before over 2,000 interested pewsters.

Carnera is big and in fine shape. The ex-world boxing champion, an amiable hulk of a man who is shod with canal-boats is quite some torso-twister according to his performance on Saturday night. He came equipped with a headlock, a forelock and a bevy of attendants and managers including the loquacious friendly "Voice", Phil Lawson.

They haven't cut up Signor Satchel-Shoes into slices as thin as when the large lamb was shorn by the wolves of the boxing racket several years ago. The managers of the big boy are Johnny Doyle, Carl Eaton and Babe McCoy all of Los Angeles.

Carnera was flatter financially than a Nazi panzer division over in Old Italia but he will be able to eat much meatballs and spaghetti in the future. The folding lettuce is coming in gobs and it won't be long before the big whoosit will be back on the sunny slopes of Italy living the life of Reilly, or the Italian equivalent.

He is packing them in wherever he shows, according to his public relations staff and it is likely that every Italian in Toronto will be on deck when Carnera tangles with Karl Davis there this week.

As a fighter Carnera aroused sympathy rather than salutes. Exploited, bewildered, confused and perplexed, he was wrung dry by his business associates and cast aside.

They said he was just a physical freak who couldn't punch his way out of a paper bag. Who can, for that matter? When Ernie Schaaf went down from one of Da Preem's clubbing punches, they shouted "Fake, It's in th bag." but Schaaf in the full flower of his youth, was dead the next morning.

They said Carnera had no guts. "Can't take it," they'd say. When Maxie Baer was a mean and vicious hitter he had Carnera down and bleeding like a stuck shoat in the first round. But Da Preem got up again and again and he was still in there in the 11th round.

There never was anything mean or vicious or ugly about Signor Satchel-Shoes. Which is why, probably, he was never much of a fighter.

GOD FOR HARRY ENGLAND AND ST. GEORGE.

The above scene is one of the many exciting moments in Laurence Olivier's Technicolor production of William Shakespeare's "HENRY V", it shows the King addressing his soldiers just before the battle of Agincourt. HENRY V is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. A United Artist Release.

Saturday night, he grinned at his fellow pachyderms in a friendly sort of way. He doesn't speak much English and has a sort of growly voice. His physical condition is well-nigh perfect and the good American and Canadian food is doing wonders for him.

He has the strength of a couple of elephants and when he shakes hands you wince — if he puts on the pressure. He has a fine torso and his muscles are like iron bars. He knows a lot of the wrestling tricks and it wouldn't surprise a lot of people if Primo waddles back to Italy, the first ex-world heavyweight boxing champion to annex one of the many wrestling titles of the same ilk. It was a good show and a fine climax to one of the best wrestling seasons ever held in Belleville.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN

A documentary of great interest t many Canadians is being shown t private audiences in a number of cities but has not yet been given general release. "New faces come back," the story of the treatment and remabilitation of servicemen who have been badly disfigured, tells its story by following the case history of an R.C.A.F. man who is badly burned in a crash.

Made by an R.C.A.F. Overseas Film Unit, the picture records the progress of the injured man through the long treatment necessary t restore his physical and mental health and his reintroduction into society. It ends as he sets sail for home.

Although the film was made ta help the Canadian public understand such cases, it has been considered to disturbing for general release.

Chips Rafferty, the Australian actor who is generally billed as "the Australian Gary Cooper" has arrived in New York from a visit in Toronto for the premiere of "The Overlanders," a feature picture with the force of a documentary, in which he stars.

The film is the story of a band of men who took 5,800 head of cattle 2,000 miles across Australian scrubland and mountains when a Japanese invasion threatened in 1942. Nearly all the action is out-of-doors with emphasis on breath-taking scenery.

The scorching of the earth, swimming crocddile-infested rivers, rounding up wild horses and breaking them in to replace the animals which died, and the stampedes of cattle which happened in the original trek were reproduced without faking.

Daphne Cambbell, an ustrAalian nurses during the war, plays the feminine lead.

INDIANS GO ON SCORING BENDER DURING WEEKEND

Come Up With League Record in Defeating Providence 11-1

(By The Canadian Press)

Like the fellow who doesn't touch a drink for months and then proceeds to create his own version of "The Lost Weekend," Springfield Indians who hadn't won a game since Nov. 12 this weekend went on a scoring bender, downed two victories and came up an American Hockey League scoring record.

They pounced on the visiting Providence Reds Saturday, defeating them 11-1 — a league record for goals scored in a single game — and tapered off the next day in Buffalo Bisons' lair to take the home team by 5-4.

Johnny Quilty, Eldred Kobussen, and Pee Wee Summerhill led Springfield's spree at the expense of Providence with two goals apiece, and Kobussen and Summerhill each counted once to the Buffalo encounter.

Bill Gooden, Harry Frost, Paul Corteau Alex Motter, and Alex Milne were the other wild Indians in the Providence game and Bill Woodward, Bill Gooden, and Paul Courteau brought in the other Springfield tallies in the Buffalo contest.

For Buffalo Jerry Brown tallied twice and Jack Mahaffy and Murdo McKay once each. Johnny Chad was the only scorer for surprised Providence.

Pittsburgh Hornets broke a personal record Sunday. For two years they hadn't beaten St. Louis Flyers on St. Louis ice. Sunday they did it 5-2.

Hec Pozzo did all the scoring for the losers, John Hamilton, Wally Wilson, John O'Flaherty, Ernie Dickens and Johnny Hill brought victory to the Hornets.

But that just made things even for Saturday when St. Louis at Pittsburgh downed the Hornets 4-1 on three counts by Harry Liscombe and one by Joe Gladu with Al Sloan the only Hornets' scorer.

Indianapolis Capitals downed New Haven Ramblers 6-2 Sunday on three counts by Leslie Douglas and one each by Steve Wochy Hugh Miller, and Podolsky. Norm Burns and Chick Webber brought home the Ramblers' counts.

Pete Barbando and Herb Cain brought Providence Reds from behind in the last minute to tie 3-3 with Hershey Bears Sunday. Cain also scored the initial Reds' tally. Johnny Chad, Ronnie Wilson and Chuck Scherza counted for the visitors.

The Ramblers were downed 6-4 by Cleveland Barons Saturday as Les Cunningham, Wendell Jamieson, Louis Trudel, Pete Leswick, Hank Goldup and Gord Davidson counted for the visitors and Lynn Patrick, Alan Kuntz Pee Wee Reas, Burns for the Ramblers.

Philadelphia Rockets tied 5-5 with Indianapolis Capitals Saturday as Cliff Anderson scored twice for the Caps and Tony Bukovich, Jim Conacher, and Jerry Couture once each. Walter Stefaniw, Al Shewchuk, Phil Hergesheimer and Billy Warwick did the Rockets scoring.

Hershey edged out Buffalo Bisons 5-4 Saturday in a game that saw Jack Portland of Buffalo and Hershey's Feny Flaman draw major penalties for fisticuffs.

Pete Babando tallied twice for Hershey with Armand Gaudreault, Jack McGill and Lloyd Gransdahl getting the other counts.

PRO. FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

New York, Dec. 9 (AP)—New York Giants clinched their eighth eastern championship of the National Football League yesterday and moved into next Sunday's title play-off with Chicago Bears by humbling Washington 31-0, as the pro league concluded its regular season. Frank Folchock of New York threw two touchdown passes and set up another score.

Philadelphia took over the runner-up spot and second place play-off money by walloping Boston 40-14.

The Bears warmed up for the title game by smothering the lowly Detroit Lions 45-24 at Detroit. The Bears used the regulars only half the game.

At Los Angeles the Rams romped over Green Bay, 37-17. Bob Waterfield heaved three touchdown passes and place-kicked five extra points and a field goal for the Rams.

San Francisco's Raiders walloped Los Angeles Dons 48-7 to clinch second-place honors in the Western Division of the All-America Conference as the divisional champions, Cleveland's Browns, closed their regular campaign by shellacking Brooklyn 66-14.

BURNED FINGERS

CHAPTER 17

"I guess you're old enough to know this," she presently added. "I never was really your father's wife. I'd been sleeping in the room with you and I went on sleeping there. I don't know that he ever thought of me as anything but the little girl that came in to take care of the baby, and it suited me all right. I had a great respect for your father. We moved to a boardinghouse down here. You and I had our room; he had his. He was all set to go down to Buenos Aires on some scientific expedition when he got the flu and was gone in two days."

"I remember his coming in soaking wet and your telling him he'd got too tired."

"Yes, that was the first night. The next morning they took him to the hospital."

"Perhaps he always loved my mother," Jennifer mused.
